PREFACE

THIS work, the first annotated edition of the Italian text of the Divine Comedy published in America, is intended primarily for the general literary public, though adapted also to academic use. I have aimed to make it so complete that readers will need, for the comprehension of the poem, no other book save their dictionary; but to those (may they be many!) who may be led to push their inquiry further, a great abundance of bibliographical suggestion has been offered. Remembering how often the Commedia is read and enjoyed by persons whose Italian equipment is scanty, I have explained in the notes many words and forms that present no difficulty to the experienced student. On the other hand, I have endeavored, by discarding a vast accumulation of interesting but unnecessary erudition, so to curtail the annotation that the reader's attention shall not be constantly distracted from the text. This alleviation has been facilitated by the relegation of all lengthy discussions and involved explanations to the arguments that precede the several cantos. In my interpretation I have tried to give the 'allegorical and true meaning,' as Dante calls it, the place it deserves, but seldom receives, beside the literal. The text here printed is based on the latest edition of Moore's Oxford Dante; I have, however, not neglected the recent investigations of other scholars. The punctuation has been made to conform, as far as possible, to modern English standards. I am under obligations to all the authorities cited in the following pages. For many notes I owe a particular debt to Torraca's edition and to Norton's translation of the poem. It gives me pleasure to acknowledge also the special benefit I have derived from the works of Moore, Toynbee, Gardner, Del Lungo, Novati, D' Ovidio, Zingarelli, Flamini, and Vossler.

INTRODUCTION

THE Florence in which Dante lived was virtually an independent municipality controlled by trades' unions. Intense local pride, multifarious energy and enterprise, zest for politics, and partisan rivalry kept the blood of her citizens hot. The town was rapidly coming to the front rank among European cities; in manufactures and commerce she was a leader; inrushing wealth and increasing magnificence made her a pleasant abode. And all these interests — self-government, business, luxurious living — had the charm of novelty. So it was with painting, which was undergoing transformation at the hands of Giotto, the successor of Cimabue; so with sculpture and architecture; so with literature in the vulgar tongue, first introduced into Tuscany in the generation preceding Dante. Yet all these innovations were developing, not in a traditionless new settlement, but in a very ancient community, the home of countless generations of civilization. This, no doubt, is the reason why all her creative activities, material and intellectual, naturally assumed an artistic form in which delicacy and sobriety are allied to a dominant sense of harmony. It was a fit place for the breeding of genius: the swiftly growing town was big enough to afford a field for all kinds of talent, and yet so little that all were neighbors and merit could scarcely go unrecognized. The public offices, too, were numerous and the terms of service short, so that many citizens had a direct share in the management of affairs. On the other hand, the community was rent by party strife. The middle class, with its accumulating wealth and strength, was hated by the old military aristocracy, largely of Germanic origin, which lurked entrenched in castles within and without the city, surrounded by armed retainers, ready to seize upon any pretext to make trouble; and the burghers were bent on reducing the feudal lords to political impotence. The old quarrel between Guelfs and Ghibellines had ceased with the defeat of the latter party at Benevento in 1266; but new factions, as irreconcilable as the old, carried on the internal war. The Whites, under the leadership of the Cerchi family, represented the new power of industry and money; the Donati, with their Blacks, stood for the old nobility, with which the unaffiliated lowest class was inclined to side. In 1300 the most active leaders of both parties were sentenced to banishment. The Blacks, unsuccessful at home, sought aid abroad. Pope Boniface VIII, who had an old claim on Tuscany, sent to the city that royal adventurer, Charles of Valois, ostensibly as a peacemaker. He entered Florence with an army, and straightway turned it over to the Blacks. The Whites were driven out, among them Dante, who never returned. This was in 1302.¹

In such a community Dante was born in 1265, probably in the last days of May. We know little of his career. His works afford some bits of information, and there are a few scraps of documentary evidence; his neighbor, Giovanni Villani, inserted a brief sketch of him in his Chronicle; Boccaccio prepared a short, eulogistic account of him after his death, and his life was written in the next century by Leonardo Bruni. These are our principal sources. The mass of legend that has grown up about him makes the truth all the more difficult to ascertain. He came of a family ennobled several generations back, but neither rich nor particularly conspicuous. Their name was originally Alagherius, or Alaghieri. His own name, Dante, is a shortened form of Durante. His mother died during his childhood, and his father, after marrying again, died in 1283. A half-brother, Francesco, and a half-sister, Tana, were the fruit of this new marriage. Concerning another sister we do not know whether she was the child of the first wife or the second. As far as we can judge from the Commedia, the lad's early impressions of family life were happy. He doubtless received a careful education; it is likely enough that, after learning the rudiments from the Dominicans, he attended the Franciscan school of Santa Croce. Close familiarity with country as well as city life is shown in his writings. His imagination was cultivated by much reading of Provençal and French poets, from whom he learned unaided the science of metrics. He was deeply influenced, too, by contemporary art, and himself practised drawing. Early he distinguished himself as a poet, in a town where poetry and music were just acquiring an unprecedented vogue; and through his verse he made valuable acquaintances. His 'first friend' was the famous poet Guido, considerably his senior and his literary adviser, of the rich Cavalcanti family. Brunetto Latini, a great scholar, secretary of the Republic, aided him with counsel. Other poets, the notary Lapo Gianni and later the youthful Cino da Pistoia, and also the musician Casella, were his associates. A comrade of less desirable character was Forese Donati, brother of Corso, the leader of the Blacks; Forese, a high liver of shady reputation, exchanged with Dante a series of scurrilous sonnets. Dante mingled in the pastimes of his city and did not hold aloof from more serious civic matters: in 1289 he took part in an important military campaign, probably not his first. He may have been in Bologna in 1287 or thereabouts; he must have visited Lombardy before 1300. Between 1293 and 1300 he got deeply into debt. At some time before 1297 he married Gemma Donati, a distant relative of Corso and Forese, to whom he had probably been affianced since boyhood; she bore him two sons, Pietro and Jacopo, and, in all likelihood, two daughters. The family did not follow him in his exile, although three of the children later joined him in Ravenna. Gemma remained in Florence, where she was still alive in 1332. In 1295 Dante entered public life, and a few years later became an important figure in local politics. He strove for the independence of Florence, and repeatedly opposed the projects of the Pope. After going on an embassy to Gan Gemignano, he was for two months, in the summer of 1300, one of the six Priors of Florence. In 1301 he was commissioned to supervise the widening and improvement of a street. At the critical moment of the advent of Charles of Valois, or shortly before, Dante is said, on good authority, to have been absent on a mission to Rome. On trumped-up charges he was condemned, first to fine and exclusion, later to death by fire; subsequently, perhaps in 1315, he refused to purchase pardon by submission. For a little while after his banishment, in 1302, he conspired with his fellow-exiles; then, disgusted with their policy, perhaps in danger of his life from their violence, he turned his back on them and 'formed a party by himself.' The story of his wanderings is fragmentary. His first refuge was with the Scala family in Verona. On the death of his generous patron, Bartolommeo, in 1304, he is supposed to have visited the university at Bologna; he may even have given private instruction there. There is reason to believe that he travelled widely in Italy, especially in the North. In 1306 he was in Lunigiana with the Malaspina, for whom, on October 6, he acted as attorney in concluding a peace with the bishop of Luni. Thence he probably went to the mountains of the Casentino, on the upper Arno; and it is believed, on the authority of Boccaccio and Villani, that he journeyed between 1307 and 1309 to Paris. In 1308 Henry of Luxembourg, a noble idealist, was elected Emperor; crowned the next year at Aix as Henry VII, he descended in 1310 into Italy, to reunite Church and State, restore order, and reduce rebellious cities to submission. His coming aroused wild excitement and conflicting passions. Florence from the first offered sturdy and successful opposition. Dante, who firmly believed that the woes of Florence and all Italy — in fact, most of the evils in the world — were due to lack of Imperial guidance, greeted Henry as a saviour and hastened to pay him homage. Four letters written in 1310 and 1311 show him in a state of feverish exaltation. He was probably in Pisa in 1312. Henry's invasion, however, was fruitless: he was involved in a turmoil of party strife; the Pope who had summoned him turned against him; and just as his prospects were brightening he died ingloriously near Siena in 1313. With him perished Dante's immediate hopes of peace, the regeneration of his country, and his own restoration. Possibly he took refuge with the Imperial champion Can Grande della Scala in

Verona in 1314. If, as we may infer from a passage in the Commedia, Dante went to Lucca, this visit may well have occurred shortly after Henry's death, possibly in 1315; in that year or the next he doubtless returned to Verona. Later, we do not know when, the poet, already famous through his lyrics, his Convivio, Inferno, and Purgatorio, was offered an asylum in Ravenna by Guido Novello da Polenta, a nephew of Francesca da Rimini. His daughter Beatrice was a nun in that city; his son Pietro held a benefice there. This was his home until his death on September 13 or 14, 1321. Shortly before the end he was sent on a mission to Venice. His last years seem to have been peaceful and happy. In Ravenna, where he was greatly esteemed, he had congenial society and eager pupils. He maintained friendly relations with Can Grande della Scala, captain of the Ghibelline league, on whom he built great hopes. Though Florence still repudiated him, Bologna desired his presence.¹

The foregoing biography of Dante omits the most significant feature of his life, the love for Beatrice. The chivalric amorous service of ladies, which had sprung up among the poets of southern France, developed with some of the later troubadours, under the influence of the growing cult of Mary in the 13th century, into an idealization of woman and a spiritual devotion. But it remained for the school of Bologna and its Florentine disciples to transform this sentiment into a transcendental passion, a combination of religious mysticism and instinctive desire with the Averrhoistic doctrine of a passive individual soul and an active oversoul. In the verse of Guido Guinizelli, who lived just before Dante, woman becomes the visible symbol of the angelic nature; the lover worships in his lady the Heavenly Intelligence which reveals itself in her; only the noble heart is capable of love, and without a fitting object to arouse its inborn love to activity even such a heart is powerless to manifest its latent goodness. These ideas are set forth in a beautiful canzone beginning 'Al cor gentil ripara sempre amore,' to which Dante continually reverts. Guinizelli he calls his master, and master of all those who write sweet rhymes of love. Dante, dreamer that he was, and profoundly religious, naturally fell under the sway of this teaching. Critics have hotly debated the question whether his Beatrice was a real woman. Boccaccio asserts that she was Beatrice Portinari, daughter of Folco Portinari, a wealthy and public-spirited Florentine who died in 1289; before that date she was married to a rich banker of good family, Simone dei Bardi. There is no valid ground for rejecting this statement. But after all it makes little difference who she was: the living woman merely furnished the impression that aroused the poet's creative fancy. All imaginative lovers idealize their mistresses beyond recognition. The Beatrice that Dante presents to us, real as she was to him, is almost wholly the product of his own mind. With the flesh-and-blood Beatrice he seems to have had little more than a bowing acquaintance, and there is no reason to believe that she returned or even understood his affection. He first met her when he was nine and she was eight, and even then — at least so it seemed when he looked back upon the episode — she appeared to him as a revelation of the heavenly. Nine years later they exchanged a greeting. When, led to think ill of him by his excessive attentions to another lady, she refused to recognize him, he was profoundly hurt; and his pain was redoubled on one occasion when, with other ladies, she laughed at his show of emotion. He grieved with her sorrow at the loss of a friend, and again when her father was taken from her; he was tormented by a foreboding of her death. Stirred by feminine criticism, he determined to exclude supplication from his verse and make all his love-poetry a hymn of praise. So much he tells us, in the Vita Nuova, of his relations with the living Beatrice. After her death, in 1290, her image seems to have become clearer and more fixed; but her influence could not preserve him from morbid dejection and unworthy pursuits. Book-learning and worldliness engrossed him for a while, in spite of the recurring prick of conscience. Even in early youth his fancy had strayed to other women, and his comradeship with the disreputable Forese Donati is perhaps to be ascribed to a boyish period. After the passing of Beatrice he was, as he thought, unduly moved by the pity of an unnamed lady, who soon, however, became in his mind a mere visible picture of the object of his great passion, Philosophy. Later, in the Casentino, he apparently became violently enamored of a young woman to whom he addressed the most wildly beautiful lyrics in all amatory literature; but even these poems are not beyond the suspicion of allegorical intent.¹

When we ask ourselves why we are so strangely stirred by the words of a man of whom we know so little, one so remote in date and in thought, we find that it is because, on the one hand, he knew how to present universal emotions, stripping his experiences of all that is peculiar to time or place; and, secondly, because he felt more intensely than other men: his joy, his anguish, his love, his hate, his hope, his faith, were so keen that they come quivering down through the ages and set our hearts in responsive vibration. This intensity seems to distinguish him from other poets of the Middle Ages, perhaps, in part, because he alone had the art to express it. His mastery of language far transcends that of any other mediæval poet, and surpasses that of all but the few very foremost in the world's history. In his close observation and apparent enjoyment of the varying, even the sternest aspects of nature, he seems nearer to our generation than to his own. His study of human nature is no less close. Though the title Commedia contained, in its author's mind, no suggestion of the stage, the poem exhibits a command of dramatic situation, a skill in characterization by means of dialogue, not to be found in any playwright from Euripides to Shakespeare. One other gift he possessed that belongs to no period, but is bestowed upon the greatest artists of all times — the power of visualization, the ability to see distinctly in his mind's eye and to place before the mental vision of the reader not only such things as men have seen, but also the creations of a grandiose imagination, and even bodiless abstractions. In most other respects he belonged to his age: in his submission to authority in all matters of science and philosophy, his unquestioning acceptance of Christian dogma; in his subordination of beauty to truth and his relegation of it to the position of handmaid to utility; in his conception of the individual, not as an independent unit, but as a part of humanity, and his consequent desire to suppress all reference to the events and characteristics that differentiate himself from other men. Mediæval, too, was his mysticism: in him we see a man with the most acute perception of reality, the most eager interest in the doings of his fellows, yet imbued with the idea that the world of fact is all a shadowy image of the world of spirit; his feet were firmly planted on earth, while his head was in the clouds.¹

Visionary as he was, saddened by his own misfortunes, and exasperated by human wickedness, he had a fundamentally healthy disposition. In his character fierce passion was mated with equally vigorous self-control; vehemence was balanced by introspection and self-judgment; imagination was yoked with logic. He admired simplicity, even asceticism, but he was far from being a foe to culture or to the usages of polite society. He was fond of courtly pursuits, and erudite even to pedantry. In the great writings of pagan times he found a source of endless delight, and he did not hesitate to put them on a par with his Christian authorities. His admiration was less excited by Christian martyrs than by heroic pagan suicides. His Christ is always sublime, a part of the triune God, never the meek lamb nor the humble preacher of Galilee. His outlook upon life was persistently hopeful. Bad as the world was, there could be no doubt of ultimate reform. The Lord, in his unfathomable wisdom, might allow evil to triumph for a while, but his kingdom was sure to come. Dante's political views were entirely abstract and theoretical, and reactionary even for his own day. He had always before him the general principle rather than the particular case. Man being naturally a social creature, political organization is necessary, both in order to supply the manifold needs of the community, assigning different functions to different members, and in order to check greed and insure justice and peace, so that every citizen may have an opportunity to attain his highest development. The State, then, is as necessary — though not so venerable — as the Church. God ordained both, and decreed that Cæsar should found the one, Christ the other. Empire and Papacy are coordinate powers, neither subservient to the other, but both responsible directly to God. The goodness and happiness of the world depend on the balance of the temporal and the spiritual authorities. The rapacity of the clergy and the negligence of sovereigns have disturbed this equilibrium by transferring to the Papacy what belongs to the Empire. Mankind cannot thrive until the adjustment is restored. In his treatment of civics, and in the importance given to avarice as a disturber of society, Dante follows Aristotle, whom he first knew, perhaps, through the commentary of St. Thomas. From the same master he derived vast stores of physical information, as well as a philosophical method and terminology. His general classification of sins and his definition of moral virtues are Aristotelian, but his essential conception of sin and virtue is quite different, being thoroughly Christian. One can only guess what Dante would have been had he really known Plato, to whom he was temperamentally so much more akin. On the ethical side Dante was an eclectic, as were his ancient masters, Cicero and Boethius; Senecan stoicism and Franciscan mysticism dwelt in him side by side. St. Thomas, the interpreter of Aristotle, the learned and ingenious expounder of moral philosophy and Christian dogma, furnished Dante with an abundance of religious doctrine and a host of subtle observations and arguments (not always devoid of inconsistency), and reinforced his inborn fondness for intricate reasoning. To St. Thomas's teacher, Albertus Magnus, the 'Universal Doctor,' perhaps the greatest scholar and philosopher of the Middle Ages, Dante was directly indebted for not a few of his physical and ethical ideas. Like St. Augustine, Dante takes as his starting-point the Pauline doctrine of predestination and grace; but he draws from it very different consequences. In Dante, as in St. Paul, love is supreme. It is the moving force of the universe and of God himself. Through love God was impelled to create, that there might be others to share his happiness. Everything created is filled with love of the Creator. Animals, plants, lifeless things express their love by being what he made them: the stone, by its hardness and its magic power; the star, by its light and its influence upon earth; the beast, by following its instinct. They cannot do wrong, having no choice. It was God's purpose, however, that there should be creatures with an individual consciousness, a real life of their own; this could not be without freedom of the will, and such freedom implies the possibility of sin. Angels and men alone were given ability to sin, because they alone were created free. But almost instantly after their creation the angels were endowed with such overwhelming grace of vision that their will was absorbed in that of their Maker. The revolt of Lucifer and his fellows occurred in the moment between creation and the acceptance of this grace. The power of vision bestowed on the Heavenly Intelligences is not the same for all: no two angels see God alike, and consequently their natures and functions are diverse, though entirely good. So it is with men. God, in his grace, gives to different men, as he shapes their souls, different degrees of vision. On this vision all their knowledge and all their love depend. According to its clearness, the love of God is more or less intense, wisdom is greater or less, the choice of good and evil is easier or harder, and the eternal state of the soul, if Heaven be attained, is a higher or lower degree of blessedness. Every soul has sight enough to win salvation, and is therefore fully responsible; but some are capable of greater beatitude than others. Predestination becomes, then, in Dante, a mysterious manifestation of God's love: he loves all men, but he fashions them for different ends, on earth and in Heaven, and his love for all is not identical. The natural instinct of man is to return to his Creator and to love all that is like him. But through inexperience and lack of guidance he may at first mistake evil for good. He possesses, however, the grace of vision, which enables him to discriminate; if he persists in wrongdoing, he rejects grace and sins. If he dies unrepentant, he loses grace forever; if he repents before death, he regains grace and innocence by discipline. Had mankind from the beginning made the proper use of the free will, there would have been no death; all human beings would have lived happily on earth until the Judgment Day, and would then have been taken up to Heaven in the flesh. Adam's disobedience brought death and sin into the world, and suspended salvation until atonement was made by Christ. Only by faith in Christ, before or after his coming, can man be saved; but this faith is (theoretically, at least) within the reach of all. We have seen that man's path is made unduly hard by the lack of temporal direction, for which the impotence of the State is to blame. Men's talents and dispositions differ, too, being the product of the stars — governed by Heavenly Intelligences — that presided over their birth; but every human creature has power to overcome his natural defects so far as to make himself worthy of Heaven. The origin of imperfection in the universe is a difficult (not to say insoluble) problem — one to which Dante often reverted, without ever finding a satisfactory answer. His main argument is that whatsoever is directly shaped by God is perfect, what is fashioned by nature (that is, by the influence of the stars) is faulty. God created brute matter, the heavens, the angels, and creates human souls as they are born. All the rest is the work of nature. Why nature, itself the work of God, should operate defectively, we are not told. Elsewhere Dante says that God, in making material things, has to work with matter, which being imperfect, the divine plan is not realized; but inasmuch as God created matter, this statement can be reconciled with the other only by the supposition that Dante here means, not brute matter, but matter already differentiated and compounded by nature. His whole explanation reduces itself to this: the angels, having an incomplete vision of the divine mind, cannot execute its intent so well as God himself. If we ask why — this being the case — the angels were given this ministry, or, having the charge, were not endowed with complete sight, no reply is offered. The theory that evil was introduced into the world that man might have exercise for his free will is not formulated in the Divine Comedy.¹

Outside of the Divine Comedy, Dante's ideas are to be found, first of all, in the Convivio, an unfinished encyclopædic work, in Italian, in the form of a discursive prose commentary on fourteen of the author's canzoni; of the projected fifteen books, only four were written, and only three canzoni are included. The logically constructed, but purely idealistic and theoretical De Monarchia, a Latin treatise in three books, contains his political views. Another Latin treatise, the uncompleted De Vulgari Eloquentia, gives us his opinions on language in general, the use of the modern idiom as a literary medium, the relative merits of the various Italian dialects, and the principles of poetic composition in the vulgar tongue; he believed that an ideal, universal Italian, different from any of the actually spoken dialects, was fit, not only for amatory verse, but for martial and moral themes as well. A third Latin work ascribed to him, the De Aqua et Terra, is a controversial lecture delivered in Verona in 1320, debating technically the question whether the water of the sea rises in any part higher than the land. Fourteen Latin letters, written at different periods, are attributed to him in manuscripts, and there is record of others, now lost; the authenticity of all the fourteen has been doubted, but it is probable that at least ten are his. Of a political character are the epistles to the princes and peoples of Italy, to the Emperor, to the Florentines, to the Italian cardinals, to a Florentine friend, and an early one to Can Grande. The most important from a literary standpoint, if he really wrote it, is the later, ponderously exegetical Epistola ad Canem Grandem, accompanying the first canto of the Paradiso with a minute comment on its opening lines and a general discussion of allegory. Many letters and many poems have doubtless perished. On the other hand, some pieces of verse that have gone under his name are, in all likelihood, not his. There seems to be no sufficient reason to ascribe to him the long sonnet sequence called Il Fiore, an abridged paraphrase of the Roman de la Rose. Among the miscellaneous poems, not contained in his longer works, that are attached to him, we may reckon as his a dozen canzoni, a half dozen or more ballate, two sestine, and some twenty-five or thirty sonnets; they were composed at various times, and treat of love, philosophy, ethics, and sundry occasional topics. Some of them are similar in tone to those comprised in the Convivio, others are in the same vein as the thirty-one (mostly sonnets) that form the skeleton of the Vita Nuova. This 'little book' consists of a carefully selected and artistically arranged series of amatory poems, surrounded by a dainty prose commentary telling of the poet's early love for Beatrice. There is reason to believe that the prose was written in 1294. Now the final chapter of the Vita Nuova speaks of a wondrous vision which determined the lover to write no more of his lady until he should be worthier of the theme; to prepare himself, he was studying with might and main, and he hoped, if his life were spared a few years, to say of her what never had been said of woman. This study, begun for comfort's sake in the darkest hour of mourning for his dead love, as he declares in the Convivio, soon became an object in itself, and aroused a new passion that threatened to quench the memory of the old. Beginning with Cicero's De Amicitia and the De Consolatione Philosophiæ of Boethius, he plunged deep into philosophy and theology. Of the vast knowledge thus accumulated the scholar was naturally proud, and he planned to set it before his fellow-men in the Convivio, which was to be a guide to others and a defence of himself. This treatise doubtless occupied him between 1305 and 1308. Only when vast hopes were awakened and then temporarily blighted by the advent and death of his Imperial hero, did Dante forsake this project; then, leaving it two thirds unrealized — leaving unfinished, too, it would seem, his De Vulgari Eloquentia, — he returned to the fulfilment of his earlier purpose, which, in all probability, he had never quite abandoned. Conceived, then, it appears, as early as 1293 or 1294, the plan of the Divina Commedia was probably not fully matured until after the death of Henry VII, the Emperor whose advent in 1310 had aroused such wild expectations in Dante's breast. As Henry died in 1313 and the poet in 1321, we may ascribe the composition of the work, in the main, to the years that lie between these dates. Some critics, however, put the Inferno much earlier. Both the Inferno and the Purgatorio were made public, either singly or together, considerably before the Paradiso. If report is to be trusted, this last cantica busied the author until the very end of his life. Yet he found time, in his last years, to write two graceful Latin eclogues and (if they be his) the letter to Can Grande and the Quæstio de Aqua et Terra. There is no external and no definite internal evidence to fix the date of the De Monarchia; its general style and maturity point to the latest possible period.¹

In making his preparation, what books had he studied? The Æneid, that corner-stone of mediæval education, must have confronted him from childhood; he tells us that he knew it all by heart. There is no proof, however, that he read the Georgics, or any of the Eclogues except the fourth. The Latin Bible he had at his fingers' ends. Cicero's ethical writings — especially De Amicitia and De Officiis — and the great work of Boethius introduced him to philosophy. Much of Aristotle (but not the Poetics) and perhaps Plato's Timæus he mastered later, in Latin translation. He seems to have seen something of Seneca's prose. Of the Christian scholars and theologians, first of all St. Thomas, then Albertus Magnus, St. Augustine, Hugh and Richard of St. Victor, St. Bonaventura, St. Bernard, Peter Lombard, and apparently St. Gregory the Great, St. Isidore of Seville, Peter Damiano, were assiduously consulted; and his works show traces of many others. His principal historians were Livy and the Christian Paulus Orosius, author of the Historia adversus Paganos; he knew also several compendiums, notably the anecdotal compilation of Valerius Maximus. The treatises of Ægidius Romanus and John of Paris probably came under his inspection. He doubtless was acquainted with the elder Pliny and Solinus; he certainly read the Trésor of Brunetto Latini, and probably the Composizione del mondo of Ristoro d' Arezzo. Astronomy he pursued with characteristic thoroughness, first, perhaps, in the Elementa Astronomica of Alfraganus. Some strange words and a deal of curious misinformation he got from the Magnæ Derivationes of Ugucione da Pisa, who lived in the second half of the 12th century. Among the Latin poets, besides Virgil, he was intimate with Ovid, Lucan, and Statius, from whom he derived most of his classical mythology and much of his ancient history. He knew Horace's Ars Poetica. Many classical authors whom he had not read were known to him by name and reputation; among them, Homer. Greek and Hebrew he never learned, save a few isolated words. Latin, of the rhetorical, mediæval sort, he wrote well, but with less ease and brilliancy than Italian. He could read and write Provençal, and assuredly knew French. He was deeply versed in the lyric poetry of southern France, and was familiar, directly or indirectly, with the epics of the north. He had critically examined the work of the Italian poets who had preceded him in Sicily, Tuscany, and Bologna; his estimates are to be found, not only in his De Vulgari Eloquentia, but also incidentally in the Vita Nuova and the Divina Commedia. His own lyrics, by the way, reveal a skill far excelling that of any of his forebears. The learning acquired by all this study was not wasted: it reappears in the Divine Comedy. This great poem, unrivalled as it is for sustained grandeur of thought and symmetry of form, resolves itself, upon careful analysis, into at least six diverse elements, fused by genius into a single masterpiece —

‘Tutti conflati insieme per tal modo
Che ciò ch’ io dico è un semplice lume.’

Six literary types are blended into one: the Encyclopædia, the Journey, the Vision, the Autobiography, the Praise of Woman, the Allegory.¹

The idea of a practical compendium of human knowledge was not unknown to the old Romans: Pliny, for instance, composed the Historia Naturalis, Celsus the De Artibus. To the borderland of ancient and mediæval times belongs that vast compilation, the Origines or Etymologiæ of St. Isidore of Seville. Others followed, not only in Latin but also in the vulgar tongues; and then came the attempt to give such works poetic form: witness, for example, the Provençal Breviari d'Amors, a huge allegorized treatise, written and widely diffused in Dante's lifetime. In Dante's own city lived Brunetto Latini, author of the French Trésor and also of the Italian Tesoretto, a versified guide to learning in the semblance of a mystic journey — that same Latini who taught the youthful poet 'come l'uom s'eterna.' The Commedia contains the essentials of the vital science, theology, with a full discussion of difficult problems; also the principles of the ancillary discipline, philosophy. It offers, furthermore, a complete course in astronomy and cosmography, with occasional lessons in physics, and much incidental instruction in history and mythology. And this solid doctrine is not to be regarded as intrusive; it forms, so to speak, the nucleus of the whole work.

Among the travellers' tales that delighted the wonder-loving public none were better liked than those which told of journeys to the Garden of Eden; and of these the most famous was the Voyage of St. Brendan, the narrative of an Irish monk who sailed out into the Atlantic and after marvellous adventures discovered the Isles of the Blest. It is in Dante's Purgatorio, and especially in his description of the Earthly Paradise, that the influence of such stories is most evident. The inaccessibility, the wall of fire, the birds, the flowers, the streams, the eternal springtime are traditional features; even the lovely youthful figure of Matilda, genius of the place, has a counterpart in the St. Brendan. Some authorities put the Garden on a remote mountain-top, others consigned it to a distant island. Dante combined these locations, and made his Eden the summit of a lone peak rising sky-high from the midst of the great ocean. The spot where man first sinned is directly opposite Jerusalem, where he was redeemed.¹

In II Corinthians xii, St. Paul declares that 'he was caught up into paradise, and heard unspeakable words, which it is not lawful for a man to utter.' What he saw and heard he refused to tell, but posterity was less discreet. Toward the end of the 4th century there appeared a Greek document, found, it was said, in the apostle's house in Tarsus — the Apocalypse of St. Paul. Though denounced by St. Augustine, and never accepted by the Church, it enjoyed an immense vogue, and was turned into Syriac and Latin. The Latin Visio Sancti Pauli — which tells how the Chosen Vessel, led by an angel, visited the realms of the dead — formed the basis of several versions in the vulgar tongues of Europe. But it stood by no means alone. Visions too numerous to tell were seen and invented for many centuries; conspicuous among them are those described in two Irish tales, the Tundal and St. Patrick's Purgatory; in Dante's own country there was recorded the Visio Alberici. Most of these treat of the lower world, in which Hell and Purgatory lie side by side. A large part of the punishments portrayed by Dante were commonplaces of vision literature; but he avoided the extremes of coarseness and grotesqueness, and introduced system and fitness where all had been chaotic. It was his happy idea, moreover, to lift Purgatory to the earth's surface, place it far from Hell, next to the Garden of Eden, and surround it with an atmosphere of light and hope. Meanwhile St. Paul's reticence had borne other fruit. A Neo-Platonic treatise, not earlier than the 5th century, On the Celestial Hierarchy, dealing with the heavens and the Heavenly Intelligences, had been ascribed to Dionysius the Areopagite, the apostle's convert in Athens, and was supposed to contain an authentic record of revelation confided by the master to his disciple. Dante's classification of heavens and angels is founded on this work. But heathen as well as Christian could dream dreams of the hereafter. The Somnium Scipionis in Cicero's De Republica depicts good souls rising to the stars, and the petty earth in the centre of nine revolving spheres. If Homer's account of a descent into the world of the departed was unknown in the Middle Ages, those of Ovid, Lucan, and Statius were familiar to scholars, and Virgil's was before every schoolboy's eyes. Dante's Hell is full of Virgilian names; Christian and pagan figures are strangely commingled. This must have seemed less incongruous to the author than to us, for in his day the gods of classic mythology were regarded as demons, fallen angels who had seduced mankind to worship them. Furthermore, Dante thought of the ancient poets as seers, who had some inkling of the truth, and in veiled language told of things that became fully known only through the word of God: for instance, when Ovid sang of the Golden Age, or the battle of the giants, he was dimly conscious of the state of man before the fall, and the revolt of the angels against their Maker.¹

The Divine Comedy is not only an Encyclopædia, a Journey, a Vision — it is the Autobiography of a soul. The events of his external life Dante scrupulously excluded from his works: he never mentions his parents, his children, nor, in all probability, his wife; an apparent reference to his sister, in the Vita Nuova, is couched in the vaguest terms; only incidentally and rarely does he afford a passing glimpse of his material affairs. His Vita Nuova, professedly the story of his youth, is the most baffling record ever penned. In his opinion, it is not meet to speak of one's self: 'parlare alcuno di sè medesimo pare non licito,' he declares in the Convivio. This maxim evidently does not apply, however, to the inner self, provided that self be generalized into a type of mankind, and provided the recounting of its experiences be helpful to other erring souls — 'quando per ragionare di sè grandissima utilità ne segue altrui per via di dottrina.' Like St. Paul and Æneas, Dante had a mission, a vital message for humanity. The Divine Comedy is the epic of remorse, repentance, purification, and final uplifting. Incidentally it depicts the depravity of the world and points the way to social regeneration. For a work of this kind Dante had a great example in the Confessions of St. Augustine, and another, allegorically conceived, in Boethius's De Consolatione Philosophiæ.

From the dawn of amorous poetry in Provence it was the habit of the bard to vaunt the charms of his mistress and her superiority to the rest of her sex, attributing to her influence all credit for such gifts as he himself might possess. His life, he alleged, was given to her service, his verse was a tribute to her power. Such a tribute, but a loftier, more enduring one, Dante determined to pay to his lady: 'spero,' he says, 'di dire di lei quello che mai non fu detto d' alcuna.' The Divine Comedy is a monument to Beatrice, and, in truth, such a monument as never was erected, before nor after, to any woman.¹

'Sciendum est,' declares the letter to Can Grande, referring to the Divina Commedia, 'quod istius operis non est simplex sensus, immo dici potest polysemum, hoc est plurium sensuum; nam alius sensus est qui habetur per literam, alius est qui habetur per significata per literam. Et primus dicitur literalis, secundus vero allegoricus, sive mysticus.' Allegorical interpretation had been applied by the ancient Hebrews to the prophecies of the Old Testament, and by the Greeks — in late, sophisticated times — to the Homeric poems. It was early applied also to some of the Latin poets. The Æneid was regularly so expounded; a commentary of this kind was surely known to Dante. The method reached its highest development, however, in the explanation of the Bible by the Church fathers. In the second book of the Convivio Dante discusses it at length; and there he differentiates theological from poetic allegory. In the former the literal as well as the mystic sense is true, while in poetry the letter is fiction and truth resides in the allegory alone. The Old Testament is an accurate record of fact, but at the same time a prophecy of the New; whereas the fable of Orpheus is literally false and only metaphorically true. Furthermore, Dante distinguishes, in addition to the literal and the allegorical, a moral and an anagogical meaning: the one is merely the useful inference that the reader may draw from a story, for the guidance of his own life; the other, which is obscurely defined, seems to be a revelation of spiritual truth, hidden in the words of the text. Dante himself, in the interpretation of his canzoni in the Convivio, confines his attention to the literal and the allegorical senses. Allegorical composition was to Dante not an artificial but a natural process. He lived in a world of mystic correspondences. Numbers, stars, stones, beasts, had a mysterious significance; even the events of history were fraught with symbolic meaning. The relation of fact to symbol was not arbitrary nor fortuitous; it was real and predestined. Thus in his poem the outer and the inner narratives seem indissolubly bound; neither obstructs the other, neither is complete without the other, and to the intelligent reader the two are of equal interest. The Divine Comedy is perhaps the only great allegory of which this can be said to-day. In Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress, for example, the literal story is too crude and fantastic to please any but a child, and the symbolism appeals only to the adult. In the Roman de la Rose the allegory is ingenious and artistically attractive, but the literal fable is insignificant; while the converse is true of Spenser's Faerie Queene.

In exposition, says Dante, 'sempre lo litterale dee andare innanzi'; and he adds, describing his interpretation of his own canzoni, 'ragionerò prima la litterale sentenza, e appresso di quella ragionerò la sua allegoria, cioè l'ascosa verità.' We may pursue the same course. Literally, then, the Divina Commedia is the narrative of a journey through Hell, Purgatory, and Heaven. The poet, in the middle of his life, finds himself astray at night in a dark wood. He tries to save himself by climbing a mountain whose top is lit by the rays of the rising sun; but three beasts, besetting his path, are about to drive him back, when Virgil, summoned to Dante's help by Beatrice, at the bidding of Mary and St. Lucia, appears and offers to guide him. They can escape from the wood only by going through the earth from side to side. This path leads them through the whole of Hell, where Dante sees the punishment of every kind of sin and converses with the damned. Hell ends at the earth's centre, and from that point the poets climb out by a dark, winding channel to the opposite hemisphere. They emerge in the middle of the ocean, on the shore of an island which consists mainly of a colossal mountain. Cato of Utica, the guardian of the place, meets and directs them. Up the steep mountain-side Dante drags himself, still accompanied by Virgil. On the ledges are repentant souls preparing themselves by discipline for the heavenly life. As Dante and Virgil are approaching the summit, they are joined by Statius, who has just completed his penance. The three mount together to the top, where they find the Garden of Eden, and in it a fair, happy, amorous young maiden, Matilda, who seems to embody the spirit of the place. Amid the trees and flowers they witness a pageant of the Church, whose culmination is the appearance of Beatrice in a shower of lilies thrown by angels. Now Virgil vanishes, and presently Statius is mentioned for the last time. Beatrice it is who leads Dante up from earth through the revolving heavens into the real Paradise, which is the presence of the Almighty, and consigns him to St. Bernard, the great mystic. There has been unrolled before us a picture of mankind, past and present, and a view of the universe. Dante's conception of the world is essentially symmetrical and organic; there is exact correspondence between the physical, the intellectual, and the spiritual. The poem ends with the vision of God.

In its 'allegorical and true sense' the Divine Comedy is the history of a soul struggling with sin and, with celestial help, winning peace. The wood typifies the worldly life; the sunlit mountain, righteousness; the three beasts, evil habits, which make reform impossible for the unaided soul. But divine Mercy and Grace send Revelation to direct it — that heavenly enlightenment or superhuman Wisdom which Beatrice, the Bestower of Blessings, had always personified in Dante's eyes. For direct Revelation the sinner is not yet fit; he must approach it through Reason. So Virgil, who typifies human understanding, discloses to Dante the true nature of sin in all its hideousness and folly: for the punishments of Hell, so minutely described, are but the image of the sins themselves. When Reason has probed sinfulness to the bottom, Dante, horrified, turns his back upon it and painfully wrests his soul from its clutches; such is the significance of the laborious but uneventful journey from the centre of the earth to the Island of Purgatory. As yet, however, Dante has merely weaned himself from evil practices; he has still to cleanse his soul so that wrongdoing will no longer attract it — to purify it and prepare it for the sight of God. This can be accomplished only by discipline, under the guidance of the Church. Then, as the shackles of sin are removed, the soul once more enjoys its inborn liberty; it regains the Free Will, God's most precious gift to man. Of all the doctrines that Dante expounds, that of Free Will is closest to his heart — the wholesome doctrine of individual responsibility. And Cato, Dante's favorite character in all history — Cato, who gave up life to assert his independence — is made its exponent. The torments on the terraces of Purgatory represent the penances that the soul, under proper direction, must undergo before it can return to its first freedom and innocence. As Dante approaches the top, some questions confront him which Reason alone cannot quite solve; and to answer them, apparently, comes Statius, or human understanding illumined by Christianity. When the soul has regained its original purity — has climbed to its Garden of Eden — and is restored to the primeval life of innocence and activity (which Matilda seems to symbolize), it has no more need of Reason, for all its instincts are unerring. Then, after the true glories of the Church are unfolded before its eyes, it can follow Revelation through heaven after heaven, ever nearer and nearer to the real Paradise, until at last it stands before its Maker. In the presence of the Source of all knowledge, even Revelation is superfluous; Beatrice resigns her great office, leaving Dante in the charge of St. Bernard, the type of Contemplation. 'Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God.'¹

If to the literal and the allegorical we must add a moral and an anagogical interpretation, we may assume that morally the poem is a warning against sin, an exhortation and guide to repentance, and an incentive to religious contemplation. Anagogically, the poet may be said to portray in Hell the wicked world as he knows it, in Purgatory the rescue of the elect, and in Paradise the kingdom which is to come.

The epithet 'Divine' became attached to the poem in the 16th century through its use in the edition of 1555. The title which Dante gave his work is Commedia (or, as he pronounced it, Comedia), meaning a poetic composition in a style intermediate between the sustained nobility of tragedy and the popular tone of elegy; according to the letter to Can Grande, the name indicates also a sad beginning and a happy end. The author, in fact, does not scruple, on occasion, to sacrifice elegance and even clearness to brevity, vigor, and pictorial effect. He expected to be minutely studied and weighed, not cursorily read. The characteristic detail, the specific term, the appropriate coloring were worth more to him, when he wrote the Commedia, than any absolute standard of poetic propriety. His imagery stamps on the reader's mind an unbroken sequence of visual impressions. An inexhaustible inventiveness, a compact style, a richly varied and picturesque vocabulary make the perusal of the Commedia a series of literary surprises. Especially when we consider the poverty of the poetic idiom before Dante, does the master's creative power seem almost beyond belief. His literary medium was virtually his own handiwork. And this nervous strength, this irrepressible originality do not preclude a haunting melodic beauty and a triumphant rhythm that remind one of the tramp of many feet marching to sweet music. Vowel harmonies, pervasive but seldom obtrusive alliteration, skilful distribution of stress are the elements that combine to work the spell. His language is, in the main, the Florentine speech of his day, as it sounded in the mouths of cultivated people. Mingled with this are a few Gallisms, some archaisms, some words borrowed from other Italian dialects, and a great many Latinisms. The foreign and unusual words and those employed in a strange sense occur for the most part in the rhyme. Dante was generally averse to periphrasis or deviation from his idea, and was loath to end a verse with an insignificant word; so he was sometimes forced to do violence to usage in his rhymes.¹

Of the external attributes of the Divine Comedy, the most wonderful is its symmetry. With all its huge bulk and bewilderingly multifarious detail, it is as sharply planned as a Gothic cathedral. Dante had the very uncommon power of fixing his attention upon the part without losing sight of the whole: every incident, every character receives its peculiar development, but at the same time is made to contribute its exact share to the total effect. The more one studies the poem, the clearer become its general lines, the more intricate its correspondences, the more elaborate its climaxes. At the end of each cantica is one of these great culminating points — the sight of Lucifer, the appearance of Beatrice, the vision of God; and for each of them the reader is insensibly prepared by a series of gradations whose structure reveals itself only after long repeated readings. The arrangement of the Commedia is based on the number three, the 'mystic' number, the symbol of the Trinity.

Dante shared with most philosophers of his day a profound belief in the significance of numbers. The Divine Comedy falls into three books, or cantiche, of nearly equal length; each of these has thirty-three cantos, except that the Inferno has an additional first canto which serves as an introduction to the whole. The total number of cantos is therefore 100, or the 'perfect' number, ten, multiplied by itself. The verse, invented by Dante for this use, is what is called terza rima, a succession of tercets in which the first and third lines rhyme together while the middle line rhymes with the first and third of the next terzina. The metre is the endecasillabo, which had developed long before Dante's time. It is really the same verse, essentially, as the French ten-syllable line; but the French take the 'masculine,' or oxytonic, verse as the standard, while the Italians take the 'feminine,' or paroxytonic. The Italian line has normally, then, eleven syllables, with an accent on the tenth: see, for instance, Inf. I, 1. Occasionally the final unstressed syllable is dropped, and the verse becomes 'masculine,' or tronco: for example, Inf. IV, 60. Sometimes, on the other hand, an extra unaccented syllable is added, making a dactylic ending, and the line is called sdrucchiolo: e. g., Inf. XXIV, 66. In counting syllables, contiguous vowels, whether in the same word or in adjacent words, are generally reckoned as one, being blended together, as in Inf. I, 25-6:

'Co-sì — l' a-ni-mo — mio — che an-cor — fug-gi-va
Si — vol-se in-die-tro a — ri-mi-rar — lo — pas-so.'

But often two vowels which in prose may make separate syllables are allowed to count as two in verse; this is regularly done at the end of a line: so Inf. I, 12,

'Che — la — ve-ra-ce — vi-a ab-ban-do-na-i.'

Besides the fixed accent on the tenth syllable of every line, there must be a stress either on the fourth or on the sixth, as in Inf. I, 1-2:

'Nel mezzo del cammín di nostra víta
Mi ritrovái per una selva oscúra.'

In point of fact, however, Dante almost always has a more regular alternation of strong and weak syllables — a movement more nearly approaching that of English poetry — than this theoretical scheme would indicate: see, for instance, Inf. V, 106,

The Divina Commedia has come down to us in nearly 600 manuscripts, none of them in the author's hand, and none taken directly from the original; upwards of 200 are in Florence, the others are collected in Italy or scattered over Europe. Many are beautifully illuminated. Although some of the manuscripts go back to a time within fifteen or twenty years of Dante's death, these copies are by no means in full agreement with one another; furthermore, the early commentators cite variants: it is evident that the corruption of the text set in as soon as the poet died, perhaps even before his decease. The poem was first printed in 1472. In 1502 appeared the Aldo Manuzio edition, in 1595 that of the Accademia della Crusca; these were for centuries regarded as authoritative. There was no critical edition until 1862, when K. Witte published one based on four good manuscripts; for one canto he also collated over 400 manuscripts. Three years later A. Mussafia brought out a collation of two manuscripts. After a long interval came editions by P. Toynbee and G. Vandelli. A fruitless attempt to establish a genealogical sequence of manuscripts was made by G. A. Scartazzini. No satisfactory classification of manuscripts has been made; but it is certain that no existing manuscript or group of manuscripts can be regarded as authoritative throughout. In 1894 appeared the ‘Oxford Dante,’ Tutte le opere di Dante Alighieri, edited by E. Moore (3d ed., 1904); the Divine Comedy in this volume is based primarily on Witte's text, but Dr. Moore has examined for crucial passages some 200 manuscripts, and has made use of the investigations of other scholars.²

Countless allusions, some of them purposely blind, vast accumula-

tions of learning, conciseness and originality of phrase, symbolism, not infrequent obscurity combine to obstruct the understanding of the poem. Some of the difficulties we encounter are due to our remoteness from Dante's world, our different habits of thought, the archaic character of his language. Many of them, however, were as great in his day as in ours, and the need of interpretation was immediately felt. At least eleven commentaries on the whole or a part of the work were composed in the 14th century; from the 15th century we have five. The first commentator certainly known to us by name is Graziolo de' Bambaglioli, who goes back as early as 1324. Within sixteen years after him were written the expositions of Jacopo della Lana, those of Dante's sons Jacopo and Pietro, and the work known as the 'Ottimo Commento.' To the latter part of the 14th century belong the exegeses of Boccaccio, who was appointed to expound the Commedia in Florence but carried his explanation no further than the 16th canto, of Benvenuto da Imola, and of Buti. The best informed of all these are perhaps Pietro and Benvenuto. All, however, must be used with caution, as they were deficient in poetic insight, and in historical matters did not always discriminate between fact and invention. The task of interpretation has been carried on, with greater or less intelligence and erudition, down to our own day. To keep well abreast of the Dante literature that now appears from year to year would require a man's whole time. At present three recent, copiously annotated Italian editions are at the disposal of students, those of G. A. Scartazzini (revised by G. Vandelli), T. Casini, and F. Torraca. There is a scholarly English edition, with a translation, by A. J. Butler. Of the numerous English versions, the prose rendering by Norton, the unrhymed poetic translation of Longfellow, and Shadwell's Purgatory in four-line stanzas excel in accuracy and literary skill; the easiest to read is that of Cary, in blank verse; Plumptre's, in terza rima, combines fidelity with happy phrasing and acceptable versification. Several volumes of general studies are especially to be commended: F. D' Ovidio, Studii sulla Divina Commedia, Il Purgatorio e il suo preludeo, Nuovi studii danteschi;

E. Moore, Studies in Dante, 3 vols.; K. Vossler, Die göttliche Komödie. Entwicklungsgeschichte und Erklärung, 2 vols.; I. Del Lungo, Dal secolo e dal poema di Dante; F. Novati, Con Dante e per Dante; F. De Sanctis, Saggi critici and Nuovi saggi critici; K. Witte, Essays on Dante; G. A. Scartazzini, Prolegomeni della Divina Commedia. For the allegory there is nothing better than F. Flamini, I significati reconditi della Divina Commedia e il suo fine supremo, 3 vols. To those who read German, F. X. Kraus's comprehensive and beautifully illustrated Dante may be recommended. N. Zingarelli's Dante and La vita di Dante in compendio contain full and accurate information concerning the poet's life and works. Excellent handbooks are E. G. Gardner's Dante and F. Flamini's Introduction to the Study of the Divine Comedy (translated by F. M. Josselyn); Dante: Introduction à la Divine Comédie, by H. Hauvette, is very clear; C. A. Dinsmore's Aids to the Study of Dante is a convenient compilation. E. A. Fay's Concordance of the Divine Comedy and E. S. Sheldon and A. C. White's Concordanza delle opere italiane in prosa e del canzoniere di Dante Alighieri are invaluable helps. Most useful for reference are P. Toynbee's Dictionary of Proper Names and Notable Matters in the Works of Dante and G. A. Scartazzini's Enciclopedia dantesca. Works of a more special character are mentioned, as occasion arises, in the preceding and the following pages.¹

INFERNO

PRELIMINARY NOTE

ACCORDING to the Ptolemaic system, which was accepted from antiquity down to the time of Copernicus, the earth is a solid, motionless sphere in the centre of the universe. Around it revolve nine transparent hollow spheres, each within its outside neighbor up to the ninth, the Primum Mobile; this imparts its movement to the others and constitutes the frontier of the material world. The eighth heaven carries with it all the fixed stars. Each of those below it contains one heavenly body: the seventh, Saturn; the sixth, Jupiter; the fifth, Mars; the fourth, the Sun; the third, Venus; the second, Mercury; the first, the Moon. They all circle around the earth together, from east to west, once in twenty-four hours. But each heaven except the ninth has, besides, an independent motion of its own, so that it is really moving in a compound curve, made up of two or more different circular revolutions; for instance, the special revolution of the moon is accomplished in a month; that of the sun, in a year. By these sets of motions, and an elaborate system of computation by epicycles, the shifting positions of the sun, moon, and stars were accurately accounted for. Outside the whole universe of matter is the spiritual Paradise, the Empyrean, the true abode of God, the angels, and the blest. The earth is surrounded by air, and between this air and the heaven of the moon is a sphere of fire, toward which all the fire on earth is striving to return. All natural operations on earth are controlled by the movements of the spheres, which are directed by nine orders of angels, or Heavenly Intelligences, created by God for this office.¹

We have seen that two of the four elements, fire and air, are between the moon and our globe; this body itself consists of the other two, water and earth. The four are arranged in the order of their lightness and their purity. Dante believed the earth to be perfectly spherical and about 20,000 miles in circumference. The continents are all grouped on one side, the Hemisphere of Land, which contains not only Europe, Asia, Africa, and some islands, but also the Mediterranean and a part of the great ocean; at the exact centre of this hemisphere is Jerusalem. On the other side is the Hemisphere of Water, in which is no land, except (according to Dante's idea) the mountainous Island of Purgatory, situated precisely opposite Jerusalem. At the top of the mountain of Purgatory is the Garden of Eden. The greater part of the land on the earth's surface is north of the equator, the greater part of the water is south; but the Hemispheres of Land and Water by no means coincide with the northern and southern hemispheres. At the eastern extremity of the Hemisphere of Land is the River Ganges, at the western edge are the Straits of Gibraltar. The Mediterranean was thought to extend over 90° , or a quarter of the earth's circumference; Italy, midway between Gibraltar and Jerusalem, is therefore 45° , or three hours, from each.¹

Hell is a vast cavity in the form of an inverted cone, whose apex is at the centre of the earth and whose circular base lies beneath the Hemisphere of Land, from which it is shut off by a crust; it extends, apparently, from Italy to mid-Asia. The round declivity of the cavern is broken into nine steps, each of which runs all the way around it; they are of unequal width and separated by cliffs of varying height and steepness. Two enormous precipices divide it roughly into three horizontal sections. A huge wall, circling around one of the terraces, severs the outermost section from the other two, making an Upper and a Lower Hell; the latter is called the City of Dis. On each of the steps is punished some particular kind of sin: in the Upper Hell, the sins of Incontinence, due to lack of self-control; in the Lower Hell, the sins of Violence and Fraud, due respectively to Bestiality² and Malice. Violence occupies the middle section, Fraud the lowest. Four steps, or circles, are devoted to the four kinds of Incontinence — lust, gluttony, avarice (and prodigality), anger. One circle suffices for Bestiality, but it is divided into three parts, according to the object of the violence: that object may be one's neighbor, one's self, or God. Malice occupies two circles: in the first are the fraudulent, those who deceived persons not bound to them by any special ties; in the second are the traitors, destroyers of their kinsfolk, their countrymen, their guests, or their benefactors. This last circle forms the very floor of Hell; it is a lake of ice at the bottom of a pit; embedded in the middle, at the centre of the earth, is Satan, in whose three mouths are the three arch-traitors, Judas, Brutus, and Cassius. Outside of this general scheme, but within Hell, are three regions inhabited respectively by the souls of sluggards and time-servers, those who were neither good nor bad; the souls of unbaptized children and virtuous pagans; and the souls of heretics. All three are circles, like those mentioned. The first, sometimes called the Antinferno, is a vestibule, just inside the entrance, but outside the River Acheron. The second, the Limbus, is within the encircling Acheron, at a lower level than the Vestibule, and forms the first of the nine steps. The third, which constitutes the sixth circle, lies close within the walls of the City of Dis, but is separated from the rest of the Lower Hell by a mighty precipice. The souls in the nether world are, then, arranged in this order: SLUGGISH; unbaptized; lustful, gluttonous, avaricious (and prodigal), wrathful; heretical; violent; fraudulent, treacherous. The sluggish, the unbaptized, and the heretical lie outside the three great classes — Incontinence, Violence, Fraud. The sluggish are in the Vestibule; all the others are in the nine circles. The punishments vary according to the sins, each being a retaliation for the offence. It must not be forgotten, however, that allegorically the torments represent the sins themselves. 'Where-with a man sinneth, by the same also shall he be punished' (Wisdom xi, 16). Dante, under the guidance of Reason, ransacks the human heart and learns to know wickedness as it really is, stripped of the false semblance of good. Thus, for instance, the furious blast that eternally wafts the carnal sinners symbolizes irresistible passion;

the ice in which traitors are buried is the coldness of the heart from which all love has been expelled.¹

In Dante's Purgatory the sinners are arranged as follows: lustful, gluttonous, avaricious (and prodigal), slothful, wrathful, envious, proud. Sloth intervenes between avarice and anger; envy and pride correspond to the violence, deceit, and treachery of Hell; there is no place for paganism or heresy. The difference is a natural one. Hell is the eternal abode of those who die unrepentant; Purgatory is a place of passage for those who, whatever their crimes may have been, die penitent within the Church. In Purgatory we have to do only with man's fundamental evil dispositions, of which the soul is to be cleansed; in Hell souls are tortured for specific acts or states of the will, the multifarious fruit of these dispositions. The seven capital vices had long been defined by Church writers, and their order, in the main, was pretty well established; the relative positions of sloth and wrath were the most doubtful. In the Moralia of Gregory the Great (XXXI, Cap. 45) and in one passage in St. Thomas (De Malo, VIII, i) they are all arranged as in Dante, but St. Thomas has them in three other orders, and apparently regards their sequence as unimportant; he prefers inanis gloria to superbia as a designation of Pride. All the sins in the Lower Hell are directed against justice, and are due to some kind of malice, originally caused, perhaps, by Envy and Pride. Pride, indeed, is the foundation of all sin, inasmuch as sin consists in defying God's law; this doctrine is laid down by St. Cyprian, and recurs in Gregory and St. Thomas. Sloth, or lukewarmness in love of the Lord and his creatures, corresponds to the philosophical ignavia and pusillanimitas; in so far as it belongs in the nether world at all, it has its proper place in the Vestibule. The unbaptized are beyond redemption, and therefore Purgatory is denied them. Heresy belongs to the speculative intellect, not to the lower appetite nor to the will; it is neither incontinence nor malice, and therefore has no manifestly appropriate place in Dante's system, nor in St. Thomas's. What becomes of repentant heretics we are not told, but we may assume that their penance must be paid in the circle of pride.¹

The mystic journey occurs in 1300, the year of the great Papal jubilee proclaimed by Boniface VIII. It was a time of general religious enthusiasm, an appropriate moment for a moral awakening. The date is given vaguely in the opening line of the poem, definitely in Inf. XXI, 112-4. This latter passage tells us also that the descent was begun on the anniversary of the crucifixion. This may mean March 25, the real date, or Good Friday, the movable Church anniversary. Good Friday in 1300 fell on April 8, and several references in the poem seem to fit that day better than March 25. Inf. XX, 127 and Purg. XXIII, 119 inform us that the moon was full the night before; in reality the full moon occurred in 1300 on April 5, but in the ecclesiastical calendar for that year the Paschal full moon was set down for the night of April 7. Purg. I, 19-20 represents Venus as the morning star two days later; this was the case in 1301, not in 1300, but here again it was surely the almanac that led Dante astray. There is a peculiar fitness in starting on the downward journey on the evening of Good Friday, when day and hour are conducive to gloom. The ascent of Purgatory, on the other hand, begins at a time when everything suggests hope, the morning of Easter Sunday. Throughout the poem we are apparently to think of sunrise and sunset as occurring at six o'clock. It is, then, on the night of April 7, 1300, that Dante comes to his senses in the dark wood of sin.² The next day he spends in trying to struggle out, directing his steps toward the sunlit mountain of righteousness; but three beasts — his evil habits — impede his progress. When all seems lost, Virgil, or Reason, appears and offers to lead him out by another way. They enter Hell at sunset on April 8, and spend the night and the next day in their spiral course, turning always to the left as they descend. In Hell they go by the time of Jerusalem, which is directly over the bottom of the pit. When they reach the centre of the earth, they pass beyond, climbing along the shaggy side of Satan, who is planted there; then, of course, they are under the opposite hemisphere, whose middle point is Purgatory, between which and Jerusalem there is a difference of twelve hours. Dante represents Virgil and himself, therefore, as gaining twelve hours when they pass the earth's centre: they have a new Saturday before them, and they use all that and the following night in climbing out, by a dark, winding passage, to the other side of the earth, where they emerge on the Island of Purgatory on Sunday morning. Dante has turned his back on sin, has laboriously weaned himself from it, and is now ready to cleanse his soul by penance.

Virgil evidently represents Reason, human understanding, as opposed to Revelation, heavenly intelligence, embodied in Beatrice. One may ask why he was chosen for this function, rather than Aristotle, 'il filosofo,' 'maestro di color che sanno.' For many centuries the Æneid had been the best of school-books, the one from which pupils learned grammar, rhetoric, history, mythology. It was expounded literally and allegorically. Its author, at least until Aristotle was discovered in the 12th century, was universally regarded as the wisest man of antiquity, the personification of the best that humanity, without superhuman enlightenment, could achieve; and even in 1300 his fame was scarcely dimmed by the greater glory of the Greek philosopher. Moreover, he had already proved, in the sixth book of the Æneid, his competence as a guide to the other world. People generally believed, too, that in his fourth Eclogue he had unconsciously prophesied the coming of Christ. Furthermore, Aristotle was to Dante only a book, while Virgil had been so long a figure in popular and scholarly legend that he had become a distinct personality, one with whom it was a joy to travel and from whom it was anguish to part. Lastly, Dante felt for the master of his childhood, his model in later years, a warm personal gratitude that he was eager to express: ¹

'Tu se' lo mio maestro e il mio autore;
 Tu se' solo colui da cui io tolsi
 Lo bello stile che m' ha fatto onore.'

¹ Cf. D. Comparetti, Virgilio nel medio evo, 1872, 2d ed., 1896; English translation by E. F. M. Benecke, 1895.

CANTO I

ARGUMENT

THIS canto, which serves as a general introduction to the poem, is more formal in its allegory than those which follow; it affords, in some measure, a key to the whole interpretation. The author has purposely enveloped its incidents in a veil of mystery, which enhances its impressiveness.

It is the night of April 7, the night before Good Friday in the great jubilee year, 1300. Dante, at the age of thirty-five, suddenly becomes aware that he is astray in the dark wood of worldliness. In terror he seeks refuge at the foot of the mountain of rectitude, whose summit is lit by the rising sun. The sun, here and elsewhere, typifies enlightenment, perhaps more specifically, as Flamini suggests, righteous choice, the intelligent use of the free will. When Dante tries to scale the hill, three beasts beset his path, a leopard, a lion, and a wolf — the same creatures that appear in Jer. v, 6: 'Wherefore a lion out of the forest shall slay them, and a wolf of the evenings shall spoil them, a leopard shall watch over their cities: every one that goeth out thence shall be torn in pieces.' Apparently he has a fair prospect of passing the first two, at least the leopard, but the wolf drives him back. These animals evidently stand for Dante's vicious habits, which prevent his reform. The old commentators interpreted them respectively as luxury, pride, and avarice; this would imply (unless we understand the poet's whole experience to be generic, not individual) that Dante's dominant sin was avarice, which is scarcely believable. A modern view, upheld by Flamini, is, in spite of some grave objections, far more satisfactory in itself and more in harmony with the whole structure of the poem. Inasmuch as the sins of Hell fall under the three heads, Incontinence, Violence, and Fraud, it is natural that the beasts should stand for corresponding practices: the ravening wolf is Incontinence of any kind, the raging lion is Violence, the swift and stealthy leopard is Fraud. St. Thomas and Richard of St. Victor, two of Dante's favorite authors, saw in the spotted pard a fit symbol of fraudulence. We may understand, then, from the episode, that Dante could perhaps have overcome the graver sins of Fraud and Violence, but was unable, without heavenly aid, to rid himself of some of the habits of Incontinence.

At this crisis Reason, personified in Virgil, comes, at divine bidding, to the sinner's rescue. He declares that escape is possible only by another route, which will lead them through Hell: we cannot run away from evil before we know what it really is; a rational understanding of human wickedness must precede reformation. The wolf, he says, is ravaging the world, and will continue to do so until a Hound shall appear and drive it back into Hell, whence it first came. This Hound is obviously a redeemer who shall set the world aright. If we compare this passage with another prophecy in Purg. XXXIII, 40-45, it is tolerably clear that he is to be a temporal rather than a spiritual saviour — a great Emperor whose mission it shall be to establish the balance of power, restore justice, and guide erring humanity. Such an Emperor, destined to come at the end of the world, was not unknown to legend; his advent appears to have been sometimes associated with the annus canicularis, the period of Sirius, the dog-star. As the prediction was still unfulfilled at the time of writing, Dante naturally made it vague: in fact, he rendered Delphic obscurity doubly obscure by adding the mysterious words 'tra Feltro e Feltro.' We know that the poet entertained great hopes of the youthful leader, Can Grande della Scala, in Dante's last years the chief representative of the Imperial power in Italy. It is possible that he so constructed his prognostication as to make its application to Can Grande evident in case those hopes should be realized, but not obtrusive in case they were not. 'Veltro' easily suggests Can Grande; 'Feltro e Feltro' may point to the towns of Feltre and Monte Feltro. Dante's conception of the just Emperor was perhaps influenced by current stories of the Grand Khan of Tartary, who was said to despise wealth and to live simply in a 'felt' tent, and whose title had a strange likeness to the name of the Imperial Vicar General.

For the allegory of the beasts, see Flam., II, 115 ff. For the Veltro: V. Cian, Sulle orme del Veltro, 1897; A. Bassermann, Veltro, Gross-Chan und Kaisersage, 1902, and also Studien zur vergleichenden Literaturgeschichte, VIII, 5 (where Bassermann points out a strange similarity between Dante's phraseology and that of a passage in the Alexandrian Greek prophecies called Oracula Sibyllina). The interpretation and the coinage of prophecy had a great vogue in the 13th and 14th centuries. — For the situation in the opening lines, cf. B. Latini, Tesoretto, II, 75-78, and III, 1.

Nel mezzo del cammin di nostra vita
Mi ritrovai per una selva oscura,
Chè la diritta via era smarrita.

1. In the Convivio, IV, xxiv, 30-1, Dante says that 'il colmo del nostro arco è nelli trentacinque.' Cf. Ps. xc (Vulg. lxxxix), 10: 'The days of our years are threescore years and ten.'

2. Mi ritrovai, 'I came to my senses.'

Ahi quanto a dir qual era è cosa dura
 Questa selva selvaggia ed aspra e forte, 5
 Che nel pensier rinnuova la paura !
 Tanto è amara, che poco è più morte ;
 Ma per trattar del ben ch' i' vi trovai,
 Dirò dell' altre cose ch' io v' ho scorte.
 I' non so ben ridir com' io v' entrài ; 10
 Tant' era pien di sonno in su quel punto
 Che la verace via abbandonai.
 Ma poi ch' io fui al piè d' un colle giunto,
 Là dove terminava quella valle
 Che m' avea di paura il cor compunto, 15
 Guardai in alto, e vidi le sue spalle
 Vestite già de' raggi del pianeta
 Che mena dritto altrui per ogni calle.
 Allor fu la paura un poco queta
 Che nel lago del cor m' era durata 20
 La notte ch' i' passai con tanta pietà.
 E come quei che, con lena affannata,
 Uscito fuor del pelago alla riva,
 Si volge all' acqua perigliosa e guata,
 Così l' animo mio, che ancor fuggiva, 25
 Si volse indietro a rimirar lo passo
 Che non lasciò giammai persona viva.

7. Amara presumably refers to cosa in l. 4. — Cf. Eccclus. xli, 1: 'O death, how bitter is the remembrance of thee!'

11. According to St. Augustine, 'The soul's sleep is forgetfulness of God': Flam., II, 204.

16. Cf. Ps. cxxi (Vulg. cxx), 1: 'I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills, from whence cometh my help.'

17. Pianeta, the sun, which is just rising. It is the morning of Good Friday, April 8, 1300.

21. Con tanta pietà, 'so piteously.' Pietà, beside pietà, was not uncommon in early Italian.

Poi ch' ei posato un poco il corpo lasso,
 Ripresi via per la piaggia diserta,
 Sì che il piè fermo sempre era il più basso. 30
 Ed ecco, quasi al cominciar dell' erta,
 Una lonza leggiera e presta molto,
 Che di pel maculato era coperta.
 E non mi si partia dinanzi al volto ;
 Anzi impediva tanto il mio cammino, 35
 Ch' io fui per ritornar più volte volto.
 Tempo era dal principio del mattino ;
 E il sol montava su con quelle stelle
 Ch' eran con lui, quando l' amor divino
 Mosse da prima quelle cose belle ; 40
 Sì che a bene sperar m' era cagione
 Di quella fera alla gaietta pelle
 L' ora del tempo e la dolce stagione :
 Ma non sì, che paura non mi desse

28. Ei, an old form equivalent to ebbi, is still kept as an ending in the first person singular of the conditional.

30. Fermo, 'still.' This perplexing and much discussed line seems to describe the act of cautiously feeling one's way up a slope (piaggia). See, however, F. Flamini in Giorn. dant., X, 145; also D. Guerri in Giorn. dant., XIII, 177; and D' Ovidio³. 447.

32. Lonza is etymologically connected with ounce and perhaps with lynx. The animal portrayed, however, is evidently the leopardess, which Dante probably regarded as identical with the panther; it appears, in fact, that the panther, in Dante's day, was thought to be the female of the leopard (cf. Giorn. dant., XV, 1). See Romanic Review, I, 18 (cf. Giorn. stor., LIII, 1).

36. Volte volto: the repetition of sound, here as in some other passages, is obviously intentional. It is possible that in this line Dante meant to suggest wearisome iteration — 'I turned again and again and again.' — See F. Cipolla, Risuonanze nella Divina Commedia, in Atti del Reale Istituto Veneto, LX, ii, 31.

38. The sun was in the constellation of Aries, the Ram.

40. It was believed that when the universe was created, the heavenly bodies were placed in their vernal positions. The sun is in the sign of Aries from March 21 to April 20 inclusive.

41. Construe: 'Sì che l' ora del tempo e la dolce stagione m' era (=erano) cagione a bene sperar di quella fera alla gaietta pelle.'

42. Cf. Ovid, Met., III, 609: 'Pictarumque jacent fera corpora pantherarum.'

La vista che mi apparve d' un leone — 45
 Questi pareva che contra me venesse
 Con la test' alta e con rabbiosa fame,
 Sì che pareva che l' aer ne temesse —
 E d' una lupa, che di tutte brame
 Sembiava carca nella sua magrezza, 50
 E molte genti fe' già viver grame.
 Questa mi porse tanto di gravezza,
 Con la paura che uscìa di sua vista,
 Ch' io perdei la speranza dell' altezza.
 E quale è quei che volentieri acquista, 55
 E giugne il tempo che perder lo face,
 Che in tutt' i suoi pensier piange e s' attrista :
 Tal mi fece la bestia senza pace,
 Che venendomi incontro, a poco a poco
 Mi ripingeva là dove il Sol tace. 60
 Mentre ch' io rovinava in basso loco,
 Dinanzi agli occhi mi si fu offerto
 Chi per lungo silenzio pareva fioco.
 Quand' io vidi costui nel gran deserto,
 'Miserere di me,' gridai a lui, 65
 'Qual che tu sii, od ombra od uomo certo.'
 Risposemi : 'Non uomo, uomo già fui,

46. Venisse for venisse.

48. Cf. Ovid, Met., XIII, 406: 'Externasque novo latratu terruit auras.'

52. It was believed that when a wolf meets a man, and sees him first, he strikes the man dumb. See R. T. Holbrook, Dante and the Animal Kingdom, 1902, p. 116.

60. For this transference of sense notation, cf. Inj. V, 28.

63. Fioco in Dante seems always to mean 'weak.' The voice of Reason has not been heeded for so long that it comes faintly to the sinner's ear; so the figure of Virgil appears dim. Cf. Verlaine, Sagesse, v:

'La voix vous fut connue (et chère ?)
 Mais à présent elle est voilée.'

See Flam., II, 200; also Moore, I, 181.

65. Miserere, 'have mercy upon me': beginning of Ps. li (Vulg. l).

E li parenti miei furon Lombardi,
 Mantovani per patria ambedui.
 Nacqui sub Iulio, ancorchè fosse tardi, 70
 E vissi a Roma sotto il buono Augusto,
 Al tempo degli Dei falsi e bugiardi.
 Poeta fui, e cantai di quel giusto
 Figliuol d' Anchise, che venne da Troia,
 Poichè il superbo Ilion fu combusto. 75
 Ma tu perchè ritorni a tanta noia?
 Perchè non sali il dilettoso monte,
 Ch' è principio e cagion di tutta gioia?
 'Or se' tu quel Virgilio, e quella fonte
 Che spande di parlar sì largo fiume?' 80
 Risposi lui con vergognosa fronte.
 'O degli altri poeti onore e lume,
 Vagliami il lungo studio e il grande amore,
 Che m' ha fatto cercar lo tuo volume!
 Tu se' lo mio maestro e il mio autore : 85
 Tu se' solo colui, da cui io tolsi
 Lo bello stile che m' ha fatto onore.

70. Sub Iulio, at the time of Julius Cæsar. — Tardi, so late that I was identified with the reign of Augustus, and not that of Cæsar. Virgil was barely 26 when Cæsar perished.

72. Repeatedly Virgil makes pathetic but always dignified and reticent allusion to his lack of Christianity and his consequent eternal exclusion from the presence of God.

73. Æn., I, 544-5:

'Rex erat Æneas nobis, quo justior alter
 Nec pietate fuit, nec bello major et armis.'

75. Æn., III, 2-3: 'Ceceditque superbum Ilion.' Met., XIII, 108: 'Ilion ardebat.'

84. We learn from Inf. XX, 114 that Dante knew the Æneid by heart.

85. Conv., IV, vi, 43-5: 'Autore . . . si prende per ogni persona degna d' essere creduta e obbedita.'

87. Lo bello stile, especially the choice of elegant words, an art to be learned by the study of good models. See De Vulgari Eloquentia, II, iv and vi. Cf. G. Lisio, Lo "bello stile" nelle "Rime" e nella "Commedia," in Rivista d' Italia, VII, ii, 349.

Vedi la bestia, per cui io mi volsi :
 Aiutami da lei, famoso saggio,
 Ch' ella mi fa tremar le vene e i polsi.' 90
 'A te convien tenere altro viaggio,' Rispose, poi che lagrimar mi vide,
 'Se vuoi campar d' esto loco selvaggio :
 Chè questa bestia, per la qual tu gride,
 Non lascia altrui passar per la sua via, 95
 Ma tanto lo impedisce che l' uccide ;
 Ed ha natura sì malvagia e ria
 Che mai non empie la bramosa voglia,
 E dopo il pasto ha più fame che pria.
 Molti son gli animali a cui s' ammoglia, 100
 E più saranno ancora, infin che il veltro
 Verrà, che la farà morir con doglia.
 Questi non ciberà terra nè peltro,
 Ma sapienza e amore e virtute,
 E sua nazione sarà tra Feltro e Feltro. 105
 Di quell' umile Italia fia salute
 Per cui morì la vergine Cammilla,
 Eurialo, e Turno, e Niso di ferute.
 Questi la caccerà per ogni villa,
 Fin che l' avrà rimessa nello inferno, 110

89. Saggio, in Dante, is almost equivalent to poeta.

90. Le vene e i polsi was a standing phrase. Cf. Inf. XIII, 63.

103. Peltro, 'pewter,' i. e., money. It was a common belief that wolves eat dirt.

105. This line is intentionally obscure. Nazione probably means 'birth.' Feltro means 'felt.'

106. Æn., III, 522-3: 'Humilemque videmus Italiam.' Virgil meant 'low-lying,' but Dante took the word in a moral sense.

 Che tu mi segui, ed io sarò tua guida,
 E trarrotti di qui per loco eterno,
 Ove udirai le disperate strida 115
 Di quegli antichi spiriti dolenti,
 Che la seconda morte ciascun grida;
 E poi vedrai color che son contenti
 Nel fuoco, perchè speran di venire,
 Quando che sia, alle beate genti: 120
 Alle qua' poi se tu vorrai salire,

 In tutte parti impera, e quivi regge,
 Quivi è la sua città e l' alto seggio:

112. Me'=meglio.

113. Segui=segua.

117. 'Each of whom proclaims the second death,' i. e., damnation. The phrase was often used in this sense by theologians. Cf. Dante, Epistola VI, ii, 26 ff.: 'Vos autem divina iura et humana transgredientes . . ., nonne terror secundæ mortis exagitat . . .?'

118. The souls in Purgatory.

122. Beatrice.

126. Che . . . per me si vegna=che io venga. This curious passive impersonal construction occurs several times, with verbs of coming, going, and staying, in Dante's works: Inf. XXVI, 18; Purg. XVI, 119-20, XXII, 85, XXV, 109-10; Conv., III, xiii, 95-7.

CANTO II

ARGUMENT

As this canto opens, it is the evening of Good Friday; twelve hours have been consumed in the attempt to scale the mountain, the encounter with the beasts, and the conversation with Virgil. The world is going to rest, and Dante, 'all alone' among the creatures of this earth, is preparing for a stern and fearful task. At this point — really the beginning of the Inferno, inasmuch as the first canto is a general introduction to the poem — Dante invokes the Muses, following the example of the great poets of old. Dante probably believed that the Muses, even to the ancients, were only a figure of speech, a metaphor for poetic inspiration or art; so in the Vita Nuova, XXV, 88, he says that Horace, calling upon the Muse, 'parla . . . alla sua scienza medesima.'

Doubting his fitness for the proposed journey, Dante recalls his two great predecessors, Æneas and St. Paul, to whom the realms of the departed were revealed. The former, as the sixth book of the Æneid relates, visited the lower world; the latter 'was caught up into Paradise,' as he tells us in II Cor. xiii. The one listened to prophecies of Rome's future greatness; the other 'heard unspeakable words, which it is not lawful for a man to utter.' The experience of Æneas prepared the way for the Empire, the 'alto effetto' or 'mighty result' of his vision; the rapture of St. Paul strengthened the faith which sustains the Church. Dante has no such mission, he merely represents the ordinary run of humanity: why should such a revelation be made to him?

It is worth noting that in introducing the example of Æneas, Dante begins with 'tu dici che . . .,' and a few lines further on he uses the phrase 'questa andata onde gli dai tu vanto'; so in Par. XV, 26, referring to the same episode, he adds 'se fede merta nostra maggior Musa,' meaning Virgil. These expressions seem to imply a mental reservation with regard to the literal veracity of Æneas's adventure. In Conv., II, i, he makes it clear that in poetry truth is to be sought not in the letter but in the allegory, which he calls 'una verità ascosa sotto bella menzogna.' The sixth book of the Æneid, then, is allegorically true, in that it records revelations made to the hero, but in its material details it may be regarded as fiction. In Æn., VI, 893-8, Anchises lets his son out through the ivory gate of deceptive dreams; and Servius, in his commentary, explains this incident as an indication that the whole story is an invention.

To strengthen Dante's wavering courage, Virgil assures him that the experience vouchsafed him is a fruit of the Divine Care which watches lovingly over erring man as long as hope is left. In dramatic fashion he tells how Mary, pitying Dante's plight, called upon Lucia (presumably St. Lucia of Syracuse), who, in turn, summoned Beatrice to his aid; she sought out Virgil in the Limbus and sent him to rescue the struggling sinner. On hearing this, Dante takes heart again, and follows his master into the earth. The three ladies form a counterpart to the three beasts. The Virgin, here as generally in Christian thought, symbolizes divine Mercy. Lucia has by almost all interpreters been regarded as the emblem of Grace — probably, as her name suggests, Illuminating Grace; inasmuch as Mary describes Dante to Lucia as 'il tuo fedele,' it would seem that our poet, for reasons unknown to us, had held this saint in particular veneration. Beatrice, as we have seen, stands for Revelation, for which Dante's distorted mind must be prepared by Reason. God in his mercy sends forth his illuminating grace to prepare the way for complete revelation, which will ensue as soon as the reawakened voice of reason shall have made the sinner ready to receive it.

For the symbolism of the three ladies, see Flam., II, 149 ff. It should be recorded that so distinguished a commentator as Torraca regards Beatrice, Lucia, and Mary as emblems of the three Christian virtues, Faith, Hope, and Charity — an interpretation that seems to meet with a fatal obstacle in Purg. XXIX, 121-9, where these virtues are manifestly represented by three nymphs.

Lo giorno se n' andava, e l' aer bruno
 Toglieva gli animai che sono in terra
 Dalle fatiche loro ; ed io sol uno
 M' apparecchiava a sostener la guerra
 Sì del cammino e sì della pietate, 5
 Che ritrarrà la mente che non erra.
 O Muse, o alto ingegno, or m' aiutate !
 O mente, che scrivesti ciò ch' io vidi,
 Qui si parrà la tua nobilitate.
 Io cominciai : ' Poeta che mi guidi, 10
 Guarda la mia virtù, s' ella è possente,
 Prima che all' alto passo tu mi fidi.

6. Mente here, as very often in Dante, means 'memory.'

Tu dici che di Silvio lo parente,
 Corrutibile ancora, ad immortale
 Secolo andò, e fu sensibilmente. 15
 Però se l' avversario d' ogni male
 Cortese i fu, pensando l' alto effetto
 Che uscir dovea di lui, e il chi e il quale,
 Non pare indegno ad uomo d' intelletto :
 Ch' ei fu dell' alma Roma e di suo impero 20
 Nell' empireo ciel per padre eletto ;
 La quale e il quale (a voler dir lo vero)
 Fu stabilito per lo loco santo
 U' siede il successor del maggior Piero.
 Per questa andata, onde gli dai tu vanto, 25
 Intese cose che furon cagione
 Di sua vittoria e del papale ammanto.
 Andovvi poi lo Vas d' elezione,
 Per recarne conforto a quella fede
 Ch' è principio alla via di salvazione. 30
 Ma io perchè venirvi? o chi 'l concede?
 Io non Enea, io non Paolo sono :
 Me degno a ciò nè io nè altri 'l crede.
 Per che se del venire io m' abbandono,
 Temo che la venuta non sia folle. 35

 E quale è quei che disvuol ciò che volle,
 E per nuovi pensier cangia proposta,
 Sì che dal cominciar tutto si tolle,
 Tal mi fec' io in quella oscura costa : 40
 Perchè pensando consumai la impresa
 Che fu nel cominciar cotanto tosta.
 'Se io ho ben la tua parola intesa,' Rispose del magnanimo quell' ombra,
 'L' anima tua è da viltate offesa, 45
 La qual molte fiate l' uomo ingombra,
 Sì che d' onrata impresa lo rivolve,
 Come falso veder bestia, quand' ombra.
 Da questa tema acciocchè tu ti solve,
 Dirotti perch' io venni, e quel che intesi 50
 Nel primó punto che di te mi dolse.
 Io era tra color che son sospesi,
 E donna mi chiamò beata e bella,
 Tal che di comandare io la richiesi.
 Lucevan gli occhi suoi più che la stella ; 55
 E cominciommi a dir soave e piana
 Con angelica voce in sua favella :

E durerà quanto il moto lontana, 60
 L' amico mio — e non della ventura —
 Nella diserta piaggia è impedito
 Sì nel cammin che volto è per paura ;
 E temo che non sia già sì smarrito
 Ch' io mi sia tardi al soccorso levata, 65
 Per quel ch' io ho di lui nel Cielo udito.
 Or muovi, e con la tua parola ornata,
 E con ciò ch' è mestieri al suo campare,
 L' aiuta sì ch' io ne sia consolata.
 Io son Beatrice, che ti faccio andare ; 70
 Vegno di loco, ove tornar disio ;
 Amor mi mosse, che mi fa parlare.
 Quando sarò dinanzi al Signor mio,
 Di te mi loderò sovente a lui.”
 Tacette allora, e poi comincia' io : 75
 “ O donna di virtù, sola per cui
 L' umana spezie eccede ogni contento
 Da quel ciel che ha minor li cerchi suoi,
 Tanto m' aggrada il tuo comandamento
 Che l' ubbidir, se già fosse, m' è tardi ; 80
 Più non t' è uopo aprirmi il tuo talento.
 Ma dimmi la cagion che non ti guardi
 Dello scender quaggiuso in questo centro
 Dall' ampio loco ove tornar tu ardi.”
 “ Da che tu vuoi saper cotanto addentro, 85

60. 'And shall last as far into the future as motion,' as long as the revolution of the heavens, by which time is measured, shall endure. Many texts have mondo for moto.

76. In the Vita Nuova, X, 13, Dante calls Beatrice 'regina delle virtù.' Cf. Boethius, Cons., I, Pr. iii: 'O omnium magistra virtutum.'

77. Mankind surpasses everything contained within the sphere of the moon (everything perishable) only through divine revelation, embodied in Beatrice.

Dirotti brevemente," mi rispose,
 "Perch' io non temo di venir qua entro.
 Temer si dee di sole quelle cose
 Ch' hanno potenza di fare altrui male :
 Dell' altre no, che non son paurose. 90
 Io son fatta da Dio, sua mercè, tale
 Che la vostra miseria non mi tange,
 Nè fiamma d' esto incendio non m' assale.
 Donna è gentil nel ciel, che si compiangi
 Di questo impedimento ov' io ti mando, 95
 Sì che duro giudizio lassù frange.
 Questa chiese Lucia in suo dimando
 E disse : ' Or ha bisogno il tuo fedele
 Di te, ed io a te lo raccomando.'
 Lucia, nimica di ciascun crudele, 100
 Si mosse e venne al loco dov' io era,
 Che mi sedea con l' antica Rachele.
 Disse : ' Beatrice, loda di Dio vera,
 Chè non soccorri quei che t' amò tanto
 Che uscìo per te della volgare schiera? 105
 Non odi tu la pieta del suo pianto,
 Non vedi tu la morte che il combatte
 Su la fiumana, ove il mar non ha vanto?'

88. 'We must fear only those things that have power to do one harm.'
 Cf. Canzone IX, 84: 'Che quegli teme c' ha del mal paura.'

92. The happiness of the blest is not marred by compassion for the damned.

94. The Virgin is not expressly named anywhere in the Inferno, Hell being a place where mercy does not enter.

102. Beatrice's seat in Heaven is described in Par. XXXII, 8-9. Rachel symbolized the contemplative life.

108. The fiumana is perhaps the Acheron, the river of death, which flows beneath Dante's feet. Most commentators understand it as a mere metaphor, signifying the same thing as the selva. For a different explanation, see Flam., II, 25; also Giorn. dant., X, 145. If the Acheron is meant, the ocean can rightly be said to have no vaunt over it, as it does not empty into the sea, but runs down through Hell.

Al mondo non fur mai persone ratte
 A far lor pro, nè a fuggir lor danno, 110
 Com' io, dopo cotai parole fatte,
 Venni quaggiù dal mio beato scanno,
 Fidandomi del tuo parlare onesto,
 Che onora te e quei che udito l' hanno."
 Poscia che m' ebbe ragionato questo, 115
 Gli occhi lucenti lagrimando volse ;
 Per che mi fece del venir più presto.
 E venni a te così, com' ella volse ;
 Dinanzi a quella fiera ti levai
 Che del bel monte il corto andar ti tolse. 120
 Dunque che è? perchè, perchè ristai?
 Perchè tanta viltà nel core allette?
 Perchè ardire e franchezza non hai?
 Poscia che tai tre donne benedette
 Curan di te nella corte del cielo, 125
 E il mio parlar tanto ben t' impromette?'
 Quali i fioretti dal notturno gelo
 Chinati e chiusi, poi che il Sol gl' imbianca,
 Si drizzan tutti aperti in loro stelo,
 Tal mi fec' io di mia virtute stanca ; 130
 E tanto buono ardire al cor mi corse
 Ch' io cominciai come persona franca :
 'O pietosa colei che mi soccorse,
 E tu cortese, che ubbidisti tosto
 Alle vere parole che ti porse ! 135
 Tu m' hai con desiderio il cor disposto
 Sì al venir, con le parole tue,

118. Volse = volle.122. Allette = allettì.132. Franca, 'set free.'

Ch' io son tornato nel primo proposto.
Or va, che un sol volere è d' ambedue :

Tu duca, tu signore, e tu maestro.'

Così gli dissi ; e poichè mosso fue,
Entraì per lo cammino alto e silvestro.

CANTO III

ARGUMENT

A SOLEMN inscription over the open gate of Hell arouses Dante's apprehensions, but he is led on by his master into a place full of darkness and the confused wail of countless tortured souls. The absence of light — natural enough in the interior of the earth — symbolizes the spiritual blindness of the sinner. The poet continually makes effective use of it in his larger pictures, but does not allow it to interfere with his treatment of detail; there is always assumed to be some infernal glow that enables him to discern as much as he needs to see.

The part of the lower world on which they enter is the abode of the lukewarm, who were neither good nor bad, and contributed nothing to society. Here, presumably, are to be found those who were given over to acedia, or sloth, one of the seven capital sins. To one of Dante's intense activity and positiveness of judgment these are the most contemptible of all creatures. To him they are as the Laodiceans, 'neither cold nor hot.' 'So then,' says Rev. iii, 16, 'because thou art lukewarm, and neither cold nor hot, I will spue thee out of my mouth.' Both Heaven and Hell reject them. Not one of them does Dante mention by name. Their punishment describes them: as he who will attach himself to neither party must be continually shifting sides, the lukewarm are depicted eternally rushing to and fro after an aimlessly dodging banner; as he who loves his ease is more annoyed by trifles than is the magnanimous man by severe trials, we see the sluggards tormented by flies and wasps, which seem to them worse than any other punishment.

Between this vestibule and the real Hell flows the Acheron, whose bank is crowded with lost souls ready to be ferried over by Charon, the ancient boatman. By him, as by most of the spirits whom he meets in Hell, Dante is immediately recognized as a living man; although these uncorporeal creatures have all the appearance of bodies, can be seen, heard, and (in Hell) even touched, and possess the same senses as those in the flesh, there are certain tokens by which a genuine live body can be distinguished from them. Charon, moreover, discerns — perhaps by virtue of his office — that Dante is one of the elect, and therefore refuses to carry him in his boat. Divine intervention mysteriously helps the poet on his way. A sudden earthquake, similar to that which preceded the descent of Christ, frightens Dante into a swoon; and when he recovers consciousness, he is on the other side of Acheron, at the edge of the abyss. Thus the sinner who is trying to better himself, and meets apparently insuperable obstacles, is carried past them, he knows not how, by a higher power.

For a discussion of the infernal darkness, see G. B. Grassi, Le tenebre nell' "Inferno" di Dante, in Giorn. dant., XII, 1. The punishment of the lukewarm by flies and wasps may be compared to the plague of locusts described in Rev. ix, 3-6.

PER ME SI VA NELLA CITTÀ DOLENTE,
 PER ME SI VA NELL' ETERNO DOLORE,
 PER ME SI VA TRA LA PERDUTA GENTE.
 GIUSTIZIA MOSSE IL MIO ALTO FATTORE ;
 FECEMI LA DIVINA POTESTATE, 5
 LA SOMMA SAPIENZA E IL PRIMO AMORE.
 DINANZI A ME NON FUR COSE CREATE
 SE NON ETERNE, ED IO ETERNO DURO.
 LASCIATE OGNI SPERANZA VOI CH' ENTRATE !
 Queste parole di colore oscuro 10
 Vid' io scritte al sommo d' una porta ;
 Per ch' io : 'Maestro, il senso lor m' è duro.'
 Ed egli a me, come persona accorta :
 'Qui si convien lasciare ogni sospetto ;

5. Hell was made by the triune God — Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, or Power, Wisdom, and Love.

7. 'In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth. And the earth was without form, and void' (Gen. i, 1-2). At this point, apparently, Hell was created for the rebellious angels, who sinned almost as soon as they were made. Cf. Mat. xxv, 41: '... everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels.' The story of the revolt and fall of the angels belongs to very early Christian and even to pre-Christian tradition. It is recorded distinctly in II Peter, ii, 4 and Jude 6, more obscurely in Rev. xii, 9. Tertullian and St. Augustine refer to it, and it is narrated in full by Cassian (4th and 5th centuries) in his Collationes, ch. viii-xi. Cf. Conv., II, vi, 95 ff.: 'Dico che di tutti questi Ordini [di angeli] si perderono alquanti tosto che furono creati, forse in numero della decima parte; alla quale restaurare fu l' umana natura poi creata.' See, further, the argument at the head of Canto XXXIV.

8. On the Judgment Day, when all the wicked shall have been consigned to Hell, it will be sealed up, and will remain unchanged forever.

14. Cf. Æn., VI, 26: 'Nunc animis opus, Æneæ, nunc pectore firmo.'

Ogni viltà convien che qui sia morta. 15
 Noi siam venuti al loco ov' io t' ho detto
 Che tu vedrai le genti dolorose,
 Ch' hanno perduto il ben dell' intelletto.
 E poi che la sua mano alla mia pose,
 Con lieto volto, ond' io mi confortai, 20
 Mi mise dentro alle segrete cose.
 Quivi sospiri, pianti ed alti guai
 Risonavan per l' aer senza stelle,
 Per ch' io al cominciar ne lagrimai.
 Diverse lingue, orribili favelle, 25
 Parole di dolore, accenti d' ira,
 Voci alte e fioche, e suon di man con elle,
 Facevano un tumulto, il qual s' aggira
 Sempre in quell' aria senza tempo tinta,
 Come la rena quando a turbo spira. 30
 Ed io, ch' avea d' orror la testa cinta,
 Dissi : ' Maestro, che è quel ch' i' odo?
 E che gent' è, che par nel duol sì vinta?'
 Ed egli a me : ' Questo misero modo
 Tendon l' anime triste di coloro 35
 Che visser senza infamia e senza lodo.
 Mischiate sono a quel cattivo coro
 Degli angeli che non furon ribelli
 Nè fur fedeli a Dio, ma per sè foro.
 Cacciarli i Ciel per non esser men belli ; 40

31. Cf. Æn., II, 550 : ' At me tum primum sævus circumstetit horror.'

37. Such neutral angels are mentioned in a Syriac version of the Apocalypse of St. Paul, and they appear again, in the form of birds, on one of the islands visited by St. Brendan.

40. Cacciarli = li cacciarono.

Nè lo profondo inferno gli riceve,
 Chè alcuna gloria i rei avrebber d' elli.'
 Ed io : 'Maestro, che è tanto greve
 A lor, che lamentar gli fa sì forte?'
 Rispose : 'Dicerolti molto breve. 45
 Questi non hanno speranza di morte,
 E la lor cieca vita è tanto bassa
 Che invidiosi son d' ogni altra sorte.
 Fama di loro il mondo esser non lassa,
 Misericordia e giustizia gli sdegna. 50
 Non ragioniam di lor, ma guarda e passa.'
 Ed io, che riguardai, vidi una insegna,
 Che girando correva tanto ratta
 Che d' ogni posa mi pareva indegna ;
 E dietro le venia sì lunga tratta 55
 Di gente ch' i' non avrei mai creduto
 Che morte tanta n' avesse disfatta.
 Poscia ch' io v' ebbi alcun riconosciuto,
 Vidi e conobbi l' ombra di colui
 Che fece per viltà lo gran rifiuto. 60
 Incontanente intesi, e certo fui,
 Che quest' era la setta dei cattivi
 A Dio spiacenti ed ai nemici sui.
 Questi sciaurati, che mai non fur vivi,

42. The guilty might derive some satisfaction from comparing themselves with these.

52. Insegna, 'banner.'

54. Indegna, probably for indegnata, 'disdainful.'

60. Without much doubt this is Celestine V, a pious hermit, who, after a long vacancy of the papal office, was elected Pope in July, 1294, but abdicated five months later, feeling himself physically and mentally unfit. Through his renunciation Boniface VIII, Dante's chief enemy, became Pope. According to Torraca, Celestine (then called Pietro) was in Tuscany in 1280, when Dante may have seen him. He was canonized in 1313.

64. Cf. Rev. iii, 1 : 'I know thy works, that thou hast a name that thou livest, and art dead.'

Erano ignudi e stimolati molto 65
 Da mosconi e da vespe ch' erano ivi.
 Elle rigavan lor di sangue il volto,
 Che, mischiato di lagrime, ai lor piedi,
 Da fastidiosi vermi era ricolto.
 E poi che a riguardare oltre mi diedi, 70
 Vidi gente alla riva d' un gran fiume ;
 Per ch' io dissi : ' Maestro, or mi concedi
 Ch' io sappia quali sono, e qual costume
 Le fa di trapassar parer sì pronte
 Com' io discerno per lo fioco lume.' 75
 Ed egli a me : ' Le cose ti fien conte
 Quando noi fermerem li nostri passi
 Sulla trista riviera d' Acheronte.'
 Allor con gli occhi vergognosi e bassi,
 Temendo no 'l mio dir gli fusse grave, 80
 Infino al fiume di parlar mi trassi.
 Ed ecco verso noi venir per nave
 Un vecchio bianco per antico pelo,
 Gridando : ' Guai a voi, anime prave !
 Non isperate mai veder lo cielo ! 85
 I' vegno per menarvi all' altra riva,
 Nelle tenebre eterne, in caldo e in gelo.
 E tu che se' costì, anima viva,
 Partiti da cotesti che son morti !'
 Ma poi ch' ei vide ch' io non mi partiva, 90
 Disse : ' Per altra via, per altri porti

72. Cf. Æn., VI, 318-9:

'Dic, ait, o virgo, quid vult concursus ad amnem?
 Quidve petunt animæ?'

78. Cf. Æn., VI, 295: 'Hinc via Tartarei quæ fert Acherontis ad undas.'
 — Virgil checks Dante's impatience to know everything at once; as they proceed, Dante's questions will find their due answer.

Verrai a spiaggia, non qui, per passare ;
 Più lieve legno convien che ti porti.'
 E il duca a lui : 'Caron, non ti crucciare :
 Vuolsi così colà dove si puote 95
 Ciò che si vuole, e più non dimandare.'
 Quindi fur quete le lanose gote
 Al nocchier della livida palude,
 Che intorno agli occhi avea di fiamme rote.
 Ma quell' anime, ch' eran lasse e nude, 100
 Cangiar colore e dibattero i denti,
 Ratto che inteser le parole crude.
 Bestemmiavano Iddio e lor parenti,
 L' umana specie, il luogo, il tempo e il seme
 Di lor semenza e di lor nascimenti. 105
 Poi si ritrasser tutte quante insieme,
 Forte piangendo, alla riva malvagia
 Che attende ciascun uom che Dio non teme.
 Caron dimonio, con occhi di bragia,
 Loro accennando, tutte le raccoglie ; 110
 Batte col remo qualunque s' adagia.
 Come d' autunno si levan le foglie

93. Charon sees that Dante is destined to be carried, after death, to Purgatory in the angel's boat described in Purg. II, 10-51.

95. Virgil makes use of this formula on other occasions; cf. Inj. V, 23.

97. Cf. Æn., VI, 298-300:

'Portitor has horrendus aquas et flumina servat
 Terribili squalore Charon, cui plurima mento
 Canities inculta jacet, stant lumina flamma.'

Charon, like most of the classical guardians retained in Dante's Hell, becomes a demonic figure; his 'fiery eyes' become 'encircled with wheels of flame.'

111. S' adagia, 'takes his ease.' Guittone d' Arezzo, in his poem Ai lasso, l. 68, uses v' adagia, meaning 'suits you.'

112. Cf. Æn., VI, 309-10:

'Quam multa in sylvis autumnus frigore primo
 Lapsa cadunt folia . . . '

The simile is evidently suggested by Virgil, but Dante adds the descriptive 'l' una appresso dell' altra' and the pathetic touch of the last clause. Nearly always, when Dante borrows a simile, he makes it more vivid or more human.

L' una appresso dell' altra, infin che il ramo
 Vede alla terra tutte le sue spoglie,
 Similmente il mal seme d' Adamo 115
 Gittansi di quel lito ad una ad una
 Per cenni, come augel per suo richiamo.
 Così sen vanno su per l' onda bruna,
 Ed avanti che sian di là discese,
 Anche di qua nuova schiera s' aduna. 120
 'Figliuol mio,' disse il Maestro cortese,
 'Quelli che muoion nell' ira di Dio
 Tutti convegnon qui d' ogni paese ;
 E pronti sono a trapassar lo rio,
 Chè la divina giustizia gli sprona 125
 Sì che la tema si volge in disio.
 Quinci non passa mai anima buona ;
 E però se Caron di te si lagna,
 Ben puoi saper omai che il suo dir suona.'
 Finito questo, la buia campagna 130
 Tremò sì forte che dello spavento
 La mente di sudore ancor mi bagna.
 La terra lagrimosa diede vento,
 Che balenò una luce vermiglia,
 La qual mi vinse ciascun sentimento ; 135
 E caddi, come l' uom cui sonno piglia.

117. 'As a bird comes down at its call,' i. e., the call by which the hunter lures it. The poem is full of figures taken from bird-hunting, the favorite sport of the nobility in the Middle Ages.

126. Any reality seems to them less intolerable than the apprehension.

127. Cf. Æn., VI, 563: 'Nulli fas casto sceleratum insistere limen.'

129. See note on l. 93.

132. Mente, 'memory.'

CANTO IV

ARGUMENT

A THUNDER clap announces the consummation of the miracle. Dante finds himself on the brink of the cliff that surrounds the dark abyss. A 'roar of countless wails' greets his ear. At this sound, Virgil, who later in the journey sternly rebukes Dante for his sympathy with the damned, himself turns pale with pity: while Reason, face to face with sin, can feel only abhorrence, it may well be moved to anguish by contemplation of sin's consequences.

The descent of the bank brings the poets to the first circle of Hell, the Limbus. The Church fathers defined the Limbus as an underground place, near Hell and Purgatory, the abode of the souls of unbaptized children and, until the Harrowing of Hell, of the virtuous members of the Old Church; the only punishment is exile from God's presence; the patriarchs were cheered by hope of ultimate rescue. Salvation can be won only through faith in Christ: the ancient Hebrews believed in Christ to come, Christians believe in Christ already descended and arisen. Admission to community with Christ, which redeems man from original sin, must be sanctified by prescribed rites — in Christian times by baptism.

After the crucifixion Christ went down into Hell, — breaking the gates, which have ever since remained open, — and took from Limbus the souls of the worthy people of the Old Testament. The doctrine of the Harrowing of Hell is foreshadowed in Messianic tradition. In the Bible only passing references to it are to be found: as in Ephesians iv, 9; I Epistle of Peter iii, 19 and iv, 6; also, according to St. Augustine, in Ps. cvii (Vulgate cvi), 14. It is mentioned in the apocryphal Gospel of Peter and described in the apocryphal Gospel of Nicodemus.

It remained for Dante to place in his Limbus the souls of virtuous pagans. These, as they had never believed in Christ, were not saved, but remained with the unbaptized infants. Only Cato of Utica, who appears in the first canto of the Purgatorio, was apparently released, and is working out his salvation on the Island of Purgatory; how his entrance into the Church is to be effected, we are not told. It is interesting to note that in the Æneid, VI, 426-9, the children are on the outer edge of the lower world — 'infantumque animæ flentes in limine primo.'

Dante's Limbus is shrouded in darkness, and the air quivers with sighs. Such is the life of those devoid of true knowledge of God: their minds are enveloped in ignorance, and their hearts are full of a vague longing forever unsatisfied. But those among them who combine wisdom with virtue are illumined by mortal intelligence — a light dim compared with the vision of God, but bright beside the obscurity in which their less gifted fellows dwell. The state of the heathen sages of old is symbolized by the 'nobile castello,' the Palace of Wisdom (or, as some understand it, of Fame), where the great souls congregate, 'neither happy nor sad,' enjoying the companionship of their peers and the light of human knowledge. Dante's description of them is reminiscent of Virgil's Elysian Fields in Æn., VI, 637 ff.

Ruppemi l' alto sonno nella testa
 Un greve tuono, sì ch' io mi riscossi,
 Come persona che per forza è desta ;
 E l' occhio riposato intorno mossi,
 Dritto levato, e fiso riguardai 5
 Per conoscer lo loco dov' io fossi.
 Vero è che in su la proda mi trovai
 Della valle d' abisso dolorosa,
 Che tuono accoglie d' infiniti guai.
 Oscura, profond' era e nebulosa 10
 Tanto che, per ficcar lo viso al fondo,
 Io non vi discerneva alcuna cosa.
 'Or discendiam quaggiù nel cieco mondo,' Cominciò il poeta tutto smorto ;
 'Io sarò primo, e tu sarai secondo.' 15
 Ed io, che del color mi fui accorto,

2. Tuono, probably the peal which followed the lightning of III, 134. Inasmuch as lines 2 and 3 point to a sudden noise, this 'thunder' can hardly be identical with that of l. 9.

4. Riposato, recovered from the dazzling effect of the flash.

9. In the Visio S. Pauli there is a 'tonitruum' of groans and sighs.

11. Per ficcar, 'however intently I fixed.'

Dissi : 'Come verrò, se tu paventi,
 Che suoli al mio dubbiare esser conforto?'
 Ed egli a me : 'L' angoscia delle genti
 Che son quaggiù, nel viso mi dipigne 20
 Quella pietà che tu per tema senti.
 Andiam, chè la via lunga ne sospigne.'
 Così si mise, e così mi fe' entrare
 Nel primo cerchio che l' abisso cigne.
 Quivi, secondo che per ascoltare, 25
 Non avea pianto, ma' che di sospiri,
 Che l' aura eterna facevan tremare.
 Ciò avvenia di duol senza martiri
 Ch' avean le turbe, ch' eran molte e grandi,
 D' infanti e di femmine e di viri. 30
 Lo buon Maestro a me : 'Tu non dimandi
 Che spiriti son questi che tu vedi?
 Or vo' che sappi, innanzi che più andi,
 Ch' ei non peccaro : e s' elli hanno mercedi,
 Non basta, perchè non ebber battesimo, 35
 Ch' è parte della fede che tu credi.
 E se furon dinanzi al Cristïanesmo,
 Non adorar debitamente Dio :
 E di questi cotai son io medesmo.
 Per tai difetti, non per altro rio, 40
 Semo perduti, e sol di tanto offesi
 Che senza speme vivemo in disio.'

25. Secondo che, 'as far as one could judge.'

26. Ma' che, 'except.' Ma', from Latin magis, is equivalent to più.

33. Andi=vada. Virgil will not have Dante suppose for a moment that his companions in Limbus have been evildoers.

38. Adorar=adorarono.

40. Rio, 'crime.'

41. Semo, equivalent to siamo, was common in early Italian.

42. In Dante's time the ending -emo, in the first person plural of verbs of the second and third conjugations, had not yet been quite supplanted by -iamo.

Gran duol mi prese al cor quando lo intesi,
 Perocchè gente di molto valore
 Conobbi che in quel limbo eran sospesi. 45
 'Dimmi, Maestro mio, dimmi, Signore,'
 Comincia' io, per voler esser certo
 Di quella fede che vince ogni errore :
 'Uscici mai alcuno, o per suo merto '
 O per altrui, che poi fosse beato?' 50
 E quei, che intese il mio parlar coperto,
 Rispose : 'Io era nuovo in questo stato,
 Quando ci vidi venire un possente
 Con segno di vittoria coronato.
 Trasseci l' ombra del primo parente, 55
 D' Abel suo figlio, e quella di Noè,
 Di Moïse legista e ubbidiente ;
 Abraam patriarca, e David re,
 Israel con lo padre e co' suoi nati
 E con Rachele, per cui tanto fe', 60
 Ed altri molti ; e fecegli beati.
 E vo' che sappi che, dinanzi ad essi,
 Spiriti umani non eran salvati.'

48. As soon as Dante learns that Virgil's soul dwells in Limbus, he is eager to receive from this witness corroboration of the doctrine of the descent of Christ into Hell.

52. Virgil died in the year 19 B. C.

53. Christ is never named in the Inferno.

56. Noè, re, je' (ll. 56, 58, 60) form oxytonic or 'masculine' rhymes, called rime tronche. Such lines have, as printed and as now pronounced, only ten syllables each, instead of eleven. It is likely, however, that Dante pronounced Noè, rée, jée.

58. Cf. Gen. xvii, 5: 'thy name shall be Abraham, for a father of many nations have I made thee.'

59. Israel, Jacob; lo padre, Isaac; e suoi nati, his twelve children.

60. To win Rachel, Jacob served Laban twice seven years: Gen. xxix, 18-28.

63. Before the descent of Christ all human souls went, if bad, to Hell, if good, to Limbus. Since that time Christian souls penitent at the moment of death have gone to Purgatory.

Non lasciavam l' andar perch' ei dicessi,
 Ma passavam la selva tuttavia — 65
 La selva, dico, di spiriti spessi.
 Non era lunga ancor la nostra via
 Di qua dal sonno, quand' io vidi un foco
 Ch' emisperio di tenebre vincia.
 Di lungi v' eravamo ancora un poco, 70
 Ma non sì ch' io non discernessi in parte
 Che onrevol gente possedea quel loco.
 'O tu che onori e scienza ed arte,
 Questi chi son, ch' hanno cotanta onranza
 Che dal modo degli altri li diparte?' 75
 E quegli a me : 'L' onrata nominanza,
 Che di lor suona su nella tua vita,
 Grazia acquista nel ciel che sì gli avanza.'
 Intanto voce fu per me udita :
 'Onorate l' altissimo poeta ; 80
 L' ombra sua torna, ch' era dipartita.'
 Poichè la voce fu restata e queta,
 Vidi quattro grand' ombre a noi venire ;
 Sembianza avevan nè trista nè lieta.
 Lo buon Maestro cominciò a dire : 85

64. Dicessi = dicesse. Early usage hesitated between final i and e in many verb forms.

68. Sonno, the swoon of l. 1. Some texts have sommo, the 'proda della valle d' abisso' of ll. 7-8.

69. A light radiates up in all directions from the Castle, forming a hemisphere of brightness over and about it. Vincia is generally understood as the imperfect of vincere, i. e., 'overcame'; the ending -ia for -ea or -eva was common. Torraca, however, regards it as the imperfect of vincire, 'to bind,' and makes emisperio the subject: 'which a hemisphere of darkness enclosed.'

72. Onrevol, ouranza — more commonly orrevole, orranza — are contracted forms of onorevole, onoranza. Note the repetition of onore and its derivatives in ll. 72, 73, 74, 76, 80, 93, 100.

76. God allows the intelligence, by the good use of which they won such renown on earth, to remain with them in the other world.

79. We are not told which of the spirits utters the greeting to Virgil.

'Mira colui con quella spada in mano,
 Che vien dinanzi a' tre sì come sire.
 Quegli è Omero poeta sovrano,
 L' altro è Orazio satiro che viene,
 Ovidio è il terzo, e l' ultimo Lucano. 90
 Perocchè ciascun meco si conviene
 Nel nome che sonò la voce sola,
 Fannomi onore, e di ciò fanno bene.'
 Così vidi adunar la bella scuola
 Di quei signor dell' altissimo canto, 95
 Che sopra gli altri com' aquila vola.
 Da ch' ebber ragionato insieme alquanto,
 Volsersi a me con salutevol cenno ;
 E 'l mio Maestro sorrise di tanto.
 E più d' onore ancora assai mi fenno ; 100
 Ch' esser mi fecer della loro schiera,
 Sì ch' io fui sesto tra cotanto senno.
 Così n' andammo infino alla lumiera,
 Parlando cose che il tacere è bello,

86. Homer is depicted with a sword because he sang of arms. According to Vulg. El., II, ii, the three best themes of poetry are love, arms, and righteousness.

88. Dante did not know Homer directly. The reputation of the latter as 'sovereign poet' must have survived in school tradition. In the Ars Poetica, 73-4, Horace says:

'Res gestæ regumque ducumque et tristia bella
 Quo scribi posset numero, monstravit Homerus.'

A passage in Vita Nuova, XXV, 88-92, suggests that Dante may have formed his impression of Homer, in part, through Horace. It is noteworthy that the ancient poets thus grouped in the Inferno are cited together in the same chapter of the Vita Nuova. Dante was thoroughly familiar with Virgil, Ovid, and Lucan. Another ancient poet whom he had read much, Statius, appears in Purgatory.

89. The Odes and Epodes were probably unknown to Dante. In the Ars Poetica, 235, Horace speaks of himself as a writer of satire.

93. They do well to honor in me the name of poet, which they all share.

100. Fenno = fecero.

104. Things appropriate to that time and place, but not to the present poem.

Sì com' era il parlar colà dov' era. 105
 Venimmo al piè d' un nobile castello,
 Sette volte cerchiato d' alte mura,
 Difeso intorno da un bel fiumicello.
 Questo passammo come terra dura.
 Per sette porte intrai con questi savi ; 110
 Giugnemmo in prato di fresca verdura.
 Genti v' eran con occhi tardi e gravi,
 Di grande autorità ne' lor sembianti ;
 Parlavan rado, con voci soavi.
 Traemmoci così dall' un de' canti 115
 In loco aperto, luminoso ed alto,
 Sì che veder si potean tutti quanti.
 Colà, dritto sopra il verde smalto,
 Mi fur mostrati gli spiriti magni,
 Che del vederli in me stesso n' esalto. 120
 Io vidi Elettra con molti compagni,
 Tra' quai conobbi Ettore ed Enea,
 Cesare armato con gli occhi grifagni.
 Vidi Cammilla e la Penteseilea ;
 Dall' altra parte vidi il re Latino, 125

107. The Palace of Wisdom is surrounded by seven walls representing the four moral virtues (prudence, temperance, fortitude, and justice) and the three intellectual virtues (understanding, knowledge, and wisdom). The stream may well stand for eloquence.

110. The gates probably symbolize the seven liberal arts of the trivium (grammar, logic, rhetoric) and the quadrivium (music, arithmetic, geometry, astronomy), which afford access to knowledge.

112. Cf. Purg. VI, 63: 'E nel muover degli occhi onesta e tarda.'

121. Electra, daughter of Atlas, and mother of Dardanus, the founder of Troy: Æn., VIII, 134-5. Cf. Mon., II, iii, 68-9: 'avia vetustissima, Electra.'

123. Cæsar, the founder of the Empire, is briefly described as 'in arms with hawk-like eyes.' Nowhere in the poem do we find a long description or discussion of him. While he deserved, by virtue of his great political act, a place in history beside that of Christ, he was probably, as a tyrant and the opponent of Cato, distasteful to Dante.

124. Camilla, a warrior maiden: Æn., XI, 498 ff. Penthesilæa, queen of the Amazons: Æn., I, 490 ff.

125. Cf. Æn., VII, 45 ff.

Che con Lavinia sua figlia sedea.
 Vidi quel Bruto che cacciò Tarquino,
 Lucrezia, Julia, Marzia e Corniglia ;
 E solo in parte vidi il Saladino.
 Poi che innalzai un poco più le ciglia, 130
 Vidi il Maestro di color che sanno,
 Seder tra filosofica famiglia.
 Tutti lo miran, tutti onor gli fanno.
 Quivi vid' io Socrate e Platone,
 Che innanzi agli altri più presso gli stanno. 135
 Democrito, che il mondo a caso pone,
 Diogenès, Anassagora e Tale,
 Empedoclès, Eraclito e Zenone ;
 E vidi il buono accoglitor del quale,

 Tullio e Livio e Seneca morale,

127. The other Brutus is in the centre of Hell. Tarquino, for Tarquinio, was regular in early Italian.

128. Lucretia, wife of Collatinus; Julia, daughter of Cæsar, wife of Pompey; Martia, wife of Cato of Utica (cf. Purg. I, 79; Conv., IV, xxviii, 97 ff.); Cornelia, mother of the Gracchi.

129. Saladin, the model of chivalry, was sultan of Egypt and Syria in the 12th century. He is different in race and religion from those mentioned hitherto.

131. Aristotle, whom Dante often calls simply 'il Filosofo,' and to whom he repeatedly refers in terms of the deepest admiration. Aristotle was known to Dante in two Latin translations, one of which had been made by, or for, St. Thomas.

136. Democritus, known to Dante probably through Cicero.

137. Anaxagoras, cited by Aristotle. Thales, one of the seven wise men of Greece: Conv., III, xi, 39.

138. Empedocles, to whose doctrine reference is made in Inf. XII, 42. Heraclitus, mentioned by Aristotle. Zeno, stoic philosopher: Conv., IV, vi, 84.

139. Dioscorides wrote a treatise on plants and their properties: quale here means 'qualities' (of plants).

140. Orpheus, considered as a philosopher: Conv., II, i, 25-34.

141. Tully, or Cicero, was one of the first philosophers that Dante studied: Conv., II, xiii, 17 ff.; see also Inf. XI, 22-4. Livy wrote philosophical works, mentioned in a letter of Seneca to Lucilius; most texts have Lino, i. e., Linus, an imaginary Greek poet. Seneca the moralist was thought to be a different person from the dramatist: see P. Toynbee in Giorn. stor., XXV, 334.

Euclide geometra e Tolommeo,
 Ippocrate, Avicenna e Galieno,
 Averroïs, che il gran comento feo.
 Io non posso ritrar di tutti appieno, 145
 Perocchè sì mi caccia il lungo tema
 Che molte volte al fatto il dir vien meno.
 La sesta compagnia in due si scema ;
 Per altra via mi mena il savio duca,
 Fuor della queta nell' aura che trema ; 150
 E vengo in parte ove non è che luca.

142. Ptolemy, the great geographer and astronomer of Alexandria, who lived in the second century B. C.

143. Hippocrates, Avicenna, Galen: three famous physicians of Greece, Turkestan, and Mysia.

144. Averrhoës, a Spanish Moor of the 12th century, was a celebrated scholar and philosopher. Having read the works of Aristotle in ancient Syriac translations, he composed three commentaries on them; one of these, the 'gran comento,' was followed by St. Thomas. As he inclined towards pantheism and materialism, he was regarded in the 14th century as the master of free-thinkers. — Feo = jece.

148. The company of six dwindles to two — Virgil and Dante.

150. Out of the peaceful atmosphere of the Palace into the air that quivers with sighs: cf. ll. 26-7.

151. Ove non è che luca, 'where there is nothing shining': beyond the brightness of the Palace.

CANTO V

ARGUMENT

IN this canto are found several striking similes drawn from bird-life, which Dante loved to depict. The second circle, with its wind-wafted spirits, offers fit opportunity for these portrayals of starlings, cranes, and doves. Cranes are put to a like use by Virgil in Æn., X, 264-6:

‘Quales sub nubibus atris
Strymoniae dant signa grues, atque athera tranant
Cum sonitu, fugiuntque Notos clamore secundo.’

Torraca quotes from the Tesoro of Brunetto Latini as follows: ‘Gru sono uccelli che volano a squadre, a modo di cavalieri che vanno in battaglia.’ The eager flight of the dove to her young was noted later by Rabelais (Pantagruel, IV, iii): ‘Il n’est que vol de pigeon, quand il a œufz ou petitiz, pour l’obstinée sollicitude en lui par nature posée de recourir et secourir ses pigeonneaux.’

The descent from Limbus to the second circle is not described; we have no means of conjecturing the size or the steepness of the cliff. The journey through Hell being physically impossible, Dante purposely refrains from furnishing particulars that might destroy the illusion, while abounding in such details as serve to heighten it. As the pit narrows progressively toward the bottom, the terraces correspondingly decrease in circumference, but the penalties become more and more severe. At one point in the round of this shelf is a break, where the rock has fallen. When Dante mentions this ruina, in l. 34, he offers no explanation: shrieks and curses are redoubled here, but we know not why. Our suspense lasts until we reach Canto XII, ll. 31-45. There we are told that when Christ descended into Hell, his coming was preceded by an earthquake, which shook down the walls of the abyss in three spots. Those broken places lie beside the circle of the pagans, just beyond the enclosure of the heretics, and over the hypocrites by whom Christ had been condemned (XXI, 112-4; XXIII, 133-8) — all close to the abodes of those who had offended the Saviour by disbelief in his mission. In each case the word ‘ruin’ is used. The sight of the first ruina moves the souls of the second circle to lamentation, because it reminds them of the time when the neighboring Hebrew spirits in the Limbus were rescued, while all the other souls in Hell were left to eternal torment.

Most of the fallen angels, or fiends, are in the lower Hell; a few, however, appear as presiding genii outside the City of Dis: so Charon, Cerberus, Plutus, Phlegyas, and, at the threshold of the second circle, Minos, the judge. Both theologians and simple folk were prone to look upon the heathen gods as demons who had beguiled men into their worship. It is not strange, therefore, to find in a Christian Hell many classic personages, especially such as were already associated with the lower world. Dante did not treat all the pagan divinities alike; if he depicted Plutus as a devil, the Muses and Apollo were to him simply allegorical figures, while Jove apparently represented the ancient poets' dim conception of the Supreme Being. Minos, the great king and legislator of Crete, holds in the 11th book of the Odyssey the noble office of judge of the dead. In the Æneid, VI, 432-3, though briefly sketched, he retains the same honorable function:

'Quæsitòr Minos urnam movet: ille silentum
Conciliumque vocat, vitasque et crimina discit.'

In Dante he has become a hideous demon, arbiter of the damned — the symbol, it would seem, of the guilty conscience.

The second circle punishes lussuria, or lust, the first of the sins of Incontinence. The luxurious are forever blown about in the darkness by stormy blasts, typifying the blind fury of passion. In some previous tales of Hell a wind torments evildoers, notably in the Visio Alberici, XIV, where souls are driven by the fiery breath of a dog and a lion. Dante divests the torment of all grotesqueness, and, indeed, treats the sinners of this class with special consideration. This may be due in part to sympathy, and partly, no doubt, to a sense that their fault is the result of a mistaken following of love, the noblest of human emotions. Theologically speaking, the fate of lost souls should arouse no pity, as the sight of sin should excite only repugnance. But we must remember that the Dante who is visiting Hell is himself still a sinner. Moreover, allegorically interpreted, these harassed souls are men and women loving and suffering on earth; and even the most sinful, as long as they live, are fit objects of compassion.

Compassion, tenderness, sympathetic curiosity, anguish, reach their climax when Dante meets and converses with Francesca da Rimini. This unhappy lady was the daughter of Guido Minore da Polenta, a powerful citizen of Ravenna, and was married to Giovanni di Malatesta da Verrucchio (called Sciancato, or Gian Ciotto), lord of Rimini. Of her love for Paolo, her husband's brother, and the murder of the two by Giovanni, we have no record before Dante, although the event must have been well known. It probably occurred about 1285: in 1282-3 Paolo was in Florence as Capitano del Popolo, and in 1288 there is evidence of a child born to Giovanni by a second wife. After Francesca's adventure had been made eternally famous by Dante's poem, many fables grew up about it; her fate is still a favorite theme for artists and authors. Of all the episodes in the Commedia, this has always been the most popular.

It is not alone the undying passion of Francesca that moves us, but even more her gentleness and modest reticence. In her narrative she names none of the participants; not even her city is called by name. Her identity is revealed by Dante, who, recognizing her, addresses her as 'Francesca.' Everything in her story that could mar our pity is set aside, and nothing remains but the quintessence of love. Amid the tortures of Hell, where all is hatred, her love does not forsake her, and she glories in the thought that she and Paolo shall never be parted.

Should we be inclined to question whether mere impersonal sympathy, however natural and profound, could have sufficed to lead a religious poet, a stern moralist, thus to idealize an adulteress and mitigate her punishment, we might feel ourselves justified in seeking some special reason for his kindness. As we look through the Commedia, we find that in one place or another the exiled poet contrived to pay an appropriate tribute to all those who had befriended him in his need: it was the only return his grateful heart could make. His last and probably his happiest years were spent in Ravenna under the protection of Guido Novello da Polenta, a nephew of our Francesca. Now, we do not know exactly when Dante went to that city, but in any case it was almost certainly at a period later than the time when the Inferno was composed. His son Pietro, however, established himself in Ravenna, perhaps as early as 1317, receiving a benefice from Guido's wife; and his daughter Beatrice entered a convent there. It is possible that previous courtesies, of which we have no record, were extended to Dante or his kindred before this cantica was completed. There is, then, some slight ground for the supposition that this passage was intended as an incidental homage to Guido's family, a rehabilitation of Francesca's memory. Love, she says, comes to gentle hearts with irresistible force — 'a nullo amato amar perdona.' Had she lived, she would have repented; it was her sudden taking off that damned her. Her fate is contrasted with that of her husband: her soul is one of the highest in Hell; his, one of the lowest.

Così discesi del cerchio primaio
 Giù nel secondo, che men loco cinghia
 E tanto più dolor che pugne a guaio.
 Stavvi Minòs orribilmente e ringhia ;
 Esamina le colpe nell' entrata, 5
 Giudica e manda secondo che avvinghia.
 Dico che quando l' anima mal nata
 Li vien dinanzi, tutta si confessa ;
 E quel conoscitor delle peccata
 Vede qual loco d' inferno è da essa ; 10
 Cignesi colla coda tante volte
 Quantunque gradi vuol che giù sia messa.
 Sempre dinanzi a lui ne stanno molte :
 Vanno a vicenda ciascuna al giudizio ;
 Dicono e odono, e poi son giù volte. 15
 'O tu, che vieni al doloroso ospizio,'
 Disse Minòs a me, quando mi vide,
 Lasciando l' atto di cotanto uffizio,
 'Guarda com' entri, e di cui tu ti fide :
 Non t' inganni l' ampiezza dell' entrare !' 20
 E il duca mio a lui : 'Perchè pur gride?
 Non impedir lo suo fatale andare ;

4. Minòs : in mediæval schools Greek proper names, in the nominative, were very commonly stressed on the last syllable, this having been apparently regarded as the regular Greek accentuation; hence Cleopatras, Paris, Semiramis, and elsewhere Calliopè, Semelè, etc. For some reason Cleopatras, with an s, seems to have been considered the correct form.

6. Avvinghia, 'entwines.'

7. Dico, 'I mean.'

8. Li and gli were used interchangeably.

9. Peccata : collective feminine plural (originally neuter plural) forms in -a were much commoner in Dante's day than now.

10. Fide = fidi. So, in l. 21, gride = gridi. The forms in -e are the older.

20. Cf. Mat. vii, 13: 'wide is the gate, and broad is the way, that leadeth to destruction.' Also Æn., VI, 126-7:

'facilis descensus Avernì :
Noctes atque dies patet atri janua Ditis.'

21. Pur seems to mean tu pure, i. e., as well as Charon.

Vuolsi così colà dove si puote
 Ciò che si vuole, e più non dimandare.
 Ora incomincian le dolenti note 25
 A farmisi sentire ; or son venuto
 Là dove molto pianto mi percore.
 Io venni in loco d' ogni luce muto,
 Che mugghia come fa mar per tempesta,
 Se da contrari venti è combattuto. 30
 La bufera infernal, che mai non resta,
 Mena gli spirti con la sua rapina ;
 Voltando e percotendo li molesta.
 Quando giungon davanti alla ruina,
 Quivi le strida, il compianto e il lamento, 35
 Bestemmian quivi la virtù divina.
 Intesi che a così fatto tormento
 Enno dannati i peccator carnali,
 Che la ragion sommettono al talento.
 E come gli stornei ne portan l' ali 40
 Nel freddo tempo, a schiera larga e piena,
 Così quel fiato gli spiriti mali.
 Di qua, di là, di giù, di su gli mena ;
 Nulla speranza gli conforta mai,
 Non che di posa, ma di minor pena. 45
 E come i gru van cantando lor lai,
 Facendo in aer di sè lunga riga,
 Così vid' io venir, traendo guai,
 Ombre portate dalla detta briga.

23. The same formula was used in III, 95-6.

28. Cf. 'dove il sol tace' in I, 60.

38. Enno = sono.

40. Stornei = stornelli.

45. 'I do not say hope of rest, but even hope of less punishment.'

48. Dante was exceedingly fond of the expression trarre guai, 'to utter wails.'

49. Briga: the strife of conflicting winds, l. 30.

Per ch' io dissi : 'Maestro, chi son quelle 50
 Genti che l' aura nera sì gastiga?'
 'La prima di color di cui novelle
 Tu vuoi saper,' mi disse quegli allotta,
 'Fu imperatrice di molte favelle.

 Che succedette a Nino e fu sua sposa ;
 Tenne la terra che il Soldan corregge. 60
 L' altra è colei che s' ancise amorosa
 E ruppe fede al cener di Sicheo ;
 Poi è Cleopatràs lussuriōsa.

 Che con amore al fine combatteo.
 Vedi Paris, Tristano ' ; e più di mille

53. Allotta = allora.

54. Semiramis, queen of Assyria, of whom Dante had read in the Historia of Paulus Orosius, I, iv. In Mon., II, ix, 27-8, Dante says that Ninus, her husband, 'Asiam totam sibi subegerit.'

56. To excuse her own unnatural passion, 'præcepit . . . quod cuique libitum esset, licitum fieret,' i. e., she made every one's pleasure lawful.

60. The lands in Egypt and Syria which the Sultan now rules. For this use of corregge, see Ps. xcv (Vulg.), 10: 'correxit orbem terræ.'

61. Altra here, as very often in Dante, means 'second.' The story of Dido's fatal love for Æneas (and her infidelity to the memory of her dead husband, Sichæus) is told in Æn., IV.

64. Here, and in ll. 65, 67, some texts have vidi for vedi. With the reading vidi, the quotation should close with l. 63. — Elena, Helen, 'on whose account so many evil years were spent' in the Trojan war.

66. 'Who fought with love up to the end': the Old French poet, Benoît de Sainte More, in his Roman de Troie, developing an allusion in Dares's Excidium Trojæ, narrates that Achilles, madly in love with Polyxena, was lured into an ambush, where he perished. See also Servius's Commentary on Æn., III, 322. — Combatteo = combattè.

67. Paris, son of Priam. Tristano, Tristram, hero of the most famous mediæval love romance.

Ombre mostrommi, e nominolle, a dito,
 Che amor di nostra vita dipartille.
 Poscia ch' io ebbi il mio dottore udito 70
 Nomar le donne antiche e i cavalieri,
 Pietà mi giunse, e fui quasi smarrito.
 Io cominciai : ' Poeta, volentieri
 Parlerei a que' duo che insieme vanno
 E paion sì al vento esser leggieri.' 75
 Ed egli a me : ' Vedrai, quando saranno
 Più presso a noi ; e tu allor li prega
 Per quell' amor che i mena, e quei verranno.'
 Sì tosto come il vento a noi li piega,
 Mossi la voce : ' O anime affannate, 80
 Venite a noi parlar, s' altri nol niega.'
 Quali colombe dal disio chiamate,
 Con l' ali alzate e ferme, al dolce nido
 Vegnon per l' aer dal voler portate,
 Cotali uscir della schiera ov' è Dido, 85
 A noi venendo per l' aer maligno,
 Sì forte fu l' affettüoso grido.
 ' O animal grazioso e benigno,

68. Some texts have nominommi.

69. Dipartille = le dipartì; the le is superfluous.

78. I = li.

81. Altri, 'some one.' God is never named to the damned, nor by them, save in blasphemy.

82. This beautiful simile was doubtless suggested by Æn., V, 213-7:

'Qualis spelunca subito commota columba,
 Cui domus et dulces latebroso in pumice nidi,
 Fertur in arva volans, plausumque exterrita pennis
 Dat tecto ingentem : mox aëre lapsa quieto.
 Radit iter liquidum, celeres neque commovet alas.'

Dante, however, while keeping a part of the general picture and a few of the expressions ('sweet nest' and 'motionless wings'), alters the situation, making the dove fly to her nest instead of flying away from it; furthermore, he infuses an entirely new spirit into the figure by his conception of love as the sole power that sustains the mother-bird in her flight.

88. Animal, 'living creature.'

Che visitando vai per l' aer perso
 Noi che tignemmo il mondo di sanguigno, 90
 Se fosse amico il re dell' universo,
 Noi pregheremmo lui della tua pace,
 Poich' hai pietà del nostro mal perverso.
 Di quel che udire e che parlar ti piace
 Noi udiremo e parleremo a vui, 95
 Mentre che il vento, come fa, si tace.
 Siede la terra dove nata fui
 Sulla marina dove il Po discende
 Per aver pace co' seguaci sui.
 Amor, che al cor gentil ratto s' apprende, 100
 Prese costui della bella persona

80. Perso, 'perse,' a term often used by Dante in the sense of 'dark,' denotes properly 'un colore misto di purpureo e di nero, ma vince il nero': Conv., IV, xx, 14-5.

92. 'Pace' is what Francesca most desires; and she imagines that every one else must crave peace — even the rivers running to the sea, as in l. 90.

95. Vui, a southern form for voi, was often used in the rhyme by Tuscan poets.

96. In l. 31 the poet tells us that the 'bufera infernal' never rests. But the 'bufera' seems to indicate the whole storm of conflicting blasts: in a single spot the gust may die down for a moment — come ja, 'as it now does.'

97. Terra, 'city': Ravenna.

99. 'To have peace with its pursuers': the tributaries are conceived as chasing the Po down to the sea.

100. Note the recurrence of amore and amare in Francesca's speeches, especially the use of amore at the beginning of three successive tercets in ll. 100, 103, 106. — According to the doctrine formulated by the Bolognese poet Guido Guinizelli, who belonged to the generation before Dante, love exists potentially in the noble heart (and there only) from its birth, and is immediately awakened to activity by the sight of a worthy object:

'Al cor gentil ripara sempre Amore,
 Come alla selva augello in la verdura,
 Nè fe' Amore avanti gentil core,
 Nè gentil core avanti Amior, Natura.'

This doctrine was adopted and developed by Dante and his fellow poets of the 'dolce stil nuovo.' So Dante, in the 10th sonnet of the Vita Nuova:

'Amore e 'l cor gentil son una cosa,
 Siccom' il Saggio in suo dittato pone.'

101. Love seized him, Paolo, 'for the fair body that was taken from me'; and 'the way (in which it was taken from me) is still harmful to me,' because, murdered as she was without a chance to repent, she incurred eternal pun-

Che mi fu tolta, e il modo ancor m' offende.
 Amor, che a nullo amato amar perdona,
 Mi prese del costui piacer sì forte
 Che, come vedi, ancor non mi abbandona. 105
 Amor condusse noi ad una morte.
 Caïna attende chi vita ci spense.'
 Queste parole da lor ci fur porte.
 Da che io intesi quelle anime offense,
 Chinai 'l viso, e tanto il tenni basso 110
 Finchè il poeta mi disse: 'Che pense?'
 Quando risposi, cominciai: 'O lasso!
 Quanti dolci pensier, quanto disio
 Menò costoro al doloroso passo!'
 Poi mi rivolsi a loro, e parla' io, 115
 E cominciai: 'Francesca, i tuoi martiri
 A lagrimar mi fanno tristo e pio.
 Ma dimmi: al tempo de' dolci sospiri,
 A che e come concedette amore
 Che conoscesti i dubbiosi desiri?' 120
 Ed ella a me: 'Nessun maggior dolore
 Che ricordarsi del tempo felice
 Nella miseria; e ciò sa il tuo dottore.

ishment. For this use of bella persona, cf. Odo delle Colonne, Oi llassa namorata, ll. 17-8:

'La sua persona bella
 Tolta m' à gioco e risa.'

103. 'Love, which exempts no loved one from loving in return, seized me for his charms with such might . . .' Piacer is used here like the corresponding Provençal word plazer, 'attraction,' 'charm.'

107. Caïna, the abode of traitors to kindred, at the bottom of Hell, awaits Francesca's husband, Gian Ciotto.

108. Da lor ci fur porte, 'were offered us by them,' although they were spoken by Francesca alone.

109. Offense = offese, 'injured.'

111. Pense = pensi: cf. l. 19.

112. Evidently there is a pause between question and answer.

123. Il tuo dottore, Virgil, who was happy and glorious on earth, and is now condemned to eternal exile.

Ma se a conoscer la prima radice
 Del nostro amor tu hai cotanto affetto, 125
 Farò come colui che piange e dice.
 Noi leggevamo un giorno per diletto
 Di Lancilotto, come amor lo strinse ;
 Soli eravamo e senza alcun sospetto.
 Per più fiate gli occhi ci sospinse 130
 Quella lettura e scolorocci il viso,
 Ma solo un punto fu quel che ci vinse.
 Quando leggemmo il disïato riso
 Esser baciato da cotanto amante,
 Questi, che mai da me non fia diviso, 135
 La bocca mi baciò tutto tremante.
 Galeotto fu il libro e chi lo scrisse !
 Quel giorno più non vi leggemmo avante.’
 Mentre che l’ uno spirto questo disse,
 L’ altro piangeva sì che di pietade 140
 Io venni men, così com’ io morisse ;
 E caddi, come corpo morto cade.

127. The French prose romance of Lancelot of the Lake, which tells of the love of the hero for Guinevere, wife of King Arthur.

129. Sospetto, ‘misgiving.’ — In the romance, Lancelot and Guinevere were not alone, as Paolo and Francesca were.

130. Gli occhi ci sospinse, ‘made our eyes meet.’

133. Il disïato riso, i. e., the worshipped lips.

137. Gallehaut was the intermediary who brought Lancelot and Guinevere together; Paolo and Francesca had no such go-between — the book was their Gallehaut, an incentive to sin. Cf. D’Ovidio³, 527.

CANTO VI

ARGUMENT

FOR the reason already mentioned, Dante likes to pass lightly over the transitions from one step to another. Thus, when he awakens from his second swoon, he finds himself once more mysteriously transported, this time to the third terrace. Gluttony, the next of the sins of Incontinence, is essentially foul and selfish, and so is fitly symbolized by the cold, slimy filth which constitutes the punishment of the third circle. It is a sin that robs men of their humanity, making them unrecognizable to their friends. Its perfect embodiment is Cerberus, the tormenting genius of the place. This beast, opposing the poets' passage, is offered a double handful of mud, which it eagerly devours. So in the Aeneid, VI, 417-23, Cerberus is pacified by the Sibyl with a honey-cake:

'Cerberus hæc ingens latratu regna trifauci
Personat, adverso recubans immanis in antro.
Cui vates, horrere videns jam colla colubris,
Melle soporatam et medicatis frugibus offam
Objicit: ille fame rabida tria guttura pandens,
Corripit objectam, atque immania terga resolvit
Fusus humi, totoque ingens extenditur antro.'

The substitution of dirt for medicated sweets serves still further to debase greediness.

With one of the souls here confined Dante holds converse. This is Ciacco, a Florentine renowned both for his gluttony and for his cleverness, who figures also in one of Boccaccio's tales, Decameron, IX, 8. It is not certain whether Ciacco was his real name — perhaps a synonym of Jacopo — or a nickname meaning 'pig'; nor is it known whether he is to be identified with a poet called Ciacco dell' Anguillaia. In response to a question by Dante, this spirit prophesies the approaching victory of the Whites — the selvaggia or 'rustic' party — over their opponents, and the ensuing triumph of the Blacks through the connivance of Boniface VIII. In Florence, he further declares, there are only two just men, and they have no influence. Who these two are, we are not told. A comparison with the close of Canzone IX — in which Dante sends his song 'to the three least guilty of our city' — and with Purg. XVI, 124-6 (where the only three good men now left in Lombardy are named), makes it likely that the poet had in mind two specific persons; but it is impossible to guess whom he meant.

See M. Scherillo, Il "Ciaccio" della Divina Commedia, in Nuova Antologia (1901), XCIV, 427; cf. Bull., X, 186. See also I. Del Lungo, Il priorato di Dante, in Nuova Antologia (1900), LXXXVIII, 3. For the 'giusti son duo' of l. 73, see Gen. xviii, 24: 'Peradventure there be fifty righteous within the city.' 13. Diversa, 'strange.'

Sopra la gente che quivì è sommersa. 15

 E il ventre largo, e unghiate le mani;
 Graffia gli spiriti, gli scuoa ed isquatra.
 Urlar gli fa la pioggia come cani;
 Dell' un de' lati fanno all' altro schermo; 20
 Volgonsi spesso i miseri profani.
 Quando ci scorse Cerbero, il gran vermo,
 Le bocche aperse e mostrocci le sanne:
 Non avea membro che tenesse fermo.
 E il duca mio distese le sue spanne; 25
 Prese la terra, e con piene le pugna
 La gittò dentro alle bramose canne.
 Qual è quel cane che abbaiano agugna,
 E si racqueta poi che il pasto morde,
 Che solo a divorarlo intende e pugna, 30
 Cotai si fecer quelle facce lorde
 Dello demonio Cerbero, che introna
 L' anime sì ch' esser vorrebber sorde.
 Noi passavam su per l' ombre che adona
 La greve pioggia, e ponevam le piante 35
 Sopra lor vanità che par persona.
 Elle giacean per terra tutte quante,
 Fuor ch' una, che a seder si levò, ratto
 Ch' ella ci vide passarsi davante.

18. Scuoa, 'flays': some texts have ingoia, 'swallows.'

21. Profani, the impious gluttons, 'whose God is their belly': Phil. iii, 10.

22. Vermo, 'worm' or 'dragon.' In Inj. XXXIV, 108, Lucifer is called 'il vermo reo.' In the Visio Alberici, IX, there is at the entrance of Hell a 'vermis infinitæ magnitudinis' bound with a great chain.

23. Sanne, 'fangs.'

25. Spanne, palms and fingers.

28. Agugna, 'craves.'

30. Pugna, 'straggles.'

34. Adonare, which recurs in Purg. XI, 19, was used also by G. Villani, always in the sense of 'subdue.'

'O tu, che se' per questo inferno tratto,' 40
 Mi disse, 'riconoscimi, se sai;
 Tu fosti, prima ch' io disfatto, fatto.'
 Ed io a lei: 'L' angoscia che tu hai
 Forse ti tira fuor della mia mente
 Sì che non par ch' io ti vedessi mai. 45
 Ma dimmi chi tu se', che in sì dolente
 Loco se' messa, ed a sì fatta pena,
 Che, s' altra è maggio, nulla è sì spiacente.'
 Ed egli a me: 'La tua città, ch' è piena
 D' invidia sì che già trabocca il sacco, 50
 Seco mi tenne in la vita serena.
 Voi cittadini mi chiamaste Ciacco.
 Per la dannosa colpa della gola,
 Come tu vedi, alla pioggia mi fiacco;
 Ed io anima trista non son sola, 55
 Chè tutte queste a simil pena stanno
 Per simil colpa.' E più non fe' parola.
 Io gli risposi: 'Ciacco, il tuo affanno
 Mi pesa sì che a lagrimar m' invita.
 Ma dimmi, se tu sai, a che verranno 60
 Li cittadin della città partita;
 S' alcun v' è giusto; e dimmi la cagione
 Perchè l' ha tanta discordia assalita.'
 Ed egli a me: 'Dopo lunga tenzone
 Verranno al sangue, e la parte selvaggia 65

48. Maggio for maggiore was not uncommon in early Italian. — Dante, who has not yet seen the rest of Hell, assumes that no punishment can be more disgusting than this.

51. To the lost souls the earthly life seems, by contrast, clear and beautiful.

54. Mi fiacco, 'I am broken.'

58. Note the similarity of ll. 58-9 to V, 116-7, which express the same sentiment in different words.

65. Verranno al sangue, a biblical phrase: I Sam. xxv, 26, 'prohibuit ne

Cacerà l' altra con molta offensione.
 Poi appresso convien che questa caggia
 Infra tre soli, e che l' altra sormonti
 Con la forza di tal che testè piaggia.
 Alte terrà lungo tempo le fronti, 70
 Tenendo l' altra sotto gravi pesi,
 Come che di ciò pianga e che ne adonti.
 Giusti son duo, ma non vi sono intesi.
 Superbia, invidia ed avarizia sono
 Le tre faville che hanno i cori accesi.' 75
 Qui pose fine al lagrimabil suono.
 Ed io a lui : ' Ancor vo' che m' insegni,
 E che di più parlar mi facci dono.
 Farinata e il Tegghiai', che fur sì degni,
 Jacopo Rusticucci, Arrigo e il Mosca. 80
 E gli altri che a ben far poser gl' ingegni,
 Dimmi ove sono, e fa ch' io li conosca;
 Chè gran disio mi stringe di sapere
 Se il ciel gli addolcia o lo inferno gli attosca.'

venires in sanguinem,' i. e., 'hath withholden thee from coming to shed blood.' — After long strife between the adherents of the Donati, representing the old aristocracy, and the followers of the Cerchi, who had come to Florence from the country and enriched themselves by commerce, blood was shed in an encounter on May 1, 1300. In June, 1301, the leaders of the Black or Donati party conspired against their opponents, and in consequence were exiled. — G. Villani says that the Cerchi were 'di bizzarra salvatichezza,' or 'curiously rustic.'

67. The Blacks having gained the upper hand through the cunning of Boniface VIII and his pretended 'peace-maker,' Charles of Valois, banished, between January 1 and October 1, 1302, some 600 Whites. Dante was sentenced on January 27, and again on March 10. — Tre soli means three solar years, beginning January 1; the Florentine year began on March 25.

69. Tal is Boniface. Piaggiare meant 'to temporize' (perhaps originally 'to hug the shore') and also 'to go to law' (cf. Provençal plach and Italian piato, 'law-suit'): either meaning would fit here, as the Pope in 1300 was acting ambiguously and was also engaged in litigation with Florence.

72. Adontì, 'be shamed.'

77. Vo = voglio.

78. Facci = faccia.

84. Addolcia, 'sweetens'; attosca, 'envenoms.'

E quegli : ‘ Ei son tra le anime più nere ; 85
 Diversa colpa giù li grava al fondo ;
 Se tanto scendi, li potrai vedere.

Ma quando tu sarai nel dolce mondo,
 Pregoti che alla mente altrui mi rechi.
 Più non ti dico e più non ti rispondo.’ 90

Gli diritti occhi torse allora in biechi ;
 Guardommi un poco, e poi chinò la testa :
 Cadde con essa a par degli altri ciechi.

E il duca disse a me : ‘ Più non si desta
 Di qua dal suon dell’ angelica tromba. 95
 Quando verrà la nimica podesta,
 Ciascun ritroverà la trista tomba,
 Ripiglierà sua carne e sua figura,
 Udirà quel che in eterno rimbomba.’

Si trapassammo per sozza mistura 100
 Dell’ ombre e della pioggia a passi lenti,
 Toccando un poco la vita futura ;

Perch’ io dissi : ‘ Maestro, esti tormenti
 Cresceranno ei dopo la gran sentenza,
 O fien minori, o saran sì cocenti?’ 105

Ed egli a me : ‘ Ritorna a tua scienza,

85. Farinata degli Uberti is among the heretics, X, 32; Tegghiaio Aldobrandi and Jacopo Rusticucci are with the sodomites, XVI, 41, 44; Mosca de' Lambertini is one of the sowers of discord, XXVIII, 106. Arrigo, who cannot be identified with certainty, is not mentioned again.

93. Con essa, i. e., head and all.

96. Nimica, 'hostile' to sin. Poděsta = potestā, Christ; cf. John v, 27: 'And [the Father] hath given him authority (potestatem) to execute judgment also, because he is the Son of man.' On the Day of Judgment, at the sound of the last trumpet, all souls in Heaven and Hell will return to earth, resume their bodies, gather in the Valley of Jehoshaphat, and listen to their eternal sentence; after which they will go back to their respective places.

103. Esti = questi.

105. Fien = fiano = saranno.

106. Tua scienza, philosophy. Tor. cites from Fra Giordano: 'Dicono i santi e' savi che 'l corpo nostro non è uomo per sè, nè l'anima non è uomo

Che vuol, quanto la cosa è più perfetta,
 Più senta il bene, e così la doglienza.
 Tuttochè questa gente maledetta
 In vera perfezion giammai non vada, 110
 Di là, più che di qua, essere aspetta.⁷
 Noi aggirammo a tondo quella strada,
 Parlando più assai ch' io non ridico.
 Venimmo al punto dove si digrada :
 Quivi trovammo Pluto il gran nimico. 115

per sè; nè ha l'uno natura perfetta per sè solo, ma l'anima e il corpo congiunti insieme fanno uomo, sono una natura compiuta e perfetta.' Tor. quotes also from St. Thomas: 'The soul separated from the body is, in a way, imperfect, like any part existing outside of its whole, since the soul is naturally a part of human nature. Man, then, cannot attain the utmost felicity until it is reunited to the body.' If the bodiless soul cannot attain the utmost happiness, we may infer that it cannot attain the utmost misery. It follows that the pains of Hell will be severer after the Judgment, because, although the word 'perfection' cannot be fitly applied to 'these accursed people,' they expect to be more complete after the Great Day than before it.

114. Dove si digrada, 'where the descent is.'

115. Pluto, Plutus, the god of wealth, who was not always distinguished, even by the ancients, from Pluto.

CANTO VII

ARGUMENT

PLUTUS, the symbol of wealth, an inflated, puffy-faced monster, is as unsubstantial as he seems gigantic; when thwarted, he collapses and falls in a heap. Virgil addresses him, in l. 8, as 'maledetto lupo.' Similarly in Purg. XX, 10, Dante exclaims, in the circle of avarice and prodigality: 'Maledetta sie tu, antica lupa!' These two passages afford strong support for the interpretation of the wolf in Canto I as avarice. The arguments on the other side seem, however, conclusive; it is probably safe to assume that the wolf, in Dante's mind, always signified Incontinence, either in the abstract or in some one of its forms — and of these avarice is by far the most important and injurious. The swarm of the money-lovers is greater than any other in Dante's Hell, as it was in Virgil's (Æn., VI, 610-11):

'Aut qui divitiis soli incubuere repertis
Nec partem posuere suis, quæ maxima turba est.'

The fourth circle contains both misers and spendthrifts — those who showed no moderation in the use of worldly goods, but handled them so 'undiscerningly' that they are themselves made indistinguishable, 'darkened beyond discernment,' their individuality being sunk in their vice. The insulting cries which they exchange — 'Why hoard?' 'Why squander?' — proclaim, or 'bark,' their sin clearly enough. So the usurers, in Canto XVII, are altered beyond recognition, and can be picked out only by their money-bags. As Dante comes down among the sinners of the fourth shelf, the avaricious, as the more despicable, are on his left, the prodigal on his right. The 'clenched fist' is the sign of greed; the 'cropped hair,' of lavishness. Clerics form a large part of the miserly host; Dante was by no means alone in regarding avarice as the besetting fault of the clergy. In this canto we find none of the gentleness with which our poet treats the amorous; even the gluttonous receive more consideration. The verses bristle with derisive terms: cozzi, zuffa, ontoso metro, rabbuffa. As in Æn., VI, 616, 'saxum ingens volvunt alii,' so these two classes of sinners, each traversing one-half the ring, roll huge weights, pushing with might and main 'by strength of chest,' the misers moving toward the right, the spendthrifts toward the left. When they reach a spot in front of Dante, they clash together; then, with mutual execration, they turn about and laboriously work their way to the opposite side of the ring, where the encounter is repeated. And so the weary, futile round goes on to all eternity, a fit image of the incessant and useless efforts of humanity to transfer worldly possessions.

For this transfer God created a special minister, Fortune, a power similar to the celestial intelligences that move the heavens. She may be called the Angel of Earth. It is her mission to shift prosperity to and fro, without apparent plan, seeing that it remain not too long with one person, family, or nation. In many of his utterances about Fortune, Dante evidently follows Boethius; but the distinctly Christian conception of her as God's instrument seems to come rather from Albertus Magnus, and her rank as an angelic intelligence is bestowed by Dante himself.

Cutting across this circle, the poets find a stream that pours down over the edge to the terrace below; they keep close to this torrent, and so descend to the fifth shelf. Here the brook feeds a vast swamp, filled with muddy figures, all intent on mangling one another. Thus foul wrath pictures itself. These souls fare no better, at Dante's hands, than their immediate predecessors: their marsh is a 'puddle,' they 'gurggle in their gullets' and 'guzzle mud.' Aristotle, in his Ethics, IV, v — and, after him, St. Thomas, both in his commentary on Aristotle and in his Summa Theologiae, Prima Secundæ, Qu. xlvi, Art. 8, and Secunda Secundæ, Qu. clviii, Art. 5 — divided the wrathful into three classes: the acuti, or quick-tempered; the amari, or sullen; the difficiles (also called graves), or vindictive. The acuti are evidently the sinners on the top of the pool; but below in the mire, so we are told, are others, whose presence is indicated only by the bubbles they send to the surface. These are the amari, and not improbably the difficiles as well — although Flamini would consign the latter to the City of Dis. Inasmuch as these sunken spirits are said to harbor 'sluggish fumes' or the 'fumes of sloth' ('accidioso fummo'), some commentators regard this marsh-bottom as the regular abode of acedia or sloth, one of the seven capital sins, which in Purgatory has a circle to itself. But acedia is a disposition, not an act: in so far as it leads to cowardice or indifference, it belongs to the Antinferno; when it manifests itself as sullenness, that sullenness is punished in the bog. As Brunetto Latini says in his Tesoretto, Cap. XXI, 145 ff.:

In ira nasce e posa
Accidia niquitosa;
Chè chi non puote in fretta
Fornir la sua vendetta,

• • • • •

... è 'n tanto tormento
 Che non ha pensamento
 Di neun ben che sia,
 Ma tanto si disvia
 Che non sa migliorare
 Nè già ben cominciare,
 Ma croio e nighittoso
 È 'n ver Dio glorioso.'

For Fortune, see Boethius, De Cons. Phil., II, Pr. ii and Met. ii, 1-8; IV, Pr. vi; also Albertus Magnus, Physicorum, Lib. II, Tr. ii, Cap. 14 ff.; and N. Busetto, Origine e natura della "Fortuna" dantesca, in Giorn. dant., XII, 129, R. Murari, Dante e Boezio, 1905, 271 ff. For the wrathful, Moore, II, 173-8; Flam., I, 161-85. It should be noted that Casini puts into the fifth circle not only anger and sloth, but also envy and pride.

'Pape Satan, pape Satan, aleppe,' Cominciò Pluto colla voce chioccia.
 E quel Savio gentil, che tutto seppe,
 Disse per confortarmi : 'Non ti nocchia
 La tua paura, chè, poter ch' egli abbia, 5
 Non ti torrà lo scender questa roccia.'
 Poi si rivolse a quell' enfiata labbia
 E disse : 'Taci, maledetto lupo!
 Consuma dentro te con la tua rabbia!
 Non è senza cagion l' andare al cupo. 10
 Vuolsi nell' alto là dove Michele
 Fe' la vendetta del superbo strupo.'
 Quali dal vento le gonfiate vele

2. Chioccia, 'clucking': Plutus talks like a hen. The first line is evidently intended to produce the effect of an unintelligible jargon. If (as is scarcely probable) Dante meant the words to signify anything, they may perhaps be interpreted: 'Oh! Satan! Oh! Satan! Alas!' Pape looks like the Greek exclamation papæ; and aleppe has suggested to some the Hebrew aleph, which is said to have been used as an interjection of grief. See, however, D. Guerri in Giorn. dant., XII, 138; and E. Galli in Rivista d' Italia, XI (October, 1908), 617.

9. Dentro is adverbial, te is the object of consuma.

10. Cupo, 'hollow,' 'deep.'

12. Strupo = stupro, which sometimes had the sense of 'violence' and 'rebellion.' For the story of the revolt of the angels, through pride, and their ejection from Heaven, see III, 7, and the argument to XXXIV.

13. Le vele gonfiate dal vento.

Caggiono avvolte, poichè l' alber fiacca,
 Tal cadde a terra la fiera crudele. 15
 Così scendemmo nella quarta lacca,
 Pigliando più della dolente ripa
 Che il mal dell' universo tutto insacca.
 Ahi giustizia di Dio, tante chi stipa
 Nuove travaglie e pene quante io viddi? 20
 E perchè nostra colpa sì ne scipa?
 Come fa l' onda là sovra Cariddi,
 Che si frange con quella in cui s' intoppa,
 Così convien che qui la gente riddi.
 Qui vid' io gente più che altrove troppa, 25
 E d' una parte e d' altra, con grand' urli,
 Voltando pesi per forza di poppa ;
 Percotevansi incontro, e poscia pur li
 Si rivolgea ciascun, voltando a retro,
 Gridando : ' Perchè tieni,' e ' Perchè burli?' 30
 Così tornavan per lo cerchio tetro
 Da ogni mano all' opposto punto,
 Gridandosi anche loro ontoso metro ;
 Poi si volgea ciascun, quando era giunto
 Per lo suo mezzo cerchio all' altra giostra. 35

14. Fiacca, 'breaks.'

16. Lacca, 'ditch.' Dante varies as much as possible, not only the descriptions of the circles, but also the names by which he calls them. — The ripa in l. 17 is the whole conical declivity of Hell, which 'bags all the evil of the universe.'

19. Stipa, 'packs.'

20. Viddi = vidi.

21. Ne scipa, 'wastes us.'

22. Cariddi, Charybdis, in the Strait of Messina. Cf. Æn., III, 420.

24. Riddi, 'dance their round.'

25. Troppa, 'numerous.'

28. Pur li (i. e., pur lì, but pronounced with the stress on the pur), 'right there.' Dante usually tried to put one of the most important words of the line at the end; when he could not, he was rather fond of such fantastic rhymes as this, which are not uncommon in earlier Italian poets.

Ed io, che avea lo cor quasi compunto,
 Dissi : 'Maestro mio, or mi dimostra
 Che gente è questa, e se tutti fur cherci
 Questi chercurti alla sinistra nostra.'
 Ed egli a me : 'Tutti quanti fur guerci 40
 Sì della mente, in la vita primaia,
 Che con misura nullo spendio ferci.
 Assai la voce lor chiaro l' abbaia,
 Quando vengono a' duo punti del cerchio
 Ove colpa contraria li dispaia. 45
 Questi fur cherci, che non han coperchio
 Piloso al capo, e Papi e Cardinali,
 In cui usa avarizia il suo soperchio.'
 Ed io : 'Maestro, tra questi cotali
 Dove' io ben riconoscere alcuni 50
 Che furo immondi di cotesti mali.'
 Ed egli a me : 'Vano pensiero aduni.
 La sconoscente vita che i fe' sozzi
 Ad ogni conoscenza or li fa bruni.
 In eterno verranno alli duo cozzi ; 55
 Questi risurgeranno del sepulcro
 Col pugno chiuso, e questi co' crin mozzi.
 Mal dare e mal tener lo mondo pulcro
 Ha tolto loro, e posti a questa zuffa.
 Qual ella sia, parole non ci appulcro. 60
 Or puoi, figliuol, veder la corta buffa

38. Cherci=chierici, 'clerics.' Chercurti means 'tonsured.'

40. Guerci della mente, 'mentally asquint.'

42. Ferci=ci fecero.

48. Usa il suo soperchio, 'wreaks its excess.'

53. S sconoscente, 'undiscerning.' — I=li.

60. Parole non ci appulcro, i. e., 'I waste no fine words in telling.'

61. Buffa, probably 'jest,' as in XXII, 133; others interpret it as 'puff,' 'breath of wind.'

De' ben che son commessi alla Fortuna,
 Per che l' umana gente si rabbuffa.
 Chè tutto l' oro ch' è sotto la luna,
 E che già fu, di queste anime stanche 65
 Non potrebbe farne posar una.'
 'Maestro,' diss' io lui, 'or mi di' anche :
 Questa Fortuna di che tu mi tocche,
 Che è, che i ben del mondo ha sì tra branche?'
 E quegli a me : 'O creature sciocche, 70
 Quanta ignoranza è quella che vi offende !
 Or vo' che tu mia sentenza ne imbocche.
 Colui lo cui saper tutto trascende
 Fece li cieli, e diè lor chi conduce,
 Sì che ogni parte ad ogni parte splende, 75
 Distribüendo egualmente la luce.

 Seguendo lo giudizio di costei,
 Che è occulto, come in erba l' angue.
 Vostro saper non ha contrasto a lei : 85
 Questa provvede, giudica e persegue
 Suo regno, come il loro gli altri dei.
 Le sue permutazion non hanno triegue ;

68. Tocche = 'occhi, 'allude' : cf. V, 19.

74. Chi conduce, a directing power, i. e., the angels, or heavenly intelligences, who govern the revolutions of the spheres.

81. Difension, 'preventing.'

84. Cf. Virgil, Eclogue III, 93: 'latet anguis in herba.'

87. Dei, the heavenly intelligences, or angels.

88. Cf. Boethius, De Cons. Phil., II, Pr. i.

90. 'So often comes one who obtains a turn,' i. e., so numerous are those who must be successively favored.

91. Posta in croce, 'crucified,' i. e., cursed, vilified.

94. S' è = è: in early Italian the verb essere, especially in the third person singular, was very often accompanied by a superfluous reflexive pronoun.

95. Prime creature, 'primal creatures,' angels.

96. Spera, 'wheel,' the traditional symbolic attribute of Fortune.

97. Pietà: cf. I, 21.

99. The stars which were rising in the east when they started have now crossed the meridian and begun to descend towards the west: it is past mid-night. Virgil usually states the hour in astronomical terms — in Hell by the positions of the moon and stars, which, of course, he cannot see, except with his mind's eye. — Cf. the words of the Sibyl in Æn., VI, 539: 'Nox ruit Aenea; nos flendo ducimus horas.'

102. Fossato, 'gully.'

103. Persa: cf. V, 89. Bigio, too, has the sense of 'murky'; and grigio means 'dusky.'

105. Diversa, 'strange': cf. VI, 13.

106. The Styx was the most famous of the rivers of the classic lower

 Ma con la testa, col petto e co' piedi,
 Troncandosi coi denti a brano a brano.
 Lo buon Maestro disse: 'Figlio, or vedi 115
 L' anime di color cui vinse l' ira.
 Ed anche vo' che tu per certo credi

 Venimmo al piè d' una torre al dassezzo. 130

world. Virgil uses the phrase 'Stygiamque paludem' in Æn., VI, 323 and 369. — The four rivers of Dante's Hell — Acheron, Styx, Phlegethon, Cocytus — are all connected, forming one stream. Lethe is not in Hell, but in the Garden of Eden.

111. Offeso, 'damaged.'

118. Ha = vi ha, 'there are.'

121. Cf. Summa Theologia, Secunda Secundæ, Qu. clviii, Art. 5: 'Amari habent iram permanentem, propter permanentiam tristitiæ quam inter viscera tenent clausam.'

123. 'Sluggish fume.' Fummo for fumo was very common, and is still in popular use.

124. Belletta, 'mire.'

128. Mezzo, pronounced métso, means 'wet.' The word for 'middle' is sounded mèdzo.

130. Here, as frequently, Dante breaks his narrative at an interesting point, using suspense as a means of heightening effect.

CANTO VIII

ARGUMENT

THE guardian of the fifth circle is Phlegyas, who seems to impersonate both furor and rancor. On earth he was a king of the Lapithæ, who, in a frenzy of rage against Apollo for the violation of his daughter, set fire to the temple at Delphi, and was slain by the god. He is mentioned, without specific punishment, in the Æneid, VI, 618-20:

‘Phlegyasque miserrimus omnes
Admonet, et magna testatur voce per umbras:
Discite justitiam moniti, et non temnere Divos.’

‘Learn moderation from my example’ is his warning. In the Commedia he is a boatman on the Styx. It can hardly be his duty to ferry over all the spirits that are to go beyond: his tiny skiff would not suffice; and, besides, we are given to understand that each lost soul, after hearing its sentence, falls — as it were by the weight of its own sin — to the depth that befits it. His function seems to be to carry the wrathful spirits to their proper places in the Stygian pool.

St. Thomas, in the Summa Theologiæ, Secunda Secundæ, Qu. clviii, Art. 1, distinguishes from sinful rage the righteous indignation that is aroused by the sight of wickedness. This justifiable anger is illustrated, in an exciting scene, by the attitude of Dante toward one of the violently wrathful — an attitude which Reason heartily approves. The furious soul that so incenses Dante is Filippo Argenti degli Adimari of Florence, who ‘in the world was a haughty person.’ Boccaccio describes him, in the Decameron, IX, 8, as ‘grande e nerboruto e forte, sdegnoso, iracundo e bizzarro più che altro.’

To the shores of the swamp an air of mystery is lent by two signal lights which are kindled, we know not how, at the top of a tower, and another light which responds from afar. When at last the poets arrive with Phlegyas at the other side, they are confronted by a vast wall that encircles the City of Dis, or Lower Hell, the abiding-place of those whose sins were due, not to Incontinence of desire or temper, but to permanent evil dispositions, Bestiality and Malice. Their crimes are the fruit of envy and pride. In Ps. lxxxvi, 13, we read: ‘thou hast delivered my soul from the lowest hell’ — ‘erusti animam meam ex inferno inferiore’; and from the word inferiore St. Augustine and others argued a division of Hell into two parts.

Before landing, the boat has to make a long circuit about the fortifications. When the gate is reached, hosts of demons appear upon the ramparts, — ‘più di mille da’ ciel piovuti,’ — who successfully oppose Dante’s entrance. They lend a deaf ear to Virgil, and shut the doors in his face. The discomfited guide and his terror-stricken follower are obliged to wait for heavenly aid. The erring soul, which, seeking enlightenment, is trying to probe the recesses of human wickedness, comes to a stage where further advance seems impossible. Fear and remorse seize it at the aspect of the worst iniquities; reason can direct it no longer; it is on the verge of despair. To the horrified searcher it appears that reason is about to forsake him, that he is to be left without its guidance, while sin besets him on every hand. But in the hour of need divine help is not lacking. A special grace descends upon the distracted spirit, and opens a way where all seemed hopeless. Such, apparently, is the allegory of this dramatic episode.

Flam., I, 177 ff., suggests that Filippo Argenti represents a type of irritability due to vanity, and compares him with St. Thomas’s chaymus (Aristotle’s χαῦνος), the man fond of vain show.

Io dico, seguitando, ch’ assai prima
 Che noi fussimo al piè dell’ alta torre,
 Gli occhi nostri n’ andar suso alla cima,
 Per duo fiammette che i’ vedemmo porre,
 E un’ altra da lungi render cenno 5
 Tanto ch’ a pena il potea l’ occhio torre.
 Ed io mi volsi al mar di tutto il senno;
 Dissi: ‘Questo che dice? e che risponde
 Quell’ altro foco? e chi son quei che il fenno?’
 Ed egli a me: ‘Su per le sucide onde 10
 Già puoi scorger quello che s’ aspetta,
 Se il fummo del pantan nol ti nasconde.’

3. Andar = andarono.

4. I’ = ivi.

6. Tanto modifies da lungi. — Torre, ‘take in,’ ‘discern.’ Capio was so used in Latin.

7. The ‘Sea of all wisdom’ is of course Virgil.

9. Fenno = fecero.

Corda non pinse mai da sè saetta
 Che sì corresse via per l' aer snella,
 Com' io vidi una nave piccioletta 15
 Venir per l' acqua verso noi in quella,
 Sotto il governo d' un sol galeoto,
 Che gridava : ' Or se' giunta, anima fella ?'
 ' Flegiàs, Flegiàs, tu gridi a voto,'
 Disse lo mio signore, ' a questa volta. 20
 Più non ci avrai, che sol passando il loto.'
 Quale colui, che grande inganno ascolta
 Che gli sia fatto, e poi se ne rammarca,
 Fecesi Flegiàs nell' ira accolta.
 Lo duca mio discese nella barca 25
 E poi mi fece entrare appresso lui,
 E sol quand' io fui dentro parve carca.
 Tosto che il duca ed io nel legno fui,
 Secando se ne va l' antica prora
 Dell' acqua più che non suol con altrui. 30
 Mentre noi correvam la morta gora,
 Dinanzi mi si fece un pien di fango,
 E disse : ' Chi se' tu che vieni anzi ora ?'
 Ed io a lui : ' S' io vegno, non rimango.

16. In quella, sc., ora.

17. Galeoto = galeotto, 'oarsman.' The poem contains several examples of imperfect rhymes of this type, in which a word with a single consonant is mated with a word that properly has a double one. Inasmuch as some Italian dialects had reduced the double consonants to single in pronunciation, and the spelling of them was by no means consistent even in the regions where they were sounded, Dante, like some other poets, assumed that a license of this kind was occasionally permissible. Cf. Bull., III, 111-2; Zeitschrift für romanische Philologie, Beiheft xv, 64.

18. Phlegyas, in his blind wrath, seems not to have noticed that there are two new-comers.

20. A questa volta, 'this time.'

27. Cf. Æn., VI, 412-4:

'simul accipit alveo
 Ingentem Æneam Gemuit sub pondere cymba
 Sutilis, et multam accepit rimosa paludem.'

Ma tu chi se', che sei sì fatto brutto?' 35
 Rispose : 'Vedi che son un che piango.'
 Ed io a lui : 'Con piangere e con lutto,
 Spirito maledetto, ti rimani !
 Ch' io ti conosco, ancor sie lordo tutto.'
 Allora stese al legno ambo le mani ; 40
 Per che il Maestro accorto lo sospinse,
 Dicendo : 'Via costà con gli altri cani !'
 Lo collo poi con le braccia mi cinse,
 Baciommi il volto, e disse : 'Alma sdegnosa,
 Benedetta colei che in te s' incinse. 45
 Quei fu al mondo persona orgogliosa ;
 Bontà non è che sua memoria fregi :
 Così s' è l' ombra sua qui furiosa.
 Quanti si tengon or lassù gran regi,
 Che qui staranno come porci in brago, 50
 Di sè lasciando orribili dispregi !'
 Ed io : 'Maestro, molto sarei vago
 Di vederlo attuffare in questa broda,
 Prima che noi uscissimo del lago.'
 Ed egli a me : 'Avanti che la proda 55
 Ti si lasci veder, tu sarai sazio.
 Di tal disio converrà che tu goda.'
 Dopo ciò poco, vidi quello strazio
 Far di costui alle fangose genti
 Che Dio ancor ne lodo e ne ringrazio. 60
 Tutti gridavano : 'A Filippo Argenti !'

39. Ancor, 'although.'

41. Accorto, 'wary.'

45. In te s' incinse, 'conceived thee.'

48. S' è : see note on VII, 94.

49. Regi = re.

55. Proda, 'shore,' at the other side of the swamp.

E 'l Fiorentino spirito bizzarro
 In sè medesmo si volgea co' denti.
 Quivi il lasciammo, chè più non ne narro ;
 Ma negli orecchi mi percosse un duolo 65
 Per ch' io avanti l' occhio intento sbarro.
 Lo buon Maestro disse : ' Omai, figliuolo,
 S' appressa la città che ha nome Dite,
 Co' gravi cittadin, col grande stuolo.'
 Ed io : ' Maestro, già le sue meschite 70
 Là entro certo nella valle cerno
 Vermiglie, come se di foco uscite
 Fossero.' Ed ei mi disse : ' Il foco eterno
 Ch' entro le affoca le dimostra rosse,
 Come tu vedi in questo basso inferno.' 75
 Noi pur giugnemmo dentro all' alte fosse
 Che vallan quella terra sconsolata.
 Le mura mi parean che ferro fosse.
 Non senza prima far grande aggirata,
 Venimmo in parte dove il nocchier forte 80
 ' Uscite,' ci gridò, ' qui è l' entrata.'
 Io vidi più di mille in sulle porte

62. Bizzarro, 'irritable.'

68. Cf. Æn., VI, 127: 'atri janua Ditis.' Dante transfers the name from the god to the city.

70. In the distance the wall, with its towers, looks like great buildings, which Dante appropriately calls 'mosques,' or places of demon-worship.

71. Nella valle means, perhaps, 'within the moat.' The sixth circle is apparently on the same level as the fifth. The boat passes presently (l. 76) from the swamp into the moat.

72. Cf. Æn., VI, 630-1:

'Cyclopum educta caminis
Mœnia conspicio.'

77. Vallan, 'fortify.' — Terra, 'city.'

78. Cf. Æn., VI, 554: 'stat ferrea turris.' — Flam., II, 37, regards the wall as the symbol of ill will.

80. Forte, 'loudly.'

Da' ciel piovuti, che stizzosamente
 Dicean: 'Chi è costui, che senza morte
 Va per lo regno della morta gente?' 85
 E il savio mio Maestro fece segno
 Di voler lor parlar segretamente.
 Allor chiusero un poco il gran disdegno
 E disser: 'Vien tu solo, e quei sen vada,
 Che sì ardito entrò per questo regno. 90
 Sol si ritorni per la folle strada:
 Provi se sa; chè tu qui rimarrai
 Che gli hai scorta sì buia contrada.'
 Pensa, Lettor, se io mi sconsortai
 Nel suon delle parole maledette; 95
 Ch' io non credetti ritornarci mai.
 'O caro duca mio, che più di sette
 Volte m' hai sicurtà renduta, e tratto
 D' alto periglio che incontra mi stette,
 Non mi lasciar,' diss' io, 'così disfatto. 100
 E se 'l passar più oltre c' è negato,
 Ritroviam l' orme nostre insieme ratto.'
 E quel signor che lì m' avea menato
 Mi disse: 'Non temer; chè il nostro passo
 Non ci può torre alcun: da tal n' è dato. 105
 Ma qui m' attendi; e lo spirito lasso
 Conforta e ciba di speranza buona,
 Ch' io non ti lasciò nel mondo basso.'
 Così sen va, e quivi m' abbandona

83. Flam., II, 45, thinks that the demons, or fallen angels, typify perverse habits.

93. Scorta, 'revealed.'

97. 'Seven' is often used to indicate an indeterminate number in the Bible (as in Prov. xxiv, 16) and elsewhere.

105. Da tal: by God himself.

Lo dolce padre, ed io rimango in forse ; 110
 Chè 'l sì e 'l no nel capo mi tenzona.
 Udir non pote' quel ch' a lor si porse ;
 Ma ei non stette là con essi guari
 Che ciascun dentro a pruova si ricorse.
 Chiuser le porte que' nostri avversari 115
 Nel petto al mio signor, che fuor rimase
 E rivolsesi a me con passi rari.
 Gli occhi alla terra, e le ciglia avea rase
 D' ogni baldanza, e dicea ne' sospiri :
 'Chi m' ha negate le dolenti case?' 120
 Ed a me disse : 'Tu, perch' io m' adiri,
 Non sbigottir, ch' io vincerò la prova,
 Qual ch' alla difension dentro s' aggiri.
 Questa lor tracotanza non è nuova,
 Chè già l' usaro a men segreta porta, 125
 La qual senza serrame ancor si trova.
 Sopr' essa vedestù la scritta morta.
 E già di qua da lei discende l' erta,
 Passando per li cerchi senza scorta,
 Tal che per lui ne fia la terra aperta.' 130

114. Che is equivalent to 'before.' — A pruova, each faster than his neighbor.

120. Cf. Æn., VI, 534: 'tristes . . . domos.'

121. Perchè, 'although.'

123. 'No matter what is stirred inside to prevent us.'

125. The demons are still possessed by the pride that caused their original fall. Their 'insolence' was shown at the outer gate of Hell, when they tried to oppose the descent of Christ.

126. Cf. Ps. cvii (Vulgate cvi), 16: 'For he hath broken the gates of brass, and cut the bars of iron in sunder.'

127. Vedestù = vedesti tu.

130. The one who is descending from the gate to open the city is an angel, 'del ciel messo.'

CANTO IX

ARGUMENT

DANTE in his terror begins to doubt whether Reason is a safe guide. Without venturing a direct question, he tries to ascertain whether his companion has full knowledge of the road they are to travel. The sage assures him that he has probed every depth of sin — that he has gone down to the very bottom of Hell. Even so the Sibyl, in the Æneid, VI, 564-5, tells Æneas:

‘Sed me, cum lucis Hecate præfecit Avernīs,
Ipsa Deum pœnas docuit, perque omnia duxit.’

It was the Thessalian sorceress Erichtho, Virgil declares, who sent him, shortly after his death, to fetch a soul from the pit of treachery. Why she should have made him her messenger, instead of directly conjuring up the traitor, we are not told; perhaps Virgil’s soul, being nearer the earth’s surface, was more easily reached by her incantations. This same Erichtho, long before Virgil’s adventure, had summoned for Sextus, the son of Pompey, on the eve of Pharsalus, the shade of a soldier to foretell the outcome of the battle: Lucan relates the incident at length in Pharsalia, VI, 413 ff. That witches had such power over the departed was firmly believed, not merely by the ancients, but in Christian times down almost to our day. Did not the woman of En-dor, in I Samuel xxviii, call up Samuel to prophesy to Saul?

While the poets are awaiting heavenly aid, suddenly at the top of a tower appear the threatening forms of three Furies, who presently summon Medusa to turn Dante to stone. Virgil quickly covers his disciple’s eyes with his own hands. ‘Shouldst thou see the Gorgon,’ he says, ‘there would be no returning to earth.’ At this point our author expressly bids us ponder the allegory:

‘O voi che avete gl’ intelletti sani,
Mirate la dottrina che s’ asconde
Sotto il velame degli versi strani.’

Many solutions have been proposed. The most natural and appropriate interpretation makes the Furies symbols of remorseful terror and Medusa the emblem of despair. Desperatio, or despair of the mercy of God, though not so wicked as hate and unbelief, is, according to St. Thomas, incurable and therefore more dangerous

In the Summa Theologia, Secunda Secundæ, Qu. xx, Art. 3, he also quotes from St. Isidore, 'To despair is to descend into Hell.' St. Gregory, in his Moralia, Book VIII, ch. xviii, §34, declares that by desperatio 'the way of return is cut off.' Fear and hopelessness lead to insanity. So, in Ovid's Metamorphoses, IV, 481 ff., Tisiphone brings madness in her train:

'Nec mora, Tisiphone madefactam sanguine sumit
Inportuna facem, fluidoque cruore rubentem
Induitur pallam, tortoque incingitur angue,
Egrediturque domo. Luctus comitatur euntem
Et Pavor et Terror trepidoque Insania vultu.'

Help comes in the shape of an angel, the bearer of divine grace. He moves through Hell like a storm-wind, scattering the damned before him, and opens the gate with a touch of his wand. The description of his descent reminds one, in some respects, of a flight of Mercury told by Statius in the Thebaid, II, 1-6. Particularly the phrase 'pigræ ire vetant nubes' resembles Dante's:

'Dal volto rimovea quell' aer grasso,
Menando la sinistra innanzi spesso,
E sol di quell' angoscia pareva lasso.'

The only obstacle to God's grace is the dense atmosphere of ignorance and spiritual blindness that it must penetrate.

Inside the walls are the arch-heretics and their followers, those who wilfully defied their Maker and renounced his truth. Their existence is a living death, an invocation of divine anger: hence their souls appear to us as buried in tombs, consumed by that fire which, in the Inferno, seems to be a constant symbol of God's wrath. Their sin, though not a manifestation of Violence nor of Fraud, is due essentially to pride rather than to weakness; it indicates a disposition of the spirit, not an impulse of flesh or temper: their place, then, is within the City of Dis, but above the first great precipice that separates the upper from the lower circles.

Dextera, quæ Ditis magni sub mœnia tendit ;
Hac iter Elysium nobis.'

133. Spaldi, 'battlements' of the city wall.

CANTO X

ARGUMENT

IN this canto allegory yields to dramatic realism. Startling is the first call of Farinata as he stands upright in his tomb; not less effective Cavalcante's sudden interruption of the colloquy, and Farinata's prompt continuation of it, as soon as Cavalcante has sunk out of sight. A curious impression of verity is given by the little word 'credo' in line 54:

'Credo che s'era in ginocchie levata.'

We now learn that the damned, while aware of the past and indistinctly cognizant of the future, have no knowledge of present events on earth. Just how much time the 'present' embraces we are not told. This idea, which seems to be original with our poet, opens the way to an intensely pathetic situation in this canto; and throughout the Inferno it provides opportunity for varied narrative, the things of 1300 being told by Dante to the shades, while later events are prophesied by them to him. After the Judgment Day, when earthly life shall cease and the foresight of lost souls shall thus come to an end, their blindness will be unrelieved.

Although all heresies are punished in this circle, the only one that concerns Dante is that called 'Epicurean,' a name bestowed, in his day, upon materialistic free-thinking which denied the immortality of the soul and regarded a comfortable life as the highest good. There is grim irony in the eternal burial of sinners who affirmed that the spirit perishes with the body. Epicurus himself, pagan though he was, is with them. According to Dante, all philosophies, ancient and modern, admit the existence and the after-life of the soul, which Epicurus alone denied; he, then, was a heretic toward the truth that prevailed in his own time. Many of the best minds of the 13th century were led by intellectual pride into this false belief. Their excellence makes their example the more terrible.

Among them was Cavalcante de' Cavalcanti, a noble and wealthy Florentine, the father of that Guido whom Dante calls his 'first friend.' This Guido, a little older than Dante, was a famous poet and student, an ardent partisan, hostile to the Donati. In June, 1300, while Dante was a prior, Guido was banished with the other leaders of the two factions. He was soon taken ill and recalled, and died in the same year. Several passages in the Vita Nuova point to discussions of literary principles by the two poets; Guido, we know, advised Dante to write his early work in Italian rather than in Latin. He seems to have been an independent thinker, and probably was inclined to skepticism. When Cavalcante sees Dante traversing Hell in the flesh, imagining that 'altezza d' ingegno' enables the young man to perform this miracle, he wonders why his son, Dante's companion and likewise endowed with 'lofty genius,' is not with him. Dante hastens to explain Guido's absence by the assurance that it is not his own wit, but Virgil's, which directs him, adding that Guido may not have duly esteemed the ancient sage —

'Forse cui Guido vostro ebbe a disdegno.'

This may mean that Guido's pride would not submit to the guidance of true Reason; or it may refer to some difference of literary opinion — possibly concerning the mystical significance of the Æneid or the fourth Eclogue — to which we have no other clue. Dante's use of the past tense, 'ebbe,' suggests to the father that his son is dead, that he is past repentance and salvation; and this supposition being confirmed by the bewildered silence of the poet (who does not yet know that lost souls are ignorant of the present), he falls back in despair.

Another famous heretic is Manente degli Uberti, called Farinata, chief of the Florentine Ghibellines, a wise and valiant leader, who died in 1264, a year before Dante's birth. In 1260 he had taken part in the battle of Montaperti, where the Guelfs of Florence suffered a fearful defeat from the Sieneſe, the exiled Ghibellines, and King Manfred's Germans. Some 10000 of the Florentines were killed, 5000 wounded, and 15000 taken as prisoners to Siena; the battlefield, we are told, was all red with blood, as if it had been covered with scarlet cloth. After this rout, the neighboring towns and barons held a council at Empoli, and all but Farinata were in favor of destroying Florence; he, however, opposed the project so stoutly that it was abandoned. In 1283 the inquisitor condemned him (nearly twenty years dead), his sons, and his grandsons as heretics. His brave and haughty spirit is not quelled even by his fiery punishment: he appears with head and chest erect, 'as if he held Hell in great contempt.' Dante approaches him with deference; only when goaded beyond endurance by Farinata's taunts does he show resentment. To him, as to Cavalcante, he uses the respectful voi, a form of address that he applies to no other of the damned, save Brunetto Latini.

The unsuccessful mission of Cardinal Niccolò da Prato, sent by Benedict XI to Florence to secure peace and the restoration of the exiles, began on March 10, 1304. The fiftieth new moon after Dante's visit to Hell was about April 4, 1304. See Moore, III, 372.

CANTO XI

ARGUMENT

ON the rough edge of the circular precipice leading to the seventh circle we meet the most shocking example of unbelief, an heretical Pope — the more gruesome because he does not appear, his presence being indicated only by an inscription on his tomb. This is Anastasius II, who for many centuries was generally but unjustly thought to have been induced by Photinus, deacon of Thessalonica, to deny the divinity of Christ; it is likely that he had been confused with the Byzantine emperor, Anastasius I.

At this point the master explains to his follower the general plan of the lower world. In Purgatory, too, the exposition occurs in the middle of the journey. The arrangement of punishments has been described in the preliminary note to the Inferno. In Virgil's account, based on the teaching of ancient philosophers, there is no mention of the sluggards, the unbaptized, or the heretics. Cicero wrote in his De Officiis, I, 13: 'Cum autem duobus modis, id est aut vi aut fraude, fiat injuria, fraus quasi vulpeculæ, vis leonis videtur: utrumque homine alienissimum, sed fraus odio digna majore. Totius autem injustitiæ nulla capitalior est quam eorum qui, cum maxime fallunt, id agunt ut viri boni esse videantur.' These two kinds of sin, vis, or violence, and fraus, fraud, are chastised in the Lower Hell. Outside the City of Dis, in the second, third, fourth, and fifth circles, are those who erred through Incontinence. In Aristotle's Ethics, VII, i, are specified three sorts of conduct to be shunned, κακία, ἀκρασία, θηριότης; the Latin translation used by St. Thomas calls them (Flam., I, p. 146) 'malitia, incontinentia, et bestialitas,' and we are told further (Flam., I, p. 151), 'minus autem bestialitas malitia, terribilius autem.' Incontinence is treated in the Ethics, VII, iii-x. Although Bestiality, as Aristotle defines it (VII, v), is something more inhuman than common violence, it seems probable that Dante roughly equated it with Cicero's vis; while malice corresponds well enough to the Ciceronian fraus. At any rate, Incontinence, Violence, and Fraud are the three great groups under which evil acts are classified.

Expounding the sins of the Lower Hell, Virgil declares that every wrongdoing hateful to God has harm for its object, and this harm is inflicted either by force or by deceit. Of these two methods the latter is the worse. The former is punished in the seventh circle.

But inasmuch as force may be done to our fellow-man, to ourselves, or to our Maker, this circle is divided into three concentric rings: the first contains assassins, robbers, and tyrants; the second, suicides; the third, blasphemers, sodomites, and usurers. Sodomites do violence to Nature, the minister of God. Usurers — that is, money-lenders — do violence to human industry, the offspring of Nature, and thus offend the Creator. This view of the practice of letting money at interest was usual in the Middle Ages. 'Thou shalt not lend upon usury to thy brother,' says Deut. xxiii, 19. At the beginning of the Ethics, IV, i, Aristotle declares that 'the waste of property seems to be a sort of self-ruin, since life is maintained by property.' In accordance with this idea, Dante puts with the suicides, in the second ring, those who wasted their goods so recklessly that their death resulted; they are distinguished, in the Inferno, from the ordinary prodigals, whose fault was one of Incontinence.

Fraud may be perpetrated upon those who have no special cause to trust us, in which case only the common tie of humanity is broken; or upon those who have a particular ground for confidence, and then outrage is done not only to this universal fellowship, but also to the bond of family, country, hospitality, or gratitude. Deceivers of the former sort are tormented, according to the nature of their fraud, in the ten circular, concentric ditches of the eighth circle: eight of the ten types are rapidly enumerated in this canto; the other two — evil counsellors and sowers of discord — are dismissed with the epithet 'similar filth.' Traitors to kindred, fatherland, guests, or benefactors find their eternal abode in the icy plain of the ninth circle.

The Fishes are wriggling on the horizon (orizzonta = orizzonte), i. e., the constellation of Pisces, which precedes Aries, is just rising; the wain, or Great Bear, lies wholly in the quarter of Caurus, the northwest wind. The time is three hours or more after midnight.

CANTO XII

ARGUMENT

THROUGHOUT this episode, either by accident or by design, Dante does not speak. The canto deals with the descent into the seventh circle — the abode of the violent — and the description of the first of the three concentric rings that compose it. This first girone consists of a river of hot blood, a picture of sanguinary relations to one's fellow-men. The Visio Alberici also tells of homicides in a lake of boiling blood; and the Visio Sancti Pauli shows different kinds of sinners immersed to varying depths in a fiery stream. In the Inferno, too, the degree of immersion varies between eyebrows and feet, according to the wickedness of the offence. Along the narrow bank run centaurs, whose business it is to keep the other souls in their proper place. These half-human guardians are not depicted as hateful or repulsive: they do not seem to be demons, although their function is similar to that of the devils beside the ditch of barrators in the eighth circle; they appear to be rather the spirits of real centaurs, creatures whose semi-equine character made their excesses more natural and consequently less blameworthy. They may be intended also to serve as illustrations of Aristotle's doctrine of bestiality.

A still stronger suggestion of bestiality is conveyed by the presiding genius of the whole seventh circle, the Minotaur, half man and half bull, whose blind fury ('quell' ira bestial') defeats its own end and affords the travellers a chance to pass him. This monster — 'bestia,' Virgil calls him — was the offspring of a bull and Pasiphae, wife of King Minos of Crete, who satisfied her abnormal passion (inflicted by Venus as a curse) by enclosing herself in a wooden cow —

'colei
Che s' imbestid nelle 'mbestiate schegge,'

as Dante says in Purg. XXVI, 86-7. The Athenian hero Theseus slew him in the Labyrinth, guided by Ariadne, the daughter of Pasiphae and Minos. Dante, to avoid placing him in any one of the three gironi, puts him on the cliff that overlooks them all. So he represents Geryon, the image of Fraud, as hovering over the eighth circle.

The poets' way down the precipice lies in a huge landslide made by the earthquake which, when Christ died and descended into Hell, shook also a part of the wall between the unbaptized and the lustful (V, 34), and likewise damaged the hypocrites' valley in the eighth circle. In each case Dante uses the word ruina. This vast slide our poet compares with one in northeastern Italy, the Slavini di Marco, described by Albertus Magnus.

For the passage from Albertus Magnus, see Torraca.

Era lo loco, ove a scender la riva
 Venimmo, alpestro e, per quel ch' ivi er' anco,
 Tal ch' ogni vista ne sarebbe schiva.
 Qual è quella ruina che nel fianco
 Di qua da Trento l' Adice percosse, 5
 O per tremuoto o per sostegno manco,
 Chè da cima del monte, onde si mosse,
 Al piano è sì la roccia discoscisa
 Ch' alcuna via darebbe a chi su fosse,
 Cotal di quel burrato era la scesa. 10
 E in su la punta della rotta lacca
 L' infamia di Creti era distesa,
 Che fu concetta nella falsa vacca ;
 E quando vide noi, sè stesso morse
 Sì come quei cui l' ira dentro fiacca. 15
 Lo Savio mio inver lui gridò : ' Forse
 Tu credi che qui sia il duca d' Atene,
 Che su nel mondo la morte ti porse ?
 Partiti, bestia, chè questi non viene
 Ammaestrato dalla tua sorella, 20
 Ma vassi per veder le vostre pene.'

2. Quel ch' ivi er' anco is the Minotaur.

11. Lacca : cf. VII, 16.

12. Creti was in use beside Creta. Cf. XIV, 95.

13. Cf. Met., VIII, 133-4.

15. Fiacca, 'weakens,' 'subdues.'

20. Ariadne.

Qual è quel toro che si slaccia in quella
 Che ha ricevuto già 'l colpo mortale,
 Che gir non sa, ma qua e là saltella,
 Vid' io lo Minotauro far cotale. 25
 E quegli accorto gridò : 'Corri al varco !
 Mentre ch' è in furia è buon che tu ti cale.'
 Così prendemmo via giù per lo scarco
 Di quelle pietre, che spesso moviensi
 Sotto i miei piedi per lo nuovo carco. 30
 Io già pensando ; e quei disse : 'Tu pensi
 Forse a questa rovina, ch' è guardata
 Da quell' ira bestial ch' io ora spensi.
 Or vo' che sappi che l' altra fiata
 Ch' io discesi quaggiù nel basso inferno, 35
 Questa roccia non era ancor cascata.
 Ma certo poco pria, se ben discerno,
 Che venisse Colui che la gran preda
 Levò a Dite del cerchio superno,
 Da tutte parti l' alta valle feda 40
 Tremò sì ch' io pensai che l' universo
 Sentisse amor, per lo quale è chi creda
 Più volte il mondo in Caos converso ;

22. In quella, sc., ora : cf. VIII, 16. Cf. Æn., II, 223-4.

'Quales mugitus, fugit cum saucius aram
 Taurus, et incertani excussit cervice securim.'

28. Scarco, 'dump.'

31. Già = giva, i. e., andava.

40. Feda, 'foul.' Cf. Mat. xxvii, 50-1 : 'Jesus, when he had cried again with a loud voice, yielded up the ghost. And, behold, the veil of the temple was rent in twain from the top to the bottom; and the earth did quake, and the rocks rent.'

42. According to Empedocles, the four elements, mixed together, produced chaos; hate, separating the seeds, brought forth from chaos all the things of the universe; love, by drawing the seeds together, can restore chaos. Dante probably got his idea of Empedocles (whom he mentioned in Inf. IV, 138) from Aristotle.

Ed in quel punto questa vecchia roccia
 Qui ed altrove tal fece riverso. 45
 Ma ficca gli occhi a valle ; chè s' approccia
 La riviera del sangue, in la qual bolle
 Qual che per violenza in altrui nocchia.'
 O cieca cupidigia, e ria e folle,
 Che sì ci sproni nella vita corta, 50
 E nell' eterna poi sì mal c' immolle !
 Io vidi un' ampia fossa in arco torta,
 Come quella che tutto il piano abbraccia,
 Secondo ch' avea detto la mia scorta :
 E tra il piè della ripa ed essa, in traccia 55
 Correan Centauri armati di saette,
 Come solean nel mondo andare a caccia.
 Vedendoci calar ciascun ristette,
 E della schiera tre si dipartiro
 Con archi ed asticciuole prima elette ; 60
 E l' un gridò da lungi : ' A qual martiro
 Venite voi che scendete la costa ?
 Ditel costinci ; se non, l' arco tiro.'
 Lo mio Maestro disse : ' La risposta
 Farem noi a Chiron costà di presso. 65
 Mal fu la voglia tua sempre sì tosta.'

45. Altrove : in the circle of the lustful, V, 34. The same earthquake shook down the bridges over the ditch of the hypocrites in the eighth circle, but of this Virgil is not yet aware; cf. XXI, 106 and XXIII, 136.

49. The motives of violence to our fellow-man are greed and wrath.

51. C' immolle, 'dost steep us': cf. V, 19.

53. 'As if encircling all the plain.' So it does, but of course Dante can see only a small section, or arc, of it at once.

55. Traccia, 'file.'

60. Cf. Lucan, Pharsalia, VII, 142: 'Cura fuit lectis pharetras implere sagittis.'

63. Cf. Æn., VI, 389: 'Fare age, quid venias; jam istinc et comprime gressum.'

65. Chiron, son of Saturn, skilled in surgery, was the preceptor of Achilles.

Poi mi tentò, e disse : 'Quegli è Nesso,
 Che morì per la bella Deianira,
 E fe' di sè la vendetta egli stesso.
 E quel di mezzo, che al petto si mira, 70
 È il gran Chirone, il qual nudrì Achille.
 Quell' altro è Folo, che fu sì pien d' ira.
 D' intorno al fosso vanno a mille a mille,
 Saettando quale anima si svelle
 Del sangue più che sua colpa sortille.' 75
 Noi ci appressammo a quelle fiere snelle.
 Chiron prese uno strale, e con la cocca
 Fece la barba indietro alle mascelle.
 Quando s' ebbe scoperta la gran bocca,
 Disse ai compagni : 'Siete voi accorti 80
 Che quel di retro muove ciò ch' ei tocca?
 Così non soglion fare i piè de' morti.'
 E il mio buon Duca, che già gli era al petto
 Dove le duo nature son consorti,
 Rispose : 'Ben è vivo, e sì soletto 85
 Mostrarli mi convien la valle buia.
 Necessità 'l conduce, e non diletto.
 Tal si partì da cantare alleluia
 Che mi commise quest' officio nuovo.
 Non è ladron, nè io anima fuia. 90
 Ma per quella virtù per cui io muovo

67. Tentò, 'nudged.' Nessus, while trying to carry off Dejanira through the water, was struck by an arrow from Hercules, her husband. To avenge himself, he left with Dejanira his bloody shirt, which afterwards caused the death of Hercules. Cf. Met., IX.

72. Pholus figured in the battle between the Centaurs and the Lapithæ: Statius, Thebaid, II, 563-4.

75. Sortille, 'allotted it.'

84. Consorti, 'joined.'

85. Sì soletto: cf. II, 3.

88. Beatrice.

Li passi miei per sì selvaggia strada,
 Danne un de' tuoi a cui noi siamo a pruovo,
 Che ne dimostri là dove si guada
 E che porti costui in su la groppa ; 95
 Chè non è spirito che per l' aer vada.'
 Chiron si volse in sulla destra poppa,
 E disse a Nesso : 'Torna, e sì li guida,
 E fa cansar, s' altra schiera v' intoppa.'
 Noi ci movemmo colla scorta fida 100
 Lungo la proda del bollor vermiglio,
 Ove i bolliti facean alte strida.
 Io vidi gente sotto infino al ciglio ;
 E il gran Centauro disse : 'Ei son tiranni
 Che dier nel sangue e nell' aver di piglio. 105
 Quivi si piangon li spietati danni.
 Quivi è Alessandro, e Dionisio fero,
 Che fe' Cicilia aver dolo-osi anni.
 E quella fronte ch' ha il pel così nero
 È Azzolino ; e quell' altro ch' è biondo 110
 È Opizzo da Esti, il qual per vero
 Fu spento dal figliastro su nel mondo.'

93. A pruovo, 'near.'

99. Cansar, 'turn out.' — Intoppa, 'meets.'

105. Dier=diedero. Dare di piglio means 'to lay hold.'

107. It is not known whether Dante meant Alexander the Great (described as bloodthirsty by Paulus Orosius) or Alexander of Pheræ, who was coupled with Dionysius as a typical tyrant by Valerius Maximus, and by Cicero in De Officiis, II, vii, 25. Dionysius ruled Syracuse from 407 to 367 B. C. Cicilia for Sicilia was common in mediæval times, and is still in use.

110. Azzolino or Ezzelino da Romano, who held extensive dominions in northeastern Italy in the first half of the 13th century, a notoriously cruel tyrant; he was called a son of Satan.

111. Obizzo or Opizzo da Este, Marquis of Ferrara in the second half of the 13th century, was a hard ruler. L. 112 seems to refer to an incident little known or disputed in Dante's day, so that the poet hears it with incredulity. Virgil, to whom he turns in doubt, tells him that in this matter the centaur is the best authority. Figliastro regularly means 'stepson'; Dante apparently uses it here in the sense of 'unnatural child,' or possibly 'bastard.'

Allora mi volsi al Poeta, e quei disse :
 'Questi ti sia or primo, ed io secondo.'
 Poco più oltre il Centauro s' affisse 115
 Sopra una gente che infino alla gola
 Pareva che di quel bulicame uscisse.
 Mostrocci un' ombra dall' un canto sola,
 Dicendo : 'Colui fesse in grembo a Dio
 Lo cor che in sul Tamigi ancor si cola.' 120
 Poi vidi gente che di fuor del rio
 Tenea la testa ed ancor tutto il casso :
 E di costoro assai riconobbi io.
 Così a più a più si faceva basso
 Quel sangue, sì che cocea pur li piedi ; 125
 E quivi fu del fosso il nostro passo.
 'Sì come tu da questa parte vedi
 Lo bulicame che sempre si scema,'
 Disse il Centauro, 'voglio che tu credi,
 Che da quest' altra a più a più giù prema 130
 Lo fondo suo, infin ch' ei si raggiunge
 Ove la tirannia convien che gema.
 La divina giustizia di qua punge
 Quell' Attila che fu flagello in terra,
 E Pirro, e Sesto ; ed in eterno munge 135

117. Bulicame, 'boiling stream': cf. XIV, 70.

119. The solitary soul, apparently shunned by all the others, is that of Guy of Montfort, who, in church at Viterbo, during mass, to avenge the death of his father (Simon, Earl of Leicester), stabbed Prince Henry, the son of Richard Plantagenet (Earl of Cornwall). Guy was vicar of Charles of Anjou in Tuscany in 1270. Henry's heart, it is said, was placed in a golden urn in Westminster Abbey; cf. Bull., XVII, 127. — Tamigi, 'Thames.' — Si cola, 'is honored.'

122. Casso, 'chest.'

134. Attila, King of the Huns, was called the 'Scourge of God.'

135. Pyrrhus, King of Epirus, a fearful enemy of the Romans. — For Sextus, son of Pompey, see Lucan, Pharsalia, VI, 420-2 :

'Sextus erat, magno proles indigna parente,
 Qui mox, Scylleis exsul grassatus in undis,
 Polluit æquoreos Siculus pirata triumphos.'

Le lagrime che col bollor disserra
A Rinier da Corneto, a Rinier Pazzo,
Che fecero alle strade tanta guerra.'
Poi si rivolse, e ripassossi il guazzo.

136. 'It milks the tears which it unlocks with the boiling,' a figure which Dante uses again in Purg. XIII, 57.

137. Two highwaymen apparently famous in the 13th century. Rinieri de' Pazzi, a powerful lord and head of a Ghibelline company, declared himself an independent sovereign: see Emilia Regis in Atti della R. Accademia delle Scienze di Torino, XLVII.

139. Guazzo = guado, 'ford.'

CANTO XIII

ARGUMENT

THE Church Fathers, from St. Augustine down, put suicide on a par with murder. Each is an attempt to cut short the term of life allotted by God, a crime of insubordination against the Creator. Neither can be justified by any excuse save the direct command of Heaven: thus Abraham was divinely bidden to sacrifice Isaac, and Samson destroyed himself in accordance with the Lord's will. It is perhaps worth noting that Dante mentions no pagan in this place; but as he cites only two examples, a Capuan and an unnamed Florentine, the significance of the omission is small — or would be so, had he not assigned several heathen suicides (Lucretia, Dido, Cato) to different parts of the other world.

The Capuan is Pier delle Vigne, who, after studying, in all probability, at Bologna, entered the court of Frederick II as a notary, and so won the confidence and affection of his sovereign that for over twenty years he was entrusted with the most important affairs of the realm. He was one of the foremost poets of the Sicilian school; many of his verses, as well as some of his Latin letters, are preserved. In 1248 or 1249 he was accused and convicted of treason; his eyes were put out, and according to one account he was condemned by the Emperor to be led in derision, on an ass, from town to town. To escape dishonor, he killed himself by dashing his head against a wall. It was no doubt with a view of emphasizing the inexorableness of God's canon that Dante selected the most sympathetic case he could find, one in which cruel injustice might seem to condone the offence. Piero, as Dante conceived him, is loyal, magnanimous, courtly, and most pathetic in his unshaken devotion to the master who wronged him.

The style of this canto abounds in curious conceits, such as the

of l. 25, the ‘inflammati infiammar’ of l. 68, the double antithesis of l. 69, and the involved paradoxes of the following tercet. It would seem that meditation over Pier delle Vigne, who dominates the canto, had filled our poet with the spirit of the older school, so that, either purposely or unconsciously, he imitated its artistic processes.

The suicide uses his freedom of bodily movement only to deprive himself of it, robbing himself, by his own act, of that which cor-poreally distinguishes him from a plant. Such a sinner, then, his wicked deed eternalized, may aptly be figured as a tree or bush. Dante's self-slaughterers form a thick, wild forest in the second ring of the seventh circle. There, upon hearing their sentence from Minos, they fall at random, in no predestined spot: they have put themselves outside of God's law, rebelling against his eternal plan. On the Day of Judgment they will return, with the rest, for their earthly remains; but, instead of putting on the flesh again, they will drag their corpses through Hell and hang them on their boughs, where the poor bodies will dangle forever, a torment to the souls that slew them. The pent-up agony of these spirits finds no means of expression until they are broken in leaf or branch; then the voice issues forth, with tears of blood.

The like had been seen and heard by Æneas in a Thracian grove, when, to deck an altar, he unwittingly plucked shrubs from the grave of Polydorus: blood trickled from the severed roots, and a voice came forth — not from the tree, as in Dante, but from the mound (Æn., III, 39 ff.): —

‘Gemitus lacrimabilis imo
Auditur tumulo, et vox reddita fertur ad aures:
Quid miserum, Ænea, laceras? Jam parce sepulto,
Parce pias scelerare manus. Non me tibi Troja
Externum tulit. Haud cruor hic de stipite manat.’

In the suicides' wood, an outlet for the mournful voice is afforded by harpies, voracious, filthy birds with maidens' faces, which rend the foliage. They may well represent misgiving or fear of the hereafter — ‘tristo annunzio di futuro danno.’ Virgil describes them in the Æneid, III, 216-8: —

‘Virginei volucrum vultus, fœdissima ventris
Proluvies, uncæque manus, et pallida semper
Ora fame.’

Their appearance in the same book of the Æneid with Polydorus may have led Dante to associate them with his speaking trees. On the Strophades islands, off Messenia, where they dwelt, their foul presence repeatedly interrupted the Trojans' repast; and finally one of them, Celæno, perched on a high rock, uttered so threatening a prophecy that the warriors hastily departed.

‘Dixit, et in silvam pinnis ablata refugit.’

Thus in Virgil, as in Dante, the harpy is connected with a wood.

With the suicides are the reckless squanderers, those who rush madly through life pursued by the black hounds of Ruin and Death. Their sudden irruption is the more effective for its brevity and unexpectedness. The episode reminds one of legends of the Wild

Hunt, and of the ghostly chase described by Boccaccio in his Decameron, V, 8. It resembles also the story of Actæon, torn to pieces by his own dogs, in Ovid's Metamorphoses, III, 138 ff.; this tale, furthermore, had been rationally explained by Fulgentius as meaning that the luckless hunter spent all his substance upon dogs.

See Æn., III: for Polydorus, 22-43; for the harpies, 209-69; for Celæno, 245 ff. Cf. D' Ovidio³, 170-82. For the collocation of the squanderers with the suicides, see the argument to XI. Non era ancor di là Nesso arrivato,
Quando noi ci mettemmo per un bosco
Che da nessun sentiero era segnato.
Non frondi verdi, ma di color fosco ;
Non rami schietti, ma nodosi e involti ;
Non pomi v' eran, ma stecchi con toscò.
Non han sì aspri sterpi nè sì folti
Quelle fiere selvagge che in odio hanno
Tra Cècina e Corneto i luoghi colti.
Quivi le brutte Arpie lor nidi fanno,
Che cacciar delle Stròfade i Troiani
Con tristo annunzio di futuro danno.
Ali hanno late, e colli e visi umani,
Piè con artigli, e pennuto il gran ventre ;
Fanno lamenti in su gli alberi strani.

Sappi che se' nel secondo girone,'

 Li pensier ch' hai si faran tutti monchi.' 30
 Allor porsi la mano un poco avante
 E colsi un ramicel da un gran pruno ;
 E il tronco suo gridò : 'Perchè mi schiante?'
 Da che fatto fu poi di sangue bruno,
 Ricominciò a gridar : 'Perchè mi scerpi? 35
 Non hai tu spirto di pietate alcuno?
 Uomini fummo, ed or sem fatti sterpi.

133. The bush addresses the second of the two runners, a mad prodigal, who, it is said, was put to death by Ezzelino IV da Romano in 1239. Who the soul in the bush was, is not known for certain; Jacopo della Lana, one of the earliest commentators, declares that it was a certain Lotto degli Agli, a prior of Florence in 1285.

140. Cf. Æn., VI, 497: 'inhonesto vulnere.'

142. Cesto, 'bush.' In accordance with the law of retaliation, these sinners, who ruthlessly destroyed their fleshly bodies on earth, care tenderly for their wooden bodies in Hell.

143. According to tradition, the first patron of Florence was Mars; the lower part of an old statue, supposed to represent the God of War, stood at the head of the Ponte Vecchio until 1333, when it was carried away by a flood. The new patron was John the Baptist, whose image adorned the florin. The Florentines gave up martial valor for money making.

145. L' arte sua: warfare.

147. Alcuna vista, 'some vestige': the fragmentary statue above mentioned.

148. Rifondarno = rifondarono.

149. It was believed that Attila, King of the Huns, or Totila, King of the Ostrogoths, had destroyed Florence. Attila and Totila were often confounded. The latter was in Tuscany in the 6th century.

151. Giubbetto, 'gibbet' or 'place of execution.' Two of the earliest commentators say that Lotto hanged himself with a girdle in his house.

CANTO XIV

ARGUMENT

THE third and innermost ring of the seventh circle consists of a sandy plain upon which falls a rain of fire. It stands for the experience of those who directly and wittingly defy God and live in his wrath, of which fire is the symbol. 'Then the Lord rained upon Sodom and upon Gomorrah brimstone and fire from the Lord out of heaven,' says Gen. xix, 24. And in Ezekiel xxxviii, 22, we read: 'I will rain upon him, and upon his bands, and upon the many people that are with him, an overflowing rain, and great hailstones, fire, and brimstone.' The blasphemers, who did violence to God himself, lie prostrate; the sodomites, sinners against God's minister, Nature, run incessantly; the usurers, outragers of human industry, the child of Nature, sit crouching. Of these classes, the second is largest.

Rather curiously, the first class is represented by a pagan, the tall Capaneus, who, 'scornful and twisted,' maintains his arrogant pose and 'seems not to be ripened by the rain.' His futile pride is more shocking to Reason than any offence yet encountered; his own rage is his worst punishment. St. Thomas says, in his commentary on Aristotle (quoted in Flam., I, 143): 'Est aliquis qui non est vere audax, sed videtur: scilicet superbus, quoniam fingit se esse fortem; unde, sicut fortis vel audax se habet circa terribilia, ita superbus quærit apparere.' The story of Capaneus is told by Statius in the Thebaid, X, 870-939: he was one of the seven kings who attacked Thebes; scaling the walls, whence his gigantic shadow frightened the city, he mocked at the gods and challenged Jove, who thereupon slew him with a thunderbolt.

'Ille jacet laceræ complexus fragmina turris,
Torvus adhuc visu.' — Thebaid, XI, 9-10.

So he lies in Hell, taunting Jove with his labors at the battle against the giants. Statius, too, recalls this conflict, saying that at the downfall of Capaneus the other gods rejoiced with Jupiter, 'as if he were wearily toiling in the fight at Phlegra.'

Traversing the plain, from the wood to the great precipice, is a raised channel built like a dike, through which runs a torrent of boiling blood. This brook issues from the river of the first ring and falls over the cliff into the circle below. All the rivers of Hell, in fact, are connected, forming a single stream, which assumes different shapes in the various circles. Its source is now described. In the island of Crete, between the old world and the new, is the figure of an aged man, fashioned like the 'great image' in the dream of Nebuchadnezzar in Daniel ii, 32-3: 'This image's head was of fine gold, his breast and his arms of silver, his belly and his thighs of brass, his legs of iron, his feet part of iron and part of clay.' Daniel interprets the image as a prophecy of four kingdoms. But Dante's statue evidently represents humanity in its successive ages, as they are depicted, for instance, in Ovid's Metamorphoses, I, 89 ff. The clay foot signifies the weak and unstable condition of man. Ever since the Golden Age (the state of Adam and Eve before the fall) mankind has been imperfect; therefore all the statue except the head is split by a crack, St Thomas's 'vulneratio naturæ.' From this fissure flow the tears of the sinful generations of men; descending into Hell, they make the infernal streams. The torments of the human soul, in whatsoever form they appear, really consist in sorrow over its own imperfections.

The bed of the connecting brook is all of stone, bottom and sides; and so are the high, flat, narrow banks on either hand. On one of these — the nearer, right-hand one — the poets mount to pursue their way across the desert; for no fire falls upon the duct. With great solemnity Virgil directs his disciple's attention to the stream, 'which deadens all the flamelets above it' Nothing so noteworthy has been seen, he declares, since they entered the open gate of Hades. The unclosed door seems to figure our predisposition to sin. Does the quenching of the fire by boiling blood signify the appeasing of God's anger by human suffering? A symbol of atonement is manifestly out of place in the literal Hell; but allegorically Dante's lower world stands for the sinful life of man.

For the vulneratio naturæ see St. Thomas, Summa Theologiæ, Prima Secundæ, Qu. lxxxv, Art. 3; cf. Flam., II, 31.

Poichè la carità del natio loco

Mi strinse, raünai le fronde sparte,
E rende' le a colui ch' era già fioco.

Indi venimmo al fine, ove si parte

Lo secondo giron dal terzo, e dove
Si vede di giustizia orribil arte.

A ben manifestar le cose nuove,

Dico che arrivammo ad una landa
 Che dal suo letto ogni pianta rimuove.
 La dolorosa selva l'è ghirlanda 10
 Intorno, come il fosso tristo ad essa.
 Quivi fermammo i passi a randa a randa.
 Lo spazzo era un' arena arida e spessa,
 Non d' altra foggia fatta che colei
 Che fu da' piè di Caton già soppressa. 15
 O vendetta di Dio, quanto tu dei
 Esser temuta da ciascun che legge
 Ciò che fu manifesto agli occhi miei !
 D' anime nude vidi molte gregge,
 Che piangean tutte assai miseramente, 20
 E pareva posta lor diversa legge.
 Supin giaceva in terra alcuna gente,
 Alcuna si sedea tutta raccolta,
 Ed altra andava continüamente.
 Quella che giva intorno era più molta, 25
 E quella men che giaceva al tormento,
 Ma più al duolo avea la lingua sciolta.
 Sopra tutto il sabbion d' un cader lento
 Piovean di foco dilatate falde,
 Come di neve in alpe senza vento. 30

8. Landa, 'plain.'

12. A randa a randa, 'at the very edge.'

13. Spazzo (= spazio), 'floor.'

15. Cato led the remnants of Pompey's army across the Libyan desert in 47 B. C. Cf. Lucan, Pharsalia, IX, 371 ff., particularly 378 and 394-6:

'Atque ingressurus steriles, sic fatur, arenas:

 Ingrediar, primusque gradus in pulvere ponam,
 Me calor æthereus feriat.'

16. Dei = devi.

30. Dante repeatedly uses alpe for mountains in general, sometimes for Apennines.

Quali Alessandro in quelle parti calde
 D' India vide sopra lo suo stuolo
 Fiamme cadere infino a terra salde ;
 Per ch' ei provvide a scalpitar lo suolo
 Con le sue schiere, a ciò che il vapore 35
 Me' si stingueva mentre ch' era solo :
 Tale scendeva l' eternale ardore ;
 Onde l' arena s' accendea, com' esca
 Sotto focile, a doppiar lo dolore.
 Senza riposo mai era la tresca 40
 Delle misere mani, or quindi or quinci
 Iscotendo da sè l' arsura fresca.
 Io cominciai : 'Maestro, tu che vinci
 Tutte le cose, fuor che i Demon duri
 Che all' entrar della porta incontro uscinci, 45
 Chi è quel grande, che non par che curi
 L' incendio, e giace dispettoso e torto
 Sì che la pioggia non par che il maturi?'
 E quel medesmo, che sì fue accorto
 Ch' io domandava il mio duca di lui, 50
 Gridò : 'Qual io fui vivo, tal son morto.
 Se Giove stanchi il suo fabbro, da cui
 Crucciato prese la folgore acuta
 Onde l' ultimo dì percosso fui ;
 O s' egli stanchi gli altri a muta a muta 55

31. Dante apparently got this story from Albertus Magnus. It is a fusion of two episodes from the so-called Epistle of Alexander to Aristotle, where we find a heavy fall of snow, trampled down by the soldiers, and later a rain of fire.

35. A ciò che, 'inasmuch as.' — Vapore, 'flame.'

36. Me' = meglio.

45. Uscinci = ci uscirono.

52. Se, 'though'; so in l. 55. Even though Jove should labor as he did in the battle against the giants, in the valley of Phlegra in Thessaly, he could not subdue the spirit of Capaneus.

55. Gli altri: the cyclops, assistants of Vulcan. — A muta a muta, 'in relays'; Statius, Thebaid, II, 599-600, has the phrase mutata . . . fulmina.

In Mongibello alla fucina negra,
 Chiamando : "Buon Vulcano, aiuta aiuta,"
 Sì com' ei fece alla pugna di Flegra,
 E me saetti con tutta sua forza,
 Non ne potrebbe aver vendetta allegra.' 60
 Allora il Duca mio parlò di forza
 Tanto, ch' io non l' avea sì forte udito :
 'O Capaneo, in ciò che non s' ammorza
 La tua superbia, se' tu più punito ;
 Nullo martirio, fuor che la tua rabbia, 65
 Sarebbe al tuo furor dolor compito.'
 Poi si rivolse a me con miglior labbia,
 Dicendo : 'Quel fu l' un de' sette regi
 Ch' assiser Tebe ; ed ebbe e par ch' egli abbia
 Dio in disdegno, e poco par che il pregi ; 70
 Ma, come io dissi a lui, li suoi dispetti
 Sono al suo petto assai debiti fregi.
 Or mi vien dietro, e guarda che non metti
 Ancor li piedi nell' arena arsiccia,
 Ma sempre al bosco li ritieni stretti.' 75
 Tacendo divenimmo là ove spiccia
 Fuor della selva un picciol fiumicello,
 Lo cui rossore ancor mi raccapriccia.
 Quale del Bulicame esce il ruscello
 Che parton poi tra lor le peccatrici, 80
 Tal per l' arena giù sen giva quello.

 Poscia che noi entrammo per la porta
 Lo cui sogliare a nessuno è negato,
 Cosa non fu dagli tuoi occhi scorta
 Notabil come lo presente rio,
 Che sopra sè tutte fiammelle ammorta.' 90
 Queste parole fur del Duca mio ;
 Per che il pregai che mi largisse il pasto
 Di cui largito m' aveva il disio.
 'In mezzo mar siede un paese guasto,'
 Diss' egli allora, 'che s' appella Creta, 95
 Sotto il cui rege fu già il mondo casto.

 D' acqua e di fronde, che si chiamò Ida ;
 Ora è diserta come cosa vieta.

 Tu il vederai : però qui non si conta.' 120
 Ed io a lui : 'Se il presente rigagno
 Si deriva così dal nostro mondo,
 Perchè ci appar pure a questo vivagno?'
 Ed egli a me : 'Tu sai che il luogo è tondo,
 E tutto che tu sii venuto molto, 125
 Pur a sinistra, giù calando al fondo,
 Non se' ancor per tutto il cerchio volto ;
 Per che, se cosa n' apparisce nuova,
 Non dee addur maraviglia al tuo volto.'

109. Eletto, 'choice.'

115. Si diroccia, 'precipitates itself.'

116. Acheron, Styx, Phlegethon, and Cocytus all belong to the classic underworld. The Visio Sancti Pauli gives the four rivers as 'Cochiton, Styx, Acheron, Flegeton.'

117. Doccia, 'duct.'

119. The frozen Cocytus forms the bottom of Dante's Hell, beyond which 'there is no descending,' because it is at the earth's centre.

123. 'Why do we see it only at this edge?': that is, why have we not crossed it in our spiral descent? Virgil replies that they have not made the whole circuit of the circumference of Hell.

129. Dee = deve.

Ed io ancor : 'Maestro, ove si trova
 Flegetonta e Letè, chè dell' un taci,
 E l' altro di' che si fa d' esta piovà?'
 'In tutte tue question certo mi piaci,'
 Rispose ; 'ma il bollor dell' acqua rossa
 Dovea ben solver l' una che tu faci. 135
 Letè vedrai, ma fuor di questa fossa,
 Là dove vanno l' anime a lavarsi
 Quando la colpa pentuta è rimossa.'
 Poi disse : 'Omai è tempo da scostarsi
 Dal bosco ; fa che diretto a me vegne. 140
 Li margini fan via, che non son arsi,
 E sopra loro ogni vapor si spegne.'

132. Piova = pioggia, the rain of tears that forms the stream. — Di = dici.

135. Faci = fa. The heat of this stream proves that it is Phlegethon; see Æn., VI, 550-1 :

'Quæ rapidus flammis ambit torrentibus amnis
 Tartareus Phlegethon,'

and Statius, Thebaid, IV, 523 :

'Fumidus atra vadis Phlegethon incendia volvit.'

136. Lethe is in the lower world of the ancients; but Dante puts it in the Garden of Eden, at the top of the mountain of Purgatory.

138. Pentuta = pentita.

140. Vegne = venga.

CANTO XV

ARGUMENT

BRUNETTO LATINI, who fills this canto, was one of the leading figures in the Florence of the generation just before Dante. Born about 1220, of an illustrious family, he distinguished himself for ability, culture, and vast erudition. His profession of notary gave him the title of Scr. In 1265 he was sent as ambassador to the court of Alfonso X of Castile. On his way back he learned of the overthrow of the Guelf party, to which he belonged, at Montaperti, and deemed it best to stay in France. There he wrote in French his great encyclopædia, Li livres dou Trésor; he later composed in Italian verse a shorter didactic work, allegorical in form, known as the Tesoretto. In 1266, after the overthrow of the Ghibellines at Benevento, he returned to Florence, where he filled various public offices, and was held in great honor until his death in 1294. Dante addresses him with respectful voi.

Two motives, in all probability, induced our author to give Brunetto so conspicuous a place in his poem. The first was gratitude. To the Tesoretto Dante owed perhaps his first conception of a grand didactic poem clad in allegory. But there must have been, besides, a warm personal attachment between the gifted youth and the great scholar and statesman who, by his counsel, taught the lad 'how man can make himself eternal'. In the Trésor, indeed, Dante may have read (in the Italian version quoted by Torraca): 'E quelli, che delle grandi cose trattano, testimoniano che gloria dà all' uomo valente una seconda vita, ciò è a dire, che dopo la morte sua, la nominanza che rimane delle sue buone opere, fa parere che egli sia tuttora in vita' — an idea which reappears more than once in the Commedia. Of their friendship we have no knowledge save the touching picture suggested by this canto. It is by no means unlikely that Brunetto lectured in Florence on the art of Latin composition, and that Dante was among his hearers. Some have supposed that Latini had cast Dante's horoscope: this is unlikely, as both the Trésor and the Tesoretto ascribe little influence to the stars. The word 'stella,' as he uses it in l. 55, signifies no more than destiny or natural disposition.

Another reason for giving prominence to Latini was that which we noted in the case of Pier delle Vigne — the desire to furnish an extreme example. In Brunetto we have a man endowed with fine intellectual and most endearing moral qualities, yet tainted with one vice, which destroys his soul. It is only through Dante that we know of his sin, but there can be no doubt of its reality; in his day assuredly many were aware of it. Thus the doctrine is again enforced that a single deadly fault, unexpiated, will damn a man otherwise noble. The contrast between his general dignity and his fatal weakness is emphasized at the end of the canto, when the elderly sage is suddenly forced to put aside his gravity and run like a racer to rejoin his fellows.

Few episodes are more startling than the first encounter of Dante and his old master in Hell; few are more pathetic than their walk together, the younger poet on the dike, the older on the plain below, beside his companion's skirt, his shoulders reaching perhaps to the level of Dante's feet. No nearer approach is lawful. The dusky setting is described (in ll. 18-21) with a couple of swift similes, which it is interesting to compare with the more leisurely style of Virgil in the Aeneid, VI, 268-72 and 450-4:

'Ibant obscuri sola sub nocte per umbram,
Perque domos Ditis vacuas et inania regna;
Quale per incertam lunam sub luce maligna
Est iter in silvis, ubi cælum condidit umbra
Jupiter, et rebus nox abstulit atra colorem.'

'Inter quas Phœnissa recens a vulnere Dido
Errabat silva in magna, quam Troius heros
Ut primum juxta stetit, agnovitque per umbram
Obscuram, qualem primo qui surgere mense
Aut videt aut vidisse putat per nubila lunam.'

See Novati, 334 ff.

Ora cen porta l' un de' duri margini,
E il fummo del ruscel di sopra aduggia
Sì che dal foco salva l' acqua e gli argini.
Quale i Fiamminghi tra Guizzante e Bruggia,
Temendo il fiotto che ver lor s' avventa,

1. Margini and argini form a trisyllabic or dactylic rhyme, and the two verses really have twelve syllables each. Such lines are called versi sdruc-cioli; Dante occasionally substitutes them for the ordinary versi piani. Cf. IV, 56.

2. Fummo = jumo: cf. VII, 123. Aduggia, 'overshadows.'

4. Fiamminghi, 'Flemings.' Guizzante, 'Wissant,' between Boulogne and Calais, was once a well-known port. Bruggia, 'Bruges,' in eastern Flanders, had extensive commercial relations with Italy.

Fanno lo schermo perchè il mar si fuggia ;
 E quale i Padovan lungo la Brenta,
 Per difender lor ville e lor castelli,
 Anzi che Chiarentana il caldo senta ;
 A tale imagine eran fatti quelli, 10
 Tutto che nè sì alti nè sì grossi,
 Qual che si fosse, lo maestro felli.
 Già eravam dalla selva rimossi
 Tanto, ch' io non avrei visto dov' era,
 Perch' io indietro rivolto mi fossi, 15
 Quando incontrammo d' anime una schiera
 Che venia lungo l' argine, e ciascuna
 Ci riguardava come suol da sera
 Guardar l' un l' altro sotto nuova luna ;
 E sì ver noi aguzzavan le ciglia 20
 Come 'l vecchio sartor fa nella cruna.
 Così adocchiato da cotal famiglia,
 Fui conosciuto da un, che mi prese
 Per lo lembo e gridò : 'Qual meraviglia !'
 Ed io, quando il suo braccio a me distese, 25
 Ficcai gli occhi per lo cotto aspetto
 Sì che il viso abbruciato non difese
 La conoscenza sua al mio intelletto ;
 E chinando la mia alla sua faccia,
 Risposi : 'Siete voi qui, ser Brunetto ?' 30
 E quegli : 'O figliuol mio, non ti dispiaccia

 Senza arrostarsi quando il fuoco il feggia.
 Però va oltre: io ti verrò a' panni, 40
 E poi rigiugnerò la mia masnada,
 Che va piangendo i suoi eterni danni.'
 Io non osava scender della strada
 Per andar par di lui : ma il capo chino

 Ei cominciò : 'Qual fortuna o destino

 E chi è questi che mostra il cammino?'
 'Lassù di sopra in la vita serena,'
 Rispos' io lui, 'mi smarri' in una valle, 50

 Si disconvien fruttare al dolce fico.
 Vecchia fama nel mondo li chiama orbi :
 Gente avara, invidiosa e superba.
 Da' lor costumi fa' che tu ti forbi.
 La tua fortuna tanto onor ti serba 70
 Che l' una parte e l' altra avranno fame
 Di te, ma lungi fia dal becco l' erba.
 Faccian le bestie Fiesolane strame
 Di lor medesme, e non tocchin la pianta,
 S' alcuna surge ancor nel lor letame, 75
 In cui riviva la semente santa
 Di quei Roman che vi rimaser quando
 Fu fatto il nido di malizia tanta.'

58. Per tempo, 'early.'

59. Veggendo = vedendo.

61. The Florentines. Fiesole, Latin Fæsulæ, is at the top of a steep hill near Florence. Catiline, driven from Rome, took refuge there with his followers. When the place was finally taken, tradition has it that the surviving inhabitants, combining with a Roman colony, founded Florence, 'which still smacks of the mountain and the rock.' Cf. G. Villani, Croniche, I, xxxviii. — Ab antico, 'of old,' is a Latin phrase that had become current in Italian.

65. È ragion, 'that is right.' — Lazzi sorbi, 'sour sorb-trees.' Cf. Mat. vii, 16: 'Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles?'

67. Orbi, 'blind.' Various stories were told to account for the 'old report.'

71. 'Each party will hunger for thee,' i. e., 'wish to devour thee.'

72. 'The grass shall be far from the goat': thou shalt escape.

73. Strame, 'fodder.' Cf. Bull., XVIII. 7.

78. Dante believed that his own family belonged to the old Roman stock of Florence.

'Se fosse tutto pieno il mio dimando,'
 Risposi lui, 'voi non sareste ancora 80
 Dell' umana natura posto in bando.
 Chè in la mente m' è fitta ed or mi accora
 La cara e buona imagine paterna

 M' insegnavate come l' uom s' eterna. 85
 E quant' io l' abbia in grado, mentre io vivo

94. Arra, 'earnest,' i. e., 'foretaste.'

96. Marra, 'mattock.' Let fate and men pursue their thoughtless course: this sounds like a proverbial phrase.

97. Virgil, who was walking ahead, turned his head back to the right. Dante was following, with Brunetto below him on the plain at his right.

99. 'He who takes heed is a good listener.' Dante's words to Brunetto prove that he remembers Virgil's speech at the end of X.

Nè per tanto di men parlando vommi 100
 Con ser Brunetto, e domando chi sono
 Li suoi compagni più noti e più sommi.
 Ed egli a me : ' Saper d' alcuno è buono :
 Degli altri fia laudabile tacerci,
 Chè il tempo saria corto a tanto suono. 105

 Nel quale io vivo ancora ; e più non cheggio.' 120
 Poi si rivolse, e parve di coloro

100. Nè per tanto di men, 'none the less.' Vommi = mi vado.

106. Cherci, 'clerks.'

108. Lerci, 'fouled.'

109. Grama, 'dismal.' Priscian, the great Latin grammarian of the 6th century. Francesco d' Accorso, son of a still more famous father, was renowned as a jurist; he lived in Bologna and in England, in the 13th century.

111. 'Hadst thou hankered for such scurf.'

112. Potei = potèvi. Andrea di Mozzi was deposed in 1295 from the bishopric of Florence and transferred to the less important one of Vicenza, through which town the Bacchiglione runs. The Pope (or 'servus servorum Dei') who removed him was Boniface VIII.

114. 'Where he left his sinfully distended muscles,' i. e., he died.

CANTO XVI

ARGUMENT

At the close of this canto poetic ingenuity does its utmost to intensify the effect of mystery and suspense. Virgil's reading of his companion's unspoken thought, the eager expectancy of both travellers, the strange and unexplained casting of a girdle into the abyss, Dante's reluctance to impart to us an event too marvellous for our belief — all this leads up to the final shadow of a weird form looming into sight, with which the narrative stops.

Arriving at the edge of the cliff, the boundary of the seventh circle, Dante, who hitherto has worn 'una corda intorno cinta,' takes off this girdle and hands it, 'knotted and coiled,' to his guide. Virgil throws it out into the darkness — a signal (so we afterwards learn) for the huge flying monster Geryon, the embodiment of Fraud and keeper of the eighth circle, who is to carry them down on his back. With this cord, we are told, Dante had once thought 'to catch the leopard with the painted hide,' which in the first canto represented the habit of Fraud. Henceforth Dante goes ungirded until he is about to begin the ascent of the mountain of Purgatory; then, at the bidding of Cato, he is girt with a rush, the emblem of humility. It should be remembered that in the Bible a girdle symbolizes strength.

The significance of the cord has been variously interpreted, and there is now no agreement among commentators. This rope must stand for something upon which Dante at one time built false hopes, but now, at the command of Reason, discards; something, moreover, to be appropriately replaced by humility; and, lastly, something which shall attract Geryon and bring him to view. This something may well be self-confidence, the opposite of humility; a seeming strength, which the poet formerly deemed adequate for the mastery of his faults; a delusion, and therefore a lure to the genius of Deceit. The coiled and knotted rope itself suggests a snare; in Par. XXVIII, 12, indeed, Dante uses the word corda in this sense — 'a pigliarmi fece Amor la corda.' Geryon, when he appears, has his breast and sides decorated with 'knots and rings,' corresponding to the shape of the cast-off belt. While girt with self-confidence, Dante contended vainly against Fraud; but no sooner is this deceptive girdle put aside than Fraud becomes amenable to Reason.

See U. Cosmo in Giorn. dant., IX, 47; P. Chistoni in Bull., X, 325.

Già era in loco ove s' udià il rimbombo
 Dell' acqua che cadea nell' altro giro,
 Simile a quel che l' arnie fanno rombo,
 Quando tre ombre insieme si partiro
 Correndo d' una torma che passava 5
 Sotto la pioggia dell' aspro martiro.
 Venian ver noi, e ciascuna gridava :
 'Sostati tu, che all' abito ne sembri
 Essere alcun di nostra terra prava.'
 Aimè, che piaghe vidi ne' lor membri 10
 Recenti e vecchie dalle fiamme incese !
 Ancor men duol, pur ch' io me ne rimembri.
 Alle lor grida il mio Dottor s' attese,
 Volse il viso ver me, ed : 'Ora aspetta,'
 Disse ; 'a costor si vuole esser cortese. 15
 E se non fosse il foco che saetta
 La natura del loco, io dicerei
 Che meglio stesse a te, che a lor, la fretta.'
 Ricominciar, come noi ristemmo, ei
 L' antico verso ; e quando a noi fur giunti, 20
 Fenno una rota di sè tutti e trei.
 Qual soleno i campion far nudi ed untì,
 Avvisando lor presa e lor vantaggio,
 Prima che sien tra lor battuti e punti :

2. The 'next circle' is the eighth, separated from the seventh by a mighty precipice.

12. Men = me ne.

19. Ricominciar = ricominciarono. Ei is the pronoun, 'they.' They resumed their eternal lament.

21. Fenno = fecero. Trei = tre.

22. The campioni are the wrestlers and boxers of ancient times. Soleno = sole(v)ano (cf. Zeitschrift für romanische Philologie, Beiheft XV, 26); other texts have soleano or sogliono : this verb was in early Italian, as in Provençal, used in the present with the sense of the imperfect (cf. XVI, 68; XXVII, 48; etc.). Cf. Æn., III, 281-2:

'Exercent patrias oleo labente palæstras
 Nudati socii.'

Così, rotando, ciascuno il visaggio 25
 Drizzava a me, sì che in contrario il collo
 Faceva a' piè continuo viaggio.
 'E se miseria d' esto loco sollo
 Rende in dispetto noi e nostri preghi,
 Cominciò l' uno, 'e il tinto aspetto e brollo ; 30
 La fama nostra il tuo animo pieghi
 A dirne chi tu se', che i vivi piedi
 Così sicuro per lo inferno fregghi.
 Questi, l' orme di cui pestar mi vedi,
 Tutto che nudo e dipelato vada, 35
 Fu di grado maggior che tu non credi.
 Nepote fu della buona Gualdrada :
 Guido Guerra ebbe nome, ed in sua vita
 Fece col senno assai e con la spada.
 L' altro che appresso me l' arena trita, 40
 È Tegghiaio Aldobrandi, la cui voce
 Nel mondo su dovria esser gradita.
 Ed io, che posto son con loro in croce,
 Jacopo Rusticucci fui ; e certo

25. The three circled around and around in front of Dante, as if they were dancing in a ring. All kept their faces turned toward him.

28. Sollo seems to mean 'soft' or 'sandy.'

30. Aspetto is, like miseria above, subject of rende. Brollo probably means 'bare,' i. e., hairless; it appears to be the same word as the brullo of Inf. XXXIV, 60 and Purg. XIV, 91.

35. Tutto che, 'albeit.'

37. Gualdrada, renowned for her beauty and modesty, a sister-in-law of Dante's great-grandfather, was the daughter of the Bellincion Berti of Par. XV, 112. Her grandson, Guido Guerra (or Guidoguerra), was a distinguished Florentine soldier, who died in 1272.

40. Trita, 'treads.'

41. Tegghiaio, of the Adimari family, was an illustrious citizen of Florence in the middle part of the 13th century. If his counsel had been heeded, his countrymen would have escaped the defeat of Montaperti in 1260; that is why 'his voice should be welcome.' Dante had inquired of Ciaccio (VI, 79-80) concerning Tegghiaio and Rusticucci.

44. Of Rusticucci, a contemporary of the other two, comparatively little is recorded. Nothing is known of his wife.

La fiera moglie più ch' altro mi nuoce.' 45
 S' io fussi stato dal foco coperto,
 Gittato mi sarei tra lor disotto,
 E credo che il Dottor l' avria sofferto.
 Ma perch' io mi sarei bruciato e cotto,
 Vinse paura la mia buona voglia, 50
 Che di loro abbracciar mi facea ghiotto.
 Poi cominciai : ' Non dispetto, ma doglia
 La vostra condizion dentro mi fisse
 Tanto che tardi tutta si dispoglia,
 Tosto che questo mio Signor mi disse 55
 Parole, per le quali io mi pensai
 Che qual voi siete, tal gente venisse.
 Di vostra terra sono ; e sempre mai
 L' opre di voi e gli onorati nomi
 Con affezion ritrassi ed ascoltai. 60
 Lascio lo fele, e vo per dolci pomi
 Promessi a me per lo verace Duca ;
 Ma fino al centro pria convien ch' io tomi.'
 ' Se lungamente l' anima conduca
 Le membra tue,' rispose quegli ancora, 65
 ' E se la fama tua dopo te luca,
 Cortesia e valor di' se dimora
 Nella nostra città sì come suole,
 O se del tutto se n' è gita fuora?
 Chè Guglielmo Borsiere, il qual si duole 70
 Con noi per poco, e va là coi compagni,

61. Pomi: cf. Purg. XXVII, 115.

63. First I must descend, or 'fall,' to the centre of the earth.

64. We have here, as in l. 66, the familiar formula of adjuration: 'as thou hopest that . . .' or 'so may . . .': cf. X, 82.

68. Suole: for the use of the present, see l. 22.

70. The newly arrived Guglielmo Borsiere is known to us only through a story in Boccaccio's Decamerone, I, 8. — Per poco = da poco tempo.

Assai ne cruccia con le sue parole.
 'La gente nuova e i subiti guadagni
 Orgoglio e dismisura han generata,
 Fiorenza, in te, sì che tu già ten piagni.' 75
 Così gridai colla faccia levata ;
 E i tre, che ciò inteser per risposta,
 Guatar l' un l' altro, come al ver sì guata.
 'Se l' altre volte sì poco ti costa,'
 Risposer tutti, 'il satisfare altrui, 80
 Felice te, che sì parli a tua posta.
 Però se campi d' esti lochi bui
 E torni a riveder le belle stelle,
 Quando ti gioverà dicere : "Io fui,"
 Fa' che di noi alla gente favelle.' 85
 Indi rupper la rota, ed a fuggirsi
 Ali sembiar le gambe loro snelle.
 Un ammen non saria potuto dirsi
 Tosto così, com' ei furo spariti ;
 Per che al Maestro parve di partirsi. 90
 Io lo seguiva, e poco eravam iti,
 Che il suon dell' acqua n' era sì vicino
 Che per parlar saremmo appena uditi.
 Come quel fiume ch' ha proprio cammino

73. Dante ascribes the degeneracy of Florence to sudden prosperity and to deterioration of the stock through immigration from the country. Instead of replying directly to his questioner, he lifts up his face toward the city and apostrophizes it. The three listeners look at one another, nodding, as people do when they hear the manifest truth.

79. Sì poco ti costa, 'it is so easy for thee.'

81. A tua posta, 'at will.' The spirits admire not only Dante's knowledge of the present, which they have lost, but his clear understanding and freedom of utterance. Perhaps they dimly foresee a time when it will not be so easy for him to 'satisfare altrui.'

84. Cf. Æn., I, 203: 'forsan et hæc olim meminisse juvabit.'

85. 'Pray speak of us to people.' Favelle=javelli: cf. V, 19.

90. Parve, 'it seemed well.'

93. Per parlar, 'had we spoken.'

94. The roaring cataract in Hell is compared to the noisy falls of the

Prima da monte Veso in ver levante 95
 Dalla sinistra costa d' Apennino,
 Che si chiama Acquacheta suso, avanti
 Che si divalli giù nel basso letto,
 Ed a Forlì di quel nome è vacante,
 Rimbomba là sopra san Benedetto 100
 Dell' Alpe, per cadere ad una scesa,
 Ove dovria per mille esser ricetto ;
 Così, giù d' una ripa discoscesa,
 Trovammo risonar quell' acqua tinta,
 Sì che in poc' ora avria l' orecchia offesa. 105
 Io aveva una corda intorno cinta,
 E con essa pensai alcuna volta
 Prender la lonza alla pelle dipinta.
 Poscia che l' ebbi tutta da me sciolta,
 Sì come il Duca m' avea comandato, 110
 Porsila a lui aggroppata e ravvolta.
 Ond' ei si volse inver lo destro lato,
 Ed alquanto di lungi dalla sponda
 La gittò giuso in quell' alto burrato.
 ' E pur convien che novità risponda,' 115
 Dicea fra me medesimo, ' al nuovo cenno
 Che il Maestro con l' occhio sì seconda.'

Montone, the first river on the left of the Apennines (as one descends into Italy) that has a course of its own to the Adriatic; the other streams run into the Po. Monte Veso, the Latin Mons Vesulus, is Monviso. One of the three upper branches of the Montone is the Acquacheta; at Forlì, Dante says, it gives up that name, and merges into the Montone.

100. Rimbomba: the subject of this verb is quel fiume in l. 94. S. Benedetto dell' Alpe is a little village, named after an ancient Benedictine abbey. The river roars because it falls over a single ledge, when it ought to be caught (ricetto) by a thousand. In dry weather the water trickles over a long series of steps at the side; when the stream is full, it pours straight down in the centre. This explanation of l. 102, sustained by Tor., is not the usual one, but it seems on the whole the most satisfactory.

112. Virgil swings to the right, as one does to make a long throw.

Ahi quanto cauti gli uomini esser denno
 Presso a color che non veggon pur l' opra,
 Ma per entro i pensier miran col senno ! 120
 Ei disse a me : 'Tosto verrà di sopra
 Ciò ch' io attendo, e che il tuo pensier sogna ;
 Tosto convien ch' al tuo viso si scopra.'
 Sempre a quel ver ch' ha faccia di menzogna
 De' l' uom chiuder le labbra finch' ei puote, 125
 Però che senza colpa fa vergogna ;
 Ma qui tacer nol posso, e per le note
 Di questa commedia, lettor, ti giuro,
 S' elle non sien di lunga grazia vote,
 Ch' io vidi per quell' aer grosso e scuro 130
 Venir notando una figura in suso,
 Maravigliosa ad ogni cor sicuro ;
 Sì come torna colui che va giuso
 Talora a solver àncora ch' aggrappa
 O scoglio od altro che nel mare è chiuso, 135
 Che in su si stende e da piè si rattrappa.

118. Denno = devono.

125. Dee = deve. Puote = può.

126. It causes one to be unjustly suspected of falsehood.

127. Le note : Dante speaks of his poem as if it were a song. The names commedia and tragedia (which Dante accented on the i) were applied to non-dramatic poems composed respectively in a simple or a grand style ; tragedia, according to the Letter to Cran Grande, also has an unhappy ending.

129. 'As I hope they may not want lasting favor' : cf. X, 82.

136. To the observer above, a diver, returning to the surface, is fore-shortened and magnified by the intervening water.

CANTO XVII

IN the description of the usurers, squatting on the edge of the chasm, now brushing off the flakes of fire, now lifting themselves on their hands from the hot sand, we are shown guilty souls in a state of abominable degradation. Their faces have lost all human likeness; they can be recognized only by their money-bags, decked out with their coats of arms. To such a pass man can be brought by inordinate love of gold, which consumes his humanity and his very individuality. Doglike, bovine, disgusting as these creatures are, they came of noble stock. No poor Jews, but illustrious Italian Christians, are selected by the poet to point his moral.

The descent into the darkness, on Geryon's back, is suggestively pictured in quick, realistic touches. At first nothing but the monster himself is visible, and Dante's only consciousness of motion comes from the upward rush of the air. Gradually, at various points below, the fires of the eighth circle begin to glimmer, and lamentations reach his ear; but all is dim and mysterious.

In classical mythology Geryon, son of Chrysaor and Callirrhoe, was a three-headed giant king in Spain, who was killed by Hercules.

'Tergemini nece Geryonis spoliisque superbus
Alcides aderat.' — Æn., VIII, 202-3.

A passing reference to his shade, as a 'forma tricorporis umbræ,' is made in Æn., VI, 289. To the mediæval scholar this triple nature apparently symbolized deceit. Boccaccio says, in his Genealogia Deorum Gentilium, I, 21, speaking of Dante's Fraud: 'Et inde Gerion dicta est, quia regnans apud Baleares insulas Gerion miti vultu blandisque verbis et omni comitatu consueverit hospites suscipere et demum sub hac benignitate sopitos occidere.' He discusses the classic Geryon in XIII, 1 (numbered also 38).

The monstrous form ascribed to him by Dante was doubtless suggested in part by the locusts of Rev. ix, 7-11: 'And the shapes of the locusts were like unto horses prepared unto battle . . . and their faces were as the faces of men. . . . And they had tails like unto scorpions, and there were stings in their tails. . . . And they had a king over them, which is the angel of the bottomless pit. . . .' St. Thomas, in his commentary on this passage, tells us that the scorpion has a smooth and gentle countenance, to induce people to touch it. The belief that scorpions have attractive faces seems to have been prevalent. Dante's image was profoundly modified, however, by Pliny's description — followed by Solinus — of a strange beast called Mantichora (Historia Naturalis, VIII, 30), which has the face of a man, the body of a lion, and a tail ending in a sting like a scorpion's. Similar creatures are portrayed by Albertus Magnus (De Animalibus, Lib. XXII, Tr. ii, Cap. 1) and Brunetto Latini (Trésor, V, Ch. 59); all of these eat human flesh, and of one of them it is said that 'deceptos homines devorat.' On the appropriateness of an upright human face combined with a scorpion's sting, as an emblem of fraud, there is no need to dwell.

See F. Cipolla, Il Gerione di Dante, 1895; B. Soldati in Giorn. stor., XLI, 84; R. T. Holbrook, Dante and the Animal Kingdom, 64. There are dragons with human faces on the 11th century façade of the Duomo in Assisi.

'Ecco la fiera con la coda aguzza,
 Che passa i monti e rompe i muri e l' armi;
 Ecco colei che tutto il mondo appuzza.'
 Sì cominciò lo mio Duca a parlarmi,
 Ed accennolle che venisse a proda 5
 Vicino al fin de' passeggiati marmi.
 E quella sozza imagine di froda
 Sen venne, ed arrivò la testa e il busto;
 Ma in su la riva non trasse la coda.
 La faccia sua era faccia d' uom giusto, 10
 Tanto benigna avea di fuor la pelle;
 E d' un serpente tutto l' altro fusto.
 Due branche avea pilose infin l' ascelle;
 Lo dosso e il petto ed ambedue le coste
 Dipinte avea di nodi e di rotelle. 15
 Con più color, sommesse e soprapposte,

3. Appuzza, 'infects.'

6. Near the end of the stony edge of the dike, upon which the poets had walked.

8. Arrivò is used in its most literal sense, 'brought ashore.'

12. Fusto, 'trunk.' Serpente: cf. Gen. iii, 1, 'Now the serpent was more subtil than any beast of the field.'

15. In mediæval pictures, dragons often have their whole bodies covered with little rings: cf. R. T. Holbrook, Dante and the Animal Kingdom, 63, 65.

16. Sommesse, 'woof' (the groundwork). Soprapposte, 'warp' (the embroidery).

Non fer mai drappo Tartari nè Turchi,
 Nè fur tai tele per Aragne imposte.
 Come talvolta stanno a riva i burchi
 Che parte sono in acqua e parte in terra, 20
 E come là tra li Tedeschi lurchi
 Lo bevero s' assetta a far sua guerra,
 Così la fiera pessima si stava
 Sull' orlo che, di pietra, il sabbion serra.
 Nel vano tutta sua coda guizzava, 25
 Torcendo in su la venenosa forca,
 Che a guisa di scorpion la punta armava.
 Lo Duca disse : 'Or convien che si torca
 La nostra via un poco infino a quella
 Bestia malvagia che colà si corca.' 30
 Però scendemmo alla destra mammella,
 E dieci passi femmo in sullo stremo,
 Per ben cessar la rena e la fiammella.
 E quando noi a lei venuti semo,
 Poco più oltre veggio in su la rena 35
 Gente seder propinqua al loco scemo.

17. Fer = fecero : the object is drappo, the subject Tartari nè Turchi. The Tartars and Turks were famous for their cloths: cf. P. Toynbee in Rom., XXIX, 559.

18. Imposte, 'designed.' Arachne was the famous weaver who challenged Minerva to a contest, and was turned into a spider: Met., VI, 5 ff.

19. Burchi, 'skiffs.'

21. Lurchi, 'gluttonous.'

22. It was believed that the beaver caught fish with its tail, by dangling it in the water.

24. The sandy desert has an edge of rock, along the top of the cliff.

31. The poets, on leaving the wood, had mounted the nearer or right side of the embankment, and had walked on the right side of the stream; now, therefore, they must come down on the right side, else they would have to cross the boiling blood.

32. Dieci is probably used for an indefinite moderate number. — Stremo, 'verge.'

33. Cessar, 'avoid.'

36. The usurers, who did violence to human industry, are seated on the sand, close to the abyss.

Quivi il Maestro : ' Acciocchè tutta piena
 Esperienza d' esto giron porti,'
 Mi disse, ' va, e vedi la lor mena.
 Li tuoi ragionamenti sian là corti. 40
 Mentre che torni parlerò con questa,
 Che ne conceda i suoi omeri forti.'
 Così ancor su per la strema testa
 Di quel settimo cerchio tutto solo
 Andai, ove sedea la gente mesta. 45
 Per gli occhi fuori scoppiava lor duolo ;
 Di qua, di là soccorrien con le mani,
 Quando a' vapori, e quando al caldo suolo.
 Non altrimenti fan di state i cani,
 Or col ceffo, or col piè, quando son morsi 50
 O da pulci o da mosche o da tafani.
 Poi che nel viso a certi gli occhi porsi,
 Ne' quali il doloroso foco casca,
 Non ne conobbi alcun ; ma io m' accorsi
 Che dal collo a ciascun pendea una tasca, 55
 Che avea certo colore e certo segno ;
 E quindi par che il loro occhio si pasca.
 E com' io riguardando tra lor vegno,
 In una borsa gialla vidi azzurro,
 Che d' un leone avea faccia e contegno. 60
 Poi, procedendo di mio sguardo il curro,
 Vidine un' altra, come sangue rossa,
 Mostrare un' oca bianca più che burro.
 Ed un, che d' una scrofa azzurra e grossa

39. Mena, 'mien.'

60. A lion azure in ar (gold): the arms of the Gianfigliuzzi of Florence.

61. Curro, 'course.'

63. A goose argent ('whiter than butter') in gules (red): the arms of the Ubriachi of Florence.

64. A sow in brood azure in argent: the arms of the Scrovigni of Padua.

Segnato avea lo suo sacchetto bianco, 65
 Mi disse : 'Che fai tu in questa fossa?
 Or te ne va ; e perchè se' vivo anco,
 Sappi che il mio vicin Vitaliano
 Sederà qui dal mio sinistro fianco.
 Con questi Fiorentin son Padovano ; 70
 Spesse fiate m' intronan gli orecchi,
 Gridando : "Vegna il cavalier sovrano,
 Che recherà la tasca con tre becchi."'
 Qui distorse la bocca e di fuor trasse
 La lingua, come bue che il naso lecchi. 75
 Ed io, temendo no 'l più star crucciase
 Lui che di poco star m' avea monito,
 Torna' mi indietro dall' anime lasse.
 Trovai lo Duca mio ch' era salito
 Già su la groppa del fiero animale, 80
 E disse a me : 'Or sii forte ed ardito!
 Omai si scende per sì fatte scale.
 Monta dinanzi, ch' io voglio esser mezzo,
 Sì che la coda non possa far male.'
 Qual è colui, ch' ha sì presso il riprezzo 85
 Della quartana ch' ha già l' unghie smorte,
 E trema tutto pur guardando il rezzo,
 Tal divenn' io alle parole porte.
 Ma vergogna mi fer le sue minacce,

68. Of Vitaliano, the only one of the usurers mentioned by name, we have no certain information.

73. Three eagles' beaks were the arms of the Buiamonte family of Florence. It is thought that the 'sovereign knight' of usurers is Gianni Buiamonte, who was of some prominence in the second half of the 13th century.

74. Cf. Isaiah lvii, 4 : 'against whom make ye a wide mouth and draw out the tongue?'

76. No, 'lest.'

85. Riprezzo, 'chill.'

87. 'And is all of a shiver when he so much as looks at the shade.'

89. Minacce seems here to mean nothing more than 'exhortations.'

Che innanzi a buon signor fa servo forte. 90
 Io m' assettai in su quelle spallacce ;
 Sì volli dir, ma la voce non venne
 Com' io credetti : ' Fa' che tu m' abbracce.'
 Ma esso che altra volta mi sovvenne
 Ad altro forse, tosto ch' io montai, 95
 Con le braccia m' avvinse e mi sostenne ;
 E disse : ' Gerïon, moviti omai.
 Le rote larghe, e lo scender sia poco.
 Pensa la nuova soma che tu hai.'
 Come la navicella esce del loco 100
 In dietro in dietro, sì quindi si tolse ;
 E poi ch' al tutto si sentì a giuoco,
 Là ov' era il petto la coda rivolse,
 E quella tesa, come anguilla, mosse,
 E con le branche l' aria a sè raccolse. 105
 Maggior paura non credo che fosse
 Quando Fetòn abbandonò li freni,
 Per che il ciel, come pare ancor, si cosse,
 Nè quando Icaro misero le reni
 Sentì spennar per la scaldata cera, 110
 Gridando il padre a lui : ' Mala via tieni,'
 Che fu la mia, quando vidi ch' i' era
 Nell' aer d' ogni parte, e vidi spenta

95. Forse, 'doubt,' 'peril.'

102. A giuoco, 'at large.'

107. Phaeton, son of Phœbus, was carried away by the horses of the chariot of the sun, which he tried to drive: Met., II, 150 ff., especially l. 200:

'Mentis inops gelida formidine lora remisit.'

108. The sky, scorched by the runaway chariot, still shows traces of it in the Milky Way. See Conv., II, xv, 44-55.

109. Dædalus, to escape from Crete, fashioned wings for his son Icarus and himself and fastened them on with wax. In spite of his father's warning, the boy flew so high that the sun melted the wax, and, losing his wings, he fell into the sea. See Met., VIII, 183 ff.

Ogni veduta fuor che della fiera.
 Ella sen va nuotando lenta lenta ; 115
 Ruota e discende, ma non me n' accorgo,
 Se non ch' al viso e disotto mi venta.
 Io sentia già dalla man destra il gorgo
 Far sotto noi un orribile stroscio ;
 Per che, con gli occhi in giù, la testa sporgo. 120
 Allor fu' io più timido allo scoscio ;
 Però ch' io vidi fochi e sentii pianti,
 Ond' io tremando tutto mi raccoscio.
 E vidi poi, chè nol vedea davanti,
 Lo scendere e il girar, per li gran mali 125
 Che s' appressavan da diversi canti.
 Come il falcon ch' è stato assai su l' ali,
 Che senza veder logoro o uccello
 Fa dire al falconiere : ' Oimè, tu cali,'
 Discende lasso onde si mosse snello, 130
 Per cento rote, e da lungi si pone
 Dal suo maestro, disdegnoso e fello :
 Così ne pose al fondo Gerione
 A piè a piè della stagliata rocca,
 E discarcate le nostre persone, 135
 Si dileguò, come da corda cocca.

118. Gorgo, 'rapids': the water of Phlegethon, at the foot of the cataract.

119. Stroscio, 'roar.'

121. Allo scoscio probably means 'in my straddle,' astride of Geryon.

123. Mi raccoscio, 'I crouch.'

125. Mali, 'torments.'

128. Logoro, 'lure.'

134. A piè a piè, 'at the very foot.' Stagliata, 'scarped.'

136. Come da corda cocca, 'like an arrow-notch from the bowstring.'

CANTO XVIII

To form an idea of the general structure of the eighth and ninth circles, one may think of a funnel with a shallow mouth and a thick spout. The upper part will represent the eighth circle, sloping down to the edge of a central hole ('un pozzo assai largo e profondo'), at the bottom of which is the ninth circle. Now let one imagine this upper part, the mouth of the funnel, horizontally corrugated, so that ten deep grooves run around it, one below the other. These are the ditches (bolge or valli) in which the various types of Fraud are punished. Furthermore, let one picture a number of strips running down the inside of the funnel from the outer edge to the beginning of the neck, like spokes converging upon a hub; and these strips should be conceived, not as flat, but as undulating, arching up over the grooves. The strips will correspond to certain sharp ridges of natural rock that traverse the circle, at intervals, from top to bottom, rising into high, steep bridges over the valleys, and resting on the intervening banks. These scogli, as they are called, form a set of embankments on which wayfarers — if such there be — may cross the circle without descending into the ditches. Dante gives to this circle the fantastic name of Malebolge, or 'Evil Pouches.' He compares the bolge and the scogli to a series of moats, with draw-bridges, surrounding a castle in concentric rings.

In describing the double march of the lost souls in the first bolgia, Dante recalls a scene witnessed by many thousands in Rome in the Jubilee year of 1299-1300. The following account is borrowed from C. E. Norton's translation of the Hell, pp. 112-3: 'The Jubilee was instituted by Boniface VIII, who issued a Bull granting plenary indulgence for a year from Christmas, 1299, to all pilgrims to Rome who should spend fifteen days in the city, visit the churches of St. Peter and St. Paul, and should confess and repent their sins. The throng of pilgrims from all parts of Europe was enormous, and among other precautions for their safety was that here alluded to, a barrier erected lengthwise along the bridge of Sant' Angelo, in order that the crowd going to and coming from St. Peter's might pass in opposite directions without interference.'

The fraudulent are divided into ten categories, and some of these are subdivided. In the first bolgia are betrayers of women, who fall into two classes, panders (ruffiani) and seducers. They walk ceaselessly around the bottom of their ditch, in two files, moving in opposite directions (like the pilgrims on the bridge), the panders on the outer, the seducers on the inner side. Horned devils scourge them with whips as they pass. Thus are sinners of this sort constantly goaded on by their mean passions. In Malebolge demons abound — not mere guardians, similar to those of the classic underworld, but malignant, tormenting fiends. There are no such spirits, however, in the second valley, where the punishment is simply nauseous filth and stench, a symbol of the unclean life of flatterers. To portray their abject vileness, the author deems no terms too gross.

Loco è in inferno detto Malebolge,
 Tutto di pietra e di color ferrigno,
 Come la cerchia che d' intorno il volge.
 Nel dritto mezzo del campo maligno
 Vaneggia un pozzo assai largo e profondo, 5
 Di cui suo loco dicerò l' ordigno.
 Quel cinghio che rimane adunque è tondo
 Tra il pozzo e il piè dell' alta ripa dura,
 Ed ha distinto in dieci valli il fondo.
 Quale, dove per guardia delle mura 10
 Più e più fossi cingon li castelli,
 La parte dov' ei son rende figura :
 Tale imagine quivi facean quelli.
 E come a tai fortezze dai lor sogli
 Alla ripa di fuor son ponticelli, 15
 Così da imo della roccia scogli

3. The cerchia is the circular precipice between the 7th circle and the 8th.

5. Vaneggia, 'yawns.'

6. Suo loco (Latin), 'in the fitting place.' Ordigno, 'structure.'

7. Cinghio, 'belt,' i. e., the 8th circle, a wide ring between the surrounding precipice and the well.

10. In this involved passage quale modifies figura, the object of rende; the subject is parte.

14. Sogli = soglie, 'thresholds.'

15. Alla ripa di fuor, 'to the outermost bank,' i. e., to the further bank of the outermost moat.

Movien, che recidean gli argini e fossi
 Infino al pozzo, che i tronca e raccògli.
 In questo loco, dalla schiena scossi
 Di Gerïon, trovammoci ; e il Poeta 20
 Tenne a sinistra, ed io retro mi mossi.
 Alla man destra vidi nuova pieta,
 Nuovi tormenti e nuovi frustatori,
 Di che la prima bolgia era repleta.
 Nel fondo erano ignudi i peccatori : 25
 Dal mezzo in qua ci venian verso il volto,
 Di là con noi, ma con passi maggiori;
 Come i Roman, per l' esercito molto,
 L' anno del Giubbileo, su per lo ponte
 Hanno a passar la gente modo colto, 30
 Che dall' un lato tutti hanno la fronte
 Verso il castello, e vanno a santo Pietro,
 Dall' altra sponda vanno verso il monte.
 Di qua, di là, su per lo sasso tetro
 Vidi Demon cornuti con gran ferze, 35
 Che li battean crudelmente di retro.
 Ahi come facean lor levar le berze
 Alle prime percosse ! Già nessuno
 Le seconde aspettava nè le terze.
 Mentr' io andava, gli occhi miei in uno 40

17. Movien = movevano. — Recidean, 'traversed.'

18. Raccògli = li raccoglie, 'gathers them in.' They all converge, like the spokes of a wheel, upon the pozzo, at the edge of which they stop.

26. On the nearer side of the bottom of the ditch, the sinners, in their circling course, were coming towards us; on the further side, they were going with us, but faster than we walked.

28. Esercito, 'host.'

30. Modo colto, 'adopted a measure.'

32. Castello : Sant' Angelo.

33. Monte : Monte Giordano, a slight eminence on the left of the river.

35. Ferze = sjerze, 'whips.'

37. Berze, 'heels.'

Furo scontrati ; ed io sì tosto dissi :
 'Di già veder costui non son digiuno.'
 Perciò a figurarlo i piedi affissi ;
 E il dolce Duca meco si ristette,
 Ed assentì ch' alquanto indietro gissi. 45
 E quel frustato celar si credette
 Bassando il viso, ma poco gli valse ;
 Ch' io dissi : 'Tu che l' occhio a terra gette,
 Se le fazion che porti non son false,
 Venedico se' tu Caccianimico ; 50
 Ma che ti mena a sì pungenti Salse?'
 Ed egli a me : 'Mal volentier lo dico ;
 Ma sforzami la tua chiara favella,
 Che mi fa sovvenir del mondo antico.
 Io fui colui che la Ghisolabella 55
 Condussi a far la voglia del Marchese,
 Come che suoni la sconcia novella.
 E non pur io qui piango Bolognese :
 Anzi n' è questo loco tanto pieno
 Che tante lingue non son ora apprese 60
 A dicer sipa tra Sàvena e Reno.

41. Furo scontrati = sì scontrarono.

42. 'I am not fasting for previous sight of him,' i. e., I have seen him before.

49. Fazion, 'features.'

50. Venedico Caccianimico, of a prominent family of Bologna, was Podestà of Milan in 1275, of Pistoia in 1283.

51. 'What brings thee to such sharp sauce?' Probably there is a play upon Salse, the name of a ravine, three miles from Bologna, where bodies of criminals were thrown.

53. Chiara favella, 'plain speech': Dante shows himself well informed.

55. Ghisolabella was Venedico's sister, married to Niccolò Fontana of Ferrara.

56. Marchese: Obizzo da Este of Ferrara.

57. 'However the dirty story may be told': we know the incident only from Dante's words.

61. Sipa is an old Bolognese word for 'yes.' Bologna lies between the two rivers, Savena and Reno. The number of Bolognese panders in this ditch exceeds the number of all the living people who speak Bolognese.

E se di ciò vuoi fede o testimonio,
 Recati a mente il nostro avaro seno.'
 Così parlando il percosse un demonio
 Della sua scuriada, e disse: 'Via, 65
 Ruffian, qui non son femmine da conio.'
 Io mi raggiunsi con la scorta mia;
 Poscia con pochi passi divenimmo
 Là dove un scoglio della ripa uscìa.
 Assai leggermente quel salimmo, 70
 E volti a destra su per la sua scheggia,
 Da quelle cerchie eterne ci partimmo.
 Quando noi fummo là dov' ei vaneggia
 Di sotto, per dar passo agli sferzati,
 Lo Duca disse: 'Attienti, e fa' che feggia 75
 Lo viso in te di questi altri mal nati,
 A' quali ancor non vedesti la faccia,
 Perocchè son con noi insieme andati.'
 Dal vecchio ponte guardavam la traccia
 Che venia verso noi dall' altra banda, 80
 E che la ferza similmente scaccia.
 Il buon Maestro, senza mia domanda,
 Mi disse: 'Guarda quel grande che viene,

65. Scuriada, 'scourge.'

66. Da conio, 'to be minted,' coined into money.

71. Up to this point the poets have been walking to the left on the bank between the high precipice and the first bolgia; they now turn to the right to cross this ditch. — Scheggia, 'ridge.'

72. They now turn their backs upon the upper terraces; and Dante, as he leaves them, reflects that these circles will remain forever unchanged.

73. Dov' ei vaneggia: where the ridge, as it crosses the ditch, has an opening beneath.

75. Attienti: 'take hold.' — Fa' che feggia, etc., 'let the sight of these . . . strike thee': feggia is the present subjunctive of fiedere. Dante is now to look down, at the right, on the seducers, whose faces he has not been able to see from the bank.

79. Traccia, 'file': cf. XII, 55.

80. Banda, 'side': the further, or inner, side of the ditch.

E per dolor non par lagrima spanda :
 Quanto aspetto reale ancor ritiene ! 85
 Quelli è Jason, che per core e per senno
 Li Colchi del monton privati fene.
 Egli passò per l' isola di Lenno,
 Poi che le ardite femmine spictate
 Tutti li maschi loro a morte dienno. 90
 Ivi con segni e con parole ornate
 Isifile ingannò, la giovinetta,
 Che prima avea tutte l' altre ingannate.
 Lasciolla quivi gravida e soletta :
 Tal colpa a tal martiro lui condanna ; 95
 Ed anco di Medea si fa vendetta.
 Con lui sen va chi da tal parte inganna.
 E questo basti della prima valle
 Sapere, e di color che in sè assanna.*
 Già eravam là 've lo stretto calle 100
 Con l' argine secondo s' incrocicchia,
 E fa di quello ad un altro arco spalle.
 Quindi sentimmo gente che si nicchia
 Nell' altra bolgia, e che col muso sbuffa,
 E sè medesma con le palme picchia. 105

87. The 'tall' Jason despoiled the Colchians of the golden fleece: Met., VII, 1-158. — Fene = jece.

90. Dienno = diedero. The women of Lemnos, forsaken by their husbands on account of a curse put upon them by Venus, agreed to murder all the males on the island.

91. Segni, 'tokens' of affection.

93. Hypsipyle had saved her father, King Thoas, by pretending to have killed him. See Statius, Thebaid, IV, V, VI.; Ovid, Heroides, VI.

96. For the story of Medea, beguiled by Jason, see Met., VII.

97. Da tal parte, 'in that quarter,' i. e., in such a way.

99. In sè assanna, 'it holds in its fangs.'

100. The narrow ridge crosses the second bank (the further bank of the first ditch), and makes of this bank a buttress for a second arch. The ridge arches up over each ditch.

103. Nicchiare probably means 'to whimper.'

104. Sbuffa, 'snorts.'

Le ripe eran grommate d' una muffa
 Per l' alito di giù che vi si appasta,
 Che con gli occhi e col naso facea zuffa.
 Lo fondo è cupo sì, che non ci basta
 Loco a veder senza montare al dosso 110
 Dell' arco, ove lo scoglio più soprasta.
 Quivi venimmo, e quindi giù nel fosso
 Vidi gente attuffata in uno sterco
 Che dagli uman privati pareva mosso :
 E mentre ch' io laggiù con l' occhio cerco, 115
 Vidi un col capo sì di merda lordo
 Che non pareva s' era laïco o cherco.
 Quei mi sgridò : 'Perchè se' tu sì ingordo
 Di riguardar più me che gli altri brutti?'
 Ed io a lui : 'Perchè, se ben ricordo, 120
 Già t' ho veduto coi capelli asciutti,
 E sei Alessio Interminei da Lucca ;
 Però t' adocchio più che gli altri tutti.'
 Ed egli allor, battendosi la zucca :
 'Quaggiù m' hanno sommerso le lusinghe, 125
 Ond' io non ebbi mai la lingua stucca.'
 Appresso ciò lo Duca : 'Fa' che pinghe,'
 Mi disse, 'il viso un poco più avanti,

106. Grommate, 'coated.' Muffa, 'mould.'

107. Sì appasta, 'sticks.'

108. Facea zuffa, 'quarrelled.'

109. Cupo, 'hollowed out.' Non ci basta loco a veder, 'there is not room enough to see,' because the bank overhangs.

111. Più soprasta, 'rises highest above.' From the middle of the bridge they can look in under the bank.

114. Privati, 'privies.'

122. Alessio Interminei (or Interminelli) belonged to a noble family of Lucca ; we know nothing in particular about him, although his name occurs in several documents of the second half of the 13th century.

124. Zucca, 'pate,' a slang word.

126. Stucca, 'cloyed.'

127. Pinghe = pinga, i. e., spinga, 'thou push.'

Sì che la faccia ben con gli occhi attinghe
 Di quella sozza e scapigliata fante 130
 Che là si graffia con l' unghie merdose,
 Ed or s' accoscia, ed ora è in piede stante.
 Taïde è, la puttana, che rispose
 Al drudo suo, quando disse : "Ho io grazie
 Grandi appo te?" "Anzi meravigliose." 135
 E quinci sien le nostre viste sazie.'

129. Attinghe = attinga, i. e., raggiunga, 'thou mayest reach.'

130. Fante, 'wench.'

132. S' accoscia, 'squats.'

133. Thais, the harlot, is a character in Terence's Eunuchus, to whom her lover, Thraso, has sent a present (III, 1). Dante, however, who presumably had not read Terence, got the incident from Cicero's De Amicitia, XXVI: 'Nulla est igitur hæc amicitia, cum alter verum audire non vult, alter ad mentiendum paratus est. Nec parasitorum in comædiis assentatio nobis faceta videtur, nisi essent miles gloriosi. "Magnas vere agere gratias Thais mihi?" Satis erat respondere "magnas"; "ingentes" inquit. Semper auget assentator id, quod is, cujus ad voluntatem dicitur, vult esse magnum.' In reality it was the parasite, Gnatho, who said 'ingentes'; but Dante from this passage evidently supposed that it was Thais.

CANTO XIX

ARGUMENT

THE sin punished in the third bolgia is simony, the use of ecclesiastical office for private gain. Dante classifies it as Fraud, but it was generally regarded as an offence against the Holy Ghost. It derives its name from the Simon Magus of Acts viii, 9-24: 'But there was a certain man, called Simon, which beforetime in the same city used sorcery. . . . And when Simon saw that through laying on of the apostles' hands the Holy Ghost was given, he offered them money, saying, Give me also this power. . . . But Peter said unto him, Thy money perish with thee, because thou hast thought that the gift of God may be purchased with money.' Inasmuch as this offence is one of perversion, it is symbolized by the culprit being turned upside down; and as the perverted trust is a holy one, God's anger falls upon the incumbent in the shape of fire, which, owing to his distorted attitude, burns not his head but his feet. The bottom and sides of this ditch are perforated with little round holes, from each of which project the writhing feet and ankles of a sinner. Somewhat similarly, in the Visio Alberici, XI, simonists are confined in a fiery well. Dante's flame, however, merely plays upon the surface of the soles, from which it seems to suck its food. This grotesque penalty is inflicted even upon mercenary Popes, all of whom appear to be sunk in one hole. The latest comer is at the top, 'planted like a stake,' with his feet in the air; the others, with each new arrival, are pushed further and further down, to flatten in the crevices of the rock. Dante and Virgil descend into this bolgia to converse with Pope Nicholas III. To him our traveller addresses, with the approval of Reason, though with some misgiving, a stinging rebuke, made all the more impressive by Dante's professed reluctance to show disrespect to a former wearer of the papal mantle.

The burrows of the simonists are compared to the pits for baptizers in the Baptistery of Florence, which Dante lovingly calls 'his beautiful San Giovanni.' Here all the new-born children of the city were baptized by immersion, most of them on June 24th, the day of St. John the Baptist. It would seem that to protect the priests from the throng, they were stationed in four cylindrical holes in the waist-high marble wall that surrounded the large circular font in the middle of the church. Dante takes this occasion to declare that he once broke down one of these receptacles to save some one who was drowning inside, and adds:

'E questo sia suggel ch' ogni uomo sganni,'

'And let this be a seal — i. e., a document, an authoritative, final statement — that shall undeceive every one.' Apparently he introduces the subject in order to put a stop to false rumors concerning his act. We really know nothing about the curious incident, although Benvenuto da Imola, one of the early commentators, relates a circumstantial story of boys playing on the wall and one of them falling into one of the holes, from which he could not be extricated until rescued by Dante. Many such tales were quickly invented to explain obscure references in the poem. It may be surmised that the dentro refers, not to the Baptizer's hole, but to the tank itself, from which the water had to be drawn to save a drowning baby that had slipped in.

For a comprehensive discussion of this canto, see D' Ovidio³, 338.

O Simon mago, o miseri seguaci,
 Che le cose di Dio, che di bontate
 Deono essere spose, e voi rapaci
 Per oro e per argento adulate ;
 Or convien che per voi suoni la tromba, 5
 Però che nella terza bolgia state.
 Già eravamo alla seguente tomba
 Montati, dello scoglio in quella parte
 Che appunto sopra mezzo il fosso piomba.
 O somma Sapienza, quanta è l' arte 10
 Che mostri in cielo, in terra e nel mal mondo,
 E quanto giusto tua virtù comparte !

3. Deono = devono. The construction is broken: voi repeats the che at the beginning of l. 2. The e is superfluous and untranslatable; it is often idiomatically so used to introduce the principal clause when a dependent clause has preceded.

4. Adulate, 'prostitute.'

5. Judicial sentences were proclaimed with a trumpet.

7. The tomba is the rocky bridge curving over the buried simonists in the ditch.

9. Piomba, 'hangs.'

12. Giusto: adverb.

Io vidi per le coste e per lo fondo
 Piena la pietra livida di fori
 D' un largo tutti, e ciascuno era tondo. 15
 Non mi parean meno ampi nè maggiori
 Che quei che son nel mio bel San Giovanni
 Fatti per loco de' battezzatori ;
 L' un delli quali, ancor non è molt' anni,
 Rupp' io per un che dentro vi annegava : 20
 E questo sia suggel ch' ogni uomo sganni.
 Fuor della bocca a ciascun soperchiava
 D' un peccator li piedi, e delle gambe
 Infino al grosso, e l' altro dentro stava.
 Le piante erano a tutti accese intrambe ; 25
 Per che sì forte guizzavan le giunte
 Che spezzate averian ritorte e strambe.
 Qual suole il fiammeggiar delle cose unte
 Moversi pur su per l' estrema buccia,
 Tal era lì da' calcagni alle punte. 30
 'Chi è colui, Maestro, che sì cruccia,
 Guizzando più che gli altri suoi consorti,'
 Diss' io, 'e cui più rossa fiamma succia?'
 Ed egli a me : 'Se tu vuoi ch' io ti porti
 Laggiù per quella ripa che più giace, 35
 Da lui saprai di sè e de' suoi torti.'
 Ed io : 'Tanto m' è bel, quanto a te piace.
 Tu sei signore, e sai ch' io non mi parto

15. Largo = larghezza.

26. Giunte = giunture.

27. Averian = avrebbero. — Ritorte, 'withes.' — Strambe, 'grass ropes.'

29. Buccia, 'rind,' i. e., surface.

35. Inasmuch as all Malebolge slopes toward the central well, and the floors of the bolge are level, the inner bank of each ditch must be lower than the outer. There are several indications that the inner bank is also less steep than the other.

37. M' è bel, 'suits me.'

Dal tuo volere, e sai quel che si tace.'
 Allor venimmo in su 'l argine quarto ; 40
 Volgemmo, e discendemmo a mano stanca
 Laggiù nel fondo foracchiato ed arto.
 Lo buon Maestro ancor della sua anca
 Non mi dipose, sì mi giunse al rotto
 Di quel che sì piangeva con la zanca. 45
 'O qual che se', che 'l di su tien di sotto,
 Anima trista, come pal commessa,
 Comincia' io a dir, 'se puoi, fa' motto.'
 Io stava come il frate che confessa
 Lo perfido assassìn, che poi ch' è fitto, 50
 Richiama lui, per che la morte cessa.
 Ed ei gridò : 'Sei tu già costì ritto,
 Sei tu già costì ritto, Bonifazio?
 Di parecchi anni mi mentì lo scritto.
 Se' tu sì tosto di quell' aver sazio 55
 Per lo qual non temesti torre a inganno
 La bella Donna, e poi di farne strazio?'
 Tal mi fec' io quai son color che stanno,
 Per non intender ciò ch' è lor risposto,
 Quasi scornati, e risponder non sanno. 60

41. Mano stanca = sinistra. After crossing the third bolgia, they went down into it from its inner bank.

44. Dante repeatedly uses sì in the sense of 'until': cf. l. 128 of this canto. Rotto, 'crevice.'

45. Zanca, 'shank.'

50. Murderers were planted, head downwards, in a hole, and buried alive. Dante probably recalls some scene actually witnessed, in which the murderer, to put off his death a few minutes, called back the priest, pretending that he had something more to confess. — Cessa, 'he postpones.'

53. The speaker, Nicholas III, thinks that his successor in simony, Boniface VIII, has arrived. But as Boniface was not to die until 1303, the book of destiny (lo scritto) seems to have lied.

55. Aver, 'wealth.'

56. Torre a inganno, 'to wed by guile': he was charged with having induced Celestine V to renounce the papacy (cf. III, 60).

57. La bella Donna is the Church, the Bride of Christ.

Allor Virgilio disse : ' Digli tosto,
 " Non son colui, non son colui che credi. " '
 Ed io risposi come a me fu imposto.
 Per che lo spirto tutti storse i piedi ;
 Poi sospirando, e con voce di pianto, 65
 Mi disse : ' Dunque che a me richiedi ?
 Se di saper chi io sia ti cal cotanto
 Che tu abbi però la ripa corsa,
 Sappi ch' io fui vestito del gran manto.
 E veramente fui figliuol dell' orsa, 70
 Cupido sì, per avanzar gli orsatti,
 Che su l' avere, e qui me misi in borsa.
 Di sotto al capo mio son gli altri tratti
 Che precedetter me simoneggiando,
 Per le fessure della pietra piatti. 75
 Laggiù cascherò io altresì, quando
 Verrà colui ch' io credea che tu fossi,
 Allor ch' io feci il subito dimando.
 Ma più è il tempo già che i piè mi cossi
 E ch' io son stato così sottosopra, 80
 Ch' ei non starà piantato coi piè rossi ;
 Chè dopo lui verrà, di più laid' opra,

69. Cf. the papale ammanto of II, 27.

70. Giovanni Gaetano Orsini, Pope Nicholas III from 1277 to 1280, was notorious for his nepotism. The she-bear, orsa, was the cognizance in his family arms, so Dante calls his relatives orsatti, or 'cubs.'

72. 'On earth I pocketed wealth, and here I have pocketed myself.'

79. Nicholas has been there nearly twenty years, from August, 1280, to April, 1300. Boniface's feet will burn only about eleven years, from October, 1303, to April, 1314, when Clement V will die. This passage must have been written after the latter date.

82. After the brief pontificate of the good Benedict XI, Bertrand de Goth of Gascony became Pope in 1305 with the name of Clement V. He was noted for his greed and licentiousness, and became the unscrupulous tool of Philip the Fair of France. In 1309 he transferred the papal see to Avignon; he deceived the Emperor Henry VII, and aided Philip in the suppression of the Templars. Cf. Par. XVII, 82. — Laid' opra, 'ugly deed.'

Di ver ponente un pastor senza legge,
 Tal che convien che lui e me ricopra.
 Nuovo Iason sarà, di cui si legge 85
 Ne' Maccabei ; e come a quel fu molle
 Suo re, così fia a lui chi Francia regge.'
 Io non so s' io mi fui qui troppo folle,
 Ch' io pur risposi lui a questo metro :
 'Deh or mi di', quanto tesoro volle 90
 Nostro Signore in prima da san Pietro
 Che ponesse le chiavi in sua balia?
 Certo non chiese se non : "Viemmi retro."
 Nè Pier nè gli altri tolsero a Mattia
 Oro od argento, quando fu sortito 95
 Al loco che perdè l' anima ria.
 Però ti sta', che tu se' ben punito ;
 E guarda ben la mal tolta moneta
 Ch' esser ti fece contra Carlo ardito.
 E se non fosse che ancor lo mi vieta 100
 La riverenza delle somme chiavi
 Che tu tenesti nella vita lieta,
 I' userei parole ancor più gravi ;
 Chè la vostra avarizia il mondo attrista,
 Calcando i buoni e sollevando i pravi. 105
 Di voi pastor s' accorse il Vangelista,

85. Clement is compared to the Jason of 2 Macc. iv and v, who bought the high-priesthood of King Antiochus. As Antiochus favored Jason, Philip will have Clement made Pope.

92. Mat. xvi, 19.

93. John xxi, 19.

94. Matthias was chosen apostle to fill the place of Judas: Acts i, 23-6.

99. From the beginning of his papacy, Nicholas was hostile to Charles of Anjou.

104. La vostra avarizia, 'the avarice of you and your like.'

106. See Rev. xvii: 'I will shew unto thee the judgment of the great whore that sitteth upon many waters: with whom the kings of the earth have committed fornication, . . . and I saw a woman sit upon a scarlet coloured beast,

Quando colei che siede sopra l' acque
 Puttaneggiar co' regi a lui fu vista :
 Quella che con le sette teste nacque
 E dalle dieci corna ebbe argomento, 110
 Fin che virtute al suo marito piacque.
 Fatto v' avete Dio d' oro e d' argento ;
 E che altro è da voi all' idolatre,
 Se non ch' egli uno e voi n' orate cento?
 Ahi, Costantin, di quanto mal fu matre, 115
 Non la tua conversion, ma quella dote
 Che da te prese il primo ricco padre !'
 E mentre io gli cantava cotai note,
 O ira o coscienza che il mordesse,
 Forte spingava con ambo le piote. 120
 Io credo ben che al mio Duca piacesse,
 Con sì contenta labbia sempre attese
 Lo suon delle parole vere espresse.
 Però con ambo le braccia mi prese,
 E poi che tutto su mi s' ebbe al petto, 125
 Rimontò per la via onde discese ;
 Nè si stancò d' avermi a sè distretto,

full of names of blasphemy, having seven heads and ten horns.' Dante, dealing freely with this passage, combines the woman with the beast, and makes her the symbol of the corrupt Church. She was born with seven heads, the Sacraments, and had as her defence ten horns, the Commandments, as long as her husband, the Papacy, loved virtue.

112. Cf. Hosea viii, 4: 'of their silver and their gold they have made them idols.'

113. The idolater (for instance, those who made the golden calf) worships only one idol, but you worship everything that is of gold.

115. The Emperor Constantine was thought to have donated the Western Empire to St. Sylvester, the first Pope to hold temporal possessions. The document of this donation was preserved, and was generally considered authentic until the middle of the 15th century. Dante did not doubt its genuineness, but disputed the right of Constantine to give and of Sylvester to receive. — Matre = madre; patre, in l. 117, is for padre.

120. Spingava, 'kicked.' Piote, 'soles.'

122. Labbia, 'countenance.'

Sì mi portò sopra il colmo dell' arco
Che dal quarto al quinto argine è tragetto.
Quivi soavemente pose il carico — 130
Soave per lo scoglio sconcio ed erto,
Che sarebbe alle capre duro varco.
Indi un altro vallon mi fu scoperto.

128. Sì: cf. l. 44.

131. Soave = soavemente: 'gently, because of the steep, rugged ridge.'

CANTO XX

ARGUMENT

IN the fourth bolgia we have another instance of perversion — this time perversion of mental sight — symbolized by bodily distortion. The souls of soothsayers, who misused their great gift of intelligence to beguile their credulous fellows, have their heads twisted to the rear, so that they are obliged to walk backwards. They suffer constantly all the agony one would feel in the instant of neck-wringing; unable to make a sound, they pour forth their anguish in tears that flow down their backs. The aspect of this strange affliction makes Dante weep, before he recognizes any of the sinners; in other words, he is sorry for the penalty itself, and in so far rebels against God's will. For this, Reason chides him. 'The righteous shall rejoice when he seeth the vengeance,' says Ps. lviii, 10; and theologians aver that the fate of the damned should be contemplated, not with pain, but with satisfaction, as a manifestation of divine justice. In the Visio S. Pauli (ed. H. Brandes, p. 66), when St. Paul weeps at the sight of the infernal torments, his angelic guide remonstrates: 'Quid ploras? Vis plus esse misericors filio Dei?' So Virgil rebukes Dante, declaring:

'Qui vive la pietà quando è ben morta,'

which probably means: 'Here, in thy grief, pity shows life when by rights it is dead'; that is, in Hell there should be no such thing as compassion for punishment, and there is none, save for thy silly tears. See D' Ovidio, 77-80.

A meeting with the prophetess Manto, daughter of the Theban Tiresias, leads Virgil to launch forth into a lengthy account of the founding of Mantua, his native place. The town, he affirms, was named after this same woman, who, leaving Thebes, ended her long wanderings on the spot where it was afterwards built. Dante represents himself as listening respectfully but with only indifferent interest to the narrative, at the close of which he eagerly asks about the other souls. Now, the peculiar feature of this incident is that Dante here ascribes to Virgil quite another story from that indicated in the Æneid, X, 198-200:

'Ille etiam patriis agmen ciet Ocnus ab oris
Fatidicæ Mantus et Tusci filius amnis,
Qui muros matrisque dedit tibi, Mantua, nomen.'

According to this passage, then, it was Ocnus, son of a river-god and an entirely different Manto, who built and named Mantua. Dante knew of the Theban Manto from Statius; and he may have read in St. Isidore's Origines, XV, i, 59, or heard from local tradition, that it was she who founded Mantua. At any rate, he was convinced that the version of the tale in the Æneid was wrong and should be corrected, the correction he courteously put into the mouth of Virgil himself. But that is not all: the 'cruel virgin' involves us in a problem still more perplexing. In Purg. XXII, 113, Virgil assigns 'la figlia di Tiresia' to the Limbus, where he himself dwells. It is incredible that our poet should have forgotten where he had put Manto, after all the talk about her. We are almost forced to the conclusion that the passage in Inf. XX was written after the line in Purg. XXII, and that Dante neglected to alter the latter in accordance with the former. It is likely that in his first draft of Inf. XX he introduced the Etruscan Manto, and attributed to her the name of Mantua, as the Æneid does; but later, changing his view, substituted the Theban Manto, and wrote the verses as we have them.

For the time-reference at the end of the canto, see the general note at the beginning of the Inferno. — For an ingenious view of Virgil's attitude toward soothsayers, see D' Ovidio, 92-112, 118-46; cf. Bull., X, 225. — For Manto and Mantua, see Moore, I, 173; F. Cipolla in Atti del Reale Istituto Veneto, LXI, 159; Bull., XII, 84.

Di nuova pena mi convien far versi,
 E dar materia al ventesimo canto
 Della prima canzon, ch' è de' sommersi.
 Io era già disposto tutto quanto
 A riguardar nello scoperto fondo, 5
 Che si bagnava d' angoscioso pianto ;
 E vidi gente per lo vallon tondo
 Venir tacendo e lagrimando, al passo
 Che fanno le letane in questo mondo.
 Come il viso mi scese in lor più basso, 10
 Mirabilmente apparve esser travolto

3. Prima canzon: the first cantica of the Commedia, dealing with souls 'sunk' in Hell.

9. Letane=litanie, slow-moving religious processions chanting litanies.

Ciascun tra 'l mento e 'l principio del casso ;
 Chè dalle reni era tornato il volto,
 Ed indietro venir gli convenia,
 Perchè il veder dinanzi era lor tolto. 15
 Forse per forza già di parlasìa
 Si travolse così alcun del tutto ;
 Ma io nol vidi, nè credo che sia.
 Se Dio ti lasci, lettor, prender frutto
 Di tua lezione, or pensa per te stesso, 20
 Com' io potea tener lo viso asciutto,
 Quando la nostra imagine da presso
 Vidi sì torta che il pianto degli occhi
 Le natiche bagnava per lo fesso.
 Certo i' piangea, poggiato ad un de' rocchi 25
 Del duro scoglio, sì che la mia scorta
 Mi disse : ' Ancor sei tu degli altri sciocchi?
 Qui vive la pietà quando è ben morta.
 Chi è più scellerato che colui
 Che al giudizio divin passion porta? 30
 Drizza la testa, drizza, e vedi a cui
 S' aperse agli occhi de' Teban la terra,
 Per ch' ei gridavan tutti : " Dove rui,
 Anfiarao? perchè lasci la guerra?"
 E non restò di ruinare a valle 35
 Fino a Minòs, che ciascheduno afferra.

12. Casso, 'chest.'

13. Dalle reni, 'toward the reins,' i. e., backwards.

16. Parlasìa = paralisi.

19. Se Dio, etc.: a formula of adjuration: cf. X, 82.

27. Art thou still a fool like other mortals?

30. Passion porta, 'feels compassion.'

33. Rui, Latin ruis, 'fallest': Thebaid, VIII, 84-5, 'Qui . . . praeceps . . . per inane ruis.'

34. The story of Amphiaraus, the augur, one of the seven kings who besieged Thebes, is told by Statius in the Thebaid, VII, 815 ff. and VIII, 1 ff.

35. A valle, 'downward.'

Mira che ha fatto petto delle spalle.
 Perchè volle veder troppo davante,
 Diretro guarda, e fa retroso calle.
 Vedi Tiresia, che mutò sembiente, 40
 Quando di maschio femmina divenne,
 Cangandosi le membra tutte quante ;
 E prima poi ribatter gli convenne
 Li duo serpenti avvolti con la verga,
 Che riavesse le maschili penne. 45
 Aronta è quel che al ventre gli s' atterga,
 Che nei monti di Luni, dove ronca
 Lo Carrarese che di sotto alberga,
 Ebbe tra bianchi marmi la spelonca
 Per sua dimora ; onde a guardar le stelle 50
 E il mar non gli era la veduta tronca.
 E quella che ricopre le mammelle,
 Che tu non vedi, con le trecce sciolte,
 E ha di là ogni pilosa pelle,
 Manto fu, che cercò per terre molte, 55
 Poscia si pose là dove nacqu' io ;
 Onde un poco mi piace che m' ascolte.
 Poscia che il padre suo di vita uscìo,

39. Retroso, 'backward.'

40. Tiresias was a famous soothsayer of Thebes. The incident here referred to is related in Met., III, 324-31: having struck with his stick two snakes that were together, he became a woman; seven years later, striking the same snakes again, he regained his male form.

45. Le maschili penne, 'his male plumage.'

46. S' atterga, 'backs up' to the belly of Tiresias, i. e., follows him. Aruns was an Etruscan soothsayer of Cæsar's time, of whom Lucan says, in Phars., I, 586

'Aruns incoluit desertæ mœnia Lunæ.'

The mountain cave seems to be an invention of Dante, who was in Lunigiana in 1306.

47. Ronca, 'clips' branches on the mountains.

55. Manto was the daughter of Tiresias of Thebes.

58. Uscìo = uscì; so gio = gì, i. e., andò.

E venne serva la città di Baco,
 Questa gran tempo per lo mondo giù. 60
 Suso in Italia bella giace un laco
 Appiè dell' alpe che serra Lamagna
 Sopra Tiralli, ch' ha nome Benaco.
 Per mille fonti, credo, e più si bagna,
 Tra Garda e Val Camonica, Apennino 65
 Dell' acqua che nel detto lago stagna.
 Loco è nel mezzo là, dove il Trentino
 Pastore, e quel di Brescia, e il Veronese
 Segnar potria, se fesse quel cammino.
 Siede Peschiera, bello e forte arnese 70
 Da fronteggiar Bresciani e Bergamaschi,
 Ove la riva intorno più discese.
 Ivi convien che tutto quanto caschi
 Ciò che in grembo a Benaco star non può,
 E fassi fiume giù per verdi paschi. 75
 Tosto che l' acqua a correr mette co,
 Non più Benaco, ma Mincio si chiama

59. Baco for Bacco, an imperfect rhyme: cf. VIII, 17. Bacchus was the son of the Theban Semele. Thebes came under the rule of the tyrant Creon.

61. Laco = lago.

62. Lamagna = Alemagna, i. e., Germania.

63. Tiralli = Tirol, 'Tyrol.' Benaco is Lake Garda; Garda rises on the east of it, Val Camonica is a long valley some distance west of it.

65. This very puzzling tiercet seems to mean that a certain Mt. Pennino, sometimes called Apennino, at the west of Benaco, has its lower slopes full of springs coming from the water of the lake.

67. There is a point in or near the lake where the dioceses of Trent, Brescia, and Verona meet, so that any one of the three bishops might segnar, make the sign of the cross, in that spot. Lines connecting the towns would make a triangle around the lake.

69. Fesse = jacesse.

70. Peschiera is on the south side of the lake, where the shore is low. Arnese meant, among other things, 'armor,' that is to say, a shield or bulwark to resist the Brescians and the Bergamasques.

75. Fassi = si fa.

76. Mette co, 'begins.' Co is a dialect word for capo.

Fino a Governo, dove cade in Po.
 Non molto ha corso, che trova una lama,
 Nella qual si distende e la impaluda, 80
 E suol di state talora esser grama.
 Quindi passando la vergine cruda
 Vide terra nel mezzo del pantano,
 Senza cultura, e d' abitanti nuda.
 Lì, per fuggire ogni consorzio umano, 85
 Ristette co' suoi servi a far sue arti,
 E visse, e vi lasciò suo corpo vano.
 Gli uomini poi che intorno erano sparti
 S' accolsero a quel loco, ch' era forte
 Per lo pantan che avea da tutte parti. 90
 Fer la città sopra quell' ossa morte ;
 E per colei che il loco prima elesse
 Mantova l' appellar senz' altra sorte.
 Già fur le genti sue dentro più spesse,
 Prima che la mattia di Casalodi 95
 Da Pinamonte inganno ricevesse.
 Però t' assenno, che se tu mai odi
 Orignar la mia terra altrimenti,
 La verità nulla menzogna frodi.'
 Ed io : 'Maestro, i tuoi ragionamenti 100
 Mi son sì certi, e prendon sì mia fede,

78. At Governo, or Governolo, the river Mincio empties into the Po.

79. Lama, 'flat.'

81. Grana, 'noisome.'

91. Fer = fecero.

93. Mantova, 'Mantua.' Sorte, 'augury.'

95. The Ghibelline Pinamonte Bonaccorsi treacherously advised the Guelf Count Alberto da Casalodi, lord of Mantua, to exile the nobles so as to win the favor of the people. Stupidly following this counsel, and thus depriving himself of his support, Casalodi was driven from the city, with much slaughter and banishment of the Guelfs.

97. Assenno, 'warn.'

99. 'No falsehood shall defraud the truth.'

Che gli altri mi sarian carboni spenti.
 Ma dimmi della gente che procede,
 Se tu ne vedi alcun degno di nota ;
 Chè solo a ciò la mia mente rifiede.' 105
 Allor mi disse : 'Quel che dalla gota
 Porge la barba in sulle spalle brune,
 Fu, quando Grecia fu di maschi vota
 Sì che appena rimaser per le cune,
 Augure, e diede il punto con Calcanta 110
 In Aulide a tagliar la prima fune.
 Euripilo ebbe nome, e così il canta
 L' alta mia Tragedia in alcun loco :
 Ben lo sai tu, che la sai tutta quanta.
 Quell' altro che ne' fianchi è così poco, 115
 Michele Scotto fu, che veramente
 Delle magiche frode seppe il gioco.

102. Sarian = sarebbero.

105. Rifiede, 'reverts.'

108. All the men of Greece had gone to the Trojan war.

113. Tragedia : cf. XVI, 127. The Æneid, which, according to l. 114, Dante knew by heart, 'sings' of this man così, i. e., with the name Eurypylus, in II, 114-5:

'Suspensi Eurypylum scitatum oracula Phœbi
Mittimus.'

The Greeks, in their doubt, send him to consult the oracle of Phœbus. In ll. 122-4 the augur Calchas is questioned about the will of the Gods. The two characters being thus associated in the poem, Dante inferred that Eurypylus, like Calchas, was a soothsayer, and that he assisted Calchas in determining 'the right moment for cutting the first cable at Aulis,' when the Greeks set sail for Troy. Cf. D' Ovidio, 147-9.

116. Michael Scot, the Scotch scholar, who lived many years at the court of Frederick II, had great repute as a sorcerer. Where Dante learned that he was 'spare in the flanks,' we do not know. Cf. J. Wood Brown, An Enquiry into the Life and Legend of Michael Scott, 1897.

118. Guido Bonatti of Forlì, a famous astrologer of the 13th century, was at the court of Frederick II and several other princes. Asdente, a poor cobbler of Parma, of simple and modest disposition, was known far and wide as a prophet; in Conv., IV, xvi, 59-71, Dante says that if, as some think, nobile meant 'essere da molti nominato e conosciuto . . .', Asdente, il calzolaio di Parma, sarebbe più nobile che alcuno suo cittadino.'

Che avere inteso al cuoio ed allo spago
 Ora vorrebbe, ma tardi si pente. 120
 Vedi le triste che lasciaron l' ago,
 La spuola e il fuso, e fecersi indovine ;
 Fecer malie con erbe e con imago.
 Ma vienne omai, chè già tiene il confine
 D' ambedue gli emisperi, e tocca l' onda 125
 Sotto Sibia, Caïno e le spine ;
 E già iernotte fu la luna tonda :
 Ben ten dee ricordar, chè non ti nocque
 Alcuna volta per la selva fonda.'
 Sì mi parlava, ed andavamo introcque. 130

123. Imago : wax or silver images of people were melted, to bring about their death. Tor. cites two trials for this crime in 1317 and 1319; in the latter it was asserted that one of the Visconti had sought, for the working of this spell, the aid of 'Master Dante Alighieri of Florence.'

124. The subject of tiene is Caino. The Man in the Moon, in Italian folklore, is Cain, who carries a bundle of thorns, 'the fruit of the ground.' The moon is directly over the dividing line between the Hemisphere of Land and the Hemisphere of Water; this circle passes close to Seville on the west and the Ganges on the east. For an observer in Jerusalem, the moon, which is nearly over Seville, is just setting; it is about 6 A. M. To indicate the time of day more precisely, Virgil adds that the moon is one night past the full — 'yesternight the moon was round,' when its light was of some use to Dante in the 'deep wood'; it sets, then, somewhat after sunrise.

130. In Vulg. El., I, xiii, 19, Dante cites introcque as a Florentine dialect word; it signifies 'meanwhile.'

CANTO XXI

ARGUMENT

IN nearly all mediæval portrayals of the lower world the grotesque runs riot. Dante, while not discarding this element, has brought it within narrow bounds. In the fifth bolgia, however, he gives free rein to the comic spirit, which dominates this canto and the next. Here, too, he reflects, as nowhere else, the popular Christian conception of Hell. As in the Visio Sancti Pauli, a devil arrives carrying a lost soul, — although the damned, according to Dante's regular plan, should sink unaided to their proper place by the weight of their own sin. The guardians of this ditch are the roguish fiends of folklore; they are more or less individualized, receiving fantastic names. Their generic designation is Malebranche, 'Badpaws'; Alichino is perhaps the French Hallequin, leader of the Wild Hunt; Farfarello seems to be a traditional demon-name; Barbariccia, Cagnazzo, Graffiaccane, Malacoda, Rubicante mean respectively 'Curlybeard,' 'Mean Dog,' 'Dogscratcher,' 'Badtail,' 'Rubicund.' Some of the appellations appear to be ludicrous distortions of the names of real people: there was a prominent Malabranca family in Rome; the Raffacani were numerous in Florence; a Pietro di Malacoda is attested; and Torraca cites, among others, Canasso, Scaldabrina, Ciriolo, Dragonetto, Biccicocco, Scormiglio, which are not unlike Cagnazzo, Calcabrina, Ciriatto, Draghignazzo, Libicocco, Scarmiglione. The whole humorous interlude, characterized by coarseness of incident and language, serves both to express contempt for the sinners and their earthly judges, and to afford a relief from the horrors that precede and follow.

The peculiarity of swindlers is that they do dirty work in the dark; and unless they remain under cover, they are seized by the officers of the law. So Dante's barrators, or grafters, pursue their eternal career beneath the surface of a ditch full of boiling pitch, and demons stand ready to snatch them with hooks, if they attempt to 'air themselves.' Cunning as they were on earth, they still incessantly scheme to cheat and elude their watchers; and these, just as tricky and far more vile and mischievous, are as eager to catch the innocent as the guilty. Dante himself barely evades their wiles, even Reason being temporarily deceived, though human instinct is apprehensive. The poet here introduces a bit of autobiography. It will be remembered that in 1302 he was accused (as a pretext for banishment) of several crimes, among them barratry committed when he was prior, in 1300; and was condemned to death by fire if taken in Florentine territory. In reality, then, as in the Comedy, he had a narrow escape from infernal machinations. The mention of the pitch leads to a lifelike description of the great arsenal, or shipyard, in Venice, famous during and after the Middle Ages, where the sailors, as is the habit of seafaring folk the world over, utilize the enforced idleness of winter to repair their damaged craft.

To entrap Dante and his too confiding guide, the leader of the Malebranche informs them that though the nearest bridge over the following valley is broken, the next ridge will afford them a safe passage. This arch was shattered, he says, when Christ descended into Hell, 1266 years ago yesterday, and five hours later in the day. Now Dante, in Conv., IV, xxiii, 92-110, after expressing the opinion that the age of thirty-five is the culminating point of the perfect human life, continues: 'E movemi questa ragione, che ottimamente naturato fue il nostro Salvatore Cristo, il quale volle morire nel trentaquattresimo anno della sua etade; chè non era convenevole la Divinità stare così in discredere. Nè da credere è ch' Egli non volesse dimorare in questa nostra vita al sommo, poichè stato c'era nel basso stato della puerizia. E ciò ne manifesta l'ora del giorno della sua morte, chè volle quella consomigliare colla vita sua; onde dice Luca che era quasi ora sesta quando morì, che è a dire lo colmo del dì. Onde si può comprendere per quello quasi che al trentacinquesimo anno di Cristo era il colmo della sua età.' Not only is this argument curiously lame, but its very foundation is false, for Luke does not state that 'era quasi ora sesta' when Christ died. What he does say (xxiii, 44-5), after recording the conversation between Jesus and the thief, is: 'And it was about the sixth hour, and there was a darkness over all the earth until the ninth hour. And the sun was darkened, and the veil of the temple was rent in the midst.' Matthew (xxvii, 45, 46, 51) and Mark (xv, 33, 34, 38) agree in putting the crucifixion and the beginning of the darkness at the sixth hour (noon), the death and the rending of the veil of the temple at the ninth (3 P. M.); and there is nothing in Luke's vaguer statement that is inconsistent with this. If Dante, when he wrote Canto XXI, still adhered to the opinion set forth in the Convivio, the colloquy between Virgil and the fiend occurred at 7 A. M., five hours before noon; if, on the other hand, he had rejected this untenable view, the hour was 10 A. M. It was, in any case, the morning of Saturday, April 9, the day following Good Friday, in the year 1300, counting from the Conception — 1266 years after the death of Christ, who expired, according to Dante's belief, at the age of thirty-three, just thirty-four years after the Conception.

Così di ponte in ponte, altro parlando
 Che la mia commedia cantar non cura,
 Venimmo, e tenevamo il colmo, quando
 Ristemmo per veder l' altra fessura
 Di Malebolge e gli altri pianti vani ; 5
 E vidila mirabilmente oscura.
 Quale nell' Arzanà de' Viniziani
 Bolle l' inverno la tenace pece
 A rimpalmar li legni lor non sani, —
 Chè navicar non ponno, e in quella vece 10
 Chi fa suo legno nuovo, e chi ristoppa
 Le coste a quel che più viaggi fece ;
 Chi ribatte da proda, e chi da poppa ;
 Altri fa remi, ed altri volge sarte ;
 Chi terzeruolo ed artimon rintoppa : 15
 Tal, non per foco ma per divina arte
 Bollia laggiuso una pegola spessa
 Che inviscava la ripa da ogni parte.
 Io vedea lei, ma non vedeva in essa
 Ma' che le bolle che il bollor levava, 20
 E gonfiar tutta, e riseder compressa.
 Mentr' io laggiù fisamente mirava,
 Lo Duca mio, dicendo : ' Guarda, guarda,'
 Mi trasse a sè del loco dov' io stava.
 Allor mi volsi come l' uom cui tarda 25
 Di veder quel che gli convien fuggire,

7. Quale connects with the tal of l. 16. Arzanà (Venetian) = arsenale.

10. In quella vece, 'instead.'

11. Ristoppa, 'caulks.'

15. Terzeruolo, 'foresail.' Artimon, 'mainsail.' Rintoppa, 'patches.'

17. Pegola, 'pitch.'

E cui paura subita sgagliarda,
 Che per veder non indugia il partire ;
 E vidi dietro a noi un diavol nero
 Correndo su per lo scoglio venire. 30
 Ahi quanto egli era nell' aspetto fiero !
 E quanto mi pareva nell' atto acerbo,
 Con l' ali aperte, e sopra il piè leggiere !
 L' omero suo, ch' era acuto e superbo,
 Carcava un peccator con ambo l' anche, 35
 E quei tenea de' piè ghermito il nerbo.
 Del nostro ponte disse, 'O Malebranche,
 Ecco un degli anzian di santa Zita.
 Mettetel sotto, ch' io torno per anche
 A quella terra ch' i' n' ho ben fornita : 40
 Ognun v' è barattier, fuor che Bonturo.
 Del no, per li denar, vi si fa ita.'
 Laggiù il buttò, e per lo scoglio duro
 Si volse, e mai non fu mastino sciolto
 Con tanta fretta a seguitar lo furo. 45
 Quei s' attuffò, e tornò su convolto ;
 Ma i demon, che del ponte avean coperchio,
 Gridar : 'Qui non ha loco il Santo Volto !

27. Sgagliarda, 'dismays.'

34. Superbo, 'high.' Omero is the object of carcava ; the subject is peccator.

36. Ghermito, 'gripped.' Nerbo, 'sinew.'

37. Del here, as frequently, means dal.

38. The chief magistrates of Lucca were called Ancients. Santa Zita, who lived in the 13th century, was the special patron saint of Lucca.

39. Anche, 'more.'

41. Fuor che Bonturo is ironical: Bonturo Dati, boss of Lucca, was the worst grafter of all; in 1300 he was at the height of his power.

42. The Latin ita was used in clerical language for 'yes.'

46. Convolto, 'hunched up.' His shape suggests to the humorous demons the attitude of prayer.

48. Non ha loco, 'has no business.' The 'Holy Face,' a very ancient image of Christ, ascribed to Nicodemus, was held in great veneration in Lucca, and was invoked in time of need. Cf. W. Foerster in Mélanges Chabaneau, 1-56.

Qui si nuota altrimenti che nel Serchio !
 Però se tu non vuoi de' nostri graffi, 50
 Non far sopra la pegola soperchio.
 Poi l' addentar con più di cento raffi ;
 Disser : ' Coperto convien che qui balli,
 Sì che, se puoi, nascosamente accaffi.'
 Non altrimenti i cuochi ai lor vassalli 55
 Fanno attuffare in mezzo la caldaia
 La carne cogli uncin, perchè non galli.
 Lo buon Maestro : ' Acciocchè non si paia
 Che tu ci sii,' mi disse, ' giù t' acquatta
 Dopo uno scheggio che alcun schermo t' àia ; 60
 E per nulla offension che mi sia fatta,
 Non temer tu, ch' io ho le cose conte,
 Perchè altra volta fui a tal baratta.'
 Poscia passò di là dal co del ponte,
 E com' ei giunse in su la ripa sesta, 65
 Mestier gli fu d' aver sicura fronte.
 Con quel furor e con quella tempesta
 Ch' escono i cani addosso al poverello,
 Che di subito chiede ove s' arresta,
 Usciron quei di sotto al ponticello, 70
 E volser contra lui tutti i roncigli ;

51. Far soperchio, 'project.'

52. Raffi, 'prongs.'

54. Accaffi, 'grab.'

55. Vassalli, 'scullions.'

57. Galli, 'float.'

59. T' acquatta, 'squat.'

60. Uno scheggio, 'a block' of stone on the bridge. — Aia = abbia.

62. Conte, 'known.'

63. Baratta, 'wrangle.'

64. Co = capo : cf. XX, 76.

69. He stops and begs where he is, instead of going up to the house.

71. Roncigli, 'grapples.'

Ma ei gridò : 'Nessun di voi sia fello.
 Innanzi che l' uncin vostro mi pigli,
 Traggasi avanti l' un di voi che m' oda,
 E poi d' arroncigliarmi si consigli.' 75
 Tutti gridaron : 'Vada Malacoda.'
 Per che un si mosse, e gli altri stetter fermi ;
 E venne a lui dicendo : 'Che gli approda?'
 'Credi tu, Malacoda, qui vedermi
 Esser venuto,' disse il mio Maestro, 80
 'Sicuro già da tutti vostri schermi,
 Senza voler divino e fato destro?
 Lasciane andar, chè nel cielo è voluto
 Ch' io mostri altrui questo cammin silvestro.'
 Allor gli fu l' orgoglio sì caduto, 85
 Che si lasciò cascar l' uncino ai piedi,
 E disse agli altri : 'Omai non sia feruto.'
 E il Duca mio a me : 'O tu, che siedi
 Tra gli scheggion del ponte quatto quatto,
 Sicuramente omai a me tu riedi.' 90
 Per ch' io mi mossi, ed a lui venni ratto ;
 E i diavoli si fecer tutti avanti,
 Sì ch' io temetti non tenesser patto.
 E così vid' io già temer li fanti
 Ch' uscivan patteggiati di Caprona, 95
 Veggendo sè tra nimici cotanti.
 Io m' accostai con tutta la persona
 Lungo il mio Duca, e non torceva gli occhi
 Dalla sembianza lor, ch' era non buona.

78. Approda, 'profits.'

89. Scheggion, 'splinters.' Quatto quatto, 'all asquat.'

95. Patteggiati, 'under safe-conduct.' Caprona, a town on the Arno, surrendered in 1289 to the troops of Lucca and Florence. It is evident from these lines that Dante was serving with the Florentines.

Ei chinavan li raffi, e : 'Vuoi che 'l tocchi,' 100
 Diceva l' un con l' altro, 'in sul groppone?'
 E rispondean : 'Sì, fa' che gliele accocchi.'
 Ma quel demonio che tenea sermone
 Col Duca mio, si volse tutto presto
 E disse : 'Posa, posa, Scarmiglione.' 105
 Poi disse a noi : 'Più oltre andar per questo
 Iscoglio non si può, perocchè giace
 Tutto spezzato al fondo l' arco sesto.
 E se l' andare avanti pur vi piace,
 Andatevene su per questa grotta ; 110
 Presso è un altro scoglio che via face.
 Ier, più oltre cinqu' ore che quest' otta,
 Mille dugento con sessanta sei
 Anni compìe, che qui la via fu rotta.
 Io mando verso là di questi miei 115
 A riguardar s' alcun se ne sciorina ;
 Gite con lor, ch' ei non saranno rei.'
 'Tratti avanti, Alichino e Calcabrina,'
 Cominciò egli a dire, 'e tu, Cagnazzo,
 E Barbariccia guidi la decina. 120
 Libicocco vegna oltre, e Draghignazzo,
 Ciriatto sannuto, e Graffiacane,
 E Farfarello, e Rubicante pazzo.

101. Groppone, 'rump.'

102. Gliele accocchi, 'give it to him.' In early Italian le was often used, after glie, as an invariable pronoun.

107. Iscoglio=scoglio.

110. Grotta, 'bank.'

112. Ier is the subject of compìe; the object is anni. — Più oltre, 'later.' Otta=ora: cf. V, 53.

116. Se ne sciorina, 'is airing himself': whether any of the sinners is emerging from the pitch.

117. Rei, 'wicked.'

120. Decina, 'squad of ten.'

122. Sannuto, 'tusked.'

Cercate intorno le boglienti pane.
 Costor sien salvi insino all' altro scheggio, 125
 Che tutto intero va sopra le tane.'
 'O me ! Maestro, che è quel che io veggio?'
 Diss' io : 'deh ! senza scorta andiamci soli,
 Se tu sai ir, ch' io per me non la chieggio.
 Se tu sei sì accorto come suoli, 130
 Non vedi tu ch' ei digrignan li denti,
 E colle ciglia ne minaccian duoli?'
 Ed egli a me : 'Non vo' che tu paventi.
 Lasciali digrignar pure a lor senno,
 Ch' ei fanno ciò per li lessi dolenti.' 135
 Per l' argine sinistro volta dienno ;
 Ma prima avea ciascun la lingua stretta
 Coi denti, verso lor duca per cenno,
 Ed egli avea del cul fatto trombetta.

124. Pane = panic, 'bird-lime,' 'glue.'

129. Chieggio = chiedo.

132. Duoli, 'harm.'

134. A lor senno, 'as they will.'

135. Lessi, 'boiled': the sinners in the pitch.

136. Dienno = diedero. They proceed along the bank, at the left of the bridge.

CANTO XXII

ARGUMENT

OPENING in mock heroic continuation of the gross theme immediately preceding, this canto goes on to describe the ways of grafters — who, it would seem, are especially rife in remote dependencies. It relates the capture of one of them by the infernal sleuth-hounds, and his clever escape from the domineering Barbariccia, the suspicious Cagnazzo, the over-confident Alichino, the quarrelsome Calcabrina, and their fierce comrades.

Io vidi già cavalier muover campo,
 E cominciare stormo, e far lor mostra,
 E talvolta partir per loro scampo ;
 Corridor vidi per la terra vostra,
 O Aretini, e vidi gir gualdane, 5
 Ferir torneamenti, e correr giostra,
 Quando con trombe, e quando con campane,
 Con tamburi e con cenni di castella,
 E con cose nostrali e con istrane :
 Nè già con sì diversa cennamella 10
 Cavalier vidi muover, nè pedoni,
 Nè nave a segno di terra o di stella.
 Noi andavam con li dieci dimoni.
 Ahi fiera compagnia ! ma nella chiesa
 Coi santi, ed in taverna coi ghiottoni. 15

2. Stormo, 'battle.' Mostra, 'muster.'

4. Corridor, 'scouts.' Dante was present at the battle of Campaldino, in 1289, when the forces of Arezzo (the 'Aretines') were defeated by those of Florence and Lucca.

5. Gualdane, 'foraging parties.'

8. Cenni, 'signals.'

9. Nostrali, 'native.' Istrane, 'foreign.'

10. Cennamella, 'pipe.' Diversa here, as often, means 'strange.'

15. This sounds like a popular proverb. Cf. Ps. xviii, 26: 'With the pure

Pure alla pegola era la mia intesa,
 Per veder della bolgia ogni contegno,
 E della gente ch' entro v' era incesa.
 Come i delfini, quando fanno segno
 Ai marinar con l' arco della schiena, 20
 Che s' argomentin di campar lor legno,
 Talor così ad alleggiar la pena
 Mostrava alcun dei peccatori il dosso,
 E nascondeva in men che non balena.
 E come all' orlo dell' acqua d' un fosso 25
 Stanno i ranocchi pur col muso fuori,
 Sì che celano i piedi e l' altro grosso,
 Sì stavan d' ogni parte i peccatori ;
 Ma come s' appressava Barbariccia,
 Così si ritraean sotto i bollori. 30
 Io vidi, ed anco il cor me n' accapriccia,
 Uno aspettar così, com' egli incontra
 Che una rana rimane, ed altra spiccia.
 E Graffiacan, che gli era più d' incontra,
 Gli arroncigliò le impegolate chiome, 35
 E trassel su, che mi parve una lontra.
 Io sapea già di tutti quanti il nome,
 Sì li notai quando furono eletti,
 E poi che si chiamaro, attesi come.
 'O Rubicante, fa' che tu gli metti 40

thou wilt shew thyself pure; and with the froward thou wilt shew thyself froward'; see also II Sam. xii, 26.

16. Pure, 'only.' Intesa, 'attention.'

17. Contegno, 'condition.'

21. S' argomentin, 'take measures.' The belief that dolphins warn sailors of an approaching storm was very common: see Tor.

22. Alleggiar, 'alleviate.'

32. Egli incontra, 'it happens.'

33. Spiccia, 'hurries off.'

37. Dante explains how it is that he knows the name of this demon.

39. 'And when they were called by name, I noticed how.'

Gli unghioni addosso sì che tu lo scuoi,⁴⁶
 Gridavan tutti insieme i maledetti.
 Ed io : 'Maestro mio, fa', se tu puoi,
 Che tu sappi chi è lo sciagurato
 Venuto a man degli avversari suoi.'⁴⁷ 45
 Lo Duca mio gli s' accostò allato,
 Domandollo ond' ei fosse, e quei rispose :
 'Io fui del regno di Navarra nato.
 Mia madre a servo d' un signor mi pose,
 Che m' avea generato d' un ribaldo 50
 Distruggitor di sè e di sue cose.
 Poi fui famiglio del buon re Tebaldo ;
 Quivi mi misi a far baratteria,
 Di che io rendo ragione in questo caldo.'⁴⁸
 E Ciriatto, a cui di bocca uscì 55
 D' ogni parte una sanna come a porco,
 Gli fe' sentir come l' una sdrucìa.
 Tra male gatte era venuto il sorco ;
 Ma Barbariccia il chiuse con le braccia,
 E disse : 'State in là, mentr' io lo inforco.'⁴⁹ 60
 Ed al Maestro mio volse la faccia :
 'Domanda,' disse, 'ancor, se più desii
 Saper da lui, prima ch' altri il disfaccia.'⁵⁰
 Lo Duca : 'Dunque or di', degli altri rii

46. Allato, 'beside.'

48. Some of the early commentators ascribe to this man from Navarre the name of Ciampolo or Giampolo, but we really know of him only what Dante tells us.

50. Ribaldo, 'rogue.'

52. Thibaut V, count of Champagne, son-in-law of Louis IX of France, was king of Navarre in the middle of the 13th century. — Famiglio, 'retainer.'

54. Rendo ragione, 'pay reckoning.' Cf. Luke xvi, 2: 'redde rationem,' 'give an account.'

58. Sorco = sorcio.

60. Lo inforco, 'hold him forked,' i. e., in my clutches.

64. Rii = rei.

 Così foss' io ancor con lui coperto,
 Ch' io non temerei unghia nè uncino.'
 E Libicocco : 'Troppo avem sofferto,' 70
 Disse, e preseglì il braccio col roncioglio,
 Sì che, stracciando, ne portò un lacerto.
 Draghignazzo anco i volle dar di piglio
 Giuso alle gambe ; onde il decurio loro
 Si volse intorno intorno con mal piglio. 75
 Quand' elli un poco rappaciatì foro,
 A lui, che ancor mirava sua ferita,
 Domandò il Duca mio senza dimoro :
 'Chi fu colui, da cui mala partita
 Di' che facesti per venire a proda?' 80
 Ed ei rispose : 'Fu frate Gomita,
 Quel di Gallura, vassel d' ogni froda,
 Ch' ebbe i nimici di suo donno in mano,
 E fe' sì lor, che ciascun se ne loda :

65. Latino, 'Italian.'

67. Poco è, 'a little while ago.' Di là vicino, 'from near there,' i. e., from an island near Italy.

72. Lacerto, 'sinew.'

73. I = gli. Dar di piglio, 'lay hold': cf. XII, 105.

74. Decurio, 'decurion,' leader of the decina.

75. Piglio, 'look.' In Italian, as in French, words of identical form may rhyme together, if the sense is different.

76. Rappaciatì, pacified.' Foro = jurono.

78. Dimoro, 'delay.'

79. Mala partita, 'luckless parting': cf. II, 66-8.

82. The Pisans, who conquered Sardinia, divided it into four provinces, or giudicati, Gallura, Logudoro, Arborea, and Cagliari, each of which was governed by a giudice. The early commentators say that the governor of Gallura, at the time of this Friar Gomita, was Nino Visconti, who appears in Purg. VIII, 53. It is said that Gomita was hanged.

83. Donno, 'master.'

84. Se ne loda, 'is thankful to him for it.'

Denar si tolse, e lasciolti di piano, 85
 Sì com' ei dice ; e negli altri offizi anche

 Non s' apparecchi a grattarmi la tigna.'
 E il gran proposto, volto a Farfarello,
 Che stralunava gli occhi per ferire, 95
 Disse : ' Fatti in costà, malvagio uccello.'
 . ' Se voi volete vedere o udire,'
 Ricominciò lo spaurato appresso,
 'Toschi o Lombardi, io ne farò venire.
 Ma stien le male branche un poco in cesso, 100
 Sì ch' ei non teman delle lor vendette ;
 Ed io, sedendo in questo loco stesso,
 Per un ch' io son, ne farò venir sette,
 Quand' io sufolerò, com' è nostr' uso
 Di fare allor che fùori alcun si mette.' 105
 Cagnazzo a cotal mòto levò il muso,
 Crollando il capo, e disse : ' Odi malizia

85. Lasciolti di piano, 'let them go without legal process.' Di piano = Latin de planu : cf. Bull., IX, 257.

88. Usa, 'frequents.' Michel Zanche is not mentioned in any document; he is said to have been vicar of King Enzo of Sardinia, son of Frederick II. From XXXIII, 144, we learn that he was murdered by Branca Doria.

92. Anco, 'more.'

94. Proposto, 'provost.'

98. Spaurato, 'reassured.'

100. In cesso, 'aside.'

103. 'Seven times as many as I am.'

104. Sufolerò, 'I shall whistle.' He says it is the custom, among these souls, that one shall peep out, and whistle if the coast is clear.

107. Malizia, 'trick.'

Ch' egli ha pensata per gittarsi giuso.¹¹⁰
 Ond' ei ch' avea lacciuoli a gran divizia,
 Rispose : 'Malizioso son io troppo,
 Quand' io procuro a' miei maggior tristizia.'¹¹⁰
 Alichin non si tenne, e di rintoppo
 Agli altri disse a lui : 'Se tu ti cali,
 Io non ti verrò dietro di galoppo,
 Ma batterò sopra la pece l' ali.¹¹⁵
 Lascisi il colle, e sia la ripa scudo,
 A veder se tu sol più di noi vali.'
 O tu che leggi, udirai nuovo ludo !
 Ciascun dall' altra costa gli occhi volse ;
 Quei prima, ch' a ciò fare era più crudo.¹²⁰
 Lo Navarrese ben suo tempo colse,
 Fermò le piante a terra, ed in un punto
 Saltò, e dal proposto lor si sciolse.
 Di che ciascun di colpa fu compunto,
 Ma quei più, che cagion fu del difetto ;¹²⁵
 Però si mosse, e gridò : 'Tu se' giunto.'
 Ma poco i valse ; chè l' ali al sospetto
 Non potero avanzar : quegli andò sotto,

110. Lacciuoli, 'snares,' i. e., wiles. Divizia, 'abundance.'
 111. He tries to put the demons off the scent: 'To be sure, I am over tricky, when I get my fellows into worse trouble.'

112. Di rintoppo, 'contrary.'

115. That is, 'I shall not run after thee, but fly.'

116. Il colle is the high edge of the inner bank of the 5th bolgia. The demons are to go a little way down the slope toward the 6th valley, so that the bank will hide them from the sinners in the pitch.

118. Ludo, 'sport.'

119. They turned their backs on the 5th bolgia, to go toward the slope of the 6th.

120. Quei: Cagnazzo. Crudo, 'averse.'

123. Proposto, 'purpose.'

124. Di colpa compunto, 'stung with blame,' i. e., ashamed.

125. Quei: Alichino. Dijetto, 'loss.'

127. I = gli. 'Wings could not outfly fear.'

128. Quegli: the sinner.

E quei drizzò, volando suso, il petto.
 Non altrimenti l' anitra di botto, 130
 Quando il falcon s' appressa, giù s' attuffa,
 Ed ei ritorna su crucciato e rotto.
 Irato Calcabrina della buffa,
 Volando dietro gli tenne, invaghito
 Che quei campasse, per aver la zuffa. 135
 E come il barattier fu disparito,
 Così volse gli artigli al suo compagno,
 E fu con lui sopra il fosso ghermito.
 Ma l' altro fu bene sparvier grifagno
 Ad artigliar ben lui, ed ambedue 140
 Cadder nel mezzo del bollente stagno.
 Lo caldo sghermitor subito fue ;
 Ma però di levarsi era niente,
 Sì aveano inviscate l' ali sue.
 Barbariccia, con gli altri suoi dolente, 145
 Quattro ne fe' volar dall' altra costa
 Con tutti i raffi, ed assai prestamente,
 Di qua, di là, discesero alla posta ;
 Porser gli uncini verso gl' impaniati,
 Ch' eran già cotti dentro dalla crosta. 150
 E noi lasciammo lor così impacciati.

129. Quei : Alichino, who plunged after the fugitive, and barely threw back his head and chest in time to escape going under with him.

132. Rotto, 'ruffled.'

133. Buffa, 'flout.'

134. Invaghito, 'eager' that the sinner should escape, so that he might have a 'scuffle' with Alichino.

138. Fu ghermito, 'grappled.'

139. Griagno, 'full grown': the term was applied to hawks caught toward the beginning of winter.

142. The heat was an 'ungrappler.'

143. 'But for all that there was no getting out.'

147. Con tutti i raffi, 'hooks and all.'

149. Impaniati, 'beglued.'

150. La crosta, 'their hides.'

CANTO XXIII

ARGUMENT

THE scene just witnessed reminds Dante of a 'favola d' Isopo,' the story of the frog and the rat. The tale exists in Greek; but the name Ysopus was given in the Middle Ages to any fable collection, and the story in question occurs in several. A frog, having offered to tow a rat across a stream, ties itself to the animal, jumps in with it, and then treacherously tries to dive to the bottom, expecting to drown its companion. While the rat is struggling to keep afloat, a kite, seeing the disturbance, swoops down and carries off both creatures. The beginning and the end of the fable, Dante says, are exactly like the recent episode: that is, the fall of the two grappling fiends into the pitch is a reproduction of the plunge of the tethered quadrupeds into the water; and their rescue, as they are hooked out by their mates, is a counterpart of the seizure of the frog and the rat by the kite.

Our travellers have a narrow escape from the angry devils. Virgil, taking Dante in his arms, slides on his back down the precipitous bank into the sixth bolgia, where they are safe from pursuit. They find themselves in the valley of the hypocrites. 'Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites!' says Mat. xxiii, 27, 'for ye are like unto whited sepulchres, which indeed appear beautiful outward, but are within full of dead men's bones, and of all uncleanness.' Such is Dante's conception of hypocrisy. In slow and solemn file the souls march by — 'gente dipinta,' painted people, beautiful outward with bright gold. They are clad in cloaks of the cut affected by the monks of Cologne; and these garments, gilded on the outside, are made of crushing lead. Their cowls hang massive and heavy over their eyes, their heads are bowed down by the weight, they can scarcely drag themselves along. Their enforced decorum, measured pace, and sidelong glances are all in character; and so is the pious platitude which one of them sententiously volunteers when Virgil discovers how he has been tricked by the Malebranche. The exact form of their punishment was probably suggested to Dante by the Magnæ Derivationes of Ugucione da Pisa, who defines 'ypocrita' as 'superauratus,' taking it from ὑπέρ and χρυσός.

On the floor of the ditch, pegged down at intervals in the pathway, where the heavy procession tramples on them as it passes, are

Caiaphas, Annas, and the other false councillors who favored the sacrifice of Christ. Thinking to destroy him, they really crucified their own souls, exposing themselves to the perpetual obloquy of mankind, and assuming the burden of blame for all subsequent hypocrisy. Over their bolgia the bridges are broken down, shattered by the great earthquake that accompanied the Saviour's descent. Here again, in l. 137, the word ruina is used. An impressive picture is that of Virgil 'marvelling' over Caiaphas, who was not there at the time of his previous journey through Hell. The crime of this arch-hypocrite passes the comprehension of Reason.

For the 'favola d' Isopo,' see K. McKenzie in The Seventeenth Annual Report of the Dante Society of Cambridge, Massachusetts (1898), pp. 6-13.

Taciti, soli e senza compagnia,
 N' andavam l' un dinanzi e l' altro dopo,
 Come frati minor vanno per via.
 Volto era in sulla favola d' Isopo
 Lo mio pensier per la presente rissa, 5
 Dov' ei parlò della rana e del topo :
 Chè più non si pareggia mo ed issa,
 Che l' un con l' altro fa, se ben s' accoppia
 Principio e fine con la mente fissa.
 E come l' un pensier dell' altro scoppia, 10
 Così nacque di quello un altro poi,
 Che la prima paura mi fe' doppia.
 Io pensava così : 'Questi per noi
 Sono scherniti, e con danno e con beffa
 Sì fatta, ch' assai credo che lor noi. 15
 Se l' ira sopra il mal voler s' agguetta,
 Ei ne verranno dietro più crudeli
 Che 'l cane a quella lepre ch' egli acceffa.'

3. Frati minor : Franciscans.

7. Mo and issa are synonyms, meaning 'now.'

15. Noi is the present subjunctive of noiare : 'vexes.'

16. S' agguetta, 'is wound' into the hank, i. e., is added.

18. Acceffa, 'snaps up.'

Già mi sentia tutti arricciar li peli
 Della paura, e stava indietro intento, 20
 Quando io dissi : 'Maestro, se non celi
 Te e me tostamente, i' ho pavento
 Di Malebranche. Noi gli avem già dietro.
 Io gl' immagino sì, che già li sento.'
 E quei : 'S' io fossi d' impiombato vetro, 25
 L' imagine di fuor tua non trarrei
 Più tosto a me, che quella d' entro impetro.
 Pur mo venian li tuoi pensier tra i miei
 Con simile atto e con simile faccia,
 Sì che d' intrambi un sol consiglio fei. 30
 S' egli è che sì la destra costa giaccia
 Che noi possiam nell' altra bolgia scendere,
 Noi fuggirem l' imaginata caccia.'
 Già non compìe di tal consiglio rendere,
 Ch' io gli vidi venir con l' ali tese, 35
 Non molto lungi, per volerne prendere.
 Lo Duca mio di subito mi prese,
 Come la madre ch' al romore è desta
 E vede presso a sè le fiamme accese,
 Che prende il figlio e fugge e non s' arresta — 40
 Avendo più di lui che di sè cura —
 Tanto che solo una camicia vesta.
 E giù dal collo della ripa dura
 Supin si diede alla pendente roccia,

25. If I were a mirror ('leaded glass'), I should not catch thy bodily reflection more swiftly than I now receive the reflection of thy thought (thine inner image). Cf. Prov. xxvii, 19.

31. S' egli è, 'if it be.' The 'right bank' is the declivity leading to the 6th bolgia. — Giaccia, 'slopes.'

32, 34, 36 are versi sdruciolli: cf. XV, 1.

42. Tanto, 'long enough,' is to be connected with the non s' arresta of l. 40. Fires were not uncommon in Dante's time

44. Supin si diede: he lay on his back and let himself go.

Che l' un dei lati all' altra bolgia tura. 45
 Non corse mai sì tosto acqua per doccia
 A volger rota di molin terragno,
 Quand' ella più verso le pale approccia,
 Come il Maestro mio per quel vivagno,
 Portandosene me sopra il suo petto, 50
 Come suo figlio, non come compagno.
 Appena fur li piè suoi giunti al letto
 Del fondo giù ch' ei furono in sul colle
 Sopresso noi ; ma non gli era sospetto,
 Chè l' alta provvidenza, che lor volle 55
 Porre ministri della fossa quinta,
 Poder di partirs' indi a tutti tolle.
 Laggiù trovammo una gente dipinta,
 Che giva intorno assai con lenti passi
 Piangendo, e nel sembiante stanca e vinta. 60
 Egli avean cappe con cappucci bassi
 Dinanzi agli occhi, fatti della taglia
 Che in Cologna per li monaci fassi.
 Di fuor dorate son, sì ch' egli abbaglia ;
 Ma dentro tutte piombo, e gravi tanto 65
 Che Federico le mettea di paglia.

45. Tura, 'stops': the cliff encloses the valley on the outer side.

46. Doccia, 'sluice.'

47. Molin terragno, 'land mill,' is one situated on the bank of a mill-pond, as opposed to one built on a boat or raft in a river.

48. At the moment when the water pours down on the paddles of the mill-wheel.

49. Vivagno, 'border,' i. e., bank.

54. Sopresso, or sovresso, 'just above': esso, originally a pronoun or pronominal adjective, came to be attached to prepositions as an intensive particle.

— Non gli era sospetto, 'there was no fear': gli = vi.

57. Poder = potere, 'power.' Tolle = toglie.

64. Egli, 'it.'

66. That those which Frederick II put upon criminals were, in comparison with these, as light as straw. The old commentators say that Frederick had offenders against the throne dressed in leaden cloaks, which were then melted upon them; this statement is not corroborated by any documentary evidence.

O in eterno faticoso manto !
 Noi ci volgemma ancor pure a man manca
 Con loro insieme, intenti al tristo pianto ;
 Ma per lo peso quella gente stanca 70
 Venia sì pian, che noi eravam nuovi
 Di compagnia ad ogni muover d' anca.
 Per ch' io al Duca mio : ' Fa' che tu trovi
 Alcun ch' al fatto o al nome si conosca,
 E gli occhi sì andando intorno muovi.' 75
 Ed un che intese la parola Tosca
 Diretro a noi gridò : ' Tenete i piedi,
 Voi che correte sì per l' aura fosca.
 Forse ch' avrai da me quel che tu chiedi.'
 Onde il Duca si volse e disse : ' Aspetta, 80
 E poi secondo il suo passo procedi.'
 Ristetti, e vidi duo mostrar gran fretta
 Dell' animo, col viso, d' esser meco ;
 Ma tardavagli il carico e la via stretta.
 Quando fur giunti, assai con l' occhio bieco 85
 Mi rimiraron senza far parola ;
 Poi si volsero in sè, e dicean seco :
 ' Costui par vivo all' atto della gola.
 E s' ei son morti, per qual privilegio
 Vanno scoperti della grave stola?' 90
 Poi disser me : ' O Tosco, ch' al collegio
 Degl' ipocriti tristi se' venuto,

83. Their 'haste of spirit' could be manifested only by the expression of their faces.

84. Some of the bolge are evidently very much narrower than others: cf. XXX, 87.

85. Bieco, 'sidelong': their heavy, lowered hoods prevented them from looking directly.

91. Collegio, 'college,' i. e., company.

92. Ipcriti tristi: cf. Mat. vi, 16: 'be not, as the hypocrites, of a sad countenance' — 'sicut hypocritæ tristes.'

Dir chi tu sei non avere in dispregio.⁹³
 Ed io a loro : 'Io fui nato e cresciuto
 Sopra il bel fiume d' Arno alla gran villa,⁹⁵
 E son col corpo ch' i' ho sempre avuto.
 Ma voi chi siete, a cui tanto distilla,
 Quant' io veggio, dolor giù per le guance?
 E che pena è in voi che sì sfavilla?'
 E l' un rispose a me : 'Le cappe rance¹⁰⁰
 Son di piombo sì grosse che li pesi
 Fan così cigolar le lor bilance.
 Frati Godenti fummo, e Bolognesi,
 Io Catalano e questi Loderingo
 Nomati, e da tua terra insieme presi,¹⁰⁵
 Come suole esser tolto un uom solingo
 Per conservar sua pace, e fummo tali
 Ch' ancor si pare intorno dal Gardingo.'
 Io cominciai: 'O frati, i vostri mali . . .'

93. Non avere in dispregio, 'scorn not.'

95. Villa, 'city': cf. I, 109.

97. The subject of distilla, 'distills,' is tanto dolor.

100. Rance, 'orange.'

102. The heavily burdened sinners, as they moan, are compared to scales so overweighted that they creak.

103. The brethren of the lay order of Beata Maria, defenders of the faith and of justice, were not required to lead an ascetic life, and were nicknamed 'Jolly Friars.'

104. Catalano de' Malavolti was a Guelf, Loderingo degli Andalò was a Ghibelline. Both were men of great authority, mayors of several cities. The second was one of the founders of the order of Beata Maria.

106. It was customary in Florence, as in many other cities, to choose as mayor for a term of one year some distinguished outsider, who was called podestà or conservator pacis. In 1266, however, instead of 'a single man,' two mayors, one from each party, were elected as a compromise. It was believed that they conspired to advance their own interests and to favor the Guelfs, who were returning to power after the battle of Benevento. It is now known that they were placed in office and controlled by Pope Clement IV. See Bull., X, 356.

108. Gardingo was the name of an old Longobard fortress in Florence. Near it were the houses of the Uberti, which were destroyed in 1266, when the Ghibellines left the city, and their site was turned into a public square.

109. The movement of this line is exactly like that of V, 110, and VI, 58,

Ma più non dissi ; ch' all' occhio mi corse 110
 Un, crocifisso in terra con tre pali.
 Quando mi vide, tutto si distorse,
 Soffiando nella barba coi sospiri.
 E il frate Catalan, ch' a ciò s' accorse,
 Mi disse : ' Quel confitto che tu miri 115
 Consigliò i Farisei che convenia
 Porre un uom per lo popolo a' martiri.
 Attraversato e nudo è nella via,
 Come tu vedi, ed è mestier ch' ei senta
 Qualunque passa com' ei pesa pria. 120
 Ed a tal modo il suocero si stenta
 In questa fossa, e gli altri del concilio
 Che fu per li Giudei mala sementa.'
 Allor vid' io maravigliar Virgilio
 Sopra colui ch' era disteso in croce 125
 Tanto vilmente nell' eterno esilio.
 Poscia drizzò al frate cotal voce :
 ' Non vi dispiaccia, se vi lece, dirci
 Se alla man destra giace alcuna foce
 Onde noi ambedue possiamo uscirci 130
 Senza costringer degli angeli neri
 Che vegnan d' esto fondo a dipartirci.'

in which Dante voices his compassion for Francesca and Ciaccio. We may infer that he was about to express pity, probably ironical, for the Frati godenti. See D' Ovidio, 86-7.

112. Si distorse: he writhed with shame at being seen by a living man.

114. Catalano, who could not see so far ahead, 'took notice from that,' i. e., from the puffing.

117. John xi, 49, 50: 'And one of them, named Caiaphas, being the high priest that same year, said unto them, Ye know nothing at all, nor consider that it is expedient for us, that one man should die for the people, and that the whole nation perish not.' So xviii, 14.

121. Il suocero, Annas: John xviii, 13, 24. Si stenta, 'is racked.'

122. Il concilio: John xi, 47-53.

123. 'Seed of ill for the Jews,' as Jesus had prophesied: Luke xxiii, 27-31.

Rispose adunque : 'Più che tu non sperì
 S' appressa un sasso che dalla gran cerchia
 Si muove, e varca tutti i vallon ferì, 135
 Salvo ch' a questo è rotto, e nol coperchia.
 Montar potrete su per la ruina
 Che giace in costa e nel fondo soperchia.'
 Lo Duca stette un poco a testa china,
 Poi disse : 'Mal contava la bisogna 140
 Colui che i peccator di là uncina.'
 E il frate : 'Io udi' già dire a Bologna
 Del Diavol vizii assai, tra i quali udi'
 Ch' egli è bugiardo e padre di menzogna.'
 Appresso il Duca a gran passi sen gî, 145
 Turbato un poco d' ira nel sembiante ;
 Ond' io dagl' incarcati mi parti'
 Dietro alle poste delle care piante.

134. Un sasso : a ridge, similar to the one they have followed as far as this bolgia. La gran cerchia, 'the great belt': the circular precipice that encloses all Malebolge.

138. Soperchia, 'heaps up.'

140. Bisogna, 'business.' Colui is Malacoda.

143, 145, 147 are versi tronchi : see IV, 56.

144. John viii, 44.

148. Poste, 'prints.' Piante, 'feet.'

CANTO XXIV

ARGUMENT

FOR a moment, thanks to the dainty simile of the frost with which this canto opens, we are lifted out beneath the open sky into the bracing air of winter. Then the horrors redouble. In this seventh bolgia we are shown the most weird and blood-curdling sights that Hell affords. The thief, when he plies his trade, abdicates his human nature and transforms himself into a sly, creeping snake. The serpent, then, is the symbol of thievery; and so this sin is depicted, through two cantos, with an astounding variety of gruesome detail.

For the shortening nights, see Moore, III, 53 and 150. For Vanni Fucci, see A. Chiappelli, Dalla Trilogia di Dante, 1905, 226. For the prophecy at the end of the canto, see F. Torraca in Rassegna critica della letteratura italiana, VIII, 1; and, for a different interpretation, A. Bassermann in Giorn. dant., XII, 97; cf. Chiappelli, 270-275.

In quella parte del giovinetto anno
Che il sole i crin sotto l' Aquario temprà
E già le notti al mezzodì sen vanno,
Quando la brina in sulla terra assempra
L' imagine di sua sorella bianca, — 5
Ma poco dura alla sua penna temprà, —
Lo villanello, a cui la roba manca,
Si leva e guarda, e vede la campagna
Biancheggiar tutta, ond' ei si batte l' anca,

2. The sun is in Aquarius (cooling his locks in the spray) approximately from January 21 to February 21.

3. From December 21 (the winter solstice) to June 21 (the summer solstice) the nights grow shorter in the northern hemisphere, longer in the southern. In January and February, then, the nights are beginning to 'pass to the south.' As the sun moves northward, the night moves southward.

4. Assempra, 'copies': cf. V. N., I, 6. The 'white sister' of the hoar frost is the snow.

6. 'The temper of her pen lasts but a little while,' i. e., she cannot long continue her copying: in other words, the frost soon melts.

7. Villanello, 'rustic.' Roba, 'provision.'

9. Si batte l' anca, 'smites his thigh,' thinking the ground is covered with snow. Smiting the thigh was a common expression of grief in ancient times (percutere femur) and in the Middle Ages.

Ritorna in casa, e qua e là si lagna, 10
 Come il tapin che non sa che si faccia ;
 Poi riede, e la speranza ringavagna,
 Veggendo il mondo aver cangiata faccia
 In poco d' ora, e prende suo vincastro
 E fuor le pecorelle a pascere caccia : 15
 Così mi fece sbigottir lo Mastro,
 Quand' io gli vidi sì turbar la fronte,
 E così tosto al mal giunse lo impiastro.
 Chè come noi venimmo al guasto ponte,
 Lo Duca a me si volse con quel piglio 20
 Dolce ch' io vidi prima a piè del monte.
 Le braccia aperse, dopo alcun consiglio
 Eletto seco, riguardando prima
 Ben la ruina, e diedemi di piglio.
 E come quei che adopera ed estima, 25
 Che sempre par che innanzi si proveggia,
 Così, levando me su ver la cima
 D' un ronchion, avvisava un' altra scheggia,
 Dicendo : 'Sopra quella poi t' aggrappa ;
 Ma tenta pria s' è tal ch' ella ti reggia.' 30
 Non era via da vestito di cappa,
 Chè noi a pena, ei lieve, ed io sospinto,
 Potevam su montar di chiappa in chiappa.
 E se non fosse che da quel precinto

11. Tapin, 'wretch.'

12. Ringavagna, 'puts into his basket again,' i. e., picks up.

14. Vincastro, 'crook.'

16. Mastro = maestro.

20. Piglio, 'look': cf. XXII, 75. The monte is that of the first canto.

28. Ronchion, 'rock.' Scheggia, 'fragment.' These are pieces of the broken bridge.

30. Reggia = regga.

33. Chiappa, 'jut.'

34. Precinto, 'quarter.' They are climbing up the inner bank, which is lower than the outer.

Più che dall' altro era la costa corta, 35
 Non so di lui, ma io sarei ben vinto.
 Ma perchè Malebolge in ver la porta
 Del bassissimo pozzo tutta pende,
 Lo sito di ciascuna valle porta
 Che l' una costa surge e l' altra scende. 40
 Noi pur venimmo alfine in sulla punta
 Onde l' ultima pietra si scoscende.
 La lena m' era del polmon sì munta,
 Quando fui su, ch' io non potea più oltre,
 Anzi mi assisi nella prima giunta. 45
 'Omai convien che tu così ti spoltre,'
 Disse il Maestro, 'chè sedendo in piuma
 In fama non si vien, nè sotto coltre,
 Senza la qual chi sua vita consuma,
 Cotal vestigio in terra di sè lascia, 50
 Qual fummo in aer ed in acqua la schiuma.
 E però leva su, vinci l' ambascia
 Con l' animo che vince ogni battaglia,
 Se col suo grave corpo non s' accascia.
 Più lunga scala convien che si saglia ; 55
 Non basta da costoro esser partito.
 Se tu m' intendi, or fa' sì che ti vaglia.'

38. Pende, 'slants.'

39. Porta, 'requires.'

40. 'That one bank (the outer) be high, the other (the inner) be low.'

42. Si scoscende, 'is split off': where the top of the heap of fragments joins the solid rock of the ridge.

43. Munta, 'milked,' i. e., pumped: cf. XII, 136.

46. Ti spoltre, 'cast off sloth.'

49. La qual, sc., jama.

51. Cf. Wisdom v, 14.

52. Ambascia, 'panting.'

54. S' accascia, 'is crushed.' Cf. Æn., VI, 731: 'quantum non noxia corpora tardant.'

55. The climb from the centre of the earth to the top of Purgatory. It is not enough to quit sin: we must attain virtue.

Leva' mi allor, mostrandomi fornito
 Meglio di lena ch' io non mi sentia ;
 E dissi : 'Va', ch' io son forte ed ardito.' 60
 Su per lo scoglio prendemmo la via,
 Ch' era ronchioso, stretto e malagevole,
 Ed erto più assai che quel di pria.
 Parlando andava per non parer fievole,
 Onde una voce uscìo dall' altro fosso, 65
 A parole formar disconvenevole.
 Non so che disse, ancor che sopra il dosso
 Fossi dell' arco già che varca quivi ;
 Ma chi parlava ad ira pareva mosso.
 Io era volto in giù, ma gli occhi vivi 70
 Non potean ire al fondo per l' oscuro ;
 Per ch' io : 'Maestro, fa' che tu arrivi
 Dall' altro cinghio, e dismantiam lo muro ;
 Chè com' i' odo quinci e non intendo,
 Così giù veggio, e niente affiguro.' 75
 'Altra risposta,' disse, 'non ti rendo,
 Se non lo far ; chè la domanda onesta
 Si dee seguir coll' opera tacendo.'
 Noi discendemmo il ponte dalla testa
 Dove s' aggiunge coll' ottava ripa, 80
 E poi mi fu la bolgia manifesta ;

62. Ronchioso, 'craggy.' Ll. 62, 64, 66 are versi sdruciolli; see XV, 1.

63. This ridge is much higher than the one they followed as far as the 5th bolgia.

64. Fievole, 'feeble.'

65. One would expect quando rather than onde.

66. Disconvenevole, 'unsuited.'

67. Ancor che, 'although.'

73. Cinghio, 'belt': the inner bank of the bolgia just crossed. Muro: the descent from the ridge to the top of the bank. This inner bank being low, they will be comparatively near the bottom of the ditch.

75. Affiguro = raffiguro.

79. Dalla testa, 'at the end.'

E vidivi entro terribile stipa
 Di serpenti, e di sì diversa mena
 Che la memoria il sangue ancor mi scipa.
 Più non si vanti Libia con sua rena ; 85
 Chè, se chelidri, iaculi e faree
 Produce, e cencri con amfisibena,
 Nè tante pestilenzie nè sì ree
 Mostrò giammai con tutta l' Etiopia,
 Nè con ciò che di sopra il mar rosso èe. 90
 Tra questa cruda e tristissima copia
 Correvan genti nude e spaventate,
 Senza sperar pertugio o elitropia.
 Con serpi le man dietro avean legate ;
 Quelle ficcavan per le ren la coda 95
 E il capo, ed eran dinanzi aggroppate.
 Ed ecco ad un ch' era da nostra proda
 S' avventò un serpente, che il trafisse
 Là dove il collo alle spalle s' annoda.
 Nè O sì tosto mai nè I si scrisse 100

82. Stipa, 'pack': cf. XI, 3.

83. Diversa mena, 'strange kind': cf. XXII, 10.

84. Scipa, 'curdles.'

85. The Libyan sands were familiar to Dante through Lucan and Ovid: Phars., I, 367; II, 417; IX, 705; Met., IV, 617. The following snakes, and others, are mentioned by Lucan in his account of Cato's march through the desert: Phars., IX, 700 ff. The jaculi and cenchres are described by Pliny and Solinus. The chelidri make their path smoke, the jaculi are swift as darts, the phareæ furrow the ground with their tails, the cenchres never follow a straight course, the amphisbæna has two heads.

90. Ee=è. Not all Libya, Ethiopia, and Arabia can show so many serpents as the 7th bolgia.

93. The heliotrope is a precious stone that makes its bearer invisible. Cf. Boccaccio, Decameron, VIII, 3.

96. The snakes that bound the hands behind had their heads and tails thrust right through the bodies (from back to front) and tied in front.

97. Da nostra proda, 'by our bank': just below the bank on which we stood.

100. O and undotted i are written with a single stroke. Lucan, Phars., IX, 761 ff., tells of a soldier who, bitten by a snake, melts entirely away. Cf. XXV, 95.

Com' ei s' accese ed arse, e cener tutto
 Convenne che cascando divenisse ;
 E poi che fu a terra sì distrutto,
 La polver si raccolse per sè stessa,
 E in quel medesmo ritornò di butto. 105
 Così per li gran savi si confessa
 Che la Fenice more e poi rinasce,
 Quando al cinquecentesimo anno appressa.
 Erba nè biado in sua vita non pasce,
 Ma sol d' incenso lagrime ed amomo ; 110
 E nardo e mirra son l' ultime fasce.
 E qual è quei che cade, e non sa como,
 Per forza di demon ch' a terra il tira,
 O d' altra oppilazion che lega l' uomo,
 Quando si leva, che intorno si mira 115
 Tutto smarrito dalla grande angoscia
 Ch' egli ha sofferta, e guardando sospira,
 Tal era il peccator levato poscia.
 O potenza di Dio, quant' è severa,
 Che cotai colpi per vendetta croscia ! 120
 Lo Duca il domandò poi chi egli era :
 Per ch' ei rispose : ' Io piovvi di Toscana,
 Poco tempo è, in questa gola fera.
 Vita bestial mi piacque, e non umana,

105. Di butto = di botto, 'instantly.'

106. Savi, 'poets': particularly Ovid, Met., IX, 392 ff. The phoenix was described also by Pliny and Brunetto Latini.

109. Biado, 'grain.'

110. Amomo, 'balsam.'

111. 'And nard and myrrh are its winding-sheet.'

112. Como = come.

113. Epileptics were thought to be possessed by devils. See Mark ix, 17-26.

114. Oppilazion, 'stoppage' of the passages between heart and brain.

120. Croscia, 'pours forth.'

Sì come a mul ch' io fui. Son Vanni Fucci, 125
 Bestia, e Pistoia mi fu degna tana.'
 Ed io al Duca : 'Digli che non mucci,
 E domanda qual colpa quaggiù il pinse ;
 Ch' io il vidi uomo di sangue e di crucci.'
 E il peccator, che intese, non s' infinse, 130
 Ma drizzò verso me l' animo e il volto,
 E di trista vergogna sì dipinse ;
 Pei disse : 'Più mi duol che tu m' hai colto
 Nella miseria dove tu mi vedi,
 Che quando fui dell' altra vita tolto. 135
 Io non posso negar quel che tu chiedi.
 In giù son messo tanto, perch' io fui
 Ladro, alla sacrestia, de' belli arredi ;
 E falsamente già fu apposto altrui.
 Ma perchè di tal vista tu non godi, 140
 Se mai sarai di fuor de' lochi bui,
 Apri gli orecchi al mio annunzio, ed odi :

125. Mul : Vanni Fucci was a bastard, a natural son of one of the Lazzari family of Pistoia. He was a notorious ruffian, robber, and party leader.

127. Mucci, 'give us the slip.'

129. Crucci, 'wrath.' Dante — who, it appears from this line, had known Vanni — is surprised to find him here rather than in the first ring of the 7th circle, among the violent. In 1295 Vanni was condemned for theft and murder by a judge who was later one of Dante's fellow-exiles.

130. Non s' infinse, 'did not fail': cf. Old-French jeindre.

138. In January, 1293, or a little earlier, some silver statues were stolen from the altar of a chapel in the cathedral of Pistoia.

139. The crime was attributed to several, especially to a certain Rampino Ranucci, who came near being hanged for it. Probably the truth had come out not long before April, 1300. Vanni died shortly before that year.

142. The following prophecy, couched in oracular style, is purposely obscure, and no perfectly satisfactory interpretation has been found. That of Tor., the most consistent, is as follows: Pistoia was thinned of Blacks (adherents of the Black party) after May, 1301; Florence renewed her people (banishing the Whites and restoring the Blacks) and changed her government, after the entry of Charles of Valois, November 4, 1301; in 1302, Moroello Malaspina, chosen captain of an expedition of Lucchese and Florentines against Pistoia, while besieging the neighboring stronghold of Serravalle, was suddenly attacked by the Pistoiese, but, tearing down the palisades of his camp, issued forth and dispersed the enemy. Note the meteorological style.

Pistoia in pria di Negri si dimagra,
 Poi Fiorenza rinnuova genti e modi.
 Tragge Marte vapor di val di Magra 145
 Ch' è di torbidi nuvoli involuto,
 E con tempesta impetuosa ed agra
 Sopra Campo Picen fia combattuto ;
 Ond' ei repente spezzerà la nebbia,
 Sì ch' ogni Bianco ne sarà feruto. 150
 E detto l' ho, perchè doler ten debbia.'

145. The 'vapor' that Mars draws forth is Moroello Malaspina, lord of Lunigiana in the valley of the Magra. Dante was his guest in 1306, and was believed to have dedicated the Purgatorio to him.

148. It seems that the name Campo Picens was applied to the territory of Pistoia.

150. Feruto = ferito. Serravalle surrendered soon after. This insignificant incident was probably of great importance to the White party, and therefore looked big to Dante.

151. Ten debbia = te ne debba.

CANTO XXV

ARGUMENT

IN a lair on Mt. Aventine dwelt the bloody monster Cacus, son of Vulcan, whose story Virgil tells in the Æneid, VIII, 193-267. When Hercules returned from the west with Geryon's herd, Cacus stole a part of it, dragging the cattle by their tails, that their footprints might point away from his den. Warned by their bellowing, Hercules followed them; and although the fire-belching Cacus filled the cave with flame and smoke, the hero boldly entered and strangled him — according to Dante's version, slew him with his club. Virgil nowhere calls Cacus a centaur, but he does use the phrase (VIII, 194): 'Semihominis Caci facies.' A centaur Dante makes him, and puts upon his neck a mane of serpents, and on his back a fiery dragon. Inasmuch as he was guilty of theft, he is separated from the centaurs of the Circle of Violence and incarcerated in the seventh bolgia of the Circle of Fraud. Presumably he is, like his fellows, a sort of guardian as well as a culprit.

Five other thieves claim our attention — Agnello, Buoso, Puccio, Cianfa, Guercio, all Florentines of whom we know little or nothing. The first three are introduced in the aspect of human beings. Cianfa darts in as a snake, twists himself about Agnello, and combines with him into an indescribable monster — 'e tal sen già con lento passo.' Guercio then appears in serpent form, bites Buoso, and gradually exchanges shapes with him, the one becoming a man, the other a snake. Puccio remains intact. Some strange effects of snake-bites Dante learned from Lucan's Pharsalia, IX, 761 ff. Certain details of his transformations he evidently drew from Ovid's Metamorphoses: in IV, 576 ff., Cadmus is turned into a serpent; in V, 451 ff., a boy who laughs at Ceres becomes a lizard; in IV, 356 ff., a youth and a naiad are fused into an Hermaphrodite. But the sustained realism, the atmosphere of mystery and horror, the uncanny yawn, stare, and smoke are Dante's own.

Al fine delle sue parole il ladro

Le mani alzò con ambedue le fiche,

Gridando : 'Togli, Iddio, chè a te le squadro.'

2. Le fiche, 'the figs': la fica is a coarse, insulting gesture made by holding out the fist with the thumb between the fore and the middle finger.

3. Togli, 'take that.' Squadro, 'square,' i. e., direct.

Da indi in qua mi fur le serpi amiche,
 Perch' una gli s' avvolse allora al collo, 5
 Come dicesse : 'Io non vo' che più diche';
 Ed un' altra alle braccia, e rilegollo,
 Ribadendo sè stessa sì dinanzi
 Che non potea con esse dare un crollo.
 Ahi Pistoia, Pistoia, chè non stanzi 10
 D' incenerarti, sì che più non duri,
 Poi che in mal far lo seme tuo avanzi?
 Per tutti i cerchi dell' inferno oscuri
 Non vidi spirto in Dio tanto superbo,
 Non quel che cadde a Tebe giù da' muri. 15
 Ei si fuggì, che non parlò più verbo.
 Ed io vidi un Centauro pien di rabbia
 Venir chiamando : 'Ov' è, ov' è l' acerbo?'
 Maremma non cred' io che tante n' abbia
 Quante bisce egli avea su per la groppa, 20
 Infìn dove comincia nostra labbia.
 Sopra le spalle, dietro dalla coppa,
 Con l' ali aperte gli giacea un draco,
 E quello affoca qualunque s' intoppa.
 Lo mio Maestro disse : 'Quegli è Caco, 25
 Che sotto il sasso di monte Aventino

6. Diche = dica.

8. Ribadendo, 'clinging.'

9. Esse: the arms.

10. Stanzi, 'decree.'

12. Avanzi, 'thou surpassest.' Pistoia, according to tradition, was founded by the remnants of Catiline's army.

15. Capaneus: XIV, 63. Note the rhyme in -uri here and in XIV, 46.

18. L' acerbo, 'the callous one': Vanni Fucci.

19. Maremma: a wild and swampy part of Tuscany: cf. XIII, 8-9, XXIX, 46-9.

21. Labbia, 'countenance': the human part of the centaur.

22. Coppa, 'nape.'

23. Draco = drago or dragone. The dragon of folklore breathes fire.

24. S' intoppa, 'it meets.'

Di sangue fece spesse volte laco.
 Non va co' suoi fratei per un cammino,
 Per lo furar che frodolente fece
 Del grande armento ch' egli ebbe a vicino; 30
 Onde cessar le sue opere bieche
 Sotto la mazza d' Ercole, che forse
 Gliene diè cento, e non sentì le diece.²⁸
 Mentre che sì parlava, ed ei trascorse
 E tre spiriti venner sotto noi, 35
 De' quai nè io nè il Duca mio s' accorse,
 Se non quando gridar : ' Chi siete voi?'
 Per che nostra novella si ristette,
 Ed intendemmo pure ad essi poi.
 Io non gli conoscea ; ma ei seguette, 40
 Come suol seguitar per alcun caso,
 Che l' un nomare un altro convenette,
 Dicendo : ' Cianfa dove fia rimaso?'
 Perch' io, acciocchè il Duca stesse attento,
 Mi posi il dito su dal mento al naso. 45
 Se tu sei or, Lettore, a creder lento
 Ciò ch' io dirò, non sarà maraviglia,
 Chè io che il vidi appena il mi consento.
 Com' io tenea levate in lor le ciglia,

28. Fratei=fratelli. Per un cammino, 'the same path.' The other centaurs are in the first ring of the 7th circle.

31. Bieche=bieche, 'crooked.'

33. Cento, sc., blows: Hercules kept on striking him long after he was dead.

34. Ed is here redundant and untranslatable: cf. XIX, 3.

35. Virgil and Dante are looking down from the bank. The three spirits turn out to be Agnolo Brunelleschi, Buoso de' Donati (or degli Abati), and Puccio Sciancato. Two more come presently in the form of snakes.

38. Novella, 'discourse.'

40. Ei seguette, 'it happened.'

43. Cianfa Donati was a Florentine of some distinction; we know nothing of his thefts. He appears, in l. 50, as a serpent.

48. Consento, 'admit.'

Ed un serpente con sei piè si lancia 50
 Dinanzi all' uno, e tutto a lui s' appiglia.
 Coi piè di mezzo gli avvinse la pancia,
 E con gli anterior le braccia prese ;
 Poi gli addentò e l' una e l' altra guancia.
 Gli diretani alle cosce distese, 55
 E miseli la coda tra ambedue
 E dietro per le ren su la ritese.
 Ellera abbarbicata mai non fue
 Ad arbor sì, come l' orribil fiera
 Per l' altrui membra avviticchiò le sue. 60
 Poi s' appiccar, come di calda cera
 Fossero stati, e mischiar lor colore ;
 Nè l' un nè l' altro già pareva quel ch' era :
 Come procede innanzi dall' ardore
 Per lo papiro suso un color bruno, 65
 Che non è nero ancora, e il bianco more.
 Gli altri due riguardavano, e ciascuno
 Gridava : ' O me, Agnèl, come ti muti !
 Vedi che già non sei nè due nè uno.'
 Già eran li due capi un divenuti, 70
 Quando n' apparver due figure miste
 In una faccia, ov' eran due perduti.

50. Ed: once more the redundant use.

51. Uno: named, in l. 68, Agnello. The old commentators call him Agnolo Brunelleschi; we know nothing more of him.

54. The snake spreads its open mouth over Agnello's face.

55. Gli diretani, 'its hind feet.'

60. Avviticchiò, 'twisted.' Cf. Met., IV, 365: 'Utve solent hederæ longos intexere truncos.'

61. S' appiccar, 'grew together.'

64. The figure is that of a piece of cotton paper burning on the lower edge; a streak of brown precedes the advancing flame.

72. Cf. Met., IV, 373-5 (Hermaphroditus and Salmacis):

' Nam mixta duorum
 Corpora junguntur, faciesque inducitur illis
 Una.'

Fersi le braccia due di quattro liste ;
 Le cosce con le gambe, il ventre e il casso
 Divenner membra che non fur mai viste. 75
 Ogni primaio aspetto ivi era casso :
 Due e nessun l' imagine perversa
 Parea, e tal sen già con lento passo.
 Come il ramarro, sotto la gran fersa
 De' di canicular cangiando siepe, 80
 Folgore par, se la via attraversa :
 Così parea, venendo verso l' epe
 Degli altri due, un serpentello acceso,
 Livido e nero come gran di pepe.
 E quella parte, donde prima è preso 85
 Nostro alimento, all' un di lor trafisse ;
 Poi cadde giuso innanzi lui disteso.
 Lo trafitto il mirò, ma nulla disse ;
 Anzi coi piè fermati sbadigliava,
 Pur come sonno o febbre l' assalisse. 90
 Egli il serpente, e quei lui riguardava ;
 L' un per la piaga, e l' altro per la bocca
 Fumavan forte, e il fummo si scontrava.
 Taccia Lucano omai, là dove tocca
 Del misero Sabello e di Nassidio, 95
 Ed attenda ad udir quel ch' or si scocca !
 Taccia di Cadmo e d' Aretusa Ovidio !

73. Fersi = si fecero. Liste, 'strips.'

76. Casso, 'obliterated.'

70. Ramarro, 'lizard.' Fersa, 'scourge,' i. e., the hot summer sun.

82. Epe, 'bellies.'

85. The navel.

95. Phars., IX, 763 ff. and 790 ff. Sabellus, bitten by a little snake in the desert, melts away like snow. Nasidius, poisoned by another serpent, swells into a shapeless globe and bursts his armor.

96. Si scocca, 'is shot forth,' i. e., related.

97. Met., IV, 576 ff.; V, 572 ff.

Chè se quello in serpente, e quella in fonte
 Convertè poetando, io non l' invidio ;
 Chè due nature mai a fronte a fronte 100
 Non trasmutò, sì ch' ambedue le forme
 A cambiar lor materia fosser pronte.
 Insieme si risposero a tai norme,
 Che il serpente la coda in forza fesse,
 E il feruto ristinse insieme l' orme. 105
 Le gambe con le cosce seco stesse
 S' appiccar sì, che in poco la giuntura
 Non facea segno alcun che si paresse.
 Togliea la coda fessa la figura
 Che si perdeva là, e la sua pelle 110
 Si facea molle, e quella di là dura.
 Io vidi entrar le braccia per l' ascelle,
 E i due piè della fiera, ch' eran corti,
 Tanto allungar quanto accorciavan quelle.
 Poscia li piè dietro, insieme attorti, 115
 Diventarøn lo membro che l' uom cела,
 E il misero del suo n' avea due porti.
 Mentre che il fummo l' uno e l' altro vela
 Di color nuovo, e genera il pel suso
 Per l' una parte, e dall' altra il dipela, 120
 L' un si levò, e l' altro cadde giuso,
 Non torcendo però le lucerne empie,
 Sotto le quai ciascun cambiava muso.

101. Forme is used in the scholastic sense of 'natures': two individuals, in Dante's narrative, exchange their substance.

103. A tai norme, 'in the following order.'

105. Feruto = jerito. — Orme, 'feet.'

107. S' appiccar: cf. l. 61. 'The legs grow together into a tail.'

117. Porti, 'extended,' to make two hind feet.

122. Lucerne, 'lights,' i. e. , glaring eyes.

Quel ch' era dritto, il trasse ver le tempie,
 E di troppa materia che in là venne 125
 Uscir gli orecchi delle gote scempie ;
 Ciò che non corse indietro, e si ritenne
 Di quel soperchio, fe' naso alla faccia,
 E le labbra ingrossò quanto convenne.
 Quel che giacea il muso innanzi caccia, 130
 E gli orecchi ritira per la testa,
 Come face le corna la lumaccia :
 E la lingua, che avea unita e presta
 Prima a parlar, si fende, e la forcuta
 Nell' altro si richiude, e il fummo resta. 135
 L' anima ch' era fiera divenuta
 Si fuggì sufolando per la valle,
 E l' altro dietro a lui parlando sputa.
 Poscia gli volse le novelle spalle,
 E disse all' altro : 'Io vo' che Buoso corra, 140
 Com' ho fatt' io, carpon, per questo calle.'
 Così vid' io la settima zavorra

124. Quel : the one that has been changed from a snake to a man. — Il, sc., muso, his snout.

126. Scempie, 'smooth.'

127. Ciò : that part of the snout.

132. Lumaccia = lumaca, 'snail.'

133. Cf. Met., IV, 586-9 (Cadmus changed into a serpent):

'Ille quidem vult plura loqui, sed lingua repente
 In partes est fissa duas, nec verba volenti
 Sufficiunt, quotiensque aliquos parat edere questus,
 Sibilat; hanc illi vocem natura reliquit.'

135. 'The smoke stops,' bringing the transformation to an abrupt close. With similar abruptness the preceding metamorphosis ended, in l. 78.

137. Sufolando, 'hissing.'

138. Human saliva was thought to be poisonous to snakes.

140. The man turns his 'new back' upon the serpent, and addresses l'altro, the third of the original three and the only one that has not been transformed. Buoso is the new snake: according to some of the old commentators he is Buoso de' Donati (cf. XXX, 44); according to others. Buoso degli Abati.

142. Zavorra, 'ballast.' The transmutation of shapes in this 7th hollow reminds the poet of the shifting of ballast to and fro in the hold of a ship.

Mutare e trasmutare ; e qui mi scusi
 La novità, se fior la penna abborra.
 Ed avvegnachè gli occhi miei confusi 145
 Fossero alquanto, e l' animo smagato,
 Non poter quei fuggirsi tanto chiusi
 Ch' io non scorgessi ben Puccio Sciancato ;
 Ed era quei che sol, de' tre compagni
 Che venner prima, non era mutato. 150
 L' altro era quel che tu, Gaville, piagni.

144. Fior, 'at all.' Abborra, 'wanders': cf. XXXI, 24.

146. Smagato, 'exhausted.'

147. Chiusi, 'covertly.'

148. As the two run away, Dante recognizes the unchanged one as Puccio Sciancato de' Galigai, a Ghibelline, banished from Florence in 1268.

151. 'The other,' originally the second snake, was Guercio de' Cavalcanti, killed for his misdeeds by the people of Gaville, a village on the upper Arno. Gaville mourns because of the vengeance taken for his death.

CANTO XXVI

ARGUMENT

ONCE more a respite is afforded from the oppressiveness of Malebolge. Ulysses tells of his last journey, and his sea-story breaks in upon the grim nightmare like a whiff of fresh breeze. This 'mad flight' of the Ithacan out into the great waters seems to be essentially an invention of our poet. Although Solinus records an old tradition that Ulysses sailed into the Atlantic and founded Lisbon, and Claudian mentions a voyage to a land of shades in that part of Gaul which projects furthest into the ocean, their tales have almost nothing in common with his. Dante's imagination must have been stirred by the adventures of St. Brendan in his search for the Isles of the Blest, and by other yarns of wondrous voyages and expeditions to the Earthly Paradise; but he imitates none of them in this narrative. Homer he had not read.

Ulysses is found in the eighth bolgia, among evil counsellors, those who applied their burning eloquence to the concealment of their real mind. They are completely enveloped in tongues of fire, which 'steal' them from sight, just as in life their flaming speech cunningly hid their thought. Fire, the symbol of divine anger, is an appropriate punishment, because their sin consists in the misuse of superior mental power, the direct gift of God, who breathes into men at birth the intellective soul endowed with greater or less keenness of intelligence according to his grace. Dante, one of the most favored in this respect, manifests particular interest in the fate of his intellectual compeers, and warns himself against falling into the error that wrought their destruction.

Godi, Fiorenza, poi che sei sì grande
 Che per mare e per terra batti l' ali,
 E per l' inferno il tuo nome si spande.
 Tra li ladron trovai cinque cotali
 Tuoi cittadini, onde mi vien vergogna,
 E tu in grande onranza non ne sali.
 Ma se presso al mattin del ver si sogna,

7. It was an ancient and popular belief that dreams occurring just before dawn would come true: cf. Purg. IX, 16-18. The poet seems to regard the

Tu sentirai di qua da picciol tempo
 Di quel che Prato, non ch' altri, t' agogna.
 E se già fosse, non saria per tempo. 10
 Così foss' ei, da che pure esser dee ;
 Chè più mi graverà, com' più m' attempo.
 Noi ci partimmo, e su per le scalee
 Che n' avean fatte i borni a scender pria
 Rimontò il mio Maestro, e trasse mee. 15
 E proseguendo la solinga via
 Tra le schegge e tra' rocchi dello scoglio,
 Lo piè senza la man non si spedia.
 Allor mi dolsi, ed ora mi ridoglio,
 Quand' io drizzo la mente a ciò ch' io vidi ; 20
 E più lo ingegno affreno ch' io non soglio,
 Perchè non corra che virtù nol guidi ;
 Sì che se stella buona o miglior cosa
 M' ha dato il ben, ch' io stesso nol m' invidi.
 Quante il villan, ch' al poggio si riposa, 25

present time of depravity as a dark night, to be followed ere long (as he repeatedly attests) by a better day. His prophecy is conceived just as the new morrow is about to dawn.

8. Di qua da picciol tempo, 'within a short time.'

9. Prato is a little town near Florence: thou shalt feel the grief which even thy nearest neighbors wish thee, not to mention thine enemies.

10. Per tempo, 'too early.'

11. Così foss' ei, 'would it were so,' i. e., would that the blow had already fallen!

12. The poet's mood changes from vindictiveness to tenderness.

13. The 'stairs' lead from the bank to the top of the ridge; they consist of 'bourns,' or rocky projections. Having climbed the ridge, the travellers pursue their way over the 8th arch.

15. Mee = me.

17. Rocchi, 'craggs': cf. XX, 25.

18. Si spedia, 'proceeded.'

22. 'That it (my genius) may not run without the guidance of virtue.'

23. The 'something better' is divine grace.

24. The che in this line is superfluous. — Invidi, 'begrudge,' i. e., deprive myself of it by misuse, as these souls have done.

25. Quante modifies luciole in l. 20. In this pretty simile of the fireflies, the season indicated (ll. 26-7) is the summer solstice, the hour (l. 28) is dusk.

Nel tempo che colui che il mondo schiara
 La faccia sua a noi tien meno ascosa,
 Come la mosca cede alla zanzara,
 Vede lucciole giù per la vallea,
 Forse colà dove vendemmia ed ara : 30
 Di tante fiamme tutta risplendea
 L' ottava bolgia, sì com' io m' accorsi
 Tosto ch' io fui là 've il fondo pareo.
 E qual colui che si vengìo con gli orsi
 Vide il carro d' Elia al dipartire, 35
 Quando i cavalli al cielo erti levorsi ;
 Chè nol potea sì con gli occhi seguire
 Ch' ei vedesse altro che la fiamma sola,
 Sì come nuvoletta, in su salire :
 Tal si movea ciascuna per la gola 40
 Del fosso, chè nessuna mostra il furto,
 Ed ogni fiamma un peccatore invola.
 Io stava sopra il ponte a veder surto
 Sì che, s' io non avessi un ronchion preso,
 Caduto sarei giù senza esser urto. 45
 E il Duca, che mi vide tanto atteso,
 Disse : 'Dentro da' fochi son gli spirti :
 Ciascun si fascia di quel ch' egli è inceso.'

26. Colui: the sun, whose 'face' is 'least hidden' at the time when the nights are shortest.

33. 'Ve = ove: as soon as I was high enough on the bridge to see the bottom of the ditch.

34. Colui: Elisha (2 Kings ii, 23-4). Qual modifies carro in l. 35.

35. Elia, 'Elijah': 2 Kings ii, 9-12.

36. Levorsì = si levarono.

39. Nuvoletta: cf. V. N., XXIII, 52, 187.

40. Ciascuna, sc., fiamma: cf. l. 31.

42. Invola, 'steals': Dante conceives of these flames as stealing, i. e., secreting, the sinners contained within them.

43. Surto, 'erect.'

44. Ronchion: cf. XXIV, 28.

45. Urto = urtato.

48. Che is loosely used for onde or da cui.

'Maestro mio,' rispos' io, 'per udirti
 Son io più certo; ma già m' era avviso 50
 Che così fusse, e già voleva dirti :
 Chi è in quel foco che vien sì diviso
 Di sopra che par surger della pira
 Ov' Eteòcle col fratel fu miso?'
 Risposemi : 'Là entro si martira 55
 Ulisse e Diomede, e così insieme
 Alla vendetta vanno come all' ira.
 E dentro dalla lor fiamma si geme
 L' aguato del caval che fe' la porta

57. Ulysses and Diomed, two of the leading heroes of the Trojan war, go together in their punishment, as they went together to expose themselves to divine wrath.

58. Si geme, 'they groan for.'

59. 'The ambush of the horse': the wooden horse full of Greek warriors, which the Trojans were persuaded to take into the city. By this means Troy was destroyed, and Æneas and his followers, who afterwards founded the Roman stock, had to flee. Æn., II, 13 ff. In Virgil's account, Diomed has no share in this enterprise.

61. Entro is an adverb, 'inside.' Thetis, to save her son Achilles from the war, disguised him as a girl and entrusted him to King Lycomedes of Scyros; there he won the love of the king's daughter Deïdamìa, and promised to be true to her. Discovered by Ulysses and Diomed, he went with them to the war, and forgot his promise. Deïdamìa now mourns in the Limbus: Purg. XXII, 114. The story is told by Statius in the Achilleid, II, 15 ff.

63. Ulysses and Diomed stole the Palladium, an image of Pallas, on which the fate of Troy depended: Æn., II, 162 ff.

 Quando nel mondo gli alti versi scrissi,
 Non vi movete ; ma l' un di voi dica

72. Si sostegna, 'restrain itself.'

73. Concetto, 'guessed.'

74. Schivi, 'shy': of thy speech. From these lines and XXVII, 33, it may be inferred that Virgil thought himself less remote than Dante from the ancient Greeks, and more likely to influence them.

78. Audivi = udii.

80. Virgil assumes that he has immortalized Ulysses and Diomed in his Æneid.

CANTO XXVII

ARGUMENT

GUIDO DA MONTEFELTRO, the great Ghibelline general, was one of the foremost Italians of the 13th century. He was famous for his valor, wisdom, courtesy, and especially for his skill in strategy, which won for him the name of 'fox.' Dante's story of his final seduction by Boniface VIII, to whom he was induced, by promise of absolution, to give the evil counsel of taking Palestrina by false pledges, is corroborated by the chronicle of Pipino, written in 1314. The discovery of this early account would seem to settle the much debated question whether the incident was invented by the poet.

What Dante probably did invent is a struggle between Heaven and Hell for the possession of Guido's soul. St. Francis of Assisi, to whose order Guido belonged, comes to claim the departing spirit; but he is opposed by 'one of the black cherubim,' who, after a brief discussion, is victorious. Such a conflict occurs in the Commedia in only one other case, that of Guido's son Buonconte, whose tale is told in Purg. V, 88 ff. In both instances the theme is introduced to emphasize an important doctrine, namely, that the eternal fate of a soul depends on its intrinsic condition at the moment of death. Though absolved by a Pope, Guido had not genuinely repented of his last misdeed, and therefore the absolution was invalid. Buonconte, on the other hand, though neglectful of his religious duties during life, has, when mortally wounded, an instant of true repentance and love of God, and thus wins salvation. The two contrasted examples are as extreme as the poet could contrive them, and they are the more striking in that the two men are father and son.

For Pipino's text, see Tor., p. 225. For a discussion of the episode: D' Ovidio, 202, 533; E. Gorra, Il soggettivismo di Dante, 43-59; H. Honig, Guido da Montefeltro (reviewed in Giorn. stor., XXXIX, 422); G. Petraglione in Giorn. dant., XI, 136. For other early mention of the incident, Giorn. stor., LVIII, 270, and A. F. Massera, Il 'consiglio frodolente' di Guido da Montefeltro secondo una nuova fonte storica, 1911 (cf. Bull., XVIII, 266).

Già era dritta in su la fiamma e queta,
Per non dir più, e già da noi sen già
Con la licenza del dolce Poeta,
Quando un' altra, che dietro a lei venia,

3. The words of the permission are given in l. 21.

Ne fece volger gli occhi alla sua cima 5
 Per un confuso suon che fuor n' uscia.
 Come il bue Cicilian, che mugghiò prima
 Col pianto di colui (e ciò fu dritto)
 Che l' avea temperato con sua lima,
 Mugghiava con la voce dell' afflitto 10
 Sì che, con tutto ch' ei fosse di rame,
 Pure e' pareva dal dolor trafitto :
 Così per non aver via nè forame
 Dal principio del foco, in suo linguaggio
 Si convertivan le parole grame. 15
 Ma poscia ch' ebber colto lor viaggio
 Su per la punta, dandole quel guizzo
 Che dato avea la lingua in lor passaggio,
 Udimmo dire : ' O tu, a cui io drizzo
 La voce, e che parlavi mo Lombardo, 20
 Dicendo : " issa ten va, più non t' adizzo,"
 Perch' io sia giunto forse alquanto tardo,
 Non t' incresca restare a parlar meco.

7. The brazen Sicilian bull, made by Perillus of Athens for Phalaris, tyrant of Agrigentum, was so constructed that the shrieks of victims burned within it sounded like the bellowing of a real beast. Phalaris tried it first on its maker, Perillus. The story is told by Paulus Orosius; it is mentioned also by Pliny, Valerius Maximus, Cicero, and Ovid.

11. Con tutto, 'although.'

13. This line and the next are obscure. Perhaps they mean: 'Thus, having no outlet nor escape from the source of the fire (i. e., the soul, from which it emanates), the dreary words were converted into its language (the language of the fire).' The vibrations of the soul's tongue are imparted to the fire, and little by little set the whole flame to oscillating like a great tongue. — Some read nel for del in l. 14, and interpret dal principio as 'at first.'

21. Issa, 'now': cf. XXIII, 7. Adizzo, 'urge.' There is nothing peculiarly Lombard in this sentence; perhaps Dante meant to give only the Tuscan equivalent of what Virgil really said, or perhaps the suggestion of Lombardy lay in his accent. Dante believed that the popular dialects, though constantly changing, reached back into antiquity, and had always existed side by side with the 'grammatical language,' or Latin; so Virgil, being of Lombard parentage, might appropriately enough use his local dialect.

22. Perchè, 'though.'

Vedi che non incresce a me, ed ardo !
 Se tu pur mo in questo mondo cieco 25
 Caduto sei di quella dolce terra
 Latina ond' io mia colpa tutta reco,
 Dimmi se i Romagnuoli han pace o guerra ;
 Ch' io fui de' monti là intra Urbino
 E il giogo di che 'l Tever si disserra.' 30
 Io era ingiusto ancora attento e chino,
 Quando il mio Duca mi tentò di costa,
 Dicendo : ' Parla tu, questi è Latino.'
 Ed io, ch' avea già pronta la risposta,
 Senza indugio a parlare incominciai : 35
 ' O anima, che se' laggiù nascosta,
 Romagna tua non è, e non fu mai,
 Senza guerra ne' cor de' suoi tiranni ;
 Ma 'n palese nessuna or vi lasciai.
 Ravenna sta come stata è molti anni : 40
 L' aquila da Polenta là si cova
 Sì che Cervia ricopre co' suoi vanni.
 La terra che fe' già la lunga prova,

25. Pur mo, 'but now.'

28. Romagnuoli, 'Romagnoles': Romagna is the region lying between the Po, the Apennines, the Adriatic, and the Reno.

30. 'The range from which the Tiber springs' is Monte Coronaro. The county of Montefeltro lies between Urbino and the Tuscan Apennines.

32. Tentò di costa, 'nudged.' Cf. XXVI, 74.

39. In April, 1299, the parties, townships, and usurping tyrants of Romagna, after 25 years' strife, concluded a peace.

41. Cova, 'broods over.' The Polenta family had ruled Ravenna since 1275, when Guido (father of Francesca da Rimini) returned there with his Guelfs. The family arms contained an eagle.

42. V'anni, 'pinions.' Cervia, a small but important town on the Adriatic near Ravenna, was subject to the Polenta family for several years.

43. 'The city' is Forlì, head of the Ghibelline league in Romagna. In 1281-2 it resisted a long siege by the French and the Guelfs sent by Pope Martin IV. In May, 1282, the inhabitants, led by Guido da Montefeltro, issued forth and defeated the besiegers with great slaughter. In 1300 it was ruled by the Ordelaffi, who had in their arms a lion, green in the upper half.

E de' Franceschi sanguinoso mucchio,
 Sotto le branche verdi si ritrova. 45
 Il Mastin vecchio e il nuovo da Verrucchio,
 Che fecer di Montagna il mal governo,
 Là dove soglion, fan de' denti succhio.
 Le città di Lamone e di Santerno
 Conduce il leoncel dal nido bianco, 50
 Che muta parte dalla state al verno ;
 E quella a cui il Savio bagna il fianco,
 Così com' ella sie' tra il piano e il monte,
 Tra tirannia si vive e stato franco.
 Ora chi sei ti prego che ne conte. 55
 Non esser duro più ch' altri sia stato,
 Se il nome tuo nel mondo tegna fronte.'
 Poscia che il foco alquanto ebbe rugghiato
 Al modo suo, l' acuta punta mosse
 Di qua, di là, e poi diè cotal fiato : 60
 'S' io credessi che mia risposta fosse
 A persona che mai tornasse al mondo,
 Questa fiamma staria senza più scosse :
 Ma perocchè giammai di questo fondo

44. Franceschi = Francesi.

46. The 'old mastiff' is Malatesta da Verrucchio, lord of Rimini, father of Gian Ciotto and Paolo. The 'young mastiff' is Malatestino, another son of Malatesta.

47. In 1296 Malatesta defeated the Ghibelline forces of Rimini and captured their leader Montagna. At the instigation of his father, Malatestino murdered the prisoner. — Governo, 'disposal.'

48. 'Make an auger of their teeth,' to gore their subjects and suck their blood.

49. Faenza, on the Lamone, and Imola, near the Santerno, were ruled by Maghinardo di Pagano da Susinana, who bore a blue lion on a white field. He was known as 'the lion' and 'the demon' (Purg. XIV, 118), and was notorious for his many changes of party.

52. Cesena, on the Savio, preserved the forms of municipal self-government, but was ruled, from 1296 to 1300, by a boss, Galasso da Montefeltro, a cousin of Guido.

57. Se . . . tegna : the formula of adjuration : see X, 82.

Non tornò vivo alcun, s' i' odo il vero, 65
 Senza tema d' infamia ti rispondo.
 Io fui uom d' arme, e poi fui cordigliero,
 Credendomi, sì cinto, fare ammenda.
 E certo il creder mio veniva intero,
 Se non fosse il gran Prete, a cui mal prenda, 70
 Che mi rimise nelle prime colpe ;
 E come e quare voglio che m' intenda.
 Mentre ch' io forma fui d' ossa e di polpe,
 Che la madre mi diè, l' opere mie
 Non furon leonine, ma di volpe. 75
 Gli accorgimenti e le coperte vie
 Io seppi tutte ; e sì menai lor arte
 Ch' al fine della terra il suono uscìe.
 Quando mi vidi giunto in quella parte
 Di mia etade ove ciascun dovrebbe 80
 Calar le vele e raccoglièr le sarte,
 Ciò che pria mi piaceva allor m' increbbe,
 E pentuto e confesso mi rendei,
 Ah! miser lasso ! e giovato sarebbe.
 Lo Principe de' nuovi Farisei, 85

67. In his old age Guido became a 'cord-wearer,' i. e., a Franciscan friar.

69. Veniva intero, 'would have been fulfilled.'

70. A cui mal prenda, 'whom ill befall!'

72. Quare (Latin) = perchè.

75. Cf. Cicero, De Officiis, I, 13 (also Inf. XI, 23-6).

76. Accorgimenti, 'wiles.'

78. Uscìe = uscì. Cf. Ps. xix, 4: 'and their words to the end of the world.'

81. Raccoglièr, 'coil.'

83. Pentuto = pentito. Confesso = confessato. Mi rendei, 'I gave myself to God,' I became a monk.

84. Giovato sarebbe, 'it would have availed.'

85. Boniface VIII, who was waging war at home, close to his Lateran palace, with the Colonna family. In 1297 he excommunicated them and summoned them to surrender, but they entrenched themselves in their strongholds of Palestrina and Zagarolo. Palestrina, about 24 miles from Rome and visible from the Lateran hill, was surrendered to Boniface on false promises, and then demolished.

Avendo guerra presso a Laterano, —
 E non con Saracin nè con Giudei,
 Chè ciascun suo nimico era Cristiano,
 E nessuno era stato a vincer Acri,
 Nè mercatante in terra di Soldano, — 90
 Nè sommo officio nè ordini sacri
 Guardò in sè, nè in me quel capestro
 Che solea far li suoi cinti più macri.
 Ma come Constantin chiese Silvestro
 Dentro Siratti a guarir della lebbre, 95
 Così mi chiese questi per maestro
 A guarir della sua superba febbre :
 Domandommi consiglio ; ed io tacetti,
 Perchè le sue parole parver ebbre.
 E poi mi disse : “Tuo cor non sospetti. 100
 Finor t’ assolvo ; e tu m’ insegna fare
 Sì come Penestrino in terra getti.
 Lo ciel poss’ io serrare e disserrare,
 Come tu sai ; però son due le chiavi,
 Che il mio antecessor non ebbe care.” 105
 Allor mi pinser gli argomenti gravi
 Là ’ve il tacer mi fu avviso il peggio,

89. Not one of them had been a renegade to help the Saracens take Acre in 1291. The fall of Acre, the last bulwark of Christendom in the East, filled Europe with consternation; and Pope Nicholas IV exhorted the coast towns not to traffic with the lands of the Sultan. Six years later, Boniface was proclaiming a crusade against Christians.

92. Capestro, ‘rope’: the Franciscan girdle, ‘which used (in the good old times) to make its wearers lean.’

94. Pope Sylvester I, who had taken refuge on Mt. Soracte, near Rome, was sought out, according to the legend, to cure the Emperor Constantine of leprosy; this he did by baptism. In return for this cure the donation of Constantine was made.

96. Maestro, ‘physician.’

102. Penestrino = Palestrina.

104. Però, ‘wherefor.’

105. Antecessor: Celestine V, who renounced the papacy (III, 60; XIX, 56).

E dissi : " Padre, da che tu mi lavi
 Di quel peccato ov' io mo cader deggio,
 Lunga promessa con l' attender corto 110
 Ti farà trionfar nell' alto seggio."
 Francesco venne poi, com' io fui morto,
 Per me ; ma un de' neri Cherubini
 Gli disse : " Nol portar ; non mi far torto.
 Venir se ne dee giù tra' miei meschini, 115
 Perchè diede il consiglio frodolente,
 Dal quale in qua stato gli sono a' crini.
 Ch' assolver non si può chi non si pente,
 Nè pentere e volere insieme puossi,
 Per la contradizion, che nol consente." 120
 O me dolente ! come mi riscossi,
 Quando mi prese, dicendomi : " Forse
 Tu non pensavi ch' io loico fossi !"
 A Minòs mi portò ; e quegli attorse
 Otto volte la coda al dosso duro, 125
 E, poi che per gran rabbia la si morse,
 Disse : " Questi è de' rei del foco furo."
 Per ch' io là dove vedi son perduto,
 E sì vestito andando mi rancuro.'
 Quand' egli ebbe il suo dir così compiuto, 130
 La fiamma dolorando si partìo,
 Torcendo e dibattendo il corno acuto.

110. Attender, 'fulfilment.'

115. Meschini, 'servitors.'

117. A' crini: lurking about his hair, ready to seize him.

119. Puossi = si può. One cannot repent without renunciation of the will.

120. Consente, 'admits.'

121. Mi riscossi, 'I shuddered.'

123. Loico, 'a logician.'

125. Cf. V, 11-2.

127. Furo, 'thievish': cf. XXVI, 41-2.

129. Mi rancuro, 'I repine.'

Noi passammo oltre, ed io e il Duca mio,
Su per lo scoglio infino in su l' altr' arco,
Che copre il fosso in che si paga il fio 135
A quei che scommettendo acquistan carco.

135. Fio, 'fee': their due.

136. 'To those who make a load by separating': usually a load is made by putting together; but the sowers of discord, who occupy the next bolgia, make up their burden of sin by putting asunder those who were united.

CANTO XXVIII

ARGUMENT

AN involved simile, at the beginning of this canto, calls up the picture of a vast accumulation of maimed bodies gathered, through the centuries, from the many battlefields of southern Italy. Even this mangled host conveys but a faint idea of the ninth bolgia. Creators of strife are here hacked by the sword of a fiend, as they pass by; their horribly dismembered state represents the life of bloodshed and dissension which they loved. Conspicuous among them are Mahomet, the Roman Curio, Mosca de' Lamberti of Florence, and the Provençal warrior-poet Bertran de Born.

Dante's contemporaries believed Mahomet to have been originally not only a Christian, but a cardinal and an aspirant to the papacy. The poet, then, was justified in regarding him and his son-in-law Ali as the leaders of a great schism in the Christian Church.

The tribune Curio, banished from Rome, fled to Cæsar, who was hesitating on the bank of the Rubicon, and 'sunk the doubt' within him by urging him to march on the capital. The event is narrated by Lucan in Pharsalia, I, 266 ff. He now wishes he had never seen Rimini, near which town the Rubicon empties into the Adriatic.

In 1215 a Buondelmonte, who was betrothed to a lady of the Amidei family, was induced to jilt her and appear on his wedding-day with a bride from the house of the Donati. The Amidei came together to discuss the best way to avenge this affront. Some advised inflicting on Buondelmonte a beating or a wound in the face. Mosca, however, affirmed that such an attack would result in more harm to the aggressors than to the victim. 'Cosa fatta capo ha,' he declared — 'a thing once done has an end': if we do him a hurt, let it be a final one. The Amidei followed his counsel and murdered the offender. Hence arose the feud between the families and, according to local tradition, the first conflict between Guelfs and Ghibellines in Florence. The Lamberti, to whom Mosca belonged, were afterwards banished from the city and never allowed to return.

Bertran de Born was a Provençal poet of the latter part of the 12th century. To further his private ends, he took advantage of the disputes and wars of Henry II of England and his two elder sons, Henry and Richard, who had extensive possessions in southern France. According to his old Provençal biography, which considerably exaggerates his political importance, Bertran was active in fomenting their quarrels, and formed a close friendship with the younger Henry. This prince was crowned in his father's lifetime, and was consequently known as 'the young English king.' His early death in 1283 was mourned by Bertran in verse that gained wide renown.

Chi poria mai pur con parole sciolte
 Dicer del sangue e delle piaghe appieno,
 Ch' i' ora vidi, per narrar più volte?
 Ogni lingua per certo verria meno
 Per lo nostro sermone e per la mente, 5
 Ch' hanno a tanto comprender poco seno.
 S' ei s' adunasse ancor tutta la gente
 Che già in sulla fortunata terra
 Di Puglia fu del suo sangue dolente
 Per li Troiani, e per la lunga guerra 10
 Che dell' anella fe' sì alte spoglie
 Come Livio scrive, che non erra;
 Con quella che sentì di colpi doglie

1. Con parole sciolte: in prose.

2. Appieno, 'in full.'

3. Per narrar, 'though he should narrate.'

4. Verria meno, 'would fall short.'

5. Per, 'by reason of.' Sermone, 'speech': cf. XIII, 21. Mente, 'memory': cf. II, 6.

6. Comprender, 'hold.' Seno, 'hollow,' i. e., capacity.

7. The ei is redundant: it anticipates the real subject, gente. In this involved passage, s' adunasse is to be connected with quella (gente) in l. 13 and l' altra (gente) in l. 15. The conclusion is reached in ll. 20-1.

8. Fortunata, 'stormy.'

9. The name Apulia was often given to all the continental part of the Kingdom of Naples.

10. Per li Troiani, 'on account of the Trojans,' i. e., the Romans, whose ancestors came from Troy: the allusion is to the conquest of the Samnites by the Romans, perhaps also to the defeat of Pyrrhus. The 'long war' is the Second Punic War, led by Hannibal against Rome.

11. It was said that after the battle of Cannæ Hannibal's troops took from the dead Romans more than three bushels of rings — or (the 'unerring Livy' adds, XXXIII, 12), according to a report nearer the truth, about one bushel. Cf. Conv., IV, v, 164-71. — Anella, plural of anello.

Per contrastare a Roberto Guiscardo ;
 E l' altra, il cui ossame ancor s' accoglie 15
 A Ceperan, là dove fu bugiardo
 Ciascun Pugliese, e là da Tagliacozzo
 Ove senz' arme vinse il vecchio Alardo :

 Mostrasse, da equar sarebbe nulla
 Al modo della nona bolgia sozzo.
 Già veggia per mezzul perdere o lulla,
 Com' io vidi un, così non si pertugia,
 Rotto dal mento infin dove si trulla.
 Tra le gambe pendevan le minugia ; 25
 La corata pareva, e il tristo sacco
 Che merda fa di quel che si trangugia.
 Mentre che tutto in lui veder m' attacco,
 Guardommi, e con le man s' aperse il petto,

14. Per contrastare, 'through opposing' Robert Guiscard, the Norman conqueror who overran southern Italy in the 11th century, and became Duke of Apulia.

15. Those slain in the battle of Benevento, in 1266, where Manfred, son of Frederick II, was defeated by Charles of Anjou, and killed. In reality there was no fight at Ceprano; the first encounter was at S. Germano. Dante apparently followed, with several chroniclers, a false report. Manfred was deserted by the Apulian troops at Benevento; but the Apulian reputation for inconstancy antedates the battle. Cf. E. Pozzi in Giorn. stor., LVII, 303.

17. Da, 'by.' At Tagliacozzo, in 1268, the Imperial forces were again defeated by Charles of Anjou, and Conradin, nephew of Manfred and grandson of Frederick, was captured. The victory was due to the strategy of an elderly French General, Erard de Valéry; he won by his wit rather than by his sword.

19. Qual . . . qual, 'one . . . another.' Membro is the object of mostrasse. Mozzo, 'severed.'

20. Equar, 'compare.' Cf. Æn., II, 362.

22. Veggia, 'cask.' Mezzul, 'mid-board'; the middle one of the three pieces that compose the bottom of a cask. Lulla (half-moon), 'side-piece.'

23. The construction is made clear by transposing the two halves of this line.

24. Cleft from chin to anus.

25. Minugia, 'entrails.'

26. Corata, 'pluck.' Sacco: the stomach.

27. Si trangugia, 'is swallowed.'

Dicendo : 'Or vedi come io mi dilacco; 30
 Vedi come storpiato è Maometto.
 Dinanzi a me sen va piangendo Ali
 Fesso nel volto dal mento al ciuffetto.
 E tutti gli altri che tu vedi qui
 Seminador di scandalo e di scisma 35
 Fur vivi ; e però son fessi così.
 Un diavolo è qua dietro che n' accisma
 Sì crudelmente, al taglio della spada
 Rimettendo ciascun di questa risma,
 Quando avem volta la dolente strada ; 40
 Però che le ferite son richiuse
 Prima ch' altri dinanzi gli rivada.
 Ma tu chi se' che in sullo scoglio muse,
 Forse per indugiar d' ire alla pena
 Ch' è giudicata in su le tue accuse?' 45
 'Nè morte il giunse ancor, nè colpa il mena,'
 Rispose il mio Maestro, 'a tormentarlo.
 Ma per dar lui esperienza piena,
 A me, che morto son, convien menarlo
 Per lo inferno quaggiù di giro in giro. 50
 E questo è ver così com' io ti parlo.'
 Più fur di cento che, quando l' udiro,
 S' arrestaron nel fosso a riguardarmi,
 Per maraviglia obbliando il martiro.

30. Dilacco, 'split.'

32. Ali, 'Ali': the husband of Mahomet's favorite daughter, and one of his most zealous followers. — Ll. 32, 34, 36 are versi tronchi: see IV, 56.

33. Ciuffetto, 'forelock.'

37. Accisma, 'fashions': cf. Old French acesmer, 'arrange.'

 Tu che forse vedrai lo sole in breve,
 S' egli non vuol qui tosto seguitarmi,
 Sì di vivanda che stretta di neve
 Non rechi la vittoria al Noarese,
 Ch' altrimenti acquistar non saria lieve.' 60
 Poi che l' un piè per girsene sospese,
 Maometto mi disse esta parola ;
 Indi a partirsi in terra lo distese.
 Un altro, che forata avea la gola
 E tronco il naso infin sotto le ciglia, 65
 E non avea ma' ch' un' orecchia sola,
 Restato a riguardar per maraviglia
 Con gli altri, innanzi agli altri aprì la canna,
 Ch' era di fuor d' ogni parte vermiglia ;
 E disse : 'Tu, cui colpa non condanna, 70
 E cui io vidi su in terra Latina,
 Se troppa simiglianza non m' inganna,
 Rimembriti di Pier da Medicina,
 Se mai torni a veder lo dolce piano

55. S'armi, 'provide himself,' is to be connected with di vivanda in l. 58. Fra Dolcino, as he was generally called (though not a friar), became the leader of the heretical sect called the Apostolic Brethren, whose aim was to bring the Church and mankind back to a state of primitive simplicity. He made many converts in northern Italy. A crusade having been proclaimed against him by Clement V, he took refuge, in the winter of 1306, in the stronghold of Zebello, where he was besieged for three months and finally taken, after three days' fighting. He was put to death in Novara. According to Dante's version, he was obliged by snow and famine to surrender.

58. Stretta, 'block.'

59. Al Noarese, 'to the Novarese,' the people of Novara.

61. Mahomet is so eager to give this warning that he speaks while his foot is uplifted to depart.

66. Ma' = più.

68. Canna, 'gullet': cf. VI, 27.

73. Of this acquaintance of the poet, nothing is known. Medicina is a little town near Bologna. The dolce piano is the plain of the Po, sloping from Vercelli to the stronghold of Marcabò, near Ravenna.

Che da Vercelli a Marcabò dichina. 75
 E fa' saper ai due miglior di Fano,
 A messer Guido ed anco ad Angiolello,
 Che, se l' antiveder qui non è vano,
 Gittati saran fuor di lor vasello
 E mazzerati presso alla Cattolica, 80
 Per tradimento d' un tiranno fello.
 Tra l' isola di Cipri e di Maiolica
 Non vide mai sì gran fallo Nettuno,
 Non da pirati, non da gente Argolica.
 Quel traditor che vede pur con l' uno, 85
 E tien la terra che tal è qui meco
 Vorrebbe di vedere esser digiuno,
 Farà venirli a parlamento seco ;
 Poi farà sì che al vento di Focara
 Non farà lor mestier voto nè preco.' 90
 Ed io a lui : ' Dimostrami e dichiara,
 Se vuoi ch' io porti su di te novella,
 Chi è colui dalla veduta amara.'
 Allor pose la manò alla mascella

77. Guido del Cassero and Agnoletto di Carignano belonged to opposing factions in the town of Fano; almost nothing else is known of them, nor have we any other information about the crime here predicted.

79. Vasello, 'bark.'

80. Mazzerati, 'drowned.' Cattolica : a place on the Adriatic between Rimini and Pesaro. Ll. 80, 82, 84 are versi sdruciolli : see XV, 1.

82. Cipri, 'Cyprus.' Maiolica, 'Majorca.' From one end of the Mediterranean to the other.

84. Gente Argolica (Æn., II, 78), 'Argolic people,' i. e., Greeks, famous of old as sea-robbers.

85. Uno, sc., occhio : Malatestino (XXVII, 46) was one-eyed.

86. Terra : Rimini. Tal : Curio (cf. l. 102).

87. Wishes he had never seen: cf. XVIII, 42.

88. Parlamento, 'parley.'

90. They need offer no vow nor prayer to the wind of Focara, i. e., they need have no fear of being shipwrecked, because they will be already drowned. The squalls blowing from Focara (near 'la Cattolica') were dangerous to sailors.

93. That is, the one who wishes he had never seen Rimini: cf. l. 87.

D' un suo compagno, e la bocca gli aperse 95
 Gridando : ' Questi è desso, e non favella.
 Questi, scacciato, il dubitar sommerse
 In Cesare, affermando che il fornito
 Sempre con danno l' attender sofferse.'
 O quanto mi pareva sbigottito, 100
 Con la lingua tagliata nella strozza,
 Curio, ch' a dire fu così ardito !
 Ed un ch' avea l' una e l' altra man mozza,
 Levando i moncherin per l' aura fosca,
 Sì che il sangue faceva la faccia sozza, 105
 Gridò : ' Ricordera' ti anche del Mosca,
 Che dissi, lasso ! " Capo ha cosa fatta,"
 Che fu il mal seme per la gente toska.'
 Ed io gli aggiunsi : ' E morte di tua schiatta.'
 Per ch' egli, accumulando duol con duolo, 110
 Sen gio come persona trista e matta.
 Ma io rimasi a riguardar lo stuolo,
 E vidi cosa ch' io avrei paura,
 Senza più prova, di contarla solo ;
 Se non che coscienza mi assicura, 115
 La buona compagnia che l' uom francheggia
 Sotto l' osbergo del sentirsi pura.
 Io vidi certo, ed ancor par ch' io 'l veggia,
 Un busto senza capo andar, sì come
 Andavan gli altri della trista greggia. 120

98. 'The man prepared has always lost by delay (endured waiting to his loss)' is a paraphrase of the words of Curio in Phars., I, 281: 'semper nocuit differre paratis.'

100. Sbigottito, 'aghast.'

101. Strozza, 'throat.'

104. Moncherin, 'stumps.'

112. Stuolo: cf. XIV, 32.

116. 'That good companion that emboldens a man.'

117. 'Under the hauberk of conscious purity.'

E il capo tronco tenea per le chiome,

122. Pesol, 'dangling.'

126. Governa, 'ordains.'

128. Con tutta la testa, 'head and all': cf. XXII, 147.

132. Cf. Lamentations i, 12: 'behold, and see if there be any sorrow like unto my sorrow.'

135. Mai = mali: 'the wicked encouragement.' The great weight of manuscript evidence is in favor of the reading re Giovanni, instead of re giovane, and it must be confessed that Giovanni makes a much smoother line. But Bertran's relations were with Henry II and his oldest son, also named Henry, and commonly called 'the young king'; he had dealings also with Richard (afterwards Richard I), but none with John (subsequently King John). Either Dante or his first copyists must have made a blunder: inasmuch as there is every reason to believe that Dante was familiar with Bertran's poems and the Provençal biography of him, we may confidently ascribe the mistake to the copyists. At that time giovane and Giovanni might be spelled exactly alike.

138. Malvagi pungelli, 'evil instigations.' For the story of Absalom and Ahithophel, see II Samuel xiv-xviii.

Partito porto il mio cerebro, lasso !

140

Dal suo principio ch' è in questo troncone.

Così s' osserva in me lo contrapasso.'

141. The 'source' of the brain is the spinal column. Troncone, 'trunk.'

142. Contra passo, 'retribution': the law of retaliation, according to which the penalties are meted out in Hell. Cf. Exod. xxi, 24; Levit. xxiv, 20; Deut. xix, 21; Mat. v, 38.

CANTO XXIX

ARGUMENT

THE sight of the sowers of discord exercises a curious fascination on the beholder, who gazes on their 'strange wounds' with 'drunken eyes' until he is brought to his senses by a reproof from Virgil. In other words, Dante, who was himself prone to strife, in his contemplation of this sin is beginning to feel more satisfaction than abhorrence, and needs to be warned by Reason that he is not meditating in the proper spirit. A similar lapse is described at the end of the next canto. Dante attempts to justify his eagerness by the statement that he was searching for the shade of Geri del Bello, a first cousin of his father, who is punished in this ditch. The early commentators give Geri a black character; but we really know little of him except that his house was damaged by the Ghibellines in 1260, that he received compensation for it from the Guelfs in 1269, and that he was killed by one of the Sacchetti. The resulting feud between the families was ended by a reconciliation in 1342. In 1300 his death, to Dante's shame, was still unavenged. Vengeance for a relative's murder was regarded, in spite of Christian teaching, as a part of a gentleman's duty. This doctrine is explicitly laid down by Brunetto Latini in his Tesoretto, XVIII. Dante himself wrote, in Canzone XII, 83:

'Chè bell' onor s' acquista in far vendetta.'

Forese Donati, in his third sonnet to Dante, derisively said to him:

'Ben so che fosti figliuol d' Allaghieri,
E accorgomene pur alla vendetta
Che facesti di lui sì bella e netta.'

The tenth valley — the last of Malebolge — contains falsifiers of all kinds. Those described fall into four classes: falsifiers of metals, or alchemists; falsifiers of persons, or impersonators; falsifiers of coin, or counterfeiters; falsifiers of words, or liars. It is to be noted that the alchemists here confined are damned as cheats, not as disturbers of God's creation. The sin of all these culprits is symbolized by devastating disease, which alters their appearance: as they tried to change the aspect of things, so are they transformed by loathsome maladies.

See I. Del Lungo, Dal secolo e dal poema di Dante, 1898, p. 65 (Una vendetta in Firenze).

La molta gente e le diverse piaghe
 Avean le luci mie sì inebriate
 Che dello stare a piangere eran vaghe.
 Ma Virgilio mi disse : 'Chè pur guate?
 Perchè la vista tua pur sì soffolge 5
 Laggiù tra l' ombre triste smozzicate?
 Tu non hai fatto sì all' altre bolge.
 Pensa, se tu annoverar le credi,
 Che miglia ventidue la valle volge ;
 E già la luna è sotto i nostri piedi. 10
 Lo tempo è poco omai che n' è concesso,
 Ed altro è da veder che tu non vedi.'
 'Se tu avessi,' rispos' io appresso,
 'Atteso alla cagion per ch' io guardava,
 Forse m' avresti ancor lo star dimesso.' 15
 Parte sen già, ed io retro gli andava,
 Lo Duca, già facendo la risposta,
 E soggiungendo : ' Dentro a quella cava
 Dov' io teneva or gli occhi sì a posta,

1. Diverse, 'strange': cf. XXII, 10; XXIV, 83.

2. Luci, 'eyes.'

3. Vaghe, 'eager.'

4. Chè pur guate, 'why dost thou naught but stare?' Cf. V, 19.

5. Si soffolge, 'rests.'

6. Smozzicate, 'mutilated.'

8. Annoverar, 'count.'

9. We learn from XXX, 86, that the 10th and last bolgia is eleven miles in circumference. These figures do not afford a clue for any further computations; they give, however, an impression of exactness, and they indicate a near approach to the centre of the earth; furthermore, they suggest by contrast the vast dimensions of the upper circles. The number 22 was one that would naturally occur to Dante in speaking of a circle, because the relation of circumference to diameter was expressed by the ratio of 22 to 7.

10. The moon being under their feet, the sun must be over their heads: it is about noon in Jerusalem.

15. Dimesso, 'granted.'

16. Parte, 'while.' The ed is untranslatable: cf. XIX, 3. The construction is: Parte se ne già lo Duca, (ed) io retro gli andava, già facendo, etc.

19. A posta, 'fixed.'

Credo che un spirto del mio sangue pianga 20
 La colpa che laggiù cotanto costa.
 Allor disse il Maestro : ' Non si franga
 Lo tuo pensier da qui innanzi sopr' ello.
 Attendi ad altro, ed ei là si rimanga.
 Ch' io vidi lui a piè del ponticello 25
 Mostrarti, e minacciar forte col dito,
 Ed udì 'l nominar Geri del Bello.
 Tu eri allor sì del tutto impedito
 Sopra colui che già tenne Altaforte
 Che non guardasti in là, sì fu partito.' 30
 'O Duca mio, la violenta morte
 Che non gli è vendicata ancor,' diss' io,
 'Per alcun che dell' onta sia consorte,
 Fece lui disdegnoso ; ond' ei sen giò
 Senza parlarmi, sì com' io stimo. 35
 Ed in ciò m' ha e' fatto a sè più pio.'
 Così parlammo infino al loco primo
 Che dello scoglio l' altra valle mostra,
 Se più lume vi fosse, tutto ad imo.
 Quando noi fummo in sull' ultima chiostra 40
 Di Malebolge, sì che i suoi conversi
 Potean parere alla veduta nostra,

22. 'Let not thy thought shatter itself upon him,' like a missile hurled violently at something hard.

28. Impedito, 'absorbed.' Altaforte, or Hautefort (Provençal Autafort), was the castle of Bertran de Born.

30. In là, 'that way.' Sì, 'until': cf. XIX, 44.

33. Consorte, 'partner': by any of his relatives.

36. The thought of Geri's just grievance against him makes Dante more compassionate.

38. Dello = dallo. L' altra valle: the 10th bolgia.

39. (And) if there were more light, (would reveal it) quite to the bottom.

40. Chiostra means 'enclosure' and also 'cloister'; the latter sense suggests the 'lay brothers' (conversi) of l. 41.

Lamenti saettaron me diversi,
 Che di pietà ferrati avean gli strali ;
 Ond' io gli orecchi colle man copersi. 45
 Qual dolor fora, se degli spedali
 Di Valdichiana tra il luglio e il settembre,
 E di Maremma e di Sardigna, i mali
 Fossero in una fossa tutti insembre,
 Tal era quivi, e tal puzzo n' usciva 50
 Qual suol venir delle marcite membre.
 Noi discendemmo in sull' ultima riva
 Del lungo scoglio, pur da man sinistra,
 Ed allor fu la mia vista più viva
 Giù ver lo fondo, là 've la ministra 55
 Dell' alto Sire, infallibil giustizia,
 Punisce i falsator che qui registra.
 Non credo che a veder maggior tristizia
 Fosse in Egina il popol tutto infermo,
 Quando fu l' aer sì pien di malizia 60
 Che gli animali infino al picciol vermo

43. Diversi: cf. l. 1.

44. Ferrati, 'headed,' 'pointed.' Strali, 'shafts.'

46. The qual is correlative with tal in l. 50. The swampy Valdichiana and Maremma (in eastern and western Tuscany) and the fens of Sardinia were noted haunts of malaria in the hot season.

48. Mali, 'diseases.'

49. Insembre = insieme.

50. Tal, sc., dolor.

51. Delle = dalle. Membre = membra.

52. Riva: the further, inner bank of the 10th and last bolgia. The poets climb down, on the left, from the ridge to the bank itself; they do not mount the ridge again.

55. 'Ve = ove.

57. Qui: on earth.

58. Construe: Non credo che il popolo tutto infermo in Egina fosse maggior tristizia ('sadder') a veder . . . The second member of the comparison begins with che in l. 65. A pest sent by Juno carried off the inhabitants and even the animals that occupied the island of Ægina; afterwards, at the prayer of Æacus, the sole survivor, Jupiter restored the population by turning ants into men: Met., VII, 518 ff. Cf. Conv., IV, xxvii, 100-8.

Cascaron tutti, e poi le genti antiche,
 Secondo che i poeti hanno per fermo,
 Si ristorar di seme di formiche,
 Ch' era a veder per quella oscura valle 65
 Languir gli spirti per diverse biche.
 Qual sopra il ventre, e qual sopra le spalle
 L' un dell' altro giacea, e qual carpone
 Si trasmutava per lo tristo calle.
 Passo passo andavam senza sermone, 70
 Guardando ed ascoltando gli ammalati,
 Che non potean levar le lor persone.
 Io vidi due sedere a sè poggiati,
 Come a scaldar si poggia tegghia a tegghia,
 Dal capo al piè di schianze maculati. 75
 E non vidi giammai menare stregghia
 Da ragazzo aspettato dal signorso,
 Nè da colui che mal volentier vegghia,
 Come ciascun menava spesso il morso
 Dell' unghie sopra sè per la gran rabbia 80
 Del pizzicor, che non ha più soccorso.
 E sì traevan giù l' unghie la scabbia,
 Come coltel di scardova le scaglie,
 O d' altro pesce che più larghe l' abbia.
 'O tu che colle dita ti dismaglie,' 85
 Cominciò il Duca mio all' un di loro,

66. Biche, 'stacks': cf. IX, 78.

74. Tegghia, 'pan.'

75. Schianze, 'scabs.'

76. Stregghia = striglia, 'currycomb.'

77. Ragazzo, 'stable-boy.' Signorso = signor suo.

78. Vegghia, 'stays awake': one who is in a hurry to get to bed.

79. Morso, 'bite,' i. e., edge.

81. Pizzicor, 'itching.'

83. Scardova, 'breast.'

85. Dismaglie, 'dismallest': cf. V, 19.

'E che fai d' esse tal volta tanaglie,
 Dinne s' alcun Latino è tra costoro
 Che son quinc' entro, se l' unghia ti basti
 Eternalmente a cotesto lavoro.' 90
 'Latin sem noi, che tu vedi sì guasti
 Qui ambedue,' rispose l' un piangendo :
 'Ma tu chi se', che di noi domandasti?'
 E il Duca disse : 'Io son un che discendo
 Con questo vivo giù di balzo in balzo, 95
 E di mostrar l' inferno a lui intendo.'
 Allor si ruppe lo comun rincalzo ;
 E tremando ciascuno a me si volse
 Con altri che l' udiron di rimbalzo.
 Lo buon Maestro a me tutto s' accolse, 100
 Dicendo : 'Di' a lor ciò che tu vuoi.'
 Ed io incominciai, poscia ch' ei volse :
 'Se la vostra memoria non s' imboli
 Nel primo mondo dall' umane menti,
 Ma s' ella viva sotto molti soli, 105
 Ditemi chi voi siete e di che genti.
 La vostra sponcia e fastidiosa pena
 Di palesarvi a me non vi spaventi.'

88. Latino: cf. XXII, 65.

89. Se l' unghia, etc.: formula of adjuration: cf. X, 82.

91. Sem = siamo: cf. IV, 41.

95. Balzo, 'ledge.'

96. Intendo, 'I am busied.'

97. Rincalzo, 'support,' of the two invalids who are propped against each other, like piers.

99. Di rimbalzo, 'on the rebound': who caught the words that were directed at the two lepers.

100. S' accolse, 'drew close.'

101. Vuoli = vuoi.

102. Volse = volle.

103. S' imboli, 'steal away.' Ll. 103, 105 contain the same construction as l. 89.

'Io fui d' Arezzo, ed Albero da Siena,'
 Rispose l' un, 'mi fe' mettere al foco ; 110
 Ma quel perch' io mori' qui non mi mena.
 Ver è ch' io dissi a lui, parlando a gioco,
 Io mi saprei levar per l' aere a volo ;
 E quei, che avea vaghezza e senno poco,
 Volle ch' io gli mostrassi l' arte ; e solo 115
 Perch' io nol feci Dedalo, mi fece
 Ardere a tal, che l' avea per figliuolo.
 Ma nell' ultima bolgia delle diece
 Me per alchìmia che nel mondo usai
 Dannò Minos, a cui fallar non lece.' 120
 Ed io dissi al Poeta : 'Or fu giammai
 Gente sì vana come la sanese?
 Certo non la francesca sì d' assai.'
 Onde l' altro lebbroso, che m' intese,
 Rispose al detto mio : 'Trammene Stricca, 125
 Che seppe far le temperate spese ;
 E Niccolò, che la costuma ricca

109. Most of the early commentators give the name of the speaker as Griffolino; a 'Maestro Griffolino da Arezzo' is attested in Bologna in 1259. Albero da Siena belonged to a rich and noble family, and was alive as late as 1294; nothing more is known of him.

111. One of the early commentators, Jacopo della Lana, says that Griffolino was burned for heresy. But what brings him here is alchemy.

114. Vaghezza, 'curiosity.'

116. Because I did not teach him to fly like Dædalus. Cf. XVII, 109.

117. A tal, 'by a certain man': the early commentators say it was the bishop of Siena. The latter part of the line probably means: 'who loved him (Albero) as a son.'

120. Lece, 'it is permitted.'

122. Vana, 'silly.' The foolishness of the Sienese was a standing joke in the rival city of Florence.

124. We learn in l. 136 that 'the other leper' is Capocchio. — Intese, 'heard.'

125. Trammene, 'except': evidently ironical. Stricca: probably Giovanni Stricca de' Salimbeni, mayor of Bologna in 1276 and 1286.

127. Niccolò, said to be a brother of Stricca. Capocchio calls him the inventor of the 'costly fashion of the clove,' that is, apparently, the one who

Del garofano prima discoperse
 Nell' orto dove tal seme s' appicca ;
 E tranne la brigata in che disperse 130
 Caccia d' Ascian la vigna e la gran fronda,
 E l' Abbagliato il suo senno proferse.
 Ma perchè sappi chi sì ti seconda
 Contra i Sanesi, aguzza ver me l' occhio
 Sì che la faccia mia ben ti risponda ; 135
 Sì vedrai ch' io son l' ombra di Capocchio,
 Che falsai li metalli con alchìmia.
 E ti dei ricordar, se ben t' adocchio,
 Com' io fui di natura buona scimia.'

introduced into Siena the use of cloves as a spice. Cloves, which were imported from the East, paid a heavy duty.

129. 'The garden where such seed takes root' is Siena, where a foolish custom, once started, is bound to thrive.

130. Excepting also the brigata spenderaccia, or Spendthrifts' Club, a group of young men who vied with one another in extravagance. — Disperse, 'squandered.'

131. Caccia d' Ascian is perhaps the poet known as Caccia da Siena. Vigna, 'vineyards.' Fronda, 'forests.'

132. L' Abbagliato : a nickname of Bartolommeo Folcacchieri, a brother of the poet Folcacchiero. He held important offices, and lived as late as 1300. — Proferse, 'displayed.'

136. Capocchio was burned alive in Siena in 1293.

138. Se ben t' adocchio, 'if I descry thee aright': if thou art really the man I think.

139. Scimia = scimmia, 'ape.'

CANTO XXX

ARGUMENT

FALSE personation is represented by Myrrha of Cyprus and Gianni Schicchi of Florence; counterfeiting by the counts of Romena and their agent, Master Adam; lying by Potiphar's wife and Sinon the Greek. Before leaving this valley, Dante, listening to a vulgar altercation, shows the same weakness for which he was rebuked in the preceding canto.

Nel tempo che Giunone era crucciata
 Per Semelè contra il sangue tebano, —
 Come mostrò una ed altra fiata, —
 Atamante divenne tanto insano
 Che, veggendo la moglie con due figli 5
 Andar carcata da ciascuna mano,
 Gridò: 'Tendiam le reti, sì ch' io pigli
 La leonessa e i leoncini al varco.'
 E poi distese i dispietati artigli,
 Prendendo l' un che avea nome Learco, 10
 E rotollo, e percosselo ad un sasso.
 E quella s' annegò con l' altro carco.
 E quando la fortuna volse in basso

1. Juno was enraged at the royal family of Thebes on account of the love of Jupiter and Semèle, daughter of Cadmus, the founder and king of that city. Cf. Met., III, 253 ff.

2. For the accentuation Semelè, see V, 4. In Latin poetry the ictus fell on the final syllable of such names as Sēmēlê, Hēcātê, Tisiphônê: cf. Met., III, 203; Æn., IV, 609, X, 761.

3. The two instances are the destruction of Semele and the tragic incident that follows (Met., IV, 512 ff.).

5. La moglie: Ino, sister of Semele and nurse of Bacchus, Semele's child by Jupiter. Ino and Athāmas had two children, Learchus and Melicerta.

11. Rotollo = lo rotò, 'whirled him.'

12. Quella: Ino. L' altro carco: cf. l. 6.

L' altezza de' Troian che tutto ardiva,
 Sì che insieme col regno il re fu casso, 15
 Ecuba trista, misera e cattiva,
 Poscia che vide Polissena morta,
 E del suo Polidoro in su la riva
 Del mar si fu la dolorosa accorta,
 Forsennata latrò sì come cane ; 20
 Tanto il dolor le fe' la mente torta.
 Ma nè di Tebe furie nè Troiane
 Si vider mai in alcun tanto crude,
 Non punger bestie, non che membra umane,
 Quant' io vidi in due ombre smorte e nude 25
 Che mordendo correvan di quel modo
 Che il porco quando del porcil si schiude.
 L' una giunse a Capocchio, ed in sul nodo
 Del collo l' assannò sì che tirando
 Grattar gli fece il ventre al fondo sodo. 30
 E l' Aretin, che rimase tremando,
 Mi disse : ' Quel folletto è Gianni Schicchi,
 E va rabbioso altrui così conciando.'

15. Casso, 'undone.' Cf. Met., XIII, 404: 'Troia simul Priamusque cadunt.'

16. Cattiva, 'captive.' After the fall of Troy, Hecuba and her daughter Polyxena were carried away as slaves. On the way to Greece Polyxena was slain as a victim on the tomb of Achilles, to whom she had been promised. Hecuba's son, Polydorus, who had been entrusted to Polymestor, king of Thrace, was murdered by him and thrown into the sea. As the unhappy mother went to wash from her hands the blood of Polyxena, she saw the corpse of her son on the shore. In her frenzy she tore out Polymestor's eyes, and when she tried to speak, began to bark. Cf. Met., XIII, 399-575.

21. Torta, 'distraught.'

22. No furies (such as possessed Athamas and Hecuba) were ever beheld possessing any one, beast or man, equal in cruelty to the furies that possessed two pallid shades in the 10th bolgia.

24. 'Goading beasts, much less human flesh.'

28. Nodo, 'nape.'

29. Assannò, 'gored.'

31. L' Aretin: Griffolino.

32. Folletto, 'goblin.'

'O,' diss' io lui, 'se l' altro non ti ficchi
 Li denti addosso, non ti sia fatica 35
 A dir chi è, pria che di qui si spicchi.'
 Ed egli a me: 'Quell' è l' anima antica
 Di Mirra scellerata, che divenne
 Al padre, fuor del dritto amore, amica.
 Questa a peccar con esso così venne, 40
 Falsificando sè in altrui forma,
 Come l' altro che là sen va sostiene,
 Per guadagnar la donna della torma,
 Falsificare in sè Buoso Donati,
 Testando e dando al testamento norma.' 45
 E poi che i duo rabbiosi fur passati,
 Sopra cu' io avea l' occhio tenuto,
 Rivolsilo a guardar gli altri mal nati.
 Io vidi un fatto a guisa di liuto,
 Pur ch' egli avesse avuta l' anguinaia 50
 Tronca dal lato che l' uomo ha forcuto.
 La grave idropisì, che sì dispaia
 Le membra, con l' umor che mal converte,
 Che il viso non risponde alla ventraia,

34. L' altro, sc., jolletto. Formula of adjuration: cf. X, 82.

36. Si spicchi, 'he breaks away.'

38. Myrrha was the daughter of Cinyras, king of Cyprus. Cf. Met., X, 298 ff.

42. L' altro: Gianni Schicchi. Sostenne, 'undertook.' Schicchi, a famous mimic, belonged to the house of Cavalcanti. According to the story, Buoso Donati, a wealthy Guelph, bequeathed a large part of his property to churches and monasteries. To prevent the execution of this will, his son Taddeo concealed his death and engaged Gianni to impersonate the dying Buoso. This he did successfully, dictating a new will (and 'giving it due form') and bequeathing to himself, Gianni Schicchi, a fine mare (or, as others say, a mule) — 'the queen (or leader) of the herd.'

49. This dropsical spirit, if he had had his legs cut off at the groin, would have looked, with his monstrous belly and small head and neck, like a lute lying on the ground.

52. Dispaia, 'disproportions.'

53. Converte, 'digests.'

Faceva a lui tener le labbra aperte, 55
 Come l' etico fa, che per la sete

63. Cf. the 'rich man' in Luke xvi, 24.

65. The Casentino is a district in the mountains at the head of the Arno. Dante was there in 1289 and in 1311. The ruins of the Castle of Romena are still to be seen on a hill beside the river.

68. Vie più, 'far more.'

69. Mi discarno, 'I am withered.'

71. Tragge (= trae) cagion, 'takes advantage.'

74. Lega, 'composition,' of metal used in making the gold florin. This coin, first minted in 1253, had on one side the image of John the Baptist, the patron of Florence, on the other the lily-flower from which it was named.

Di Guido, o d' Alessandro, o di lor frate,

 Ombre che van dintorno dicon vero ; 80
 Ma che mi val, c' ho le membra legate?
 S' io fossi pur di tanto ancor leggiero
 Ch' io potessi in cent' anni andare un' oncia,
 Io sarei messo già per lo sentiero,
 Cercando lui tra questa gente sconcia, 85

 E men d' un mezzo di traverso non ci ha.
 Io son per lor tra sì fatta famiglia :
 Ei m' indussero a battere i fiorini
 Che avevan tre carati di mondiglia.' 90
 Ed io a lui : ' Chi son li due tapini
 Che fumman come man bagnate il verno,
 Giacendo stretti a' tuoi destri confini?'

 Rispose, ' quand' io piovvì in questo greppo, 95
 E non credo che dieno in sempiterno.

77. The counts of Romena, at whose instigation he committed the crime. They were head over ears in debt. Guido died in 1292; Alessandro and two other brothers, Aghinolfo and Ildebrando, were still alive in 1300. A letter attributed to Dante consoles the sons of Aghinolfo for the death of Alessandro.

78. Fonte Branda was a fountain near the walls of Romena.

83. Oncia, 'inch.'

86. Con tutto che, 'although.' Cf. XXIX, 9.

87. Note the odd rhyme: nón ci ha, sconcia, oncia. Ci ha, 'there is.' The valley is not less than half a mile across; it must be very much wider than some of the bolge, perhaps in compensation for its small circumference.

90. Mondiglia, 'alloy.' His florins were 21 carats fine, instead of 24.

91. Tapini, 'wretches.'

92. Fumman, 'reek': cf. VII, 123. Verno = inverno: in winter time.

93. Confini, 'frontier.' Dante speaks of the huge belly as if it were a province.

94. Dierno = diedero.

95. Greppo, 'cliff.'

 Rispose quel ch’ avea enfiata l’ epa ;
 ‘E siati reo che tutto il mondo sallo.’ 120
 ‘E te sia rea la sete onde ti crepa,’ Disse il Greco, ‘la lingua, e l’ acqua marcia
 Che il ventre innanzi a gli occhi sì t’ assiepa.’
 Allora il monetier : ‘Così si squarcia
 La bocca tua per tuo mal come suole ; 125
 Chè s’ i’ ho sete ed umor mi rinfarcia,
 Tu hai l’ arsura e il capo che ti duole,
 E per leccar lo specchio di Narcisso
 Non vorresti a invitar molte parole.’
 Ad ascoltarli er’ io del tutto fisso, 130
 Quando il Maestro mi disse : ‘Or pur mira
 Che per poco è che teco non mi risso.’
 Quand’ io ’l senti’ a me parlar con ira,
 Volsimi verso lui con tal vergogna
 Ch’ ancor per la memoria mi si gira. 135
 E quale è quei che suo dannaggio sogna,
 Che sognando desidera sognare,
 Sì che quel ch’ è, come non fosse, agogna,

Ove sien genti in simigliante piato ;

Chè voler ciò udire è bassa voglia.’

144. Disgrava, ‘unburden.’

145. Fa’ ragion, ‘take care.’ Allato, ‘beside.’

146. Accoglia, ‘take.’

147. Piato, ‘wrangle.’

CANTO XXXI

ARGUMENT

As the poets cross the broad bank that intervenes between the tenth bolgia and the great central pit of Hell, Dante sees looming through the dusk, like the towers of a city, the forms of giants, visible from the waist up all around the mouth of the well. As far as we can judge, they are from sixty to eighty feet in total height. But the apparently precise dimensions given are vague to us, because of the variability of standards: one creature measures from neck to middle thirty palms, probably something like twenty feet; another, five ells, perhaps some thirty feet. One of these monsters, Antæus, picks up the travellers and sets them on the ice at the bottom of the hole. Dante speaks as if he did so without quitting his post; nothing but the giant's stoop is described, as he lifts them up, and his straightening when he has put them down. We are told, however, that, unlike his mates, he is not bound. Now, inasmuch as the last bolgia is eleven miles in circumference, and inasmuch as the poets walk for some time over the plain of ice before seeing, in the middle of it, the enormous figure of Lucifer, we must think of this pit as at least a mile wide; and since it is described in XVIII, 5, as 'un pozzo assai largo e profondo,' it can hardly be less than twice as deep as it is broad. It is obvious, then, that the giants, the upper half of whose bodies appears above the edge, cannot be standing on the bottom: their feet must rest on a ledge or shelf near the top of the wall; in fact, in XXXII, 16-7, we are told that when Dante and Virgil were on the bottom of the 'pozzo scuro,' they were 'sotto i piè del gigante, e assai più bassi.' Antæus, therefore, carrying the poets, must have left his place and climbed down the precipice; but of this descent our author, for reasons of his own, says not a word. Perhaps he conceived of himself as so terrified that he could recall nothing of the adventure but its awful beginning and end. It is likely, too, that he preferred to leave a gap for the reason set forth in the argument to Canto V.

We do not know how many giants there are in all. Those named are Nimrod, Ephialtes, Briareus, and Antæus — all, except the last, damned for their presumption in attempting to scale Heaven. Ephialtes and Briareus were among the most active at Phlegra, when the giants piled mountain upon mountain, and threatened the Gods. This combat is mentioned by Ovid (Met., I, 151-5), Statius (Thebaid, II, 595-6), and Lucan (Phars., IV, 593-7); and the two latter authorities speak of Briareus. Ephialtes is not named by any of the ancient poets that Dante seems to have known, but he is to be found in Servius's commentary on the Georgics, I, 180. Antæus, so Lucan tells us (Phars., IV, 597), did not participate in the fight, and therefore he is unbound in Dante's Hell; in Phars., IV, 593 ff., his misdeeds and his defeat by Hercules are related at length. The 'fable' of the battle of Phlegra doubtless represented to Dante merely the old pagan sages' idea of the revolt of the angels; the giants are stricken down by 'il sommo Giove,' the supreme Power. The Biblical Nimrod, then, is not out of place among them. The following particulars are culled from Gen. x, 8-10, and xi, 2-9: 'And Cush begat Nimrod: he began to be a mighty one in the earth. He was a mighty hunter before the Lord. . . . And the beginning of his kingdom was Babel, and Erech, and Accad, in the land of Shinar. . . . And it came to pass . . . that they found a plain in the land of Shinar; and they dwelt there. . . . And they said, Go to, let us build us a city and a tower, whose top may reach unto heaven. . . . So the Lord scattered them abroad from thence upon the face of all the earth: and they left off to build the city. Therefore is the name of it called Babel.' Nimrod, then, was held responsible for the audacious enterprise; and as early as Orosius and St. Augustine he was regarded by Christians as a giant. According to De Vulgari Eloquentia, I, vii, 24-31, it was 'sub persuasione gigantis' that man presumed to surpass his maker. In the confusion of tongues Dante's Nimrod has suffered more than his misguided fellows, for he speaks a language understood by no one else and can comprehend no other soul. His mind, too, is as dazed as his words are senseless. He can vent his feelings only by blowing the big horn with which, as a 'mighty hunter,' he is equipped.

The manifold crimes of the Lower Hell are due to pride and envy, and these sins are personified in Satan and the giants. Embedded in the central point of his kingdom, the arch-sinner, surrounded by a ring of fellow-rebels, holds his eternal court. The spirits that thought to rise so high are sunken at the bottom of the universe; their monstrous forms are fixed and impotent forevermore. This, rather than the Circle of Violence, is artistically their fit place; and here, no doubt, Dante would have put them, even if Virgil had not pointed the way (Æn., VI, 580-1):

'Hic genus antiquum terræ, Titania pubes,
Fulmine dejecti, fundo volvuntur in imo.'

For the pozzo, cf. G. Agnelli in Giorn. dant., VIII, 546.

Una medesma lingua pria mi morse
 Sì che mi tinse l' una e l' altra guancia,
 E poi la medicina mi riporse.
 Così od' io che soleva la lancia
 D' Achille e del suo padre esser cagione 5
 Prima di trista e poi di buona mancia.
 Noi demmo il dosso al misero vallone
 Su per la ripa che il cinge dintorno,
 Attraversando senza alcun sermone.
 Quivi era men che notte e men che giorno, 10
 Sì che il viso m' andava innanzi poco ;
 Ma io senti' sonare un alto corno
 Tanto ch' avrebbe ogni tuon fatto fioco,
 Che, contra sè la sua via seguitando,
 Dirizzò gli occhi miei tutti ad un loco. 15
 Dopo la dolorosa rotta, quando
 Carlo Magno perdè la santa gesta,
 Non sonò sì terribilmente Orlando.
 Poco portai in là volta la testa,
 Che mi parve veder molte alte torri ; 20

4. Virgil's tongue has the same power as the magic spear of Achilles and his father Peleus, which could both wound and cure: Met., XII, 112, XXIII, 171; Tristia, V, 2, 15-18; Remedia Amoris, 47. In Provençal and early Italian poetry there are many references to this spear; it was believed in the Middle Ages that a hurt inflicted by it could be healed only by another wound from the same weapon.

6. Mancia, 'gift.'

11. Viso, 'sight.'

13. Fioco: cf. I, 63.

14. It attracted my eyes to one spot, and my sight went out toward that place, following (in the opposite direction) the course of the sound that came from it. Seguitando goes with occhi.

16. At Roncesvalles Charlemagne lost his rear-guard, led by his peers (the 'blessed band') under the command of his nephew Roland. When all was lost, Roland blew his horn so loud that it was heard thirty leagues away: Chanson de Roland, ll. 1753-7. For the use of gesta as 'company,' see the early Italian Spagna, I, st. 35, l. 7: 'E tutta sua baronia e nobil gesta'; also II, 30, 7; XXXVI, 26, 8 ('santa gesta'); XL, 26, 4; etc.

Ond' io : 'Maestro, di', che terra è questa?'
 Ed egli a me : 'Però che tu trascorri
 Per le tenebre troppo dalla lungi,
 Avvien che poi nel 'maginare aborri.
 Tu vedrai ben, se tu là ti congiungi, 25
 Quanto il senso s' inganna di lontano ;
 Però alquanto più te stesso pungi.'
 Poi caramente mi prese per mano,
 E disse : 'Pria che noi siam più avanti,
 Acciocchè il fatto men ti paia strano, 30
 Sappi che non son torri, ma giganti,
 E son nel pozzo intorno dalla ripa
 Dall' umbilico in giuso tutti quanti.'
 Come, quando la nebbia si dissipa,
 Lo sguardo a poco a poco raffigura 35
 Ciò che ceta il vapor che l' aere stipa :
 Così forando l' aura grossa e scura,
 Più e più appressando in ver la sponda,
 Fuggiemi errore, e cresce' mi paura.
 Però che come in su la cerchia tonda 40
 Montereccion di torri si corona,
 Così la proda che il pozzo circonda
 Torreggiavan di mezza la persona
 Gli orribili giganti, cui minaccia
 Giove del cielo ancora quando tuona. 45

23. Troppo dalla lungi, 'from too far off.'

24. Aborri, 'strayest': cf. XXV, 144.

36. Stipa, 'thickens': cf. VII, 19.

39. Fuggiemi = mi fuggiva. — Cresce' mi = mi cresceva.

41. Montereccioni, a strong castle built by the Sienese, early in the 13th century, on a hill not far from the city, was surrounded by very high walls surmounted by twelve towers.

42. Proda, 'bank,' is the object of torreggiavan, 'betowered'; the subject is giganti.

45. Because of their attack upon Heaven: cf. Met., I, 151 ff.

Ed io scorgeva già d' alcun la faccia,
 Le spalle e il petto, e del ventre gran parte,
 E per le coste giù ambo le braccia.
 Natura certo, quando lasciò l' arte
 Di sì fatti animali, assai fe' bene, 50
 Per torre tali esecutori a Marte.
 E s' ella d' elefanti e di balene
 Non si pente, chi guarda sottilmente
 Più giusta e più discreta la ne tiene ;
 Chè dove l' argomento della mente 55
 S' aggiunge al mal volere ed alla possa,
 Nessun riparo vi può far la gente.
 La faccia sua mi pareva lunga e grossa
 Come la pina di san Pietro a Roma,
 Ed a sua proporzione eran l' altr' ossa ; 60
 Sì che la ripa, ch' era perizoma
 Dal mezzo in giù, ne mostrava ben tanto
 Di sopra che di giungere alla chioma
 Tre Frison s' averian dato mal vanto ;
 Però ch' io ne vedea trenta gran palmi 65
 Dal loco in giù dov' uomo affibbia il manto.

40. Lasciò l' arte, 'forsook the art,' i. e., ceased to produce such destructive creatures.

52. Nature continues to produce elephants and whales, but they have no intelligence and therefore are harmless. Her suppression of giants, then, shows fine discrimination.

55. Argomento, 'instrument.'

57. La gente, 'mankind.'

59. A pine cone of gilt bronze, originally perhaps 10 or 11 ft. high, which is said to have adorned the Mausoleum of Hadrian, stood in Dante's day in the fore-court of St. Peter's, and is now to be seen, somewhat mutilated, in the Vatican gardens.

61. The bank covered them — 'was an apron to them' — from the waist down. Perizoma is used in Gen. iii, 7: 'fecerunt sibi perizomata,' 'made themselves aprons.'

64. 'Three Frisians (standing on one another's shoulders) would have boasted in vain' that they could reach from the bank to the giant's hair. Frisians were noted for their tall stature.

66. From neck to waist.

'Rafel mai amech zabi almi,'
 Cominciò a gridar la fiera bocca,
 Cui non si convenian più dolci salmi.
 E il Duca mio ver lui : 'Anima sciocca, 70
 Tienti col corno, e con quel ti disfoga,
 Quand' ira o altra passion ti tocca.
 Cercati al collo, e troverai la soga
 Che il tien legato, o anima confusa,
 E vedi lui che il gran petto ti dogà.' 75
 Poi disse a me : 'Egli stesso s' accusa.
 Questi è Nembrotto, per lo cui mal coto
 Pure un linguaggio nel mondo non s' usa.
 Lasciamlo stare, e non parliamo a voto ;
 Chè così è a lui ciascun linguaggio 80
 Come il suo ad altrui, ch' a nullo è noto.'
 Facemmo adunque più lungo viaggio
 Volti a sinistra ; ed al trar d' un balestro
 Trovammo l' altro assai più fiero e maggio.
 A cinger lui, qual che fosse il maestro 85
 Non so io dir, ma ei tenea succinto
 Dinanzi l' altro, e dietro il braccio destro
 D' una catena, che il teneva avvinto
 Dal collo in giù, sì che in su lo scoperto

07. These words have no meaning. The line is at least two syllables short.

71. 'Keep to thy horn.'

73. Soga, 'rope.'

74. Il : the horn.

75. Lui : the horn. Doga, 'curves across,' like a barrel-stave.

77. Coto, 'thought.'

78. Pure, 'only.' Cf. Gen. xi, 1 : 'And the whole earth was of one language, and of one speech.'

84. L' altro, 'the next one.' Maggio = maggiore : cf. VI, 48.

85. Cf. XV, 12.

86. Succinto, 'bound.'

87. 'His right arm behind him, and the other in front.'

89. Lo scoperto, 'the uncovered part,' i. e., the part visible above the edge of the cliff. The chain coils spirally around him.

Si avvolgeva infino al giro quinto. 90
 'Questo superbo voll' esser esperto
 Di sua potenza contra il sommo Giove,'
 Disse il mio Duca, 'ond' egli ha cotal merto.
 Fialte ha nome; e fece le gran prove,
 Quando i giganti fer paura ai Dei. 95
 Le braccia ch' ei menò giammai non move.'
 Ed io a lui: 'S' esser puote, io vorrei
 Che dello smisurato Briareo
 Esperienza avesser gli occhi miei.'
 Ond' ei rispose: 'Tu vedrai Anteo 100
 Presso di qui, che parla, ed è disciolto,
 Che ne porrà nel fondo d' ogni reo.
 Quel che tu vuoi veder più là è molto,
 Ed è legato e fatto come questo,
 Salvo che più feroce par nel volto.' 105
 Non fu tremoto già tanto rubesto
 Che scotesse una torre così forte,
 Come Fialte a scotersi fu presto.
 Allor temett' io più che mai la morte,
 E non v' era mestier più che la dotta, 110
 S' io non avessi viste le ritorte.
 Noi procedemmo più avanti allotta,
 E venimmo ad Anteo, che ben cinqu' alle,

143. Sposò, 'set down,' on the 'bottom that swallows up Lucifer and Judas,' the 9th circle.

145. He rose like a mast that is being hoisted into its step on a ship.

CANTO XXXII

ARGUMENT

THE hardest, coldest heart is that of the traitor; from it all the warmth of human affection has been banished. The symbol of treachery is ice; and at the bottom of the well, buried in the circular plain formed by the freezing of Cocytus, are the sinners of the ninth and last circle. In the middle of the plain, at the centre of the earth, is Lucifer or Satan, called Dis by the ancients. Ice is used as a means of punishment in other visions of Hell, and in the Visio Alberici we find a graded immersion in ice; but nowhere else has it the significance that our poem gives it. Dante's traitors have no desire to be remembered on earth: the best they can hope is to be forgotten. Their evil disposition is unchanged, and even in Hell they are eager to betray one another. The cold, cruel spirit that pervades their congregation communicates itself to the beholder; the mere thought of their odious crimes arouses an instinct of vindictiveness. Scorn and hatred possess Dante as he contemplates them, and he feels impelled to pay them in their own coin.

The traitors fall into four divisions, according to the relation between themselves and their victims. They are arranged in the round plain in four concentric circles; taking them in order, from circumference to middle, these rings are called Caina, Antenora, Tolomèa ('Ptolemea'), Giudecca ('Judecca'). They are distinguished only by the position of the sinners in the ice: in the first three, the souls are embedded up to their heads; in the last, Giudecca, they are entirely covered. In Caina, the heads are bowed down; in Antenora they are apparently erect; in Tolomea they are thrown back. Caina contains traitors to kindred, Antenora traitors to country or party, Tolomea traitors to guests, Giudecca traitors to benefactors. In all cases the treachery involves murder. Caina and Giudecca are named respectively for Cain and Judas. Antenora derives its title from the Trojan Antenor, who bears an excellent character in the Iliad; in the later narratives, however, ascribed to Dares and Dictys, and regarded in the Middle Ages as an authentic account, he figures as the arch-traitor who hands over the Palladium to the Greeks (cf. Servius's commentary on Æn., I, 242). Tolomea is so called after the Ptolemy of I Macc. xvi, 11-6, a captain of Jericho, who murdered his father-in-law and two brothers-in-law at a banquet to which he had invited them.

S' io avessi le rime aspre e chioce,
 Come si converrebbe al tristo buco
 Sopra il qual pontan tutte l' altre rocce,
 Io premerei di mio concetto il suco
 Più pienamente; ma perch' io non l' abbo, 5
 Non senza tema a dicer mi conduco.
 Chè non è impresa da pigliare a gabbo
 Descriver fondo a tutto l' universo,
 Nè da lingua che chiami mamma e babbo.
 Ma quelle Donne aiutino il mio verso 10
 Ch' aiutaro Amfion a chiuder Tebe,
 Sì che dal fatto il dir non sia diverso.
 O sopra tutte mal creata plebe,
 Che stai nel loco onde parlare è duro,
 Me' foste state qui pecore o zebe. 15
 Come noi fummo giù nel pozzo scuro
 Sotto i piè del gigante, assai più bassi,
 Ed io mirava ancora all' alto muro,
 Dicere udimmi: 'Guarda come passi!
 Va' sì che tu non calchi con le piante 20
 Le teste de' fratei miseri lassi.'
 Per ch' io mi volsi, e vidimi davante
 E sotto i piedi un lago, che per gelo

16. Pozzo: in the Visio Alberici, IX, the mouth of the pit 'similis videbatur puteo.' See the argument at the head of the preceding canto.

19. Udimmi = mi udii. The two brothers who thus address Dante from the ice are, as we learn presently, the counts of Mangona.

Avea di vetro e non d' acqua sembiante.
 Non fece al corso suo sì grosso velo 25
 D' inverno la Danoia in Osteric,
 Nè Tanaï là sotto il freddo cielo,
 Com' era quivi ; chè, se Tambernìc
 Vi fosse su caduto, o Pietrapana,
 Non avria pur dall' orlo fatto cric. 30
 E come a gracidar si sta la rana
 Col muso fuor dell' acqua, quando sogna
 Di spigolar sovente la villana,
 Livide insin là dove appar vergogna
 Eran l' ombre dolenti nella ghiaccia, 35
 Mettendo i denti in nota di cicogna.
 Ognuna in giù tenea volta la faccia.
 Da bocca il freddo, e dagli occhi il cor tristo
 Tra lor testimonianza si procaccia.
 Quand' io ebbi d' intorno alquanto visto, 40
 Volsimi a' piedi, e vidi due sì stretti
 Che il pel del capo avieno insieme misto.
 'Ditemi voi, che sì stringete i petti,'
 Diss' io, 'chi siete.' E quei piegaro i colli ;

28. Tambernìc (or Tamberlic or Taberlic) is an unidentified mountain.

29. Pietrapana, now called Pania della Croce, is a rocky mountain in the Tuscan Apennines.

30. Cric is a word made to imitate the sound.

33. In the summer, the season when the country woman is apt to dream of gleaning.

34. As far as their faces: shame manifests itself by a blush.

36. Their teeth chatter like a stork's bill. Cf. Met., VI, 97: 'Ipsa sibi plaudat crepitante ciconia rostro.' Also Hugh of St. Victor, De Bestiis, I, 42: 'Ciconiæ sonum oris pro voce quatiante rostro faciunt.' And Brunetto Latini, Trésor, I, v, 161 (see Tor.).

38. Freddo and cor are subjects of procaccia, of which testimonianza is the object. The chattering teeth bear witness to the cold; the weeping eyes, to the sadness of the heart.

42. Avieno = avevano.

 Con legno legno mai spranga non cinse
 Forte così; ond' ei, come due becchi, 50
 Cozzaro insieme, tant' ira li vinse.

56. The Bisenzio is a little stream that runs near Prato and empties into the Arno.

57. Alberto, count of Mangona. Two of his sons, Napolcone and Alessandro, quarrelled over their inheritance and killed each other.

61. Mordrec, or Mordred, the treacherous nephew of King Arthur, was pierced by such a blow from Arthur's spear that, when the weapon was pulled out, a ray of sunlight traversed his body. The story is told in the Old French Lancelot du lac.

62. Con esso = con: cf. XXIII, 54.

63. Focaccia de' Cancellieri, of the White party of Pistoia, lay in wait, with other ruffians, for one of his relatives, Detto de' Cancellieri, a Black, and killed him in a tailor's shop.

65. Sassol Mascheroni is known to us only through an early commentator, who says he murdered a nephew to secure his inheritance.

Se Tosco se', ben sa' omai chi fu.
 E perchè non mi metti in più sermoni,
 Sappi ch' io fui il Camicion de' Pazzi,
 Ed aspetto Carlin che mi scagioni.'
 Poscia vid' io mille visi, cagnazzi 70
 Fatti per freddo : onde mi vien riprezzo,
 E verrà sempre, de' gelati guazzi.
 E mentre che andavamo in ver lo mezzo,
 Al quale ogni gravezza si raduna,
 Ed io tremava nell' eterno rezzo, 75
 Se voler fu o destino o fortuna
 Non so ; ma passeggiando tra le teste,
 Forte percossi il piè nel viso ad una.
 Piangendo mi sgridò : 'Perchè mi peste?
 Se tu non vieni a crescer la vendetta 80
 Di Mont' Aperti, perchè mi moleste?'
 Ed io : 'Maestro mio, or qui m' aspetta,
 Sì ch' io esca d' un dubbio per costui ;
 Poi mi farai, quantunque vorrai, fretta.'

67. Metti = metta. — In più sermoni, 'to more speech': cf. XIII, 21.

68. Of Camicion de' Pazzi nothing certain is known. He is said to have treacherously slain a kinsman named Ubertino.

69. Scagioni, 'exculpate,' i. e., make me seem innocent in comparison with himself. Carlin de' Pazzi is still alive and has not yet committed his great crime. It was in June, 1302, that he was bribed to surrender to the Florentine Blacks the castle of Piantravigne, containing a number of the foremost White and Ghibelline exiles, many of whom were slain. When he dies, he will come to the second division of the 9th circle, Antenora, reserved for betrayers of their country or party.

70. Cagnazzi, 'doglike,' their lips drawn by the cold. The sight is so horrible that Dante ever afterwards will shudder at the sight of frozen pools.

74. Si raduna, 'collects.' Cf. XXXIV, 110-1.

75. Rezzo, 'chill.'

81. The mention of Montaperti arouses Dante's suspicions. This was the disastrous defeat of the Florentine Guelphs in 1260 by the Siennese Ghibellines and their German allies. The rout was attributed to the traitor Bocca degli Abati, who, in the thick of a charge, cut off the hand of the standard-bearer to the Florentine cavalry. In 1266, when the Guelphs returned to power, he was banished.

Lo Duca stette ; ed io dissi a colui 85
 Che bestemmiava duramente ancora :
 ‘Qual se’ tu, che così rampogni altrui?’
 ‘Or tu chi se’, che vai per l’ Antenora
 Percotendo,’ rispose, ‘altrui le gote
 Sì che, se fossi vivo, troppo fora?’ 90
 ‘Vivo son io, e caro esser ti puote,’
 Fu mia risposta, ‘se domandi fama,
 Ch’ io metta il nome tuo tra l’ altre note.’
 Ed egli a me : ‘Del contrario ho io brama.
 Levati quinci, e non mi dar più lagna ! 95
 Chè mal sai lusingar per questa lama.’
 Allor lo presi per la cuticagna,
 E dissi : ‘E’ converrà che tu ti nomi
 O che capel qui su non ti rimagna.’
 Ond’ egli a me : ‘Perchè tu mi dischiomi, 100
 Nè ti dirò ch’ io sia, nè mostrerolti,
 Se mille fiate in sul capo mi tomi.’
 Io avea già i capelli in mano avvolti
 E tratti glien’ avea più d’ una ciocca,
 Latrando lui con gli occhi in giù raccolti, 105
 Quando un altro gridò : ‘Che hai tu, Bocca?’
 Non ti basta sonar con le mascelle,
 Se tu non latri? Qual diavol ti tocca?’
 ‘Omai,’ diss’ io, ‘non vo’ che tu favelle,

102. Tomi, ‘fallest.’

105. Raccolti, ‘bent’

107. Sonar, ‘clatter’: is it not enough for thy teeth to be chattering?

109. Vo = voglio.

Malvagio traditor, chè alla tua onta 110

 'Va' via,' rispose, 'e ciò che tu vuoi, conta;
 Ma non tacer, se tu di qua entr' eschi,
 Di quei ch' ebbe or così la lingua pronta.

113. Eschi=esca: formula of adjuration: cf. X, 82.

116. Buoso da Duera of Cremona, notorious for his faithlessness, was distrusted by friends and enemies. In 1265, being bribed by the French, he allowed the army of Charles of Anjou, on its way to the conquest of Naples, to pass by the Ghibelline forces that had been detailed to oppose it. He was accused also of appropriating money sent by Manfred to pay his soldiers.

117. Stanno freschi, 'are in the cool.' This is supposed to be the origin of the current phrase, star fresco.

118. 'Shouldst thou be asked who else was there.'

119. Tesauro di Beccheria of Pavia, abbot of Vallombrosa, was tortured and beheaded by the Guelfs of Florence for conducting secret negotiations with the Ghibelline exiles.

120. Segò . . . la gorgiera, 'sawed the gorget,' i. e., cut the throat.

121. Gianni de' Soldanier was a Ghibelline, who, after the defeat of his party in 1266, headed a mob against his former associates.

122. Ganelon is the famous traitor to Charlemagne, in the Chanson de Roland; it was he who brought about the destruction of the rear-guard at Roncesvalles and the death of Roland: cf. XXXI, 16-8. — The Ghibelline Tebaldello, a bastard of the Zambrasi family, surrendered to the Bolognese Guelfs his own city of Faenza in order to avenge himself on some Ghibellines from Bologna who had taken refuge there.

126. Two more political traitors (see D' Ovidio, 14-26) are frozen in one

CANTO XXXIII

ARGUMENT

IN this canto occurs an episode second only to that of Francesca da Rimini in its appeal to popular sympathy. It is in Antenora that Dante hears from Count Ugolino the frightful story of his death. Here, as in the case of the 'injured souls' of Francesca and her lover, the poet is stirred to the depths by the wrong done on earth to the lost sinner. Francesca's fate moves him to an agony of pity not unmixed with indignation; that of Ugolino and his children kindles in him even more wrath than compassion. In the two narratives we find the same exclusion of all detail that might blur the one overwhelming impression to be produced upon the reader; in both, the same concentration on that part of the experience to which no human heart can be indifferent. As Francesca's guilty love follows her to Hell and binds her forever to the partner of her sin, so Ugolino is coupled to the object of his just hate, on whom he wreaks eternal vengeance.

Ugolino della Gherardesca, count of Donoratico, belonged to an old and powerful family and held vast estates in western Tuscany. Inasmuch as he was vicar, in Sardinia, of King Enzo (son of Frederick II) and married his eldest son to Enzo's daughter, he must have been originally of the Imperial faction; but as early as 1275 he for some reason allied himself to the Tuscan Guelfs against Pisa, which was then Ghibelline. It was doubtless for this political treason that Dante condemned him to Antenora. His party was successful, and he secured readmission to the city. In fact, after 1284 he governed Pisa for the Guelfs, at first alone, later in company with his grandson, Nino Visconti, who appears in Purg. VIII, 53. But the Pisan Ghibellines, led by the turbulent and intriguing Archbishop Ruggieri degli Ubaldini, — who in 1288 plotted to surrender his city to the Genoese, and then broke faith with them, — revolted in that same year against the Guelf control. Ugolino was absent at the time, and Nino was driven from the town. In June Ugolino was invited to confer with the Ghibelline leaders. He returned to Pisa and held parley with the archbishop. Suddenly an alarm was given, and the Ghibellines, with a frenzied mob led by Ruggieri, attacked their opponents, whom they finally besieged in the city hall and, after severe fighting, captured. Ugolino was incarcerated with two of his sons, Gaddo and Uguccione, and two grandsons, Ugolino or Nino (called 'il Brigata') and Anselmuccio, the children of Guelfo, his firstborn. After some months the door of their jail was nailed up, and they were left to starve. When their bodies were taken out, several days after their death, they were found to be badly rat-bitten; and a couple of old chroniclers declare that the unfortunate prisoners had eaten one another's flesh, or, more specifically, their hands and arms. It was perhaps a desire to explain the mutilation in a more fitting way that led Dante to conceive of Ugolino, in his intolerable anguish, as gnawing his own hands. Nevertheless some modern commentators have imagined that Dante intended, in the last verse of Ugolino's speech, to imply that the bereaved father was driven to cannibalism.

Treachery to a traitor was thought to be not only permissible, but meritorious; and this belief is illustrated by Dante's treatment of one of the wretches in Tolomea. To be rude to him, he avers, was the part of true courtesy. In this division of the ninth circle are those who assassinated their own guests. Such betrayal as this severs all social bonds and puts the betrayer outside the pale of humanity. Dante expresses this idea allegorically by a startling device, which at the same time enables him to place in his lower world two or three heinous offenders still alive in 1300. As soon as this crime is committed, — so we are informed, — the sinner's soul descends to Hell, leaving the body, which, however, seems to remain alive, being occupied by a devil during the remainder of its natural term of existence. Thus it is written of Judas, at the Last Supper: 'after the sop Satan entered into him' (John xiii, 27). In Ps. lv, 15, it is said of treacherous friends, 'let them descend quick [i. e., alive] into hell.'

For a masterly discussion of this canto, see D' Ovidio ³, 3; see also F. De Sanctis, L' Ugolino di Dante in his Nuovi saggi critici, 1893 (6th ed.). La bocca sollevò dal fiero pasto
 Quel peccator, forbendola ai capelli
 Del capo ch' egli avea dietro guasto.
 Poi cominciò: 'Tu vuoi ch' io rinnovelli
 Disperato dolor che il cor mi preme

4. Cf. Æn., II, 3: 'Infandum, Regina, jubes renovare dolorem.'

Già pur pensando, pria ch' io ne favelli.
 Ma se le mie parole esser den seme
 Che frutti infamia al traditor ch' io rodo,
 Parlare e lagrimar vedrai insieme.
 I' non so chi tu sei, nè per che modo 10
 Venuto se' quaggiù; ma Fiorentino
 Mi sembri veramente quand' io t' odo.
 Tu dei saper ch' io fui Conte Ugolino,
 E questi l' Arcivescovo Ruggieri.
 Or ti dirò perch' io son tal vicino. 15
 Che per l' effetto de' suo' ma' pensieri,
 Fidandomi di lui, io fossi preso
 E poscia morto, dir non è mestieri.
 Però quel che non puoi avere inteso,
 Ciò è come la morte mia fu cruda, 20
 Udirai, e saprai se m' ha offeso.
 Breve pertugio dentro dalla muda
 La qual per me ha il titol della fame,
 E in che conviene ancor ch' altri si chiuda,
 M' avea mostrato per lo suo forame 25
 Più lune già, quand' io feci il mal sonno

7. Den = devono.

9. Cf. V, 126.

13. Dei = devi.

16. Ma' = mali, 'evil'.

21. Offeso, 'wronged': cf. V, 102, 100.

22. Muda, 'mew': a loft where birds are kept while they moult. Ugolino gives this name to the tower of the Gualandi da Sette Vie, where he was confined. After his death it was called 'la torre della fame.'

24. It was not until 1318 that the municipal authorities decided to discontinue the use of this prison, which was described as foul-smelling, devoid of conveniences, and very small.

26. Several moons had appeared through the cleft of the little slit that served as a window: i. e., several months had passed — from July 20, or thereabouts, to the beginning of February, 1288-9. Just before dawn of the day when the door is to be nailed up, Ugolino has an allegorical dream, from ll. 38-9 we learn that his companions have ominous dreams, but of a more literal character.

Che del futuro mi squarciò il velame.
 Questi pareva a me maestro e donno,
 Cacciando il lupo e i lupicini al monte
 Per che i Pisan veder Lucca non ponno, 30
 Con cagne magre, studiose e conte ;
 Gualandi con Sismondi e con Lanfranchi
 S' avea messi dinanzi dalla fronte.
 In picciol corso mi pareano stanchi
 Lo padre e i figli, e con l' acute scane 35
 Mi pareo lor veder fender li fianchi.
 Quando fui desto innanzi la dimane,
 Pianger senti' fra il sonno i miei figliuoli
 Ch' eran con meco, e domandar del pane.
 Ben se' crudel, se tu già non ti duoli, 40
 Pensando ciò ch' il mio cor s' annunziava !
 E se non piangi, di che pianger suoli?
 Già eran desti, e l' ora s' appressava
 Che il cibo ne soleva essere addotto,
 E per suo sogno ciascun dubitava : 45
 Ed io sentii chiavar l' uscio di sotto
 All' orribile torre ; ond' io guardai
 Nel viso a' miei figliuoi senza far motto.
 Io non piangeva ; sì dentro impietrai :
 Piangevan elli ; ed Anselmuccio mio 50

28. Questi: Ruggieri. Donno, 'lord': master of the hunt.

30. The mountain which prevents the Pisans from seeing Lucca is San Giuliano.

31. The 'thin, eager, trained hounds' evidently represent the furious Pisan mob.

32. The leaders of the Pisan Ghibellines; in the dream they figure as huntsmen.

35. Scane, 'fangs.'

46. Chiavar, 'nail': cf. Purg. VIII, 137; Par. XIX, 105.

49. Impietrai, 'I turned to stone.'

50 Anselmuccio: the younger of the two grandchildren.

Disse : "Tu guardi sì, padre ! Che hai?"
 Per ciò non lagrimai, nè rispos' io
 Tutto quel giorno, nè la notte appresso,
 Infìn che l' altro sol nel mondo uscìo.
 Come un poco di raggio si fu messo 55
 Nel doloroso carcere, ed io scorsi
 Per quattro visi il mio aspetto stesso,
 Ambo le mani per dolor mi morsi.
 Ed ei, pensando ch' io 'l fessi per voglia
 Di manicar, di subito levorsi, 60
 E disser : "Padre, assai ci fia men doglia
 Se tu mangi di noi : tu ne vestisti
 Queste misere carni, e tu le spoglia."
 Queta' mi allor per non farli più tristi.
 Quel dì e l' altro stemmo tutti muti. 65
 Ahi dura terra, perchè non t' apristi?
 Poscia che fummo al quarto dì venuti,
 Gaddo mi si gittò disteso a' piedi,
 Dicendo : "Padre mio, chè non m' aiuti?"
 Quivi morì ; e come tu mi vedi, 70
 Vid' io cascar li tre ad uno ad uno
 Tra il quinto dì e il sesto : ond' io mi diedi
 Già cieco a brancolar sopra ciascuno,
 E due dì li chiamai poi che fur morti.
 Poscia, più che il dolor, potè il digiuno.' 75
 Quand' ebbe detto ciò, con gli occhi torti
 Riprese il teschio misero coi denti,
 Che furo all' osso, come d' un can, forti.
 Ahi Pisa, vituperio delle genti

59. Fessi = jacessi.

60. Manicar = mangiare : cf. Vulg. El., I, xiii, 19. — Levorsì = si levarono.

75. Hunger did more than grief could do: it caused my death. Cf. *D' Ovidio*³, 63.

Del bel paese là dove il sì suona, 80
 Poi che i vicini a te punir son lenti,
 Movansi la Caprara e la Gorgona
 E faccian siepe ad Arno in su la foce,
 Sì ch' egli anneghi in te ogni persona.
 Chè se il Conte Ugolino aveva voce 85
 D' aver tradita te delle castella,
 Non dovei tu i figliuoi porre a tal croce.
 Innocenti facea l' età novella —
 Novella Tebe ! Uguccione e il Brigata
 E gli altri due che il canto suso appella. 90
 Noi passamm' oltre, là 've la gelata
 Ruvidamente un' altra gente fascia,
 Non volta in giù, ma tutta riversata.
 Lo pianto stesso lì pianger non lascia,
 E il duol, che trova in sugli occhi rintoppo, 95
 Si volve in entro a far crescer l' ambascia ;

80. Dante, like some others, classified the languages of Europe according to the word for 'yes,' Italian being the language of sì: cf. Vulg. El., I, 53-7. Provençal was called the langue d'oc.

81. I vicini: Lucca and Florence, which waged bitter war against Pisa.

82. Two small islands in the sea not far from the mouth of the Arno, beside which Pisa lies. Dante calls upon these islets to move up and dam the stream at its outlet.

85. Aveva voce, 'was reported.' The archbishop represented to the Pisans that Ugolino, in 1285, had betrayed them in the matter of five strongholds which he had allowed Lucca and Florence to occupy. In reality the cession of these castles was a necessary piece of diplomacy.

87. Dovei = dovevi.

88. The subject of jacca is età ('their youthful age'); the objects are Uguccione, Brigata, and gli altri due (Anselmuccio and Gaddo). Gaddo and Uguccione were Ugolino's sons, Brigata and Anselmuccio his grandsons. Gaddo and Brigata were in reality of mature age.

89. Thebes being the wickedest city of the ancients, Dante calls Pisa 'modern Thebes.' The repetition of novella must be intentional; it accentuates the contrast between the innocence of youth and the hoary iniquity of Pisa.

91. Gelata, 'ice.'

93. Not turned face downward, like those in Caina, but all upturned.

95. Rintoppo, 'hindrance.'

96. Ambascia, 'anguish.'

Chè le lagrime prime fanno groppo,
 E, sì come visiere di cristallo,
 Riempion sotto il ciglio tutto il coppo.
 Ed avvegna che, sì come d' un callo, 100
 Per la freddura ciascun sentimento
 Cessato avesse del mio viso stallo,
 Già mi pareva sentire alquanto vento ;
 Per ch' io : ' Maestro mio, questo chi move?
 Non è quaggiù ogni vapore spento?' 105
 Ond' egli a me : ' Avaccio sarai dove
 Di ciò ti farà l' occhio la risposta,
 Veggendo la cagion che il fiato piove.'
 Ed un de' tristi della fredda crosta
 Gridò a noi : ' O anime crudeli 110
 Tanto che data v' è l' ultima posta,
 Levatemi dal viso i duri veli,
 Sì ch' io sfoghi il dolor che il cor m' impregna,
 Un poco, pria che il pianto si raggeli.'
 Per ch' io a lui : ' Se vuoi ch' io ti sovvegna, 115
 Dimmi chi sei, e s' io non ti disbrigo,
 Al fondo della ghiaccia ir mi convegna.'
 Rispose adunque : ' Io son Frate Alberigo,

97. Groppo, 'knot,' i. e., a solid block of ice.

99. Coppo, 'cup.'

100. Avvegna che, 'although.' D' un = da un.

102. Cessato . . . stallo, 'ended its stay,' i. e., departed. — Del = dal.

105. Wind is a 'dry vapor': cf. Conv., I, iv, 36.

106. Avaccio, 'quickly.'

108. Che il fiato piove, 'which rains down (produces) the blast.'

111. This spirit thinks that Dante and Virgil must be going to Giudecca.

113. Impregna, 'swells.'

116. Disbrigo, 'rid.'

117. This oath seems to be uttered with false intent, as Dante's way lies, in any case, through 'the bottom of the ice.'

118. Alberigo de' Manfredi of Faenza, a frate gaudente, had two of his family murdered at a dinner, in his presence, in 1285. He gave the signal to the assassins by calling: 'Vengano le frutta!'

Io son quel delle frutta del mal orto,
 Che qui riprendo dattero per figo.' 120
 'O,' diss' io lui : 'Or sei tu ancor morto?'
 Ed egli a me : 'Come il mio corpo stea
 Nel mondo su, nulla scienza porto.
 Cotal vantaggio ha questa Tolomea
 Che spesse volte l' anima ci cade 125
 Innanzi ch' Atropòs mosca le dea.
 E perchè tu più volentier mi rade
 Le invetriate lagrime dal volto,
 Sappi che tosto che l' anima trade,
 Come fec' io, il corpo suo l' è tolto 130
 Da un demonio, che poscia il governa
 Mentre che il tempo suo tutto sia volto.
 Ella ruina in sì fatta cisterna.
 E forse pare ancor lo corpo suso
 Dell' ombra che di qua retro mi verna. 135
 Tu il dei saper, se tu vien pur mo giuso :
 Egli è Ser Branca d' Oria, e son più anni
 Poscia passati ch' ei fu sì racchiuso.'
 'Io credo,' diss' io lui, 'che tu m' inganni ;

120. Riprendo dattero per figo, 'am being repaid with interest,' a date being worth more than a fig.

121. Ancor = giù.

122. Stea = stia.

126. 'Before Atròpos (the Fate who cuts the thread of life) gives it a start.'
Dea = dia.

127. Rade = rada.

134. Suso : on earth.

135. Verna, 'is wintering.'

136. Dei = devi. Pur mo, 'only now.'

137. Branca d' Oria, of the famous Genoese family of Doria, was a rich and powerful noble of Genoa, who had great estates in Liguria, Corsica, and Sardinia. Apparently he lived until 1325. Aided by a relative not known to us by name, he murdered, probably in 1275, his father-in-law Michel Zanche, the Sardinian barrator whom we met in 'the sticky pitch' of the 8th ditch of Malebolge (XXII, 88).

Chè Branca d' Oria non morì unquanche, 140
 E mangia e bee e dorme e veste panni.
 'Nel fosso su,' diss' ei, 'di Malebranche,
 Là dove bolle la tenace pece,
 Non era giunto ancora Michel Zanche,
 Che questi lasciò un diavolo in sua vece 145
 Nel corpo suo, ed un suo prossimano
 Che il tradimento insieme con lui fece.
 Ma distendi oramai in qua la mano,
 Aprimi gli occhi.' Ed io non glieli apersi,
 E cortesia fu in lui esser villano. 150
 Ahi Genovesi, uomini diversi
 D' ogni costume, e pien d' ogni magagna,
 Perchè non siete voi del mondo spersi?
 Chè col peggiore spirto di Romagna
 Trovai di voi un tal che per sua opra 155
 In anima in Cocito già si bagna
 Ed in corpo par vivo ancor di sopra.

140. Unquanche, 'as yet.'

145. Branca's soul, leaving a devil in its stead, reached this ninth circle as soon as the murdered man's soul reached the 8th.

146. Ed un suo prossimano, 'and so did a relative of his.'

150. 'And it was courtesy to be rude to him.'

152. Diversi d' ogni costume, 'strange to all morality.' Magagna, 'corruption.'

153. Spersi = dispersi.

154. Alberigo de' Manfredi.

155. Branca d' Oria.

CANTO XXXIV

ARGUMENT

THE souls in the fourth division of the last circle are entirely covered by the frozen lake, through which they are seen like bits of straw blown into glass. They lie pell-mell in the ice, some curled up, some horizontal, some vertical — these last with head or feet upward, as they chanced to fall. Three sinners only — the worst of all humankind — have a different and more awful fate: they are crunched by the three mouths of Satan himself. Judas sold Christ, the founder of the Church; Brutus and Cassius betrayed Cæsar, the founder of the Empire. Church and Empire being co-ordinate powers, divinely established for the spiritual and temporal government of men, their founders were both sacred. But inasmuch as the spiritual kingdom is holier than the temporal, and inasmuch as Jesus was not only man but God, treason to Christ is wickeder than treason to the merely human Cæsar. Judas, then, is more tortured than his two companions; his back is rent by Satan's claws, and his head is inside the demon's mouth, while his legs, like those of the Simonists, dangle outside. He is chewed by the red face of Love of Evil, whereas Brutus and Cassius, head downward, hang respectively from the black face of Ignorance and the sallow face of Impotence.

In this Giudecca, the home of betrayers of their benefactors, the central figure is the arch-traitor and arch-ingrate, Lucifer. Here he fell when he was cast headlong from Heaven, and here he will remain, huge, hideous, and impassive, through all eternity. 'How art thou fallen from heaven, O Lucifer, son of the morning! how art thou cut down to the ground, which didst weaken the nations! For thou hast said in thine heart, I will ascend to heaven, I will exalt my throne above the stars of God: I will sit also upon the mount of the congregation, in the sides of the north: I will ascend above the heights of the clouds; I will be like the Most High. Yet thou shalt be brought down to hell, to the sides of the pit' (Isaiah xiv, 12-15). Christian interpretation applied these verses not only to an earthly ruler, but to a fallen angel as well. They naturally linked themselves to Luke x, 18: 'And he said unto them, I beheld Satan as lightning fall from heaven'; and to Rev. xii, 7-9: 'And there was war in heaven: Michael and his angels fought against the dragon; and the dragon fought and his angels, and prevailed not;

neither was their place found any more in heaven. And the great dragon was cast out, that old serpent, called the Devil, and Satan, which deceiveth the whole world: he was cast out into the earth, and his angels were cast out with him.' Taken together, these passages corroborate the ancient tradition of the revolt and fall of the angels (cf. the note to III, 7), and at the same time furnish ground for an identification of Lucifer with Satan, the Devil, the Serpent, and the Dragon. As we shall see from l. 127, Dante regarded Beelzebub as still another name for the same demon.

In spite of the abundance of realistic detail that makes us share with Dante the experiences of this canto, we must consider his portrayal of Satan as essentially allegorical. His Devil is the image of sin, the principle of evil, the negative counterpart of God, who is the principle of good. As the Godhead is composed of three persons, — Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, representing the three attributes, Power, Wisdom, and Love, — so Lucifer is pictured three-faced: his red visage betokens Love of Evil, or Hate; the black face is the emblem of Ignorance, the opposite of Wisdom and the source of pride; the pale yellow one signifies Impotence, the opposite of Power and the begetter of envy. Just as the Holy Ghost, or Love, is continually engendered by Father and Son, so, in Satan, Hate is the result of ignorant Pride and impotent Envy. Dante's Lucifer, though less grotesque and fantastic than the usual diabolical monster of vision literature, is ugly beyond description. Like the four beasts surrounding God's throne in Rev. iv, 8, and like the seraphim of Isaiah vi, 2, he has six wings; a pair of them sprouts beneath each face, and the three winds produced by their flapping freeze Coeytus. Immovable and helpless in the ice of his own making, he holds sway over his 'doloroso regno' — so it would seem — by these winds alone. They are the Satanic instigations, the inspiration of sin. Presumably they correspond to the three great divisions of Hell, the 'tre disposizioni che il ciel non vuole' of XI, 81-3. From the wings of Love of Evil issues the blast of Fraud or Malice; from the wings of Ignorance, the blast of Violence or Bestiality; from the wings of Impotence, the wind of Incontinence or weakness to resist the passions.

Having explored all the manifestations of sin, and having finally scrutinized its very essence, Dante, with the help of Reason, turns his back upon it and laboriously wrests himself from its attraction. That is the allegory of the long and uneventful climb from the bottom of Hell, at the earth's centre, out to the surface on the other side: it is the steady, monotonous effort by which the remorseful wrongdoer is weaned from evil practices. In this journey Dante has no light to guide him — only the encouraging murmur of the streamlet of discarded sin, flowing constantly from Purgatory, where wickedness is washed away, down to its original Satanic source. When the practice of evil has been brought to a stop, there still remains the duty of penitentially restoring the soul to its first purity and cleansing it of all disposition to sin. This discipline is symbolized by the ascent through the torments of the mountain of Purgatory, a task performed in the light and under heavenly direction.

Holbrook, Dante and the Animal Kingdom, 74-5. For the outlet from Hell, see F. D' Ovidio in Rivista d' Italia, XIII, 701.

'Vexilla Regis prodeunt inferni

Verso di noi : però dinanzi mira,'

Disse il Maestro mio, 'se tu il discerni.'

Come quando una grossa nebbia spira

O quando l' emisperio nostro annotta, 5

Par da lungi un molin che il vento gira,

Veder mi parve un tal dificio allotta.

Poi per lo vento mi ristringsi retro

Al Duca mio ; chè non gli era altra grotta.

Già era (e con paura il metto in metro) 10

Là dove l' ombre eran tutte coperte,

E trasparean come festuca in vetro.

Altre sono a giacere ; altre stanno erte,

Quella col capo, e quella con le piante ;

1. Virgil derisively adapts and applies to Satan the opening lines of a hymn written in honor of the Cross by Venantius Fortunatus in the 6th century :

*'Vexilla Regis prodeunt,
Fulget crucis mysterium.'*

It is sung at vespers on the Feast of the Exaltation of the Cross and also on Monday of Holy Week.

5. Annotta, 'darkens.'

7. Dificio, 'engine.' Dificio (= edifizio) was used especially of besieging towers.

9. Grotta here, as usually in Dante, means 'bank.' In Tuscany the banks of a sunken road are still called grotte.

10. Cf. Æn., II, 204: 'Horresco referens.'

Altra, com' arco, il volto a' piedi inverte. 15
 Quando noi fummo fatti tanto avanti
 Ch' al mio Maestro piacque di mostrarmi
 La creatura ch' ebbe il bel sembiante,
 Dinanzi mi si tolse e fe' restarmi,
 'Ecco Dite,' dicendo, 'ed ecco il loco, 20
 Ove convien che di fortezza t' armi.'
 Com' io divenni allor gelato e fioco,
 Nol domandar, Lettor, ch' io non lo scrivo,
 Però ch' ogni parlar sarebbe poco.
 Io non morii, e non rimasi vivo ! 25
 Pensa oramai per te, s' hai fior d' ingegno,
 Qual io divenni, d' uno e d' altro privo.
 Lo imperador del doloroso regno
 Da mezzo il petto uscìa fuor della ghiaccia ;
 E più con un gigante io mi convegno, 30
 Che i giganti non fan con le sue braccia :
 Vedi oramai quant' esser dee quel tutto
 Ch' a così fatta parte si confaccia.
 S' ei fu sì bel com' egli è ora brutto,
 E contra il suo Fattore alzò le ciglia, 35
 Ben dee da lui procedere ogni lutto.
 O quanto parve a me gran meraviglia

23. Nol = non lo.

26. Fior, 'a grain': cf. XXV, 144.

27. 'Bereft of both,' i. e., neither alive nor dead.

30, 31. 'I compare better with a giant than giants do with his arms.' If we assume Dante's height to have been 5½ ft., and that of a giant (like one of those in the well) to have been 80 ft., and the length of an arm to be a third of the whole height, a rough computation makes Dis more than a third of a mile in stature. It is not likely, however, that Dante intended to convey anything more than a vague impression of almost inconceivable size.

33. Si confaccia, 'is proportionate.'

34-36. If his beauty, as God created him, was equal to his present ugliness, his revolt against his Creator was an act of such monstrous ingratitude as to be a fitting source of all subsequent sin and sorrow.

Quando vidi tre facce alla sua testa !
 L' una dinanzi, e quella era vermiglia ;
 L' altre eran due, che s' aggiungieno a questa 40
 Sopr' esso il mezzo di ciascuna spalla,
 E si giungieno al loco della cresta.
 E la destra pareva tra bianca e gialla ;
 La sinistra a vedere era tal, quali
 Vengon di là onde il Nilo s' avvala. 45
 Sotto ciascuna uscivan due grandi ali
 Quanto si convenia a tanto uccello ;
 Vele di mar non vid' io mai cotali.
 Non avean penne, ma di vipistrello
 Era lor modo ; e quelle svolazzava 50
 Sì che tre venti si movean da ello.
 Quindi Cocito tutto s' aggelava.
 Con sei occhi piangeva, e per tre menti
 Gocciava il pianto e sanguinosa bava.
 Da ogni bocca dirompea coi denti 55
 Un peccatore, a guisa di maciulla,
 Sì che tre ne faceva così dolenti.
 A quel dinanzi il mordere era nulla
 Verso il graffiar, chè tal volta la schiena
 Rimanea della pelle tutta brulla. 60
 'Quell' anima lassù che ha maggior pena,'

40. Aggiungieno = aggiungevano.

41. Sopr' esso (or sovresso), 'just over': cf. XXIII, 54.

42. The three faces blend together at the top of the head.

45. S' avvala, 'descends': the faces that come from Egypt are black.

49. Vipistrello = pipistrello.

50. Svolazzava, 'flapped.'

54. Cf. Virgil, Georgics, III, 203: 'spumas ager ore cruentas'; III, 516: 'mixtum spumis vomit ore cruorem.'

56. Maciulla, 'heckle': a hemp-brake, an instrument that crushes hemp-stalks and separates the fibre

59. Verso, 'to': compared with.

60. Brulla, 'stripped': cf. XVI, 30.

Disse il Maestro, 'è Giuda Scariotto,
 Che il capo ha dentro e fuor le gambe mena.
 Degli altri duo ch' hanno il capo di sotto,
 Quei che pende dal nero ceffo è Bruto — 65
 Vedi come si storce, e non fa motto ;
 E l' altro è Cassio, che par sì membruto.
 Ma la notte risurge ; ed oramai
 È da partir, chè tutto avem veduto.'
 Com' a lui piacque, il collo gli avvinghiai ; 70
 Ed ei prese di tempo e loco poste,
 E quando l' ali furo aperte assai,
 Appigliò sè alle vellute coste.
 Di vello in vello giù discese poscia
 Tra il folto pelo e le gelate croste. 75
 Quando noi fummo là dove la coscia
 Si volge appunto in sul grosso dell' anche,
 Lo Duca con fatica e con angoscia
 Volse la testa ov' egli avea le zanche,
 Ed aggrappossi al pel come uom che sale, 80

68. We do not know why Cassius is described as 'sturdy of limb.'

68. By the time of Jerusalem, it is the evening of Saturday, April 9. The poets have spent 24 hours in their downward journey. We are not told exactly how much more time is subsequently consumed in creeping down Satan's flank and up his thigh; from l. 96 it would seem to be about an hour and a half.

70. Avvinghiai: cf. V, 6.

71. Prese . . . poste, 'was on the watch.'

73. Vellute, 'shaggy.'

74. Vello, 'tuft'

75. Between the ice and Satan's hip there is evidently a crack, through which Virgil, carrying Dante, descends like a man climbing down a ladder.

77. Anche, 'haunches': the place, half-way down the body, where the thigh thickens into the haunch.

79. Zanche, 'shanks': cf. XIX, 45. They have reached the centre of the earth, and any further movement in the same direction is no longer downward, but upward. Therefore Virgil, with Dante on his back, turns himself upside down, so as to proceed head first, and not feet first, as hitherto. In climbing a ladder, one goes down feet first, but up head first. They are now ascending toward the opposite surface of the earth, where Purgatory is.

Sì che in inferno io credea tornar anche.
 'Attienti ben, chè per sì fatte scale,'
 Disse il Maestro, ansando com' uom lasso,
 'Conviensi dipartir da tanto male.'
 Poi uscì fuor per lo foro d' un sasso, 85
 E pose me in sull' orlo a sedere ;
 Appresso porse a me l' accorto passo.
 Io levai gli occhi, e credetti vedere
 Lucifero com' io l' avea lasciato,
 E vidili le gambe in su tenere. 90
 E s' io divenni allora travagliato,
 La gente grossa il pensi, che non vede
 Qual è quel punto ch' io avea passato.
 'Levati su,' disse il Maestro, 'in piede !
 La via è lunga e il cammino è malvagio, 95
 E già il sole a mezza terza riede.'
 Non era camminata di palagio
 Là 'v' eravam, ma natural burella
 Ch' avea mal suolo e di lume disagio.

81. Anche, 'again.' See XXII, 75, note.

85. Through the chink between Satan's thigh and the rocky bottom of the ice, they emerge into a cavern on the other side of the earth's centre. Virgil sets Dante on the brink of the crevice, and then 'extends to him his prudent step,' i. e., steps cautiously from the 'tufts' to the rock.

87. Appresso, 'then.'

90. Inasmuch as Satan traverses the centre of the earth, having his head in the Jerusalem hemisphere, and his legs in the Purgatory hemisphere, his feet, with reference to Purgatory, are pointed upward.

91. Travagliato, 'troubled': 'let ignorant people conceive' how disturbed I must have been.

96. Terza, 'tierce,' embraces the three hours following sunrise. 'Mid-tierce' is, then, about half-past seven o'clock in the morning: the term is doubtless used here in its natural, astronomical sense rather than in the special, ecclesiastical sense given to it in Conv., IV, xxiii, 153. In Hell Dante computes time by the nocturnal bodies; now that Hell is left behind, he refers to the sun again.

97. Camminata, 'hall.'

98. Burella, 'dungeon.'

99. Disagio, 'want.'

'Prima ch' io dell' abisso mi divella, 100
 Maestro mio,' diss' io, quando fui dritto,
 'A trarmi d' erro un poco mi favella.
 Ov' è la ghiaccia? e questi com' è fitto
 Sì sottosopra? e come in sì poc' ora
 Da sera a mane ha fatto il sol tragitto?' 105
 Ed egli a me : 'Tu immagini ancora
 D' esser di là dal centro, ov' io mi presi
 Al pel del vermo reo che il mondo fora.
 Di là fosti cotanto quant' io scesi.
 Quando mi volsi, tu passasti il punto 110
 Al qual si traggon d' ogni parte i pesi ;
 E se' or sotto l' emisperio giunto
 Ch' è contrapposto a quel che la gran secca
 Coperchia, e sotto il cui colmo consunto
 Fu l' uom che nacque e visse senza pecca. 115
 Tu hai li piedi in su picciola spera

102. Erro = errore, 'doubt.'

105. In reality, as Dante presently learns, the change from evening to morning is due, not to any unusual movement of the sun, but to the altered position of the observers, who have passed from one hemisphere to the other. Throughout Hell, they go by the time of Jerusalem, which is directly over the bottom. As soon as they pass the centre, they take their time from the Island of Purgatory, towards which they ascend. Jerusalem and Purgatory being on opposite sides of the earth, or 180° apart, the difference in time between them is 12 hours. Dante therefore represents himself as gaining 12 hours when he crosses the centre. He has before him a new Saturday.

108. Fora, 'pierces.' Vermo is any kind of a dragon or monster: cf. VI, 22. In the Visio Alberici, IX, beside the pit there is a 'vermis . . . infinitæ magnitudinis, ligatus maxima catena.'

112. Emisperio means here hemisphere of the sky, not of the earth. It is the celestial hemisphere which covers the terrestrial Hemisphere of Water. Opposite to it is the celestial hemisphere 'which covers the great continent (the terrestrial Hemisphere of Land) and beneath whose zenith' lies Jerusalem, where Jesus was slain. Jerusalem is exactly in the middle of the Hemisphere of Land: 'Thus said the Lord God; This is Jerusalem: I have set it in the midst of the nations and countries that are round about her' (Ezekiel v, 5).

113. Secca, 'dry land': 'And God called the dry land Earth' (Gen. i, 10).

114. Colmo, 'summit,' i. e., zenith. Cf. XXI, 3.

116. Spera, 'disc': the circular block of ice and stone immediately sur-

Che l' altra faccia fa della Giudecca.
 Qui è da man quando di là è sera.
 E questi, che ne fe' scala col pelo,
 Fitto è ancora sì come prim' era. 120
 Da questa parte cadde giù dal cielo ;
 E la terra che pria di qua si sporse
 Per paura di lui fe' del mar velo
 E venne all' emisferio nostro, e forse
 Per fuggir lui lasciò qui il loco voto 125
 Quella che appar di qua, e su ricorse.'
 Loco è laggiù da Belzebù remoto
 Tanto quanto la tomba si distende,
 Che non per vista, ma per suono è noto
 D' un ruscelletto che quivi discende 130
 Per la buca d' un sasso ch' egli ha roso

rounding Satan. On the Hell side it is ice, the part called Giudecca; on the other side it is stone, forming the floor of the cavern into which Dante emerges. Spera in early Italian often meant a round mirror, glass on one side and lead on the other.

118. Da man, 'morning.'

121. When heaven and earth were just created, 'and the earth was without form, and void' (Gen. i, 2), sea and land were not separated. Then Satan fell, and all the land shrank away from the surface of the side where he descended, leaving a vast empty bed to be filled by the sea. Cf. Gen. i, 9-10.

122. Si sporse, 'extended.'

125. As Satan pierced the earth in his headlong fall, the ground which he traversed 'perhaps' fled away from him, and issued forth to form the Island of Purgatory, leaving a vacant passage from surface to centre. Cf. Isaiah xiv, 9: 'Hell from beneath is moved for thee to meet thee at thy coming.'

126. Quella, sc., terra: the land 'which appears on this side' is the lone Island of Purgatory, in the middle of the Hemisphere of Water.

127. The 'place down there' seems to be the further end of the passage emptied by Satan's fall. It is just beneath the crust of the earth's surface that supports the Island of Purgatory, and therefore is separated from Beelzebub by the whole length of his 'tomb'—the grave he dug for himself in falling. If this is the case, Dante omits all description of his climb from Satan to this point. See Twenty-Ninth Annual Report of the Dante Society of Cambridge, Massachusetts, 39. Satan is held fast in a strip of ice and rock between the cavity of Hell and the bottom of this passage, the upper part of his body projecting into Hell, the lower part into the passage. Dante identifies 'Beelzebub the prince of the devils' (Mat. xii, 24) with Lucifer; they were sometimes regarded as different demons.

Col corso ch' egli avvolge, e poco pende.
 Lo Duca ed io per quel cammino ascoso
 Entrammo a ritornar nel chiaro mondo ;
 E senza cura aver d' alcun riposo 135
 Salimmo suso, ei primo ed io secondo,
 Tanto ch' io vidi delle cose belle
 Che porta il ciel, per un pertugio tondo,
 E quindi uscimmo a riveder le stelle.

132. Poco pende : it is not very steep.

136. The descent through Hell occupied Friday night and Saturday; the climb from the centre of the earth to the other side lasts through the second Saturday and the following night. The poets emerge on the Island of Purgatory before daybreak on the morning of Easter Sunday. — For different conceptions of the way out from the earth's centre, see Rivista d'Italia, XII, 701 (F. D'Ovidio), and Twenty-ninth Annual Report of the Dante Society of Cambridge, Massachusetts (1912), 39. If we assume the existence of a great hollow, corresponding to Hell, between Lucifer and Purgatory, the tomba of l. 128 will probably refer to this cavity, which was dug by the demon as he fell. In that case the loco of l. 127 and the sasso of l. 131 may both designate, perhaps, the crust of earth that covers the pit; and Dante will apparently skip some 3000 miles between ll. 126 and 127. The entrammo of l. 134 may mean simply 'started': cf. Purg. III, 101, XXIV, 110.

139. Each of the three great divisions of the poem ends with the sweet and hopeful word stelle.

PURGATORIO

PRELIMINARY NOTE

IN the beginning all eternal things were directly created by God — namely, brute matter, the spheres, and the angels. The angels, operating by means of the heavenly bodies, constitute Nature, the power that first resolved matter into its four elements and combined them into a globe of earth and water surrounded by air and fire. God by his own act shaped Adam and Eve, whose flesh is therefore imperishable; and every human soul is made by God. The rest of the world is the work of Nature. Even when the Lord said (Gen. i, 9), ‘Let the waters under the heaven be gathered together unto one place, and let the dry land appear,’ it was the influence of the stars (directed by angels) that actually caused the land to rise, on a part of the earth’s surface, above the normally higher element. According to Dante’s cosmogony, the earth is a sphere, solid except for the cavity of Hell; its circumference is 20,400 miles. Most of this spherical surface is covered by water, but in the Hemisphere of Land, — which lies, in the main, north of the equator, — is a great continent composed of Europe, Asia, and Africa, stretching from east to west 180°, or 10,200 miles, between the Strait of Gibraltar and the mouth of the Ganges. Its two western parts are separated by the Mediterranean, which was thought to extend 5100 miles, or 90° — more than twice its real length. This sea, however, was well known and was charted with considerable accuracy at a time when general maps were still quite fantastic. The extreme north and the extreme south of the Hemisphere of Land were inhabited respectively by the Scythians and the Garamantes. The great ocean surrounding the land was an object of terror, full of mysterious dangers — monsters, rocks, whirlpools, chasms. In the exact centre of the land, midway between Gibraltar and Ganges, is Jerusalem. ‘Thus saith the Lord God; This is Jerusalem: I have set it in the midst of the nations and countries that are round about her’ (Ezekiel

v, 5). Half-way between Gibraltar and Jerusalem, in the middle of the western world, is Rome. Somewhere on the globe is the Garden of Eden, where Enoch and Elijah still abide in the flesh, awaiting the Day of Judgment. Although it was reached by sundry ancient travellers, opinions were diverse concerning its exact whereabouts. Generally it was placed in Asia. The English Bible says (Gen. ii, 8): 'And the Lord planted a garden eastward in Eden.' But in the usual text of the Vulgate the 'eastward' does not appear. Some located it on the summit of a lofty mountain, some on an island, especially the island of Ceylon. Bede and Peter Lombard record a belief that it projected upward to the sphere of the moon, and thus escaped the flood; but St. Thomas (Summa Theologiæ, Prima, Qu. cii, Art. 1) does not accept this estimate of prodigious height as literal fact.¹ Whether there was land on the watery side of the earth was a question hotly debated; the doctrine of the antipodes — that is, of a race of men separated by an impassable ocean from Adam and from Christ — was condemned by the Church. Dante chose for his Eden, the scene of man's fall, a point directly opposite Jerusalem, the scene of his redemption. His Earthly Paradise is situated on the top of a huge mountain which rises on a solitary island in the midst of the Hemisphere of Water. There is no reason to believe that he regarded it as enormously higher than a real mountain might be.²

The upper part of the conical mountain-side is occupied by the seven terraces of Purgatory, where repentant souls come after death to cleanse themselves for Heaven. After leaving the body, they are brought to the island in a boat guided by an angel. Dante apparently agrees with St. Ambrose in holding that all human spirits destined to be saved (except Christ and Mary) must pass through Purgatory; on this point St. Thomas seems to be of different mind. Furthermore, according to Dante's belief, no souls ever went to Purgatory until the redemption was accomplished; before the crucifixion, unrepentant souls went to Hell, as they still do, while penitent souls descended to the Limbus to await the Saviour's coming. The lower part of the mountain slope, on Dante's island, is a place of waiting for Christians who postponed repentance until the very end of life. There we find those who were over-absorbed by cares of state, those whose career was prematurely ended by a violent death, those whom indolence retarded. On the shore, slowly circling around the mountain, are the excommunicated who died repentant though still under the anathema of the Church. All of these are excluded for a time from the penance they are eager to begin. Dante and Virgil emerge on the east side of the edge of the island, on the morning of Easter Sunday. There they meet the guardian of the realm, Cato, the personification of Free Will. They laboriously ascend the cliffs, still on the eastern side, towards the gate of Purgatory. Over a considerable part of the way, however, Dante is mysteriously carried in his sleep by Lucia. We therefore do not know how high up on the mountain the entrance to Purgatory really is; but we may naturally infer that it is more than half-way, since all of Purgatory proper is above the region of atmospheric change. At the gate is an angelic keeper, the representative of Ecclesiastical Authority. Steps, cut into the steep rock, lead from one terrace of Purgatory to another; on each terrace Dante and his guide turn to the right and proceed for some distance around the northern side of the cone, so that on leaving the last shelf they are on the west side, having made half the circuit. They reach the Garden of Eden, which covers the circular mountain-top, on Wednesday morning. Here the presiding genius, the embodiment of Innocence, is a lovely maiden, Matilda. On Wednesday noon they rise to Heaven. It will be seen that three nights are spent on the island; they are passed by Dante in rest and sleep, night being the time for meditation as day is the time for activity. In the course of each night he has a symbolic dream.¹

Led by one of his happiest inspirations, the poet has placed the action of this cantica in the open air, not in the gloomy cavern of tradition. As the theme of the Purgatorio is betterment, release from sin and preparation for Heaven, its atmosphere is rightly one of hope and progress, and for that reason it appeals peculiarly to the modern mind. There are two elements in sin: the turning away from God and the turning toward temporal good. The first naturally ceases with repentance, and is forgiven. The second is due to vices, or faults of character, which must be cured. According to long-established Christian doctrine, of these fundamental defects there are seven, known as the 'capital vices': pride, envy, anger, sloth, avarice, gluttony, lust. Dante, in harmony with St. Gregory and St. Bonaventura, arranges them in this order. There was, however, among Church writers, no absolute agreement as to their sequence, although pride was always regarded as the worst. St. Thomas, in various passages, arranges them in four somewhat different ways, and apparently regards the order as unimportant; once he has them as they appear in the Commedia. At the beginning of the Inferno we see Dante, moved by grace, turning back to God. He is already repentant. On quitting Hell, he puts sin behind him and tears himself away from evil practices; but there still remains the positive task of regeneration. The whole ascent of the mountain signifies this reformatory effort, an undoing of the work of sin, — the passage through the seven circles of Purgatory representing specifically the accomplishment of penance under ecclesiastical direction. The torment on each terrace is a symbol of the particular form of discipline needed to remove from the spirit one of the seven capital vices. When the soul is entirely cleansed, it regains the perfect freedom of will that sin has restricted; it finds itself once more in the state of original innocence which man enjoyed before the fall. The recovery of innocence is symbolized by the entrance into the Garden of Eden. Then comes the sacrament of penance, ending with absolution, after which the soul is ready to see Heaven.¹

Every sin consists in an act of the will, and is judged according to its motive, not according to its effect. The will is fundamentally a 'craving for good,' which produces evil incidentally in the attempt to acquire good that is not real but apparent. The guilty act is therefore a yielding to the desire for this apparent or unreal good. But although sin is not in the first place perpetrated for the sake of evil, indulgence in it creates a 'habit' that begets 'malice,' the love of evil for itself. All sins fall, then, into two classes, those of passion and those of malice. The seven capital vices are all due to passion, and from them all sins of passion derive, whether they be sins of desire or sins of irascibility; a capital vice may, in fact, bring about a sin quite different from itself, but the act is classified in accordance with its source. Sins of malice are not due directly to passion, but to a habit caused, as we have seen, by repeated yielding to guilty impulse. All deliberate and 'habitual' sins may be called 'malicious.' Inasmuch as the sinner's guilt is proportionate to his understanding, the blindly impetuous or ignorant sinner is less culpable than the malicious sinner, who consciously prefers temporal to spiritual good. The capital vices are responsible for sins of weakness; offences against justice, on the other hand, are all due to malice. In Purgatory there can be no malicious souls, because a soul in a state of malice cannot repent, and only the repentant reach Purgatory; the moment a malicious sinner repents, his sin ceases to be one of malice, and must be attributed to the capital vice that first produced it. Furthermore, heresy (or infidelitas) is unknown in Purgatory; for, to admit of repentance, unbelief must give way to faith, and then there is left only the vice (presumably pride) that led to infidelity. It is evident, then, that in a portrayal of Purgatory malice and heresy, as such, may be left out of account, and only the seven capital vices need be directly considered.¹

As Hell is a place of punishment for the unrepentant and Purgatory a place of reformation for the penitent, it is comprehensible that Dante should look at sin in these two regions from different standpoints. In Hell malice and heresy are at home.

Furthermore, the conception of Hell is universal, while the idea of Purgatory is peculiarly Christian. In De Monarchia, III, xvi, 43 ff., Dante describes the two goals of human endeavor, temporal and eternal happiness; the first we reach through 'philosophical,' the second through 'spiritual teaching.' Following a similar distinction, Dante treats wickedness in the Purgatorio from the theological, in the Inferno from the philosophical or moral side. Only in the offences against faith do we find in Dante's lower world (where Christ is never named) a distinctively Christian element; and even in the circle of heresy Epicurus is chosen as the leading example, as is Capaneus, another heathen, in the realm of blasphemy. The whole system is Aristotelian, and its fitting expounder is the ancient Virgil. Of the seven capital vices of Christian theology, four, to be sure, are included in the plan of the Inferno — lust, gluttony, avarice, and anger; but these four were familiar to the moral philosophers of antiquity. Sloth, on the other hand, was unknown to Aristotle, and envy was to him not a vice, but a culpable passion; it is natural, then, that these forms of evil should have no specific place in Dante's Hell. As to pride, Aristotle (with whom Cicero in the main agrees) does discuss it, under the name of 'vainglory,' as an excess of 'magnanimity'; an appropriate enough place for it, according to his description, would seem to be somewhere between Incontinence and Malice, and Dante does, in fact, there illustrate, in the person of Farinata, pride as a cause of heresy. St. Thomas more than once regards superbia in this light. It will be remembered that Dante's Hell falls into two great parts, an upper and a lower. The sins in the upper section are directed against temperance, those in the lower against justice. All the evil in the first may be attributed to infirmity; all in the second, to malice. But malice itself, in the Commedia, is of two distinct kinds. The sins in Dante's Hell are classified, not simply under two heads ('upper' and 'lower'), but, in partial accordance with Aristotle's terminology, under the three heads of Incontinence, Bestiality, and Malice. The last two, which belong to the Lower Hell, correspond more nearly, however, to St. Thomas's 'bestial malice' and 'human malice.' Cicero's 'violence' and 'fraud' are cited by the poet apparently as equivalents. Fraud is 'dell' uom proprio male,' that is, malitia humana. But St. Thomas, like almost all other moralists, considers vis as worse than fraus; Aristotle, who also distinguishes violence and fraud, does not commit himself as to their relative iniquity. Dante, combining the Ciceronian and Aristotelian vis with St. Thomas's bestialis malitia, makes of Bestiality a third distinct state of the will, different both from Incontinence (or infirmetas) and from Malice (or malitia humana), more culpable than the first and less so than the second. Their order follows, it would seem, the Gregorian maxim, 'The greater the infamy, the less the guilt.' In this arrangement Dante stands really alone. On the other hand, while St. Thomas regards the bestial sins as offences against temperance, Dante considers them as offences against justice, and therefore worthy of the Lower Hell. The only two phases of bestial wrong-doing that are discussed at any length by St. Thomas — ferocity and sodomy — are illustrated in the first and third gironi of Dante's seventh circle.

CANTO I

ARGUMENT

As at the beginning of his tale of Hell (Inf. II, 70), so at the outset of his second narrative Dante invokes the aid of the Muses, the embodiment of poetic inspiration. In the Letter to Can Grande we are informed that poets frequently prefix an invocation to their works. 'Et hoc est eis conveniens, quia multa invocatione opus est eis, quum aliquid supra communem modum hominum a superioribus substantiis petendum sit, quasi divinum quoddam munus' (18, 308-12). Calliope, in particular, is here apostrophized, as in the Æneid, IX, 525:

'Vos, o Calliope, precor aspirate canenti.'

She was probably known to Dante as the patroness of style and rhetoric. The mention of her name reminds the author of the story of the daughters of Pieros, whom she defeated in song.

The appeal to the Muses is followed by a beautiful description of dawn. The journey up the mountain begins on the morning of Easter Sunday: both hour and day are full of the promise of hope, which is the dominant note of the Purgatorio. It will be remembered that the descent into Hell began on the evening of Good Friday. The action of the second cantica opens, then, just before sunrise on Sunday, April 10, 1300.

The Island of Purgatory being in the southern hemisphere, some of the celestial phenomena seem inverted. As the traveller faces the east, for instance, he must turn to the right to look at the nearer, or south, pole. Lucan, in his Pharsalia, repeatedly touches upon the aspect of the sky over Africa; and Dante himself, in Convivio, III, v, 80-202, gives a remarkably accurate description of the sun's course as seen from the two poles and the equator. The stars of the extreme south, however, were of course unknown to our poet's generation, and there his imagination had free scope. He invents a constellation of four bright lights, corresponding to the Great Bear of the north. These luminaries symbolize the four cardinal virtues, — Prudence, Temperance, Fortitude, Justice, — which belong to the active life and have existed since humanity began; whereas the three theological virtues, — Faith, Hope, Love, — especially adapted to the life of contemplation, are distinctively Christian. Adam and Eve before the fall ('the first people'), dwelling at the top of the mountain, beheld these stars; but fallen man, inhabiting the northern hemisphere, is bereft of their light.

These four shining virtues illumine with sunlike clearness the custodian of Purgatory, the example of that Free Will which the souls in his domain are striving, by purification, to regain; for although he appears only on the shore, the whole mountain, up to the Garden of Eden, is in his keeping. This guardian is Cato the Younger, who on earth, after heroic resistance, killed himself in Utica rather than submit to Cæsar. His suicide was evidently regarded by Dante, not as a sinful revolt against God's law, but as a divinely bidden assertion of liberty. Some suggestion of this interpretation is to be found in Lucan's Pharsalia, from which, in the main, Dante's conception of Cato was drawn. In De Monarchia, II, v, 132-4 and 136-40 Dante says: 'Accedit et illud inenarrabile sacrificium severissimi veræ libertatis auctoris Marci Catonis' . . . 'ut mundo libertatis amores accenderet, quanti libertas esset ostendit, dum e vita liber decedere maluit quam sine libertate manere in illa.' He continues (159-70), quoting from Cicero's De Officiis: "'Non enim alia in causa Marcus Cato fuit, alia cæteri qui se in Africa Cæsari tradiderunt; atque cæteris forsitan vitio datum esset, si se interemissent, propterea quod levior eorum vita, et mores fuerunt faciliores. Catoni vero quum incredibilem natura tribuisset gravitatem, eamque perpetua constantia roborasset, semperque in proposito susceptoque permansisset, moriendum ei potius quam tyranni vultus aspiciendus fuit.'"

As a virtuous pagan, Cato went, on dying, to the Limbus, whence he was rescued with the patriarchs when Christ descended into Hell. Then it was that souls first mounted to Purgatory; and from that time dates Cato's ministry, which is to continue until the Judgment Day. How he became (or is to become) a Christian, we are not told — perhaps he received the faith on his release, having beheld Christ; but a Christian he must be on the day of resurrection, for Dante states that his body will then be glorified, like those of the other blest.

The idea of giving him this sacred charge probably came to Dante from a passage in the Æneid (VIII, 670), where, pictured on a shield, are scenes from the other world, the wicked in one spot, in another the good with Cato (presumably, in Virgil's intention, the Elder) for a lawgiver:

'Secretosque pios. his dantem jura Catonem.'

Cato was, however, Dante's favorite hero in antiquity, and he would, in any case, have found a dignified place for him. In the Convivio and De Monarchia he speaks of him with the deepest reverence: 'quello glorioso Catone, di cui non fui di sopra oso di parlare' (Conv., IV, vi, 95-6); 'si legge di Catone che non a sè ma alla patria e a tutto il mondo nato essere credea' (Conv., IV, xxvii, 31-3). In the Convivio, IV, xxviii, 97 ff., Dante interprets Lucan's account of the return of Cato's wife, Martia, to him, in her old age, after the death of Hortensius, as signifying the return of the soul to God; and he adds: 'E quale uomo terreno più degno fu di significare Iddio, che Catone?'

For the shaggy, unkempt Cato of Pharsalia, II, 374-6, a man in the prime of life, Dante substitutes a figure all venerable and august, appropriate to his high office. In the common legend of the Earthly Paradise two aged men appear in the Garden — Enoch and Elijah, who were transferred from earth to Eden, to await, in the body, the Day of Judgment. Although Dante, in all likelihood, believed in this myth, he wished his Garden of Eden to be entirely suggestive of innocent youth, the springtime of humanity, and for that reason suppressed the inharmonious image of the two elders, which may, however, have lurked in his memory and contributed to his portrait of Cato. In the Voyage of St. Brendan, a tale widely current in the Middle Ages, the monk Barinthus reaches an island where he finds, on the shore, 'a man of great brightness,' who gives him directions, and later, in the interior, St. Brendan meets a youth who calls him and his companions by name. These two figures — originally, no doubt, identical, but differently described and occurring at the beginning and the end of the story — correspond, in a way, to Dante's Cato and Matilda. After imparting the required information, the elder in the narrative of the Irish monk suddenly vanishes; and our Cato, contrary to the usual habit of Dante's spirits, does the same.

CANTO II

ARGUMENT

THE souls destined to pass through Purgatory to Heaven are wafted across the great ocean in a swift bark directed by an angelic pilot, even as the boatman of Hell ferries the wicked over Acheron. In the Inferno, III, 93, Charon referred to this 'lighter craft' as the boat which is to carry Dante after death. From the shore of the island, the two poets watch its approach, and at first neither can make out what is coming; all that is seen is a bright star on the horizon — the shining face of the angel. Then the wings appear on either side, and finally the white robe beneath. Virgil is the first to recognize the stranger's heavenly office. The celestial visage is too dazzling for human sight, and Dante's eyes are blinded, as they are subsequently by the guardian angels of Purgatory. The souls in the skiff, happy and eager to begin their purification, are all singing together Psalm cxiv (Vulg. cxiii), 'When Israel went out of Egypt.' In Convivio, II, i, 52-65, Dante uses this psalm as an example of anagogical, or spiritual, symbolism: thus understood, it means — he says — that the soul going forth from sin becomes holy and free. In the Letter to Can Grande, 7, the same passage serves to illustrate all four modes of interpretation, and the literal, allegorical, moral, and anagogical significances are all explained. As sung by the released spirits, the verses evidently celebrate 'the going forth of the blessed soul from the slavery of this corruption to the freedom of eternal glory.'

Among the newly arrived, Dante recognizes his friend Casella, the musician, and vainly tries to embrace his ethereal form. The apparent tangibility or intangibility of spirits in Dante's Hell and Purgatory was discussed in the Argument to Canto VI of the Inferno, and for the sake of convenience the commentary there given may be repeated here. Throughout Hell the souls, though without weight, are not only visible and audible, but tangible. On the lower slopes of the mountain of Purgatory, however, Dante cannot touch a shade (Purg. II, 79 ff.), although two spirits can still embrace (Purg. VI, 75); and near the summit one soul apparently cannot clasp another (Purg. XXI, 130 ff.) In Purg. XXV, 79 ff., we are informed that after death the atmosphere collects around the departed spirit, forming an ærial body, which reflects all the emotions of the soul itself. Although Dante nowhere says so explicitly, it would seem that he chose to regard this airy shape as more substantial in proportion to its proximity to the centre of gravity of the universe (which is also the centre of sin), and more ethereal as it rises above the earth's surface. This conception of the shade appears to be to a great extent Dante's own, although St. Thomas mentions the power of angels and devils to assume ærial forms, and St. Augustine says in the Liber de Cognitione Veræ Vitæ, Cap. XL: 'Animæ etiam defunctorum cum viventibus apparent, corpus aerium induunt, in quo corpoream vocem vel verba audibilia expriment.'

Our poet was addicted, not only to mystery and enigma, but also to puzzles of all kinds, especially astronomical riddles; and he credited his readers with the same proclivity. We find many of them in the Purgatorio and the Paradiso, oftenest in the opening lines of a canto. The one with which the present canto begins is not altogether easy. It must be understood that the meridian of any place on earth is a great circle in the sky, passing directly over that spot and crossing the two heavenly poles. The horizon of a given place is a great circle in the sky, running around the globe 90° from its meridian. The planes of the meridian and the horizon are therefore always at right angles to each other; the horizon of the north pole, for instance, is the celestial equator — which is also the horizon of the south pole, because the two poles are 180° apart. Inasmuch as Jerusalem and Purgatory are on opposite sides of the earth, 180° from each other, they have a common horizon: when Jerusalem sees the sun rise, Purgatory sees it set, and vice versa. The difference in time between the two places is just twelve hours, so that Jerusalem's noon is Purgatory's midnight, six A. M. in Jerusalem is six P. M. in Purgatory, etc. The first three lines of the canto mean, then, that the sun, in its daily revolution, has descended to the horizon of Jerusalem — 'that horizon, the highest point of whose meridian is over Jerusalem.' But this is also the horizon of Purgatory: the sun, which is setting for Jerusalem, is rising for Purgatory. Now Dante often speaks of night as if it were a point in the heavens directly opposed to the sun; so here he says that night, 'circling opposite' the sun, was rising for Jerusalem. He represents it as coming forth from the Ganges; this river, which flowed on the eastern confines of the inhabited world, 90° from Jerusalem, stood for the east just as the Strait of Gibraltar (or Cadiz or Seville) stood for the west. The sun, then, for an observer in Jerusalem, was on the western horizon, night was on the eastern. In Purgatory, of course, these conditions were reversed. But Dante states, furthermore, that night was rising 'with the Scales.' The sun, from March 21 to April 21, is in the sign of Aries; and the sign of the Zodiac opposite Aries is Libra: night, therefore, conceived as a point 180° from the sun, may be described as being, on April 10, in Libra, the constellation of the Scales. Libra remains a night constellation until Sept. 21, the autumnal equinox, when the sun passes into that sign; and as Sept. 21 is the date after which the nights begin to grow longer than the days, Dante fancifully adds that the Scales in question are those which fall from the hands of Night at the time when she surpasses the Day. In this devious and ingenious way we are told that for the spectators on the Island of Purgatory the sun was rising.

For the solidity of shades, see: G. Gargano-Cosenza, La saldezza delle ombre nel poema dantesco, 1902; R. Petrosimolo, La saldezza delle ombre nella Divina Commedia, 1902; Bull., X, 79. Cf. St. Augustine, Liber de Spiritu et Anima, Cap. XXIV: 'Anima est substantia spiritalis, simplex et indissolubilis, invisibilis et incorporea, passibilis atque mutabilis, carens pondere, figura et colore.' Già era il sole all' orizzonte giunto
 Lo cui meridian cerchio coperchia
 Jerusalem col suo più alto punto;
 E la notte, che opposita a lui cerchia,
 Uscia di Gange fuor colle bilance, 5
 Che le caggion di man quando soperchia;

 Ed ecco qual, sul presso del mattino,
 Per li grossi vapor Marte rosseggia
 Giù nel ponente sopra il suol marino, 15
 Cotal m' apparve, s' io ancor lo veggia,
 Un lume per lo mar venir sì ratto
 Che il mover suo nessun volar pareggia;
 Dal qual com' io un poco ebbi ritratto
 L' occhio, per domandar lo Duca mio, 20
 Rividil più lucente e maggior fatto.
 Poi d' ogni lato ad esso m' apparìo
 Un non sapeva che bianco, e di sotto
 A poco a poco un altro a lui uscìo.
 Lo mio Maestro ancor non fece motto, 25
 Mentre che i primi bianchi apparser ali;
 Allor che ben conobbe il galeotto,
 Gridò: 'Fa, fa che le ginocchia cali!
 Ecco l' Angel di Dio — piega le mani!
 Omai vedrai di sì fatti ufficiali. 30
 Vedi che sdegna gli argomenti umani,
 Sì che remo non vuol, nè altro velo
 Che l' ali sue, tra liti sì lontani.

Ter frustra comprehensa manus effugit imago.'

Ed io seguendo lei oltre mi pinsi.
 Soavemente disse ch' io posasse; 85
 Allor conobbi chi era, e 'l pregai
 Che per parlarmi un poco s' arrestasse.
 Risposemi: 'Così com' io t' amai
 Nel mortal corpo, così t' amo sciolta;
 Però m' arresto: ma tu perchè vai?' 90
 'Casella mio, per tornare altra volta
 Là dove son, fo io questo viaggio,'
 Diss' io; 'ma a te com' è tanta ora tolta?'
 Ed egli a me: 'Nessun m' è fatto oltraggio,

91. Of Casella we know only that he was a musician of Florence; a little of his music is preserved. From this passage we may infer that he was a close friend of the poet, and, perhaps, that he set to music Dante's canzone (the second in the Convivio), Amor che nella mente mi ragiona.

92. Dante's present experience is intended to fit him to return to Purgatory after death.

93. 'How hast thou been robbed of so much time?' Casella, evidently, had died some time before, and Dante is astonished to see him just arrived in the other world.

The greater or less delay imposed upon various souls appears to be a manifestation of God's mysterious judgment, the same predestination that assigns ranks in Heaven. This curious detail was probably suggested by the scene on the bank of the Styx in Æn., VI, 313 ff.

98. Veramente, 'nevertheless': so generally in Dante. — The souls of the dead are allowed to participate in the plenary indulgence granted by Boniface VIII, from Christmas, 1290, to pilgrims to the great Jubilee of 1300.

101. The Tiber's mouth signifies allegorically the Church of Rome. There congregate the souls of those who die in the bosom of the Church. The souls of the unrepentant, on the other hand, descend to Acheron.

Così vid' io quella masnada fresca 130
Lasciar lo canto, e gire in ver la costa,
Come uom che va, nè sa dove riesca;
Nè la nostra partita fu men tosta.

CANTO III

ARGUMENT

WHERE the circular mountain descends to the shore, a high cliff forms its base all around; and outside this cliff creep the souls of those who died excommunicated but repentant. Like the other classes of the 'negligent,' whom we shall meet later, they are compelled to postpone their entrance into Purgatory until they have made amends for their neglect. The contumacious spirits of this canto are condemned to wait thirty times as long as their contumacy lasted. Dante here insists upon the doctrine that the eternal fate of the soul depends upon its real state at the moment of death, and not upon the blessing or anathema of the Church. 'By their curse' — the curse of the clergy — 'the eternal love is not irrevocably lost, so long as hope has a bit of green.' According to St. Thomas, Summa Theologiae, Tertia, Suppl., Qu. xxi, Art. 4, an unjust excommunication is ineffective. Nevertheless, their rebellion against God's earthly vicar demands expiation, and their humble waiting at the very foot of the mountain is a fitting atonement. This penalty Dante seems to have assigned on his own authority.

Among the excluded is Manfred, the natural son of the Emperor Frederick II, crowned King of Sicily in 1258. Handsome, cultivated, winning, able in war and peace, he was the idolized chief of the Ghibellines and, like his father, the hated and excommunicated opponent of the Papacy. In February, 1266, on a plain near Benevento, he was defeated and slain by St. Louis's brother, Charles of Anjou, to whom two Popes, Urban IV and Clement IV, had offered the throne of Sicily. His body was interred on the battlefield, at the end of the Valentino bridge, on the right bank of the Calore; and a mound of stones was piled over the grave. But this land was Church property. When Clement heard of the burial, he sent the Archbishop of Cosenza to cast out the corpse, and Manfred's remains were deposited, with no funeral rites, outside the kingdom he had lost, on the bank of the Garigliano, or 'Verde,' which formed a part of its northern boundary. Dante's is the earliest account we have of this episode.

When Manfred has appeared to Dante, and the latter has 'modestly disclaimed' previous acquaintance with him, he reveals himself as the grandson of the Empress Constance, who, in the Paradiso III, 118, is called 'la gran Costanza.' Daughter and heiress of Roger I of Sicily, the last of the Norman kings, she married the Emperor Henry VI, the second of the Swabians, and gave birth to Frederick II. Manfred named his daughter after her. This second Constance, wedded in 1262 to Peter III of Aragon (cf. VII, 112 ff.), was the mother of Frederick and James, who became kings respectively of Sicily and Aragon. Their loving grandfather here calls them 'the glory' of these kingdoms; Dante himself, as we learn from various passages in his works, had a different opinion of them. Manfred hopes that his daughter, when she knows his state, will shorten by prayer his term of exclusion. The belief that the journey of repentant souls to Heaven is hastened by the prayers of the living is an accepted doctrine of the Church, and Dante repeatedly dwells upon it. Manfred's repentance and consequent salvation are probably not of Dante's invention. In the Imago Mundi of Jacopo da Acqui, written only some ten or twenty years after Dante's time, it is recorded that Manfred saved himself by exclaiming just before death: 'Deus propitius esto mihi peccatori!' The incident as it appears in the Purgatorio is, therefore, presumably based on a tradition already current. If the passage was written as late as 1317, it has a particular significance, for in that year another great Ghibelline leader, Dante's patron, Can Grande della Scala, was excommunicated by John XXII. He remained under the ban until his death.

For Dante's opinion of Manfred's grandsons, see: Conv., IV, vi, 182-3; Vulg. El., I, xii, 35-7; Purg. VII, 119-20; Par. XIX, 130-4; Par. XX, 63. For Manfred and his salvation: E. Italy, according to Dante's geography, is midway between Jerusalem and Gibraltar, that is, 45°, or three hours, west of Jerusalem; its time is therefore three hours earlier than that of Jerusalem. It is some time after sunrise in Purgatory, as long after sunset in Jerusalem, and the same amount after mid-afternoon in Italy. — Virgil died in Brundisium, but was buried by Augustus in Naples.

CANTO IV

ARGUMENT

THE top of the cliff can be reached only by crawling up through a crack in the rock, so narrow that it crowds the climbers on either side. Above is an open slope, difficult of ascent. On this declivity, lazily reclining in the shade of a boulder, are the shades of the 'negligent' of the second class — those who postponed repentance through indolence. They must wait outside of Purgatory for a period equal to their life on earth. Among them is the mocking, humorous Florentine called Belacqua, evidently a friend of our poet, and, according to the early commentators, a maker of musical instruments. His real name was probably Duccio di Bonavia. He first betrays his presence by his amusement at Dante's naïve surprise on seeing the sun at the left, or north, as he faces east. As the sun's course is confined within the tropics, it is always south of the north temperate, and north of the south temperate zone. The European observer, in the middle of the morning, sees the sun in the southeast; Dante now beholds it in the northeast. Something similar was noted by Lucan in his Pharsalia, III, 247-8 and IX, 538-9:

'Ignotum vobis, Arabes, venistis in orbem,
Umbras mirati nemorum non ire sinistras.'

'At tibi, quæcumque es Libyco gens igne diremta,
In Noton umbra cadit, quæ nobis exit in Arcton.'

In the opening lines of this canto Dante discusses a psychological phenomenon to which he reverts more than once. The attention, he says, can be so monopolized by one of the senses that the mind is dead to all other perceptions. According to the Aristotelian philosophy, 'l'anima principalmente,' he tells us in Conv., III, ii, 85-6, 'ha tre potenze, cioè vivere, sentire, e ragionare.' Compare Vulg. El., II, ii, 46-55. These three powers — often called souls — are the vegetative, the sensitive, and the intellective. The vegetative power, possessed by all plants and animals, is simply life. Above it is the sensitive, or power of feeling, which belongs to animals. 'E questa sensitiva potenza è fondamento della intellettiva, cioè della ragione' (l. c., 105-7), which is peculiar to man. How these powers are genetically related to one another is explained in Purg. XXV, 52-75. 'Quella anima che tutte queste potenze comprende,' adds Dante in Conv., III, ii, 112-4, — meaning the soul of man, — 'è perfettissima di tutte l'altre.' The intellective power is, of course, the highest. Moreover (l. c., 122-3), 'in questa nobilissima parte dell' Anima sono più virtù' — there are several faculties, namely, knowledge, reason, judgment, etc. When the soul is all absorbed in the operation of one of the senses, no impressions can reach it from another sense; and, furthermore, the intellective power is then held in check, so that reason and judgment are inactive. On the other hand, the soul may be so engrossed by intellectual activity that the senses are dormant. An example of the former kind of absorption is given in Conv., II, xiv, 187-93; 'Ancora la Musica trae a sè gli spiriti umani (che sono quasi principalmente vapori del cuore), sicchè quasi cessano da ogni operazione, — sì è l'anima intera quando l'ode, — e la virtù di tutti quasi corre allo spirito sensibile che riceve il suono.' The 'spirits' are the senses, which were thought of as fine vapors. The activity of all the other senses, then, is transferred to the sense of hearing. 'Sì è l'anima intera' seems to mean: 'the soul is so undisturbed' by any other faculty or power. The phrase 'l'anima intera' recurs in our canto, line 11.

For the doctrine of attention, see St. Thomas, Summa Theologiæ, Prima Secundæ, Qu. xxxvii, Art. 1.

Quando, per dilettanze ovver per doglie
 Che alcuna virtù nostra comprenda,
 L'anima bene ad essa si raccoglie,
 Par che a nulla potenza più intenda;
 E questo è contra quello error che crede
 Che un'anima sopr'altra in noi s'accenda. 5

2. 'Which any force (of our sensitive power) experiences.'

3. Si raccoglie, 'concentrates.'

4. 'It (the soul) seems to care for no other power': the intellective power is inoperative.

5, 6. Dante adds parenthetically that this absorption of the soul in one faculty is a proof that the Platonists and the Manichæans, who maintain that man has several souls — 'one kindled upon another,' — are wrong: if we had two souls, we could attend to two things at once. Cf. St. Thomas, Summa Theologiæ, Prima, Qu. lxxvi, Art. 3.

E però, quando s' ode cosa, o vede,
 Che tenga forte a sè l' anima volta,
 Vassene il tempo, e l' uom non se n' avvede.
 Ch' altra potenza è quella che l' ascolta, 14
 Ed altra quella che ha l' anima intera:
 Questa è quasi legata, e quella è sciolta.
 Di ciò ebb' io esperienza vera,
 Udendo quello spirto ed ammirando;
 Chè ben cinquanta gradi salito era 15
 Lo sole, ed io non m' era accorto, quando
 Venimmo dove quell' anime ad una
 Gridaro a noi: 'Qui è vostro domando.'
 Maggiore aperta molte volte impruna
 Con una forcatella di sue spine 20
 L' uom della villa, quando l' uva imbruna,
 Che non era la calla onde saline
 Lo Duca mio ed io appresso, soli,
 Come da noi la schiera si partìne.

 Che speranza mi dava e facea lume. 36
 Noi salivam per entro il sasso rotto,
 E d' ogni lato ne stringea lo stremo,
 E piedi e man voleva il suol di sotto.
 Poi che noi fummo in su l' orlo supremo
 Dell' alta ripa, alla scoperta piaggia: 35
 'Maestro mio,' diss' io, 'che via faremo?'
 Ed egli a me: 'Nessun tuo passo caggia;
 Pur su al monte, retro a me, acquista,
 Fin che n' appaia alcuna scorta saggia.'
 Lo sommo er' alto che vincea la vista, 40
 E la costa superba più assai

37. Caggia = cada, 'fall back,' 'descend.'

42. The hillside was far steeper than a line (lista) drawn from the centre of a circle to the middle of one of its quadrants. Such a line makes an angle of 45°.

47. Balzo, 'ledge.' — Sue = su: words ending in an accented vowel, if they were followed by a pause, were lengthened in early Italian by the addition of an indistinct e. Cf. giue in Inf. XXXII, 53; see also Inf. IV, 56.

62. The sun is often called a 'mirror,' because it reflects the divine light.

63. The sun 'leads with its light' on both sides of the equator, being half the year 'above' it, half the year 'below.'

64. The zodiac is the belt of constellations through which the sun passes in its annual slanting course around the earth. The 'ruddy zodiac' is the part in which the sun is — or, in other words, the sun itself.

65. The sun, in that case, would be 'circling' further north, — 'closer' to the Big and Little 'Bears,' or Dippers, — because the 21st of June is the day on which it reaches the point of its course furthest north of the equator.

66. Its 'old road' is the ecliptic, the annual path of the sun, which crosses the equator diagonally on March 21 and September 21 (the equinoxes). On June 21 it is furthest north, on December 21 furthest south.

72. Feton = Fetonte, 'Phaëthon.' 'The road which, unhappily for him, he knew not how to drive' is the ecliptic. The story of Phaëthon's disastrous attempt to drive the chariot of the sun is told in Met., II.

73, 74. The ecliptic 'must pass on one side' of Purgatory when it passes 'on the other side' of Zion. Jerusalem and Purgatory being in different hemispheres, on different sides of the equator and the tropics, it follows that when the sun is approaching one of these places, it is receding from the other; the more it is south of Jerusalem, the less it is north of Purgatory, and the less it is south of Jerusalem, the more it is north of Purgatory.

76. Unquanco, 'ever.' Cf. Inf. XXXIII, 139.

 E com' egli ebbe sua parola detta,
 Una voce di presso sonò: ' Forse
 Che di sedere in prima avrai distretta.'
 Al suon di lei ciascun di noi si torse, 100
 E vedemmo a mancina un gran petrone,
 Del qual nè io nè ei prima s' accorse.
 Là ci traemmo; ed ivi eran persone
 Che si stavano all' ombra dietro al sasso,
 Com' uom per negligenza a star si pone. 105
 Ed un di lor, che mi sembrava lasso,
 Sedeva ed abbracciava le ginocchia,
 Tenendo il viso giù tra esse basso.
 'O dolce Signor mio,' diss' io, ' adocchia
 Colui che mostra sè più negligente 110
 Che se pigrizia fosse sua sirocchia.'
 Allor si volse a noi e pose mente,
 Movendo il viso pur su per la coscia,
 E disse: ' Or va su tu, che se' valente.'

Che m' avacciava un poco ancor la lena,
 Non m' impedì l' andare a lui; e poscia
 Che a lui fui giunto, alzò la testa appena,
 Dicendo: 'Hai ben veduto come il sole
 Dall' omero sinistro il carro mena?' 120
 Gli atti suoi pigri e le corte parole
 Mosson le labbra mie un poco a riso;
 Poi cominciai: 'Belacqua, a me non duole
 Di te omai. Ma dimmi, perchè assiso
 Quiritta sei? Attendi tu iscorta, 125
 O pur lo modo usato t' hai ripreso?'
 Ed ei: 'Frate, l' andare in su che porta?
 Chè non mi lascerebbe ire ai martiri
 L' uccel di Dio che siede in su la porta.
 Prima convien che tanto il ciel m' aggiri 130
 Di fuor da essa quanto fece in vita, —
 Perch' io indugiai al fine i buon sospiri, —
 Se orazione in prima non m' aita
 Che surga su di cor che in grazia viva.
 L' altra che val, che in ciel non è udita?' 135
 E già il Poeta innanzi mi saliva,
 E dicea: 'Vienne omai, vedi ch' è tocco

The sun has reached the meridian of Purgatory; night, striding across the other hemisphere from the bank (of the Ganges), has already set foot on Morocco (the Strait of Gibraltar) — that is, it extends from the eastern to the western extremity of the habitable world.

CANTO V

ARGUMENT

THE third class of the 'negligent' comprises those who, cut short by a violent death, repented at their last gasp. They come wandering horizontally across the mountain-side. Their principal spokesman is Count Buonconte da Montefeltro, a Ghibelline leader, captain of the Aretines in the disastrous battle of Campaldino in 1289. There he met his death, but, as we are told by Dante (who almost certainly took part in this fight), his body was not found on the field. This curious circumstance allows the poet to introduce a romantic account of Buonconte's end — his appeal to Mary with his dying breath, his salvation 'by one little tear' of genuine contrition, and the contest between angel and demon for the possession of his soul. Such a conflict we find portrayed in ancient Etruscan art, and, in Christian times, described as early as Gregory I and Bede. In the Commedia it occurs — with a different outcome — in only one other instance, that of Buonconte's father, Guido (Inf. XXVII, 112-29), whose fate is thus contrasted with his son's. By means of these two extreme examples Dante illustrates the dependence of everlasting welfare or perdition upon the real fitness of the soul at the instant of departure.

The foiled devil wreaks his vengeance on the corpse. He conjures up a storm, and Buonconte's body is swept into the Arno. In Ephesians ii, 2, the fiend is called 'prince of the power of the air.' According to St. Thomas, the elements are subject to spiritual beings; and demons, who dwell partly in Hell and partly in the dark air, are able to produce wind and rain.

For Guido da Montefeltro, see Argument to Inf. XXVII. Io era già da quell' ombre partito
E seguitava l' orme del mio Duca,
Quando diretto a me, drizzando il dito,

Una gridò: 'Ve' che non par che luca
 Lo raggio da sinistra a quel di sotto, 5
 E come vivo par che si conduca.'
 Gli occhi rivolsi al suon di questo motto,
 E vidile guardar per maraviglia
 Pur me, pur me, e il lume ch' era rotto.
 'Perchè l' animo tuo tanto s' impiglia,' 10
 Disse il Maestro, 'che l' andare allenti ?
 Che ti fa ciò che quivi si pispiglia?
 Vieni retro a me, e lascia dir le genti;
 Sta come torre ferma, che non crolla
 Giammai la cima per soffiar de' venti. 15
 Chè sempre l' uomo in cui pensier rampolla
 Sopra pensier, da sè dilunga il segno,
 Perchè la foga l' un dell' altro insolla.'
 Che poteva io ridir, se non: 'Io vegno'?
 Dissilo, alquanto del color consperso 20
 Che fa l' uom di perdon talvolta degno.
 E intanto per la costa, di traverso,
 Venivan genti innanzi a noi un poco,
 Cantando Miserere a verso a verso.
 Quando s' accorser ch' io non dava loco 25

4. Ve' = vedi.

5. As Dante is climbing straight up the east side of the mountain, facing west, — the sun being now in the north, — his shadow falls on the left (or south) side.

16. Rampolla, 'sprouts.' Cf. Inf. XXIII, 10; Par. IV, 130.

17. The man in whose mind one thought immediately begets a different one 'puts the target further from him,' i. e., makes his goal more difficult of attainment. Dante is particularly fond of metaphors taken from archery.

18. 'Because the one weakens the force of the other.'

21. Shame is becoming in women and youths, not in mature men: cf. Conv., IV, xix, 82-92.

22. Di traverso, 'crosswise.'

24. Ps. li (Vulg. l): 'Have mercy upon me, O God.' — A verso a verso probably indicates a division of the singers into two choirs, which sing the verses alternately.

Per lo mio corpo al trapassar de' raggi,
 Mutar lor canto in un 'oh!' lungo e roco;
 E due di loro, in forma di messaggi,
 Corsero incontro a noi, e domandarne:
 'Di vostra condizion fatene saggi.' 30
 E il mio Maestro: 'Voi potete andarne
 E ritrarre a color che vi mandaro
 Che il corpo di costui è vera carne.
 Se per veder la sua ombra restaro,
 Com' io avviso, assai è lor risposto. 35
 Facciangli onore, ed esser può lor caro.'
 Vapori accesi non vid' io sì tosto
 Di prima notte mai fender sereno,
 Nè, sol calando, nuvole d' agosto,
 Che color non tornasser suso in meno, 40
 E, giunti, là con gli altri a noi dier volta,
 Come schiera che scorre senza freno.
 'Questa gente che preme a noi è molta,
 E vengonti a pregar,' disse il Poeta;
 'Però pur va, ed in andando ascolta.' 45
 'O anima, che vai per esser lieta
 Con quelle membra con le quai nascesti,'
 Venian gridando, 'un poco il passo queta.
 Guarda se alcun di noi unque vedesti,
 Sì che di lui di là novelle porti! 50

28. Messaggi = messaggeri: cf. XXII, 78.

29. Domandarne = ci domandarono.

36. 'It may profit them,' because they are in need of the prayers of the living, which Dante may procure for them.

37. Vapori accesi comprise both meteors and lightning. Meteors, cleaving the clear sky in the early night, and lightning, cleaving the August clouds at sunset, move less swiftly than the messengers.

40. '(So swiftly) that they (the messengers) did not go up again in less (time).'

41. Dier (= diedero) volta, 'turned.'

Deh perchè vai? deh perchè non t'arresti?
 Noi fummo già tutti per forza morti,
 E peccatori infino all' ultim' ora;
 Quivi lume del ciel ne fece accorti
 Sì che, pentendo e perdonando, fuora 55
 Di vita uscimmo a Dio pacificati,
 Che del disio di sè veder n'accora.'
 Ed io: 'Perchè ne' vostri visi guati,
 Non riconosco alcun; ma se a voi piace
 Cosa ch'io possa, spiriti ben nati, 60
 Voi dite; ed io farò per quella pace,
 Che, retro ai piedi di sì fatta guida,
 Di mondo in mondo cercar mi si face.'
 Ed uno incominciò: 'Ciascun si fida
 Del beneficio tuo senza giurarlo, 65
 Pur che il voler non possa non ricida.
 Ond'io, che solo innanzi agli altri parlo,
 Ti prego, se mai vedi quel paese
 Che siede tra Romagna e quel di Carlo,
 Che tu mi sie de' tuoi preghi cortese 70
 In Fano sì che ben per me s'adori,
 Perch'io possa purgar le gravi offese.
 Quindi fu' io; ma li profondi fori,
 Onde uscì il sangue in sul qual io sedea,

57. N' accora, 'saddens us.'

58. Perchè . . . guati, 'though I gaze.'

62. Sì fatta, 'such.'

63. Face = fa.

66. 'Provided inability cut not short thy (good) will.'

69. The March of Ancona is the country between the Romagna and the land of Charles — i. e., the kingdom of Naples, which belonged to Charles II of Anjou. The speaker is Jacopo del Cassero, a leading citizen of Fano, who in 1296 was mayor of Bologna. He fell out with Azzo VIII of Este, and in 1298, while on his way to take the place of mayor of Milan, he was murdered by the marquis's hirelings.

73. Fori, 'wounds.'

74. In sul qual io sedea, 'in which I (the soul) dwelt.' Cf. Levit. xvii, 14:

Fatti mi furo in grembo agli Antenori, 75
 Là dov' io più sicuro esser credea:
 Quel da Esti il fe' far, che m' avea in ira
 Assai più là che dritto non volea.
 Ma s' io fossi fuggito inver la Mira,
 Quando fui sopraggiunto ad Oriago, 80
 Ancor sarei di là dove si spira.
 Corsi al palude, e le cannuce e il brago
 M' impigliar sì ch' io caddi, e lì vid' io
 Delle mie vene farsi in terra lago.'
 Poi disse un altro: 'Deh, se quel disio 85
 Si compia che ti tragge all' alto monte,
 Con buona pietate aiuta il mio.
 Io fui di Montefeltro, io son Buonconte.
 Giovanna o altri non ha di me cura;
 Per ch' io vo tra costor con bassa fronte.' 90
 Ed io a lui: 'Qual forza o qual ventura
 Ti travìò sì fuor di Campaldino
 Che non si seppe mai tua sepoltura?'
 'Oh,' rispos' egli, 'a piè del Casentino
 Traversa un' acqua che ha nome l' Archiano, 95

'anima enim omnis carnis in sanguine est'; the English version is not so close — 'for the life of all flesh is the blood thereof.'

75. The territory of the Paduans. According to an ancient tradition, Padua was founded by Antenor (cf. Æn., I, 247-9), who, as we have seen, was regarded as an arch-traitor: see the second paragraph of the Argument to Inf. XXXII.

78. Più là che, 'beyond what.'

79. La Mira is a village between Padua and Oriago. The speaker cannot forgive himself for having, in his terror, turned in the wrong direction, when he was 'overtaken' by the assassins: had he fled toward the village, instead of running into the swamp, he might still be in the land of the living, in which case he would have repented in due season and so spared himself, after death, this long waiting outside of Purgatory.

85. The se, with the subjunctive, compia, is hortative: cf. II, 16; also Inf. X, 82.

89. Giovanna was his wife.

94. The Casentino is a mountainous district in Tuscany, on the upper Arno.

95. The Archiano is a mountain torrent that runs into the Arno near Bibbiena.

Che sopra l' Ermo nasce in Apennino.
 Dove il vocabol suo diventa vano
 Arriva' io forato nella gola,
 Fuggendo a piede e sanguinando il piano.
 Quivi perdei la vista, e la parola 100
 Nel nome di Maria finii; e quivi
 Caddi, e rimase la mia carne sola.
 Io dirò il vero, e tu il ridi' tra i vivi!
 L'Angel di Dio mi prese, e quel d' inferno
 Gridava: "O tu del ciel, perchè mi privi? 105
 Tu te ne porti di costui l' eterno
 Per una lagrimetta che il mi toglie;
 Ma io farò dell' altro altro governo."
 Ben sai come nell' aere si raccoglie
 Quell' umido vapor che in acqua riede, 110
 Tosto che sale dove il freddo il coglie.
 Giunse quel mal voler, che pur mal chiede,
 Con l' intelletto, e mosse il fummo e il vento
 Per la virtù che sua natura diede.
 Indi la valle, come il dì fu spento, 115
 Da Pratomagno al gran giogo coperse
 Di nebbia, e il ciel di sopra fece intento
 Sì che il pregno aere in acqua si converse.
 La pioggia cadde, ed ai fossati venne
 Di lei ciò che la terra non sofferse. 120

96. The 'Hermitage' is the monastery of Camaldoli, founded, in the mountains, by St. Romualdo.

97. The 'name' of the Archiano 'becomes useless' when it joins the Arno.

103. Ridi' = ridici.

108. Governo, 'disposal.'

112. The demon 'combined that ill will, which seeks only harm, with intelligence.'

113. Fummo = fumo.

116. Pratomagno, a ridge on the southwest of the Casentino, the 'great chain' being the main range on the northeast.

117. Intento, 'tense,' ready to burst.

E come a' rivi grandi si convenne,
 Ver lo fiume real tanto veloce
 Si ruïnò, che nulla la ritenne.
 Lo corpo mio gelato in su la foce
 Trovò l' Archian rubesto, e quel sospinse 125
 Nell' Arno, e sciolse al mio petto la croce
 Ch' io fei di me quando il dolor mi vinse.
 Voltommi per le ripe e per lo fondo,
 Poi di sua preda mi coperse e cinse.'
 'Deh, quando tu sarai tornato al mondo, 130
 E riposato della lunga via,'
 Seguitò il terzo spirito al secondo,
 'Ricorditi di me, che son la Pia!
 Siena mi fe', disfecemi Maremma.
 Salsi colui che innanellata pria, 135
 Disposando, m' avea con la sua gemma.'

122. The 'royal stream' is the Arno.

125. Rubesto, 'raging': cf. Inf. XXXI, 106.

127. Feci = feci.

132. The unexpected intervention of this 'third spirit' is as startling as her reticence is pathetic.

133. Pia de' Tolomei of Siena, it was said, was wedded to Nello della Pietra de' Pannocchieschi, who, wishing to marry another woman, murdered her, or had her murdered, in his castle in the Tuscan Maremma. Bull., XVII, 125.

135-136. Salsi = se lo sa. 'That he knows who, earlier, had ringed me (encircled my finger) with his gem in wedlock (disposando).' For disposando many texts have disposata; in Giorn. dant., XX, 153, L. Filomusi Guelfi proposes the adoption of this reading (without the following comma) and the interpretation of innanellata (with a comma before it) as 'unwedded.'

CANTO VI

ARGUMENT

THE leading personage of this canto is that 'Lombard soul' who so fired the imagination of two great poets. Browning saw in Sordello the representative of a changing age, an infinitely varied and interesting civilization; in Dante's eyes he was the critic of corrupt and incompetent government. The real Sordello was one of those roving Italians who, in the 13th century, helped to maintain the waning glory of Provençal verse, and profited by its immense vogue in foreign countries. Born in the Mantuan town of Goito, he lived the restless and sometimes scandalous life of a handsome adventurer and clever poet at various courts in Lombardy and Piedmont, then in France and Spain, and found at last a mighty protector in the Count of Provence. Passing into the service of the count's son-in-law, Charles of Anjou, he probably saw the Sicilian campaign and the battle of Benevento. By this time he was certainly a man of considerable importance. Charles, after a reproof from Pope Clement IV for his neglect of the poet, bestowed upon him some castles in the Abruzzi. Sordello had evidently risen to knighthood, and we may assume that the notoriety of his youthful career was overshadowed by the fame of his later years. Dante, in De Vulgari Eloquentia, I, xv, 9-14, describes him as a man of great eloquence who had renounced his native dialect not only in poetry but in speech. His lyric work, as we possess it, does not rise above mediocrity; but his Enseñhamen d'Onor, a long didactic poem, though not brilliant in style, contains much that surely appealed to Dante — a high standard of chivalrous conduct and a vigorous invective against the mean-spirited rich. Dante's conception of him, however, was obviously based, in the main, upon a single short piece of verse, a lament over the death of Blacatz, a Provençal patron of letters: Sordello compares the virtues of the departed with the vices and weaknesses of those that are left, and turns his elegy into scathing satire, fearless and merciless condemnation of the potentates of his time, from the Emperor down. Dante regards him, then, as the type of the unflinching patriot and reformer, the scourge of

E l' altro che annegò correndo in caccia. 15
 Quivi pregava con le mani sporte
 Federigo Novello, e quel da Pisa
 Che fe' parer lo buon Marzucco forte.
 Vidi Cont' Orso, e l' anima divisa
 Dal corpo suo per astio e per invidia, 20
 Come dicea, non per colpa commisa:
 Pier dalla Broccia dico; e qui provveggia,
 Mentr' è di qua, la donna di Brabante,
 Sì che però non sia di peggior greggia.
 Come libero fui da tutte quante 25
 Quell' ombre, che pregar pur ch' altri preghi,
 Sì che s' avacci il lor divenir sante,
 Io cominciai: 'E' par che tu mi neghi,
 O luce mia, espresso in alcun testo,
 Che decreto del cielo orazion pieghi; 30
 E questa gente prega pur di questo.

15. 'The other' Aretine is said to be Guccio Tarlati of Pietramala, who was drowned in the Arno while 'hunting' the enemy.

17. 'Frederick, junior,' the son of Count Guido Novello and a daughter of Frederick II, was killed in war in the Casentino in 1291. — Quel da Pisa is apparently Giovanni or Gano, called Farinata, the son of the Marzucco of l. 18.

18. Marzucco was a Pisan, prominent in public affairs, who in 1287 left the world and became a Franciscan monk. According to the most plausible of the conflicting early explanations, his fortitude was shown by pardoning the murderer of his son. Cf. Bull., XVII, 123.

19. Count Orso of Mangona was murdered, it is said, by his cousin Albert. The fathers of Orso and Albert killed each other: cf. Inf. XXXII, 55-8.

22. Pierre de la Brosse of Turenne, — 'the soul parted from its body by hate and envy,' — was chamberlain of Louis IX and Philip III of France. Through the wiles of Philip's second wife, Mary of Brabant, whom Pierre had accused of the murder of the heir to the throne, he was hanged in 1278. — Provveggia = proveda, 'let her look to it,' while she is alive, that she be not consigned, after death, to the 'worse flock' of the damned. Mary lived until 1321.

26. Che pregar pur ch' altri preghi, 'who prayed only that one pray' for them.

27. Avacci: cf. IV, 116.

29. When the shade of the unburied Palinurus begs Æneas to take him over the Styx, the Sibyl replies (Æn., VI, 373-6):

'Unde hæc, o Palinure, tibi tam dira cupido?
 Tu Stygias inhumatus aquas amnemque severum
 Eumenidum aspicias? ripamve injussus adibis?
 Desine fata Deum flecti sperare precando.'

Sarebbe dunque loro speme vana?
 O non m'è il detto tuo ben manifesto?'
 Ed egli a me: 'La mia scrittura è piana,
 E la speranza di costor non falla, 35
 Se ben si guarda con la mente sana.
 Chè cima di giudizio non s'avvala
 Perchè foco d'amor compia in un punto
 Ciò che dee satisfar chi qui s'astalla;
 E là dov'io fermai cotesto punto 40
 Non si ammendava per pregar difetto,
 Perchè il prego da Dio era disgiunto.
 Veramente a così alto sospetto
 Non ti fermar, se quella nol ti dice,
 Che lume fia tra il vero e l'intelletto. 45
 Non so se intendi: io dico di Beatrice.
 Tu la vedrai di sopra, in sulla vetta
 Di questo monte, ridere e felice.'
 Ed io: 'Signore, andiamo a maggior fretta;
 Chè già non m'affatico come dianzi, 50
 E vedi omai che il poggio l'ombra getta.'
 'Noi anderem con questo giorno innanzi,'
 Rispose, 'quanto più potremo omai;
 Ma il fatto è d'altra forma che non stanzi.'

33. Dante questions his own understanding, not Virgil's statement.

37. 'The summit of justice (apex juris) is not overturned.'

38. Perchè, 'though.' — In un punto, 'in a single moment.'

39. Dee = deve. — S'astalla, 'is stationed.' — Satisfaction, an atonement for the injury done, can be made by other loving hearts as well as by the guilty one. See the last paragraph of the Argument to Canto III.

42. Palinurus was a pagan, not 'living in grace' (IV, 134), and his prayer was not addressed to God nor received by him.

43. Veramente, 'nevertheless': cf. II, 98. — Alto sospetto, 'deep doubt.' A question involving the doctrine of grace transcends the power of reason, and is not to be 'settled' without revelation.

46. This mention of the name — the first since the beginning of the journey — makes Dante more eager to climb.

54. Stanzi, 'decided': cf. Inf. XXV, 10.

Prima che sii lassù, tornar vedrai 55
 Colui che già si copre della costa
 Sì che i suoi raggi tu romper non fai.
 Ma vedi là un' anima, che posta
 Sola soletta verso noi riguarda;
 Quella ne insegnerà la via più tosta.' 60
 Venimmo a lei. O anima lombarda,
 Come ti stavi altera e disdegnosa
 E nel mover degli occhi onesta e tarda!
 Ella non ci diceva alcuna cosa;
 Ma lasciavane gir, solo sguardando 65
 A guisa di leon quando si posa.
 Pur Virgilio si trasse a lei, pregando
 Che ne mostrasse la miglior salita;
 E quella non rispose al suo domando,
 Ma di nostro paese e della vita 70
 C' inchiese. E il dolce Duca incominciava:
 ' Mantova.' . . . E l' ombra, tutta in sè romita,
 Surse ver lui del loco ove pria stava,
 Dicendo: ' O Mantovano, io son Sordello
 Della tua terra.' E l' un l' altro abbracciava. 75
 Ahi serva Italia, di dolore ostello,
 Nave senza nocchiere in gran tempesta,
 Non donna di provincie, ma bordello!

57. In the middle of the afternoon the whole eastern side of the mountain is in the shade, and Dante no longer casts a shadow.

66. Cf. Gen. xlix, 9: 'he couched as a lion.'

72. Romita, 'withdrawn.'

75. See the second paragraph of the Argument to Canto II.

76. Ostello: cf. V. N., Sonnet II, 23.

77. Nocchiere: cf. Conv., IV, iv, 50-72.

78. Several old writers call Italy 'domina provinciarum'; cf. Lamentations of Jeremiah i, 1, 'princess among the provinces (princeps provinciarum).'
 Guittone d'Arezzo, in an epistle to Florence, after the battle of Montaperti, says: 'che divenuta se' non già reina, ma ancilla conculcata e sottoposta a tributo.'

Quell' anima gentil fu così presta,
 Sol per lo dolce suon della sua terra, 80
 Di fare al cittadin suo quivi festa;
 Ed ora in te non stanno senza guerra
 Li vivi tuoi, e l' un l' altro si rode
 Di quei che un muro ed una fossa serra.
 Cerca, misera, intorno dalle prode, 85
 Le tue marine, e poi ti guarda in seno
 Se alcuna parte in te di pace gode.
 Che val perchè ti racconciasse il freno
 Giustiniano, se la sella è vota?
 Senz' esso fora la vergogna meno. 90
 Ahi gente, che dovresti esser devota,
 E lasciar seder Cesare in la sella, —
 Se bene intendi ciò che Dio ti nota, —
 Guarda com' esta fiera è fatta fella
 Per non esser corretta dagli sproni, 95
 Poi che ponesti mano alla predella!
 O Alberto Tedesco, che abbandoni
 Costei ch' è fatta indomita e selvaggia,
 E dovresti inforcar li suoi arcioni,
 Giusto giudizio dalle stelle caggia 100

88. In ll. 88-102 Italy is pictured as a horse. Justinian (Par. VI) 'patched its bridle' by codifying the laws, but there is no Emperor to fill the saddle.

91. Gente: the clergy.

93. Mat. xxii, 21: 'Render therefore unto Cæsar the things which are Cæsar's.'

96. Predella, 'rein': ever since the clergy usurped temporal authority.

97. Albert of Hapsburg was elected King of the Romans in 1298, but never went to Italy to be crowned.

100. In 1307 Albert's oldest son died after a short sickness; the next year Albert himself was murdered by his nephew, John the Parricide. If Dante was apostrophizing Albert as still alive at the time of writing, this canto must have been composed between these two events. If, on the other hand, the poet was putting himself back into the year 1300, the 'judgment' would naturally be the assassination of Albert, and the 'successor' would be the next Emperor, Henry VII, who descended into Italy.

Sopra il tuo sangue, e sia nuovo ed aperto,
 Tal che il tuo successor temenza n'aggia!
 Chè avete (tu e il tuo padre) sofferto —
 Per cupidigia di costà distretti —
 Che il giardin dell' imperio sia deserto. 105
 Vieni a veder Montecchi e Cappelletti,
 Monaldi e Filippeschi, uom senza cura:
 Color già tristi, e questi con sospetti.
 Vien, crudel, vieni, e vedi la pressura
 De' tuoi gentili, e cura lor magagne; 110
 E vedrai Santaflor com' è sicura.
 Vieni a veder la tua Roma che piagne,
 Vedova e sola, e dì e notte chiama:
 'Cesare mio, perchè non m' accompagne?'
 Vieni a veder la gente quanto s' ama! 115
 E se nulla di noi pietà ti move,
 A vergognarti vien della tua fama!
 E se licito m' è, o sommo Giove,
 Che fosti in terra per noi crocifisso,
 Son li giusti occhi tuoi rivolti altrove? 120
 O è preparazion, che nell' abisso
 Del tuo consiglio fai, per alcun bene
 In tutto dall' accorger nostro scisso?

103. Il padre: Rudolph, who was as remiss as his son.

104. 'Held by greed of things up yonder': the desire to increase their German states.

106, 107. Dante cites a few of the great houses that were ravaged by strife: the Montecchi of Verona, Ghibellines; the Cappelletti of Cremona, of the Church party; the Monaldi and Filippeschi, rival families (Guelf and Ghibelline) of Orvieto. There is no evidence that the 'Capulets' were ever neighbors of the 'Montagues' in Verona: cf. Bull., XII, 240.

108. Con sospetti, 'apprehensive.'

110. Pressura: cf. Luke xxi, 25, 'pressura gentium,' 'distress of nations.'

111. The Counts of Santaflora, a great Ghibelline family, lost, at the close of the 13th century, a great part of their territory to Siena. Santa Fiora is in the Maremma.

114. Accompagne = accompagni.

123. Scisso, 'severed': inaccessible to our understanding.

Chè le città d' Italia tutte piene
 Son di tiranni, ed un Marcel diventa 125
 Ogni villan che parteggiando viene.
 Fiorenza mia, ben puoi esser contenta
 Di questa digression, che non ti tocca
 Mercè del popol tuo che sì argomenta.
 Molti han giustizia in cor, ma tardi scocca, 130
 Per non venir senza consiglio all' arco;
 Ma il popol tuo l' ha in sommo della bocca.
 Molti rifiutan lo comune incarco;
 Ma il popol tuo sollecito risponde
 Senza chiamare, e grida: 'Io mi sobbarco.' 135
 Or ti fa lieta, chè tu hai ben onde:
 Tu ricca, tu con pace, tu con senno!
 S' io dico 'l ver, l' effetto nol nasconde.
 Atene e Lacedemona, che fenno
 L' antiche leggi e furon sì civili, 140
 Fecero al viver bene un picciol cenno
 Verso di te, che fai tanto sottili
 Provvedimenti che a mezzo novembre
 Non giunge quel che tu d' ottobre fili.

125. C. Claudius Marcellus ('Marcellus . . . loquax,' as Julius Cæsar calls him in Lucan's Pharsalia, I, 313) was a strenuous opponent of Cæsar and a partisan of Pompey.

129. Si argomenta, 'strives,' does its best. Ll. 127-44 are bitterly ironical.

130. Tardi scocca, 'it is slow in shooting'; it does not quickly find expression.

131. Per non venir, 'because it does not come.'

135. Senza chiamare, 'without being called.' — Io mi sobbarco, 'I bend my back' for the 'common burden' of public service.

136. Onde, 'wherefore': thou hast good reason.

138. L'effetto nol (= non lo) nasconde, 'the result shows.'

139. Fenno = fecero.

141. Athens and Lacedæmon 'offered but a slight suggestion of right living,' compared to Florence.

142. Sottili, 'delicate.' Dante plays upon the double sense of sottile, which means 'shrewd' and 'flimsy.' The fabric of laws which Florence spins in October does not last until mid November. The two months were perhaps suggested by the vicissitudes of 1301, in which year the White priors who took office on Oct. 18 were deposed by the Blacks on Nov. 8.

Quante volte, del tempo che rimembre, 145
Legge, moneta, officio, e costume
Hai tu mutato, e rinnovato membre!
E se ben ti ricordi e vedi lume,
Vedrai te simigliante a quella inferma
Che non può trovar posa in su le piume, 150
Ma con dar volta suo dolore scherma.

145. Rimembre = rimembri: cf. l. 114.

147. Membre = membra, pl.

151. 'But fights her pain by tossing.' Cf. St. Augustine, Confessiones, VI, xvi, 3: 'Versa et reversa in tergum et in latera et in ventrem, et dura sunt omnia.'

CANTO VII

ARGUMENT

‘WALK while ye have the light, lest darkness come upon you: for he that walketh in darkness knoweth not whither he goeth’ (John xii, 35). In ll. 107-8 of the first canto the wayfarers were told that the sun — the emblem of spiritual enlightenment, or righteous choice — was to be their guide in their upward journey; now (and again in XVII, 62-3 and XXVII, 74-5) they learn that without that guidance they cannot ascend at all. The life of the penitent is divided between the day of active advancement on the path of reformation, where every step must be wisely directed, and the night of prayerful meditation. Day is ushered in by the constellation of cardinal, or practical, virtues, Prudence, Temperance, Fortitude, Justice (I, 22-7); night, by the three bright stars of Christian contemplation, the theological virtues of Faith, Hope, and Love (VIII, 85-93).

Each of the three nights passed by Dante on the island is spent in repose. His first resting-place is the beautiful Valley of the Princes, a hollow in the mountain-side, where are gathered great rulers whose worldly cares made them postpone until the last moment their reconciliation with God. Those who were enemies on earth sit side by side in fraternal harmony, Rudolph of Hapsburg with Ottocar of Bohemia, Charles of Anjou with Peter of Aragon. Here, as in the first life, Sordello is the judge of kings: he points out and describes to the travellers the dwellers in the dale. The conception of this charming, peaceful spot was probably suggested to Dante — as was that of the Noble Castle of Inf. IV, 106 — by Virgil’s picture of the Elysian Fields in Æn., VI, 637 ff. As Sordello shows the dell to Virgil and Dante from a bank, so Anchises leads the Sibyl and Æneas to a height (754-5):

‘Et tumulum capit, unde omnes longo ordine possit
Adversos legere, et venientum discere vultus.’

In both poems the spirits are seen reclining on the greensward, singing together (656-7):

‘Conspicit ecce alios dextra lævaque per herbam
Vescentes, lætumque choro pæana canentes.’

Like Sordello, Anchises surveys and recognizes souls destined to rise (679-81):

'At pater Anchises penitus convalle virenti
Inclusas animas, superumque ad lumen ituras,
Lustrabat studio recolens.'

Poscia che l' accoglienze oneste e liete
Furo iterate tre e quattro volte,
Sordel si trasse e disse: 'Voi chi siete?'
'Prima che a questo monte fosser volte
L' anime degne di salire a Dio, 5
Fur l' ossa mie per Ottavian sepolte.
Io son Virgilio; e per null' altro rio
Lo ciel perdei, che per non aver fè.'
Così rispose allora il Duca mio.
Qual è colui che cosa innanzi sè 10
Subita vede, ond' ei si maraviglia,
Che crede e no, dicendo: 'Ell' è, non è,'
Tal parve quegli; e poi chinò le ciglia,
Ed umilmente ritornò ver lui
Ed abbracciollo ove il minor s' appiglia. 15
'O gloria de' Latin,' disse, 'per cui
Mostrò ciò che potea la lingua nostra,
O pregio eterno del loco ond' io fui,
Qual merito o qual grazia mi ti mostra?
S' io son d' udir le tue parole degno, 20

3. Not until he has lovingly greeted his countryman several times does Sordello ask his name. Dante remains comparatively unnoticed until Canto VIII, l. 62.

4. Before the descent of Christ into Hell no souls went to Purgatory or Heaven: cf. Inf. IV, 63. Ever since the redemption the souls of the elect have reached Heaven through Purgatory. Virgil died in 19 A. D.

18. Mantua issued coins bearing Virgil's image, and in the 14th century erected a statue to him.

Dimmi se vien d' inferno, e di qual chiostra.'
 'Per tutti i cerchi del dolente regno,'
 Rispose lui, 'son io di qua venuto.
 Virtù del ciel mi mosse, e con lei vegno.
 Non per far, ma per non far, ho perduto 25
 Di veder l' alto Sol che tu disiri,
 E che fu tardi da me conosciuto.
 Loco è laggiù non tristo da martiri
 Ma di tenebre solo, ove i lamenti
 Non suonan come guai, ma son sospiri. 30
 Quivi sto io coi parvoli innocenti,
 Dai denti morsi della morte avante
 Che fosser dall' umana colpa esenti.
 Quivi sto io con quei che le tre sante
 Virtù non si vestiò, e senza vizio 35
 Conobber l' altre e seguir tutte quante.
 Ma se tu sai e puoi, alcuno indizio
 Dà noi, perchè venir possiam più tosto
 Là dove Purgatorio ha dritto inizio.'
 Rispose: 'Loco certo non c' è posto; 40
 Licito m' è andar suso ed intorno.
 Per quanto ir posso, a guida mi t' accosto.
 Ma vedi già come dichina il giorno,
 Ed andar su di notte non si puote;
 Però è buon pensar di bel soggiorno. 45
 Anime sono a destra qua rimote;

39. Dritto inizio, 'real beginning.'

40. Certo, 'fixed.' — Posto, 'assigned.'

44. Puote = può.

Se 'l mi consenti, io ti merrò ad esse,
 E non senza diletto ti fien note.'
 'Com' è ciò?' fu risposto: 'chi volesse
 Salir di notte, fora egli impedito 50
 D' altrui? o non sarria chè non potesse?'
 E il buon Sordello in terra fregò il dito,
 Dicendo: 'Vedi, sola questa riga
 Non varcheresti dopo il sol partito.
 Non però che altra cosa desse briga, 55
 Che la notturna tenebra, ad ir suso:
 Quella col non poter la voglia intriga.
 Ben si poria con lei tornare in giuso,
 E passeggiar la costa intorno errando,
 Mentre che l' orizzonte il dì tien chiuso.' 60
 Allora il mio Signor, quasi ammirando:
 'Menane dunque,' disse, 'là ove dici
 Che aver si può diletto dimorando.'
 Poco allungati c' eravam di lici
 Quand' io m' accorsi che il monte era scemo, 65
 A guisa che i vallon li sceman quici.
 'Colà,' disse quell' ombra, 'n' anderemo
 Dove la costa face di sè grembo,
 E quivi il nuovo giorno attenderemo.'
 Tra erto e piano era un sentiero sghembo, 70

 Fresco smeraldo in l' ora che si fiacca, 75
 Dall' erba e dalli fior dentro a quel seno
 Posti, ciascun saria di color vinto,
 Come dal suo maggiore è vinto il meno.
 Non avea pur natura ivi dipinto,
 Ma di soavità di mille odori 80

71. In fianco della lacca, 'to the edge of the dingle': cf. Inf. VII, 16.

72. 'At a point where the bank was more than half gone.' The sloping valley opens out as it descends, and its banks diminish until they blend into the mountain-side.

73. Cocco e biacca, 'cochineal and white lead,' from which red and white colors were extracted.

74. Indico legno is probably amber, which, according to Pliny, is a tree-gum that sometimes comes from India: cf. Publications of the Modern Language Association of America, XVIII, 356. Most commentators take it to mean 'indigo,' but the epithets lucido e sereno fit amber much better.

75. Fiacca, 'splits.'

97. L' altro, 'the next.' — Nella vista, 'as his expression shows.'

98. Bohemia.

99. Molta, 'Moldau.' — Albia, 'Elbe.'

100. Ottocar II, King of Bohemia and Duke of Austria, was killed, in 1278, in war with Rudolph, whom he would not recognize as King of Rome. — Fasce, 'swaddling clothes': he was worth more in his infancy than his son Wenceslaus in mature age.

101. Wenceslaus IV, son and heir of Ottocar, son-in-law of Rudolph. He lived until 1305. Cf. Par. XIX, 125.

102. Pasce: i. e., pascono.

103. 'Small-Nose' is Philip III, the Bold, of France, son and successor of Louis IX, and nephew of Charles of Anjou. To help his uncle against Peter of Aragon (l. 112), whom the Sicilian revolutionists had elected king, he invaded Catalonia by land and sea; but his fleet was defeated, and his army, contracting the plague, was obliged to flee. The king himself died at Perpignan in 1285.

104. Henry the Fat of Navarre, brother and successor of the Thibault of Inf. XXII, 52, died in 1274.

107. L' altro: Henry.

Della sua palma, sospirando, letto.
 Padre e suocero son del mal di Francia;
 Sanno la vita sua viziata e lorda, 110
 E quindi viene il duol che sì li lancia.
 Quel che par sì membruto, e che s' accorda
 Cantando con colui del maschio naso,
 D' ogni valor portò cinta la corda.
 E se re dopo lui fosse rimasto 115
 Lo giovinetto che retro a lui siede,
 Bene andava il valor di vaso in vaso —
 Che non si puote dir dell' altre rede:
 Giacomo e Federico hanno i reami;
 Del retaggio miglior nessun possiede. 120
 Rade volte risurge per li rami
 L' umana probitate; e questo vuole
 Quei che la dà, perchè da lui si chiami.
 Anche al Nasuto vanno mie parole
 (Non men ch' all' altro, Pier, che con lui canta), 125

109. Philip the Bold was father, Henry the Fat was father-in-law, of the 'Curse of France,' Philip IV, the Fair. In the many passages in which Dante assails this sovereign (who did so much harm to Italy and the Church), he avoids mentioning his name. He died in 1314: cf. Par. XIX, 120.

112. The 'large-limbed' sovereign is Peter III of Aragon, the husband of Manfred's daughter Constance (cf. III, 115), elected king of Sicily when the French were expelled in 1282. He died in 1285.

113. 'The one with the masculine nose' is Charles of Anjou, brother of Louis IX of France, and conqueror of Naples and Sicily.

114. Cf. Isaiah xi, 5: 'And righteousness shall be the girdle of his loins, and faithfulness the girdle of his reins.'

116. Alfonso III, Peter's oldest son, succeeded his father as king of Aragon, but died while still young in 1291. He so little deserved Dante's praise that some commentators think the giovinetto must have been the youngest brother, Peter.

117. 'Goodness would indeed have been emptied from vessel to vessel.' Cf. Jeremiah xlviii, 11.

119. James and Frederick, 'the other heirs,' i. e., the second and third sons of Peter, were kings of Aragon and Sicily when Dante wrote. Cf. III, 115.

120. The 'better heritage' is the father's goodness.

123. 'Crist,' who bestows it, 'wol we clayme of him our gentilesse' (Chaucer. Wyf of Bath's Tale, 1117). Cf. Epistle of James i, 17.

Onde Puglia e Provenza già si duole.
 Tant' è del seme suo minor la pianta,
 Quanto più che Beatrice e Margherita
 Costanza di marito ancor si vanta.
 Vedete il re della semplice vita 130
 Seder là solo, Arrigo d' Inghilterra;
 Questi ha ne' rami suoi migliore uscita.
 Quel che più basso tra costor s' atterra,
 Guardando in suso, è Guglielmo Marchese,
 Per cui ed Alessandria e la sua guerra 135
 Fa pianger Monferrato e Canavese.'

126. Apulia and Provence 'mourn' under the rule of Charles's degenerate son, Charles II, who died in 1309.

127, 128, 129. Charles II is as much inferior to Charles I as Charles I is to Peter III. Beatrice of Provence and Margaret of Burgundy were the successive wives of Charles I, Constance (daughter of Manfred) was the wife of Peter; and Charles I was not a devoted husband. 'The plant (the son) is inferior to the seed (the father) to the same extent that Constance boasts of her husband (Peter) more than Beatrice and Margaret boast of theirs (Charles).'

130, 131, 132. Henry III of England was reputed to have little wit; his son, Edward I, was highly esteemed.

134. William VII, or 'Longsword,' sits in a lower place on the ground because he is of lower rank than the others. He was, however, Marquis of Montferrat and Canavese, Imperial vicar, a great feudal lord and Ghibelline leader.

135, 136. In 1292 he was treacherously captured at Alessandria in Lombardy, and was kept in an iron cage until his death. His son, to avenge him, attacked Alessandria, but was defeated, unhappily for his domains. Ed (both) Alessandria e la sua guerra is the subject of fa.

CANTO VIII

ARGUMENT

THE penitent who, completely renouncing his past life, has once begun his expiation under the protection of grace and the guidance of the Church is exempt from temptation or fear of sin; so the souls within Dante's Purgatory have no apprehension. Those outside the gate, however, — the remorseful evildoers who are still waiting and striving, — are exposed to the wiles of the serpent and feel the 'chaste dread' (timor castus) of wickedness itself, different from the 'servile terror' (timor servilis) of the consequences of wrongdoing (cf. Inf. I, 44). But inasmuch as they are on their way to God, he constantly watches over them; in time of need he sends the green Angels of Hope, armed with the blunted sword of defence, to protect them from the adversary. Such is the lesson which Dante expressly bids us discover behind the 'thin veil' of allegory. Once before, in Inf. IX, 61-3, he warned us to look 'under the veil of the strange verses.'

It is in the evening that temptation creeps upon the repentant sinner — evening, which softens the hearts of sailors just parted from home, and 'pricks with love' the unhardened traveller as he hears the bell of compline, or compicta, tolling the knell of 'dying day.' That is the hour at which the Church sings the hymn (attributed to St. Ambrose), Te lucis ante, and recites a prayer calling for the guardianship of holy angels and protection against the snares of the enemy. This hymn is now sung by the souls in the valley. The first two of the three stanzas are as follows:

Te lucis ante terminum,
Rerum Creator, poscimus,
Ut tua pro clementia
Sis presul et custodia.

Procul recedant somnia
Et noctium phantasmata;
Hostemque nostrum comprime,
Ne polluantur corpora.'

Among the singers, two are singled out for special notice: one, Nino Visconti, was known to Dante in the first life; the other, Conrad Malaspina, belonged to a family whose hospitality the poet once enjoyed. Nino, a grandson of the Ugolino of Inf. XXXIII, was judge, or governor, of Gallura, one of the four provinces into which the Pisans divided their Sardinian domain;

Fra Gomita (Inf. XXII, 81) was his dishonest vicar there. Moreover, he ruled Pisa with his grandfather, and on the death of the latter waged war for five years — 1288-93 — against that city and the Ghibelline forces of Guido da Montefeltro (Inf. XXVII). He was an ally of Florence — to which he made several visits in 1289 — and other Guelf towns of Tuscany, and became captain general of the Guelf league. We learn from Inf. XXI, 94-6, that Dante had a hand in one of his campaigns, being present at the siege of Caprona in 1289. Although Nino's life was devoted mainly to politics and strife, he seems to have been fond of poetry. He lived until 1296. Conrad Malaspina, who died two years earlier, was the lord of Villafranca on the Magra (which flows into the sea near the Gulf of Spezia) and other holdings in the north-west. For a century his house had been famous for its gallantry and its liberality to troubadours; and 'the glory of the purse and the sword' had not declined. In October, 1306, Dante acted as attorney for the family in concluding a treaty of peace. One of the letters ascribed to him (Epistola III) is addressed to Moroello Malaspina, his former host, to whom obscure reference is made in Inf. XXIV, 145-50. The poet's splendid tribute of just praise is a grateful return for kindness to the exile.

Era già l' ora che volge il disio
 Ai naviganti e intenerisce il core,
 Lo dì ch' han detto ai dolci amici addio,
 E che lo nuovo peregrin d' amore
 Punge, se ode squilla di lontano 5
 Che paia il giorno pianger che si more,
 Quand' io incominciai a render vano
 L' udire, ed a mirare una dell' alme
 Surta, che l' ascoltar chiedea con mano.
 Ella giunse e levò ambo le palme, 10
 Ficcando gli occhi verso l' orïente,

7. Cf. IV, 1-12: Dante becomes so absorbed in gazing that he can hear nothing.

9. Cf. Acts xiii, 16: 'Then Paul stood up, and beckoning with his hand said,' etc. Also Met., I, 205-6; Æn., XII, 692.

10. Giunse, 'clasped.'

Come dicesse a Dio: 'D' altro non calme.'
Te lucis ante sì devotamente
 Le uscì di bocca, e con sì dolci note,
 Che fece me a me uscir di mente. 15
 E l' altre poi dolcemente e devote
 Seguitar lei per tutto l' inno intero,
 Avendo gli occhi alle superne rote.
 Aguzza qui, Lettor, ben gli occhi al vero,
 Chè il velo è ora ben tanto sottile, 20
 Certo, che il trapassar dentro è leggiero.
 Io vidi quello esercito gentile
 Tacito poscia riguardare in sue,
 Quasi aspettando pallido ed umile.
 E vidi uscir dell' alto e scender giue 25
 Due angeli con due spade affocate,
 Tronche e private delle punte sue.
 Verdi, come fogliette pur mo nate,
 Erano in veste, che da verdi penne
 Percosse traean dietro e ventilate. 30
 L' un poco sopra noi a star si venne
 E l' altro scese in l' opposita sponda,
 Sì che la gente in mezzo si contenne.
 Ben discerneva in lor la testa bionda;
 Ma nelle facce l' occhio si smarrì, 35
 Come virtù che al troppo si confonda.
 'Ambo vegnon del grembo di Maria,'
 Disse Sordello, 'a guardia della valle,
 Per lo serpente che verrà via via.'

12. Calme = mi cale.

15. 'That it made me forget myself.'

18. The 'upper wheels' are the revolving heavens.

23. Sue = su: see IV, 47. Cf. giue in l. 25.

28. Pur mo, 'only now,' 'just.'

36. Virtù, 'faculty.' — Troppo, 'excess,' i. e., of light. — Cf. II, 39.

39. Via via, 'presently.'

Ond' io, che non sapeva per qual calle, 40
 Mi volsi intorno, e stretto m' accostai,
 Tutto gelato, alle fidate spalle.
 E Sordello anco: 'Ora avvalliamo omai
 Tra le grandi ombre, e parleremo ad esse.
 Grazioso fia lor vedervi assai.' 45
 Solo tre passi credo ch' io scendesse,
 E fui di sotto, e vidi un che mirava
 Pur me, come conoscer mi volesse.
 Tempo era già che l' aere s' annerava,
 Ma non sì che tra gli occhi suoi e i miei 50
 Non dichiarisse ciò che pria serrava.
 Ver me si fece, ed io ver lui mi fei.
 Giudice Nin gentil, quanto mi piacque,
 Quando ti vidi non esser tra i rei!
 Nullo bel salutar tra noi si tacque; 55
 Poi domandò: 'Quant' è che tu venisti
 A piè del monte per le lontane acque?'
 'O,' diss' io lui, 'per entro i lochi tristi
 Venni stamane, e sono in prima vita,
 Ancor che l' altra sì andando acquisti.' 60
 E come fu la mia risposta udita,
 Sordello ed egli indietro si raccolse,
 Come gente di subito smarrita.
 L' uno a Virgilio, e l' altro ad un si volse

46. Tre passi: the bank is not high (VII, 72), and Dante has been observing the spirits at close range (VII, 88-9). Cf. XXVIII, 70. — Scendesse = scendessi.

51. It was not too late for the darkening air to 'disclose what it had locked up (concealed) before': now that they are so near, Dante and Nino can discern each other's features.

52. Fci = fecì.

54. I rei: the damned.

60. Ancor che, 'although.' — Acquisti, 'I am winning.'

62. Si raccolse: i. e., si raccolsero, 'drew.' Sordello, up to this time, has not noticed that Dante is alive.

Che sedea lì, gridando: 'Su, Corrado, 65
 Vieni a veder che Dio per grazia volse.'
 Poi volto a me: 'Per quel singular grado
 Che tu dei a colui che sì nasconde
 Lo suo primo perchè che non gli è guado,
 Quando sarai di là dalle larghe onde, 70
 Di' a Giovanna mia, che per me chiami
 Là dove agl' innocenti si risponde.
 Non credo che la sua madre più m' ami,
 Poscia che trasmutò le bianche bende,
 Le quai convien che misera ancor brami. 75
 Per lei assai di lieve si comprende
 Quanto in femmina foco d' amor dura,
 Se l' occhio o il tatto spesso non l' accende.
 Non le farà sì bella sepoltura
 La vipera, che i Milanesi accampa, 80
 Com' avria fatto il gallo di Gallura.'
 Così dicea, segnato della stampa,
 Nel suo aspetto, di quel dritto zelo

65. This Conrad reappears in l. 109.

66. Che, 'what.' — l'olse = volle: cf. Inf. II, 118, XXIX, 102.

67. Singular grado, 'peculiar gratitude.'

68. Dei = devi.

69. Perchè, 'wherefore,' i. e., reason. — Non gli è guado, 'there is no ford to it': it is impenetrable.

71. Joan was Nino's only child. In 1308 she was married to Rizzardo di Camino. Cf. Bull. XVII, 124.

73. Nino's wife was Beatrice, daughter of Obizzo II d'Este (cf. Inf. XII, 111). In June, 1300, she married Galeazzo di Matteo Visconti. As it is now April, 1300, we may suppose, either that Dante did not know the exact date of the marriage, or that Nino is here speaking of it only as something contemplated.

74. Married women wore a veil, called bende; the widow's veil was white.

75. In 1302 the Visconti were driven from Milan, and Galeazzo and his wife were compelled to take refuge with her family in Ferrara.

77. Cf. En., IV, 569-70: 'varium et mutabile semper Femina.'

80. The cognizance of the Visconti, the lords of Milan, was a blue viper swallowing a red Saracen. These arms will not adorn her tomb so well as would Nino's, the cock, the emblem of Gallura. In the 13th century the Milanese, when at war, never pitched their camp until they had hoisted the Visconti standard.

Che misuratamente in core avvampa.
 Gli occhi miei ghiotti andavan pure al cielo, 85
 Pur là dove le stelle son più tarde,
 Sì come rota più presso allo stelo.
 E il Duca mio: 'Figliuol, che lassù guarde?'
 Ed io a lui: 'A quelle tre facelle,
 Di che il polo di qua tutto quanto arde.' 90
 Ed egli a me: 'Le quattro chiare stelle
 Che vedevi staman son di là basse,
 E queste son salite ov' eran quelle.'
 Com' ei parlava, e Sordello a sè il trasse
 Dicendo: 'Vedi là il nostro avversaro!' 95
 E drizzò il dito, perchè in là guardasse.
 Da quella parte onde non ha riparo
 La picciola vallea, era una biscia,
 Forse qual diede ad Eva il cibo amaro.
 Tra l' erba e i fior venia la mala striscia, 100
 Volgendo ad or ad or la testa al dosso,
 Leccando come bestia che si liscia.
 Io non vidi, e però dicer non posso,
 Come mosser gli astor celestiali,
 Ma vidi bene l' uno e l' altro mosso. 105
 Sentendo fender l' aere alle verdi ali,
 Fuggì 'l serpente, e gli angeli dier volta,

87. Stelo, 'stem,' i. e., axle. Near the pole, the end of the axis of the heavens, the stars revolve slowest.

88. Guarde = guardi.

89. The 'three torches' represent the three theological virtues: see the first paragraph of the Argument to Canto VII.

91. Cf. I, 22-7.

94. E is superfluous: cf. Inf. XIX, 3.

97. Apparently from the lower end, where the valley opens.

99. Gen. iii, 4-6.

100. Striscia, 'trail.'

103. Dicer = dire.

107. Dier = diedero.

Suso alle poste rivolando eguali.
 L' ombra che s' era al Giudice raccolta,
 Quando chiamò, per tutto quell' assalto 110
 Punto non fu da me guardare sciolta.
 'Se la lucerna che ti mena in alto
 Trovi nel tuo arbitrio tanta cera
 Quant' è mestier infino al sommo smalto,'
 Cominciò ella, 'se novella vera 115
 Di Valdimacra o di parte vicina
 Sai, dilla a me, che già grande là era.
 Chiamato fui Corrado Malaspina:
 Non son l' antico, ma di lui discesi.
 A' miei portai l' amor che qui raffina.' 120
 'O,' diss' io lui, 'per li vostri paesi
 Giammai non fui; ma dove si dimora,
 Per tutta Europa, ch' ei non sien palesi?
 La fama che la vostra casa onora
 Grida i signori e grida la contrada, 125
 Sì che ne sa chi non vi fu ancora.
 Ed io vi giuro, s' io di sopra vada,
 Che vostra gente onrata non si sfregia
 Del pregio della borsa e della spada.

110. Cf. l. 64.

112. This is the hortative use of se: Inf. X, 82; Purg. II, 16. The meaning is: 'As thou hopest that illuminating grace (the lantern which leads thee up) may find in thy free will the responsive spirit (the wax, food for the flame) that is needed to take thee to the Earthly Paradise.'

114. Smalto, 'enamel,' is used figuratively by Italian poets in two senses, 'stone,' and 'greensward' or 'garden': here it has the second meaning.

116. The valley of the Magra (Inf. XXIV, 145) is a part of the district of Lunigiana.

119. The older and more famous Conrad Malaspina, who lived in the first half of the 13th century, was the grandfather of the present speaker.

120. Raffina, 'is purified.'

122. In 1300 Dante had not been there.

125. Grida, 'proclaims,' celebrates.

127. The se of asseveration (Inf. X, 82): 'as I hope to go.'

128. Non si sfregia, 'does not despoil itself.'

Uso e natura sì la privilegia 130
 Che, perchè il capo reo lo mondo torca,
 Sola va dritta e il mal cammin dispregia.'
 Ed egli: 'Or va, chè il sol non si ricorca
 Sette volte nel letto che il Montone
 Con tutti e quattro i piè copre ed inforca, 135
 Che cotesta cortese opinione
 Ti fia chiavata in mezzo della testa
 Con maggior chiovi che d' altrui sermone,
 Se corso di giudizio non s' arresta.'

131. 'No matter how the wicked head (Rome) may twist the world awry.'

133, 134, 135. The sun will not return seven times to the sign of Aries, the Ram: seven years will not pass. The sun is in Aries from March 21 to April 21. The prophecy is made in April, 1300. Dante's 'courteous opinion' of the Malaspina is, then, to be confirmed ('nailed in his head') by experience before March 21, 1307. We know that he was with them on Oct. 6, 1306.

CANTO IX

ARGUMENT

DURING each of the three nights that Dante spends on the island he has an allegorical vision, related to his present state or his immediate future. In the first dream he fancies himself carried up through the sky by a golden eagle; and this flight is but the image of a real spiritual ascent. Souls earnestly striving to reach God are always mysteriously assisted by grace, which comes to meet them and so speeds them on their way that their swift progress passes their understanding. 'They that wait upon the Lord,' says Isaiah xl, 31, 'shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles.' Lucia, then, the symbol of Illuminating Grace, who came to Dante's help at the beginning of his struggle (Inf. II, 97-108) and who reappears to him at his journey's end (Par. XXXII, 137), now lifts him up in his sleep and bears him, at daybreak, over the long, steep incline to the very gate of Purgatory.

There he beholds, seated on the steps, an angelic guardian, who represents Ecclesiastical Authority. In the hand of this 'porter,' reflecting the sun's rays, is a bare sword, 'the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God' (Ephesians vi, 17). From beneath his garment he draws the keys entrusted by Christ to Peter and his successors — 'I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven' (Mat. xvi, 19). They are two, the golden key of power and the silver key of discernment; or, as Peter Lombard describes them in his Sententie, IV, xviii, 502, 'scientia discernendi peccata et potestas judicandi de peccatis.' The priest needs not only the authority to loose and bind, delegated to him by God, but also judgment to direct him in the use of it. The golden key, purchased with Christ's blood, is 'the more precious'; but the other, the silver key of discrimination, 'requires vast skill and wit' to 'disentangle the knot.'

The stone threshold of Purgatory, which is the angel's seat, seems to Dante to be of adamant; it evidently typifies the firm foundation of ecclesiastical power — 'thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build my church' (Mat. xvi, 18). Leading up to it are three steps: the first is of white, smooth marble; the second, of rough, dark stone, scorched and cracked; the third, 'piled upon' the second, is blood-red. Apparently they stand for the three stages in the career of man which led up to the founding of the Church: original innocence, sin, and atonement. The same three stages recur in the life of every transgressor who finds salvation. The feet of the gatekeeper rest upon the red step of atonement; there it is that Dante prostrates himself and beats his breast. Most commentators see in the three stairs the three parts of the sacrament of penance — contrition, confession, satisfaction. But according to the literal sense of the poem the souls reaching the gate should have accomplished these duties (for the most part at least) before death; otherwise they would not have attained the mountain at all. And in Dante's symbolical journey through Purgatory (indicating the purification of his soul by discipline on earth) he is not yet ready for this sacrament, which forms the culmination of his expiatory task. Contrition, confession, and satisfaction await him at the top of the mountain, where they are administered by Beatrice herself: Purg. XXX, 97-9; XXXI, 1-36, 88-90.

For still different explanations of the steps, see Flam., II, 101; Tor., 395. For the keys, see St. Thomas, Summa Theologiae, Tertia, Suppl., Qu. xvii, Art. 3. — Cf. Romania, XXXIX, 582-3.

La concubina di Titone antico

Di gemme la sua fronte era lucente,

1. In two places in the Aeneid — IV, 584-5 and IX, 459-60 — we find the lines:

'Et jam prima novo spargebat lumine terras
Tithoni croceum linquens Aurora cubile.'

In the Georgics, I, 447, the second line occurs once more. Tithonus was therefore well known to Dante as the husband of Aurora, the dawn. Having to describe moonrise, the lunar dawn, — two or three hours after sunset on the island, — the poet fancifully calls the lunar aurora 'the concubine of old Tithonus,' as contrasted with sunrise, his lawful spouse.

2. The lunar aurora 'was already whitening in the balcony of the east': the white light of the moon was appearing on the eastern horizon.

4, 5, 6. In the eastern sky, where the moon was to appear, was the constellation of Scorpio. This is astronomically correct: see Moore, III, 74-85. For the description of the 'cold creature,' cf. Rev. ix, 5: 'and their torment was as the torment of a scorpion, when he striketh a man' — 'cum percutit hominem' (i. e., 'percote la gente'). See also Met., XV, 371:

'Scorpius exibat, caudaque minabatur unca.'

 Ed esser mi pareva là dove foro

7. The 'steps' with which night ascends are the hours between sunset and midnight. Nearly three hours have passed since nightfall.

9. The third step 'was bending its wings downward': the third hour had nearly finished its flight. Such incongruous mixed metaphors are not uncommon in Dante.

10. The 'stuff of Adam' is the body.

15. An allusion to the familiar and tragic story of Philomela and Progne, told by Ovid in Met., VI, 423-674. According to the version followed by Dante, it was the outraged princess, Philomela, who was turned into a swallow: cf. XVII, 19-21.

18. Cf. Conv., II, ix, 101-8; also Cicero, De Senectute, XXII, 81 ('Atqui dormientium animi maxime declarant divinitatem suam.') Dreams that occurred shortly before dawn were thought to be prophetic: cf. Inf. XXVI, 7.

 E sì l' incendio imaginato cosse
 Che convenne che il sonno si rompesse.

 Gli occhi svegliati rivolgendo in giro, 35

 Mi fuggì il sonno, e diventai ismorto,

 E il viso m' era alla marina torto. 45

27. 'He disdains to carry off on high in his feet' (pedibus . . . uncis: Æn., V, 255): cf. Ruggerone di Palermo, Ben mi degio alegrare (E. Monaci, Crestomazia, 77, No. 37), 16-19: —

'E fa come lo nibio ciertamente,

34. To prevent her son Achilles from going to the Trojan war, Thetis took him in his sleep from his teacher, the centaur Chiron (Inf. XII, 71), to the court of the peaceful Lycomedes on the island of Scyros. When Achilles awoke, he did not know where he was. See Statius, Achilleid. I, 104-250.

39. Ulysses and Diomed discovered Achilles disguised in women's garments and took him away.

44. It is the morning of Easter Monday. The poets are still on the eastern side of the mountain.

‘Non aver tema,’ disse il mio Signore:
 ‘Fatti sicur, chè noi siamo a buon punto.
 Non stringer, ma rallarga ogni vigore!
 Tu se’ omai al Purgatorio giunto.
 Vedi là il balzo che il chiude d’ intorno; 50
 Vedi l’ entrata là ’ve par disgiunto.
 Dianzi, nell’ alba che precede al giorno,
 Quando l’ anima tua dentro dormia
 Sopra li fiori onde laggiù è adorno,
 Venne una donna, e disse: “Io son Lucìa! 55
 Lasciatemi pigliar costui che dorme,
 Sì l’ agevolerò per la sua via.”
 Sordel rimase, e l’ altre gentil forme.
 Ella ti tolse, e come il dì fu chiaro,
 Sen venne suso, ed io per le sue orme. 60
 Qui ti posò; e pria mi dimostraro
 Gli occhi suoi belli quell’ entrata aperta;
 Poi ella e il sonno ad una se n’ andaro.’
 A guisa d’ uom che in dubbio si raccerta,
 E che muta in conforto sua paura, 65
 Poi che la verità gli è discoperta,
 Mi cambia’ io; e come senza cura
 Videmi il Duca mio, su per lo balzo
 Si mosse, ed io dietro inver l’ altura.

50. There was no ascent until the sunlight appeared: cf. VII, 44.

72. Rincalzo, 'support.' Dante calls attention to the elaborate allegory he has contrived for the loftier theme that follows.

Che là dove pareami prima un rotto,
 Pur come un fesso che muro diparte, 75
 Vidi una porta, e tre gradi di sotto,
 Per gire ad essa, di color diversi,
 Ed un portier che ancor non facea motto.
 E come l' occhio più e più v' apersi,
 Vidil seder sopra il grado soprano, 80
 Tal nella faccia ch' io non lo soffersi.
 Ed una spada nuda aveva in mano,
 Che rifletteva i raggi sì ver noi
 Ch' io dirizzava spesso il viso invano.
 'Dite costinci, che volete voi?' 85
 Cominciò egli a dire: 'Ov' è la scorta?
 Guardate che il venir su non vi noi!
 'Donna del ciel, di queste cose accorta,'
 Rispose il mio Maestro a lui, 'pur dianzi
 Ne disse: "Andate là, quivi è la porta."' 90
 'Ed ella i passi vostri in bene avanzi,'
 Ricominciò il cortese portinaio:
 'Venite dunque a' nostri gradi innanzi.'
 Là 've venimmo, allo scaglion primaio,
 Bianco marmo era, sì pulito e terso 95
 Ch' io mi specchiava in esso quale io paio.
 Era il secondo, tinto più che perso,
 D' una petrina ruvida ed arsiccia,
 Crepata per lo lungo e per traverso.
 Lo terzo, che di sopra s' ammassiccia, 100
 Porfido mi pareva sì fiammeggiante

85. Cf. Inf. XII, 63.

87. Noi: present subjunctive of noiare, 'harm' (cf. Inf. XXIII, 15). — The angel sees that Virgil and Dante are not souls fit for Purgatory. Reason, without grace, is not a sufficient guide on the road of penance which Purgatory symbolizes.

97. 'Perse' is a very dark purple color: cf. Inf. V, 89.

Come sangue che fuor di vena spiccia.
 Sopra questo teneva ambo le piante
 L' Angel di Dio, sedendo in sulla soglia,
 Che mi sembrava pietra di diamante. 105
 Per li tre gradi su di buona voglia
 Mi trasse il Duca mio, dicendo: 'Chiedi
 Umilmente che il serrame scioglia.'
 Divoto mi gittai a' santi piedi;
 Misericordia chiesi che m' aprisse; 110
 Ma pria nel petto tre fiate mi diedi.
 Sette P nella fronte mi descrisse
 Col puntun della spada, e: 'Fa che lavi,
 Quando sei dentro, queste piaghe,' disse.

 D' un color fora col suo vestimento,
 E di sotto da quel trasse due chiavi.
 L' una era d' oro e l' altra era d' argento.
 Pria con la bianca e poscia con la gialla
 Fece alla porta sì ch' io fui contento. 120
 'Quandunque l' una d' este chiavi falla
 Che non si volga dritta per la toppa,'
 Diss' egli a noi, 'non s' apre questa calla.
 Più cara è l' una; ma l' altra vuol troppa
 D' arte e d' ingegno avanti che disserri, 125
 Perch' ell' è quella che il nodo disgroppa.

111. Diedi, 'smote': in remorse for sins of thought, word, and deed.

112. P stands for peccatum, 'sin': the seven letters are the emblem of the seven capital vices, of which Dante's soul is to be cleansed by penance. Cf. Rev. xiii, 16; xx, 4.

116. The gray color of the angel's garment betokens the humility of the priest, who is God's servant.

121. Quandunque, 'whenever.'

123. Calla, 'passage': cf. IV, 22.

126. Il nodo disgroppa, 'unties the knot.'

Anzi ad aprir che a tenerla serrata,
 Purchè la gente a' piedi mi s' atterri.'
 Poi pinse l' uscio alla porta sacrata, 130
 Dicendo: 'Entrate! Ma facciovì accorti
 Che di fuor torna chi 'ndietro si guata.'
 E quando fur ne' cardini distorti
 Gli spigoli di quella regge sacra,
 Che di metallo son, sonanti e forti, 135
 Non ruggiò sì, nè si mostrò sì acra
 Tarpeia, come tolto le fu il buono
 Metello, per che poi rimase macra.
 Io mi rivolsi attento al primo tuono,

132. The sinner must enter upon the course of penance with no mental reservation; if he looks back upon his former life, at the moment of leaving it, he is unworthy to proceed. Cf. Luke ix, 62: 'No man, having put his hand to the plough, and looking back, is fit for the kingdom of God.' Also Gen. xix, 17: 'Escape for thy life; look not behind thee, neither stay thou in all the plain; escape to the mountain, lest thou be consumed.' See, furthermore, Boethius, Cons., III, Met. xii (the story of Orpheus and Eurydice) near the end:

'Ne dum Tartara liquerit
 Fas sit lumina flectere.
 Vos hæc fabula respicit,
 Quicumque in superum diem
 Mentem ducere quæritis.'

This warning applies only to the entrance: once within the gate, souls are safe from temptation.

134. Spigoli, 'pivots.' — Regge, 'portal.'

136. When Cæsar entered Rome, after crossing the Rubicon, he wished to take possession of the public treasure, kept in the temple of Saturn at the foot of the Tarpeian rock. The tribune Metellus, after a futile resistance, departed, leaving the temple unprotected. Then the gates were opened and the rock resounded (Lucan, Phars., III, 153-5):

'Protinus abducto patuerunt templa Metello.
 Tunc rupes Tarpeia sonat, magnoque reclusas
 Testatur stridore fores.'

The gate of Purgatory roars because, owing to the perversity of man, it is so seldom opened: cf. X, 2.

138. After the spoliation of the temple the Tarpeian rock 'was left lean.' Cf. Phars., III, 167-8:

'Tristi spoliantur templa rapina,
 Pauperiorque fuit tunc primum Cæsare Roma.'

139. Tuono here, apparently, means not 'thunder' but 'tone,' and refers not to what precedes but to the following line: I seemed to hear Te Deum from within the gate, and 'turned attentive at the first note.'

E Te Deum laudamus mi pareva 140
Udir in voce mista al dolce suono.
Tale imagine appunto mi rendea
Ciò ch' io udiva qual prender si suole
Quando a cantar con organi si stea:
Che or sì or no s' intendon le parole. 145

140. This hymn of praise to God, who opens Heaven to the faithful, is appropriate to the place.

144. 'When people are singing with an organ.' — Stea = stia. — On reading these lines, one is reminded of the old and immensely heavy bronze doors in the ancient baptistery of S. Giovanni in Laterano, in Rome; when they are slowly pushed open, these doors emit a succession of loud musical notes that sound like organ peals.

CANTO X

ARGUMENT

PURGATORY proper consists of seven flat, narrow terraces running around the mountain and separated from one another by steep cliffs. On each shelf are souls doing penance for one of the capital vices — pride, envy, anger, sloth, avarice and prodigality, gluttony, lust. These wicked dispositions are the source of all sin. Inasmuch as pride is an ingredient in every transgression (which is an assumption of superiority to law), all souls have to suffer in the first circle; in the ensuing circles they are punished according to the nature of their wrongdoing. The terraces are connected by stairways cut into the precipice. When a spirit has cleansed itself of the evil that is expiated on one shelf, it passes on upward to the next terrace that claims it — or, if it has no other stain, to the top of the mountain. At the beginning of each ascent a friendly angel is seen, who removes the last impress of the discarded vice; and a beatitude (Mat. v, 3-8) is heard, appropriate to the circle that is left below. To sustain them, the souls are furnished, on every terrace, with examples of the particular sin that belongs to that spot, and of the opposite virtue. The latter examples — the 'goad' — generally appear to Dante as he enters each circle, the former — the 'check' — as he is about to depart from it. They take different shapes on the various shelves; on the first, they present themselves to the eye as beautiful carvings on the upright wall of the mountain and on the floor. These illustrations of good and evil are drawn from both Christian and pagan lore, but the first example of each of the seven virtues is taken from the life of the Virgin.

Allegorically the torments cheerfully endured on the several terraces represent the forms of discipline to which the sinner must subject himself, under priestly direction, in order to restore his lost innocence and thus fit himself for Heaven. In the first circle, for instance, the spirits crouching under heavy burdens are the image of self-imposed humiliation, the painful subjugation of pride. Dante's journey up through Purgatory signifies the moral training by means of which, obedient to ecclesiastical authority, he removes from his soul every disposition to evil and regains the purity of heart that enables him to see God. While in the literal sense of the poem he is only an observer of the spirits and their punishments, symbolically he is himself the punished spirit; in the circles of pride, envy, anger, and lust, — if we look for the inner beneath the external meaning, — we can see the poet in the throes of penance.

Poi fummo dentro al soglio della porta
 Che il malo amor dell' anime disusa,
 Perchè fa parer dritta la via torta,
 Sonando la sentii esser richiusa.
 E s' io avessi gli occhi volti ad essa, 5
 Qual fora stata al fallo degna scusa?
 Noi salivam per una pietra fessa,
 Che si moveva d' una e d' altra parte,
 Sì come l' onda che fugge e s' appressa.
 'Qui si convien usare un poco d' arte,' 10
 Cominciò il Duca mio, 'in accostarsi
 Or quinci, or quindi, al lato che si parte.'
 E ciò fece li nostri passi scarsi
 Tanto che pria lo scemo della luna
 Rigiunse al letto suo, per ricorcarsi, 15
 Che noi fossimo fuor di quella cruna.
 Ma quando fummo liberi ed aperti
 Su dove il monte indietro si rauna,
 Io stancato, ed ambedue incerti

2. Love, wrongly directed, so perverts human souls that few of them attain Purgatory: the gate falls into disuse.

5. Cf. IX, 131-2.

8. The narrow crack by which the poets ascend runs zigzag up through the cliff.

12. Si parte, 'recedes.' The climbers have to cling now to one side, now to the other, according to the changing direction of the crack.

14. 'Lo scemo della luna': the waning moon, which, of course, sets later than the full moon; it is several hours after sunrise.

16. Cruna, 'needle's eye,' i. e., the narrow passage: cf. Mat. xix, 24.

18. Si rauna, 'gathers itself': withdraws, leaving a flat terrace.

Di nostra via, ristemmo su in un piano 20

 E quanto l' occhio mio potea trar d' ale, 25
 Or dal sinistro ed or dal destro fianco,
 Questa cornice mi pareva cotale.

32. The Greek sculptor, Polyclethus, was known by name to Medieval writers.

33. Avrebbe scorno, 'would have been put to shame.'

34. 'The angel' is Gabriel. The first example of humility represents the Virgin at the Annunciation. Cf. Luke i, 26 ff.

52. Imposta, 'designed': cf. Inf. XVII, 18.

53. Femmi = mi feci.

56. The second example of humility pictures King David dancing 'with all his might' before the ark of the covenant, as it is drawn into the city on a 'new cart': 2 Samuel vi, 12-6.

57. We have here a brief, parenthetical reference to an incident not represented in the carving — the story of Uzzah, which makes us chary of assuming offices not entrusted to us. Uzzah, one of the drivers of the cart, seeing the ark shaken and fearing it would fall, 'put forth his hand . . . and took hold of it'; whereupon 'God smote him' for his presumption, and 'there he died': 2 Samuel vi, 3-7.

59. The 'seven choirs' appear in the Vulgate, but not in the English Bible: 2 Samuel vi, 12.

61. Fummo = fumo.

63. Fensi = si fecero.

65. Alzato: 'and David was cirded with a linen ephod' (2 Samuel vi, 11). When he returned home, his wife, Michal, Saul's daughter, reproached him for

66. David replied to Michal: 'I will yet be more vile than thus, and will be base in mine own sight: and of the maidservants which thou hast spoken of, of them shall I be had in honour' (2 Samuel vi, 22).

67. Vista, 'view-point,' 'outlook.' 'Michal Saul's daughter looked through a window, and saw king David leaping and dancing before the Lord; and she despised him in her heart': 2 Samuel vi, 16.

68. Ammirava, 'looked on.'

74. The third example of humility is furnished by Trajan, the 'Roman prince' who acknowledged the justice of the poor widow's claim. For the origin of this story, which had wide currency in the Middle Ages, see G. Paris, La légende de Trajan, in the Bibliothèque de l'Ecole des hautes études, 1878; A. Graf, Roma nella memoria e nelle immaginazioni del medio evo, 1889, II, 1; Giorn. dant., XIV, 199.

75. According to a legend universally believed in Dante's time, St. Gregory was so moved by the thought of Trajan's justice that he interceded with God for him; whereupon Trajan's soul was allowed to return from Limbus to earth and inhabit its body long enough to embrace Christianity, thus winning salvation: cf. Par. XX, 43-8, 106-17. This was the 'great victory.'

78. Atteggiata, 'in guise.'

 Guistizia vuole, e pietà mi ritiene.'
 Colui che mai non vide cosa nova
 Produisse esto visibile parlare, 95
 Novello a noi, perchè qui non si trova.
 Mentr' io mi diletta di guardare
 Le immagini di tante umilitadi,
 E, per lo fabbro loro, a veder care,
 'Ecco di qua, ma fanno i passi radi,' 100
 Mormorava il Poeta, 'molte genti.
 Questi ne invieranno agli alti gradi.'
 Gli occhi miei, ch' a mirar eran intenti
 Per veder novitadi, onde son vaghi,
 Volgendosi ver lui non furon lenti. 105
 Non vo' però, Lettor, che tu ti smaghi
 Di buon proponimento, per udire
 Come Dio vuol che il debito si paghi.
 Non attender la forma del martire:
 Pensa la succession; pensa che, a peggio, 110

88. Chi fia dov' io, 'he who shall be in my place.'

89, 90. 'What shall another's well-doing avail thee?'

94. Colui: God.

106. Ti smaghi, 'be distraught': cf. XXVII, 104. Dante fears that the horror of the penance may divert the reader from his 'good resolution' to make amends.

109. Non attender, 'heed not.' Cf. Romans viii, 18.

110. Succession, 'consequence.'

Oltre la gran sentenza non può ire.
 Io cominciai: 'Maestro, quel ch' io veggio
 Mover a noi non mi sembran persone,
 E non so che, sì nel veder vaneggio.'
 Ed egli a me: 'La grave condizione 115
 Di lor tormento a terra li rannicchia
 Sì che i miei occhi pria n' ebber tenzone.
 Ma guarda fiso là, e disviticchia
 Col viso quel che vien sotto a quei sassi.
 Già scorger puoi come ciascun si picchia.' 120
 O superbi Cristian miseri lassi,
 Che, della vista della mente infermi,
 Fidanza avete ne' ritrosi passi,
 Non v' accorgete voi che noi siam vermi
 Nati a formar l' angelica farfalla, 125
 Che vola alla giustizia senza schermi?
 Di che l' animo vostro in alto galla,
 Poi siete quasi entomata in difetto,
 Sì come vermo, in cui formazion falla?
 Come per sostentar solaio o tetto, 130
 Per mensola talvolta una figura

111. In any case the suffering will stop at the day of judgment.

112. Veggio = vedo.

117. Tenzone, 'controversy.'

118. Disviticchia, 'unscrew.'

124. Cf. Job xxv, 6: 'man, that is a worm.'

125. Cf. Mat. xxii, 30: 'For in the resurrection they . . . are as the angels of God in heaven.'

127. Di che, 'wherefore.' — Galla, 'soars.'

128. Entomata in difetto, 'defective insects.' The Greek word is ἐντομον, pl. ἐντομα. Dante probably found entoma in his Latin version of Aristotle, and, taking it for a singular, formed a plural on the model of poema, poemata, and other words.

129. Falla, 'is lacking.' Albertus Magnus speaks of the incompleteness of caterpillars and such creatures: De Animalibus, XVII, Tract. ii, Cap. 1, beginning.

130. Solaio, 'ceiling.'

131. Mensola, 'corbel,' 'bracket.'

Si vede giunger le ginocchia al petto, —
La qual fa del non ver vera rancura
Nascere a chi la vede, — così fatti
Vid' io color, quando posi ben cura. 135
Ver è che più e meno eran contratti,
Secondo ch' avean più e meno addosso.
E qual più pazienza avea negli atti,
Piangendo pareva dicer: 'Più non posso.'

133. The 'unreal' suffering of the cariatid arouses a 'real pang' of pity in the beholder.

138, 139. Even the most patient among them seemed to be at the limit of his endurance.

CANTO XI

ARGUMENT

AMONG the victims of pride are representatives of three types — the arrogance of noble birth, the vanity of artistic excellence, and the haughtiness of power. Humbert, son of William, of the ancient and mighty Ghibelline family of the Aldobrandeschi, was count of Santafore in the Maremma (cf. VI, 111). Like his father he was hostile to Siena, and in 1250 he was killed by Siennese troops at his stronghold of Campagnatico, in the valley of the Ombrone, after a fierce and bloody fight. Oderisi of Gubbio, in the Duchy of Urbino, was a famous illuminator of manuscripts in the second half of the 13th century. He spent some years in Bologna and Rome, and died, it would seem, in the latter city in 1209. Provenzano Salvani, a sagacious and valiant Ghibelline chief, was all-powerful in Siena at the time of her defeat of Florence at Montaperti in 1260. Nine years later, at the battle of Colle di Valdelsa, Florence was victorious, and Provenzano, the leader of the Siennese army, was defeated and beheaded. It is related of him that, when at the height of his power, to save the life of a friend held for ransom by Charles of Anjou, he meekly begged of the passers-by until he had collected the 10,000 florins required. The practice of soliciting alms to pay fines was common enough in the Middle Ages, but usually the mendicants went from house to house; Provenzano, — who might have procured the money by force, and who, moreover, was acting in behalf of another, — took his stand in the Campo, or great public square, of Siena, where he was exposed to the sight of all. This act of generous humility, according to Oderisi, so atoned for his many acts of presumption that, although he postponed repentance until the end, he was admitted to Purgatory immediately after his death.

‘O Padre nostro, che nei cieli stai,
Non circoscritto, ma per più amore

1. The canto opens (ll. 1-24) with an expanded paraphrase of the Lord's prayer (Mat. vi, 9-13), recited by the spirits of the first circle. Such paraphrases were not uncommon in the Middle Ages.

2. God dwells in Heaven, not because he is ‘circumscribed,’ restricted to one place, but because he is fondest of his ‘first works’ — the angels and the heavens.

Che ai primi effetti di lassù tu hai,
 Laudato sia il tuo nome e il tuo valore
 Da ogni creatura, com' è degno 5
 Di render grazie al tuo dolce vapore.
 Vegna ver noi la pace del tuo regno,
 Chè noi ad essa non potem da noi,
 S' ella non vien, con tutto nostro ingegno.
 Come del suo voler gli angeli tuoi 10
 Fan sacrificio a te, cantando Osanna,
 Così facciano gli uomini de' suoi.
 Dà oggi a noi la cotidiana manna,
 Senza la qual per questo aspro deserto
 A retro va chi più di gir s' affanna. 15
 E come noi lo mal che avem sofferto
 Perdoniamo a ciascuno, e tu perdona
 Benigno, e non guardar lo nostro merto.
 Nostra virtù, che di leggier s' adona,
 Non spermentar con l' antico avversaro, 20
 Ma libera da lui, che sì la sprona.
 Quest' ultima preghiera, Signor caro,
 Già non si fa per noi, chè non bisogna,
 Ma per color che dietro a noi restaro.
 Così a sè e noi buona ramogna 25

5. È degno, 'it is meet.'

6. Vapore, 'emanation': the goodness that flows from God.

8. Potem = possiamo: see Inf. IV, 42. Cf. Avem in l. 16.

10. Suo, 'their.'

11. 'Hosanna': Mat. xxi, 9, 15. Cf. V. N., Canzone II, 188.

13. The 'daily manna' (Exod. xvi, 14, 31) is spiritual food. The souls in Purgatory, toiling to reach Paradise, are like the Israelites in the desert on their way to the Promised Land.

17. E, 'so': cf. Inf. XIX, 3.

19. S'adona, 'is subdued': cf. Inf. VI, 34. The figure is that of a rider (the devil) taming a horse (our virtue).

23. Once inside the gate, souls are free from temptation.

25. Ramogna, according to several of the early commentators, signifies 'journey'; the meaning of the word is not otherwise known.

Quell' ombre orando, andavan sotto il pondo, —
 Simile a quel che talvolta si sogna, —
 Disparmente angosciate, tutte a tondo,
 E lasse, su per la prima cornice,
 Purgando le caligini del mondo. 30
 Se di là sempre ben per noi si dice,
 Di qua che dire e far per lor si puote
 Da quei ch' hanno al voler buona radice?
 Ben si dee loro aitar lavar le note
 Che portar quinci, sì che mondi e lievi 35
 Possano uscire alle stellate rote.
 'Deh! se giustizia e pietà vi disgrevi
 Tosto, sì che possiate mover l' ala
 Che secondo il disio vostro vi levi,
 Mostrate da qual mano in ver la scala 40
 Si va più corto; e se c' è più d' un varco,
 Quel ne insegnate che men erto cala.
 Chè questi che vien meco, per l' incarco
 Della carne d' Adamo, ond' ei si veste,
 Al montar su, contra sua voglia, è parco.' 45
 Le lor parole, che rendero a queste
 Che dette avea colui cu' io seguiva,
 Non fur da cui venisser manifeste;
 Ma fu detto: 'A man destra per la riva
 Con noi venite, e troverete il passo 50
 Possibile a salir persona viva.

27. The incubus, or nightmare.

28. Disparmente, 'unequally' tormented under the weight: some had heavier weights than others. — A tondo, 'round and round.'

32, 33. What can be done for them here on earth by those whose will is rooted in the divine will?

36. Cf. VIII, 18.

37. Se: cf. Inf. X, 82; Purg. II, 16. — Vi disgrevi, 'unburden you.'

48. It was not clear from whom the words came, because the faces were all hidden.

E s' io non fossi impedito dal sasso
 Che la cervice mia superba doma,
 Onde portar convienmi il viso basso,
 Cotesti che ancor vive, e non si noma, 55
 Guardere' io, per veder s' io 'l conosco,
 E per farlo pietoso a questa soma.
 Io fui Latino, e nato d' un gran Tosco:
 Guglielmo Aldobrandesco fu mio padre —
 Non so se il nome suo giammai fu vosco. 60
 L' antico sangue e l' opere leggiadre
 De' miei maggior mi fer sì arrogante
 Che, non pensando alla comune madre,
 Ogni uomo ebbi in dispetto tanto avante
 Ch' io ne mori', — come i Sanesi sanno, 65
 E sallo in Campagnatico ogni fante.
 Io sono Omberto; e non pure a me danno
 Superbia fa, chè tutti i miei consorti
 Ha ella tratti seco nel malanno.
 E qui convien ch' io questo peso porti 70
 Per lei, tanto che a Dio si satisfaccia,
 Poi ch' io nol fei tra' vivi, qui tra' morti.'
 Ascoltando, chinai in giù la faccia;
 Ed un di lor (non questi che parlava)
 Si torse sotto il peso che lo impaccia; 75
 E videmi e conobbemi e chiamava,

60. Vosco = con voi. — The speaker has already learned modesty.

63. The 'common mother' is the earth: cf. Ecclus. xl, 1.

64. Tanto avante, 'to such an extent.'

66. Sallo = lo sa. Cf. Bull., XVII, 127.

68. Superbia is the subject of fa. — Consorti, 'relatives.'

71. Lei: superbia.

72. Feci = feci.

73. This humble attitude (cf. l. 78), which is natural enough in the literal sense, seems to indicate allegorically Dante's participation in the penance. See XIII, 136-8.

75. For this use of the present for the imperfect, in the rhyme, cf. XVII, 51.

Tenendo gli occhi con fatica fisi
 A me, che tutto chin con loro andava.
 'O,' dissi lui, 'non sei tu Oderisi,
 L' onor d' Agobbio, e l' onor di quell' arte 80
 Che alluminare chiamata è in Parisi?'
 'Frate,' diss' egli, 'più ridon le carte
 Che pennelleggia Franco Bolognese;
 L' onore è tutto or suo, e mio in parte.
 Ben non sare' io stato sì cortese 85
 Mentre ch' io vissi, per lo gran disio
 Dell' eccellenza, ove mio core intese.
 Di tal superbia qui si paga il fio.
 Ed ancor non sarei qui, se non fosse
 Che, possendo peccar, mi volsi a Dio. 90
 O vanagloria dell' umane posse!
 Com' poco verde in sulla cima dura,
 Se non è giunta dall' etati grosse!
 Credette Cimabue nella pittura
 Tener lo campo, ed ora ha Giotto il grido, 95
 Sì che la fama di colui è oscura.
 Così ha tolto l' uno all' altro Guido

81. The art of 'illuminating' (French enluminer, Ital. miniare), or illustrating and decorating manuscripts, was held in great esteem before the invention of printing. — Parisi = Parigi, 'Paris.'

83. Franco of Bologna was known to Vasari, who possessed some of his drawings. We have no other information about him.

90. Possendo (= potendo) peccar: while still alive.

92. Com' poco, 'how short a time': how quickly fame withers!

93. 'If it is not followed by barbarous times,' in which no successor comes to obscure the fame of the departed.

94. The Florentine, Giovanni Cimabue, who lived in the second half of the 13th century, put new life into the Byzantine style and was regarded as the restorer of painting in Florence.

95. Giotto, Cimabue's pupil, was the greatest painter of Dante's time, and also a famous architect and sculptor. Dante probably knew him.

97. Guido Cavalcanti, Dante's 'first friend,' still alive in April, 1300, surpassed Guido Guinizelli of Bologna (XXVI, 92), the father of the 'sweet new style.'

La gloria della lingua, e forse è nato
 Chi l' uno e l' altro caccerà di nido.
 Non è il mondan romore altro che un fiato 100
 Di vento, che or vien quinci ed or vien quindi,
 E muta nome, perchè muta lato.
 Che voce avrai tu più, se vecchia scindi
 Da te la carne, che se fossi morto
 Innanzi che lasciassi il pappo e il dindi, 105
 Pria che passin mill' anni? Ch' è più corto
 Spazio, all' eterno, che un mover di ciglia
 Al cerchio che più tardi in cielo è torto.
 Colui che del cammin sì poco piglia,
 Dinanzi a me, Toscana sonò tutta, 110
 Ed ora a pena in Siena sen pispiglia,
 Ond' era sire, quando fu distrutta
 La rabbia fiorentina, che superba
 Fu a quel tempo, sì com' ora è putta.
 La vostra nominanza è color d' erba, 115
 Che viene e va, e quei la discolora
 Per cui ell' esce della terra acerba.'
 Ed io a lui: 'Lo tuo ver dir m' incora

99. This conjecture of Oderisi is simply a general deduction from antecedent probability. Dante, however, in writing it, must have known that the reader would immediately apply it to him. Whatever pride is betrayed by the remark belongs to Dante the author, not to Dante the protagonist of the poem.

100. Cf. Boethius, Cons., II, Pr. vii: 'populares auras inanesque rumores.'

103. 'What more repute shalt thou have,' a thousand years hence (l. 106), if thou strippest off thy flesh when it is old' than if thou hadst died young?

105. Il pappo e il dindi: baby talk, childish prattle. Pappo and dindi are childish pronunciations of pane and denaro.

106. Che, 'which,' i. e., a thousand years.

108. 'The circle which is slowest turned,' — the eighth or starry sphere, — moves only one degree in a hundred years: Conv., II, xv, 102-4 113-8. Cf. Cons., II, Pr. vii.

109. Colui is the object of sonò in l. 110, Toscana the subject.

115. Cf. Isaiah xl, 7: 'The grass withereth, the flower fadeth: because the spirit of the Lord bloweth upon it: surely the people is grass.'

117. Acerba, 'unripe,' green, fresh: it goes with ella, i. e., erba.

118. M' incora, 'puts into my heart.'

Buona umiltà, e gran tumor m' appiani.
 Ma chi è quei di cui tu parlavi ora?' 120
 'Quegli è,' rispose, 'Provenzan Salvani;
 Ed è qui, perchè fu presuntüoso
 A recar Siena tutta alle sue mani.
 Ito è così, e va senza riposo,
 Poi che morì: cotal moneta rende 125
 A satisfacer chi è di là tropp' oso.'
 Ed io: 'Se quello spirito che attende,
 Pria che si penta, l' orlo della vita,
 Laggiù dimora, e quassù non ascende, —
 Se buona orazion lui non aïta, — 130
 Prima che passi tempo quanto visse,
 Come fu la venuta a lui largita?'
 'Quando vivea più glorïoso,' disse,
 'Liberamente nel Campo di Siena,
 Ogni vergogna deposta, s' affisse; 135
 E lì, per trar l' amico suo di pena
 Che sostenea nella prigion di Carlo,
 Si condusse a tremar per ogni vena.
 Più non dirò, e scuro so che parlo;
 Ma poco tempo andrà che i tuoi vicini 140
 Faranno sì che tu potrai chiosarlo.
 Quest' opera gli tolse quei confini.'

126. Oso, 'bold.' È oso = ausus est.

138. 'He brought himself to quiver in every vein': a forceful picture of the mortification of a haughty spirit. Dante, in the time of his exile, knew this feeling all too well.

142. 'This deed relieved him of those restrictions,' enabled him to enter Purgatory without waiting outside among the 'negligent.'

CANTO XII

ARGUMENT

THE conception of the lifelike carvings on the floor, which, in this canto, furnish the warning illustrations of pride, was manifestly a delight to the artistic soul of the poet. In the very phrasing of his descriptions Dante affects a kind of architectural symmetry: first we have four tercets beginning each with *Vede*a (ll. 25, 28, 31, 34), then four with O (ll. 37, 40, 43, 46), next four with Mostrava (ll. 49, 52, 55, 58), and finally one tercet (ll. 61-3), in which the three lines begin with these same three words. The list of examples presents an alternation of biblical and mythological instances.

Di pari, come buoi che vanno a giogo,
M' andava io con quella anima carica,
Fin che il sofferse il dolce pedagogo.
Ma quando disse: 'Lascia lui, 'e varca,
Chè qui è buon con la vela e coi remi,
Quantunque può ciascun, pinger sua barca,'
Dritto, sì come andar vuolsi, rife' mi
Con la persona, avvegna che i pensieri
Mi rimanessero e chinati e scemi.
Io m' era mosso, e seguia volentieri
Del mio Maestro i passi, ed ambedue
Già mostravam come eravam leggieri,
Quando mi disse: 'Volgi gli occhi in giù!
Buon ti sarà, per tranquillar la via,

1. Once more we have an indication that Dante, allegorically, shares in the penance. — Note the regular, plodding movement of this verse.

7. Sì come andar vuolsi (= sì vuole), 'as man should walk.' Dante's penance is ended. — Rife' mi = mi rifeci.

8. Avvegna che, 'although.'—An abiding meekness has resulted from the penance.

Veder lo letto delle piante tue.' 15
 Come, perchè di lor memoria sia,
 Sopra i sepolti le tombe terragne
 Portan segnato quel ch' elli eran pria
 (Onde lì molte volte se ne piagne
 Per la puntura della rimembranza, 20
 Che solo ai pïi dà delle calcagne),
 Sì vid' io lì, ma di miglior sembianza
 Secondo l' artificio, figurato
 Quanto per via difuor dal monte avanza.
 Vedeà colui che fu nobil creato 25
 Più ch' altra creatura, giù dal cielo
 Folgoreggiando scender da un lato.
 Vedeà Briarëo, fitto dal telo
 Celestial, giacer dall' altra parte,
 Grave alla terra per lo mortal gelo. 30
 Vedeà Timbreo, vedeà Pallade e Marte,
 Armati ancora, intorno al padre loro,
 Mirar le membra de' Giganti sparte.
 Vedeà Nembroç a piè del gran lavoro,

16. Perchè di lor memoria sia, 'to preserve their memory.'

17. Tombe terragne, 'underground graves,' covered with flat stones which form a floor.

19. Se ne piagne, 'people weep for them.'

21. 'Which spurs only the faithful.'

23. Secondo l' artificio, 'in respect to workmanship.'

24. 'All that juts out of the mountain to form a road,' i. e., the whole floor of the terrace.

27. Luke x, 18: 'I beheld Satan as lightning fall from heaven.'

28. Briareus was one of the giants who fought against the gods: cf. Inf. XXXI, 98.

30. Per lo mortal gelo, 'in the chill of death.'

31. Thymbræus is one of the appellations of Apollo, who had a temple at Thymbra in the Troad: Cf. En., III, 85. — The carving represents the bodies of the defeated giants, upon which Apollo, Pallas, Mars, and Jove are gazing. Cf. Met., X, 150-1:

Cecini plectro graviore Gigantas
 Sparsaque Phlegræis victricia fulmina campis.

34. For Nimrod, the builder of the tower of Babel in the land of Shinar, see Gen. x, 8-10, and xi, 2-9. Cf. Inf. XXXI, 77.

Quasi smarrito, e riguardar le genti 35
 Che in Sennaar con lui superbi foro.
 O Niobè, con che occhi dolenti
 Vedeva io te segnata in sulla strada
 Tra sette e sette tuoi figliuoli spenti!
 O Saül, come in sulla propria spada 40
 Quivi parevi morto in Gelboè,
 Che poi non sentì pioggia nè rugiada!
 O folle Aragne, sì vedea io te
 Già mezza aragna, trista in su gli stracci
 Dell' opera che mal per te si fe'. 45
 O Roboam, già non par che minacci
 Quivi il tuo segno; ma pien di spavento
 Nel porta un carro prima che altri il cacci.
 Mostrava ancor lo duro pavimento
 Come Almëon a sua madre fe' caro 50
 Parer lo sventurato adornamento.

37. Niobe, wife of King Amphion of Thebes, proud of her seven sons and seven daughters, presumptuously disparaged Latona, who had only two children, Apollo and Diana. These gods avenged their mother by shooting all of Niobe's offspring; Niobe then turned to stone. See Mct., VI, 165-312.

40. Defeated by the Philistines on Mount Gilboa, King Saul threw himself upon a sword and killed himself: 1 Samuel xxxi, 1-6.

42. In his lamentation over Saul and Jonathan, David said (2 Samuel i, 21): 'Ye mountains of Gilboa, let there be no dew, neither let there be rain, upon you.'

43. Arachne, who had challenged Pallas to a trial of skill in weaving, was turned by her into a spider: Mct., VI, 5-145.

45. Fe' = fecce. — Ll. 41, 43, 45 are versi tronchi: cf. Inf. IV, 56.

46. After having threatened to add to the burdens of the people of Israel, 'king Rehoboam sent Adoram, who was over the tribute; and all Israel stoned him with stones, that he died. Therefore king Rehoboam made speed to get him up to his chariot, to flee to Jerusalem' (1 Kings xii, 18).

48. Nel = ne lo.

49. Amphiaraus, the soothsayer (Inf. XX, 34), to avoid going to the Theban war where he knew he would be killed, hid himself, but was betrayed by his wife Eriphyle and met his death at Thebes. As Eriphyle had been bribed by an ill-fated golden necklace, Dante chooses to regard her as an example of vanity. She was killed by her son Alcmaëon in vengeance for the loss of his father: cf. Par. IV, 103-5. See Statius, Thebaid, II, 265 ff.; IV, 187 ff.

Mostrava come i figli si gittaro
 Sopra Sennacherib dentro dal tempio,
 E come, morto lui, quivi il lasciaro.
 Mostrava la ruina e il crudo scempio 55
 Che fe' Tamiri, quando disse a Ciro:
 'Sangue sitisti, ed io di sangue t' empio.'
 Mostrava come in rotta si fuggiro
 Gli Assiri, poi che fu morto Oloferne,
 Ed anche le reliquie del martiro. 60
 Vedëa Troia in cenere e in caverne.
 O Ilion, come te basso e vile
 Mostrava il segno che lì si discerne!
 Qual di pennel fu maestro o di stile
 Che ritraesse l' ombre e i tratti, ch' ivi 65
 Mirar farieno ogn' ingegno sottile?
 Morti li morti, e i vivi parean vivi.
 Non vide me' di me chi vide il vero,

52. Sennacherib, the haughty king of the Assyrians, despised the Israelites and their God. 'And it came to pass, as he was worshipping in the house of Nisroch his god, that . . . his sons smote him with the sword: and they escaped into the land of Armenia' (2 Kings xix, 37).

55. Thamÿris (or Tomyris), queen of the Scythians, to avenge the death of her son and the defeat of her army, lured Cyrus, king of Persia, and his 200,000 men into an ambush and destroyed them. She then had Cyrus's head put into a skin full of human blood, and addressed it in terms similar to those cited by Dante: Paulus Orosius, Historia adversus paganos, II, vii.

58. Judith delivered the Israelites by cutting off the head of the Assyrian king, Holofernes. When his troops heard of his death, 'fear and trembling fell upon them' and 'they fled into every way of the plain, and of the hill country' (Judith xv, 1, 2).

60. By 'the remnants of the killing' is probably meant the headless body of the king. 'Behold Holofernes lieth upon the ground without a head' (Judith xiv, 16).

61. Cf. Æn., III, 2-3:

'Ceceditque superbum
 Ilium, et omnis humo fumat Neptunia Troja.'

63. Segno, 'image.'

67. In an old Venetian version of the Voyage of St. Brendan there are carvings similarly described: F. Novati, La 'Navigatio Sancti Brendani' in antico veneziano, 1892, ch. XXXIV.

68. Me' = meglio.

Quant' io calcai fin che chinato givi.
 Or superbite, e via col viso altiero, 70
 Figliuoli d' Eva, e non chinate il volto
 Sì che veggiate il vostro mal sentiero!
 Più era già per noi del monte volto,
 E del cammin del sole assai più speso,
 Che non stimava l' animo non sciolto, 75
 Quando colui, che sempre innanzi atteso
 Andava, incominciò: 'Drizza la testa!
 Non è più tempo da gir sì sospeso.
 Vedi colà un Angel che s' appresta
 Per venir verso noi; vedi che torna 80
 Dal servizio del dì l' ancella sesta.
 Di riverenza gli atti e il viso adorna,
 Sì che i diletti lo inviàrci in suso!
 Pensa che questo dì mai non raggiorna!'
 Io era ben del suo ammonir uso, 85
 Pur di non perder tempo, sì che in quella
 Materia non potea parlar mi chiuso.
 A noi venia la crëatura bella
 Bianco vestita, e nella faccia quale
 Par tremolando mattutina stella. 90
 Le braccia aperse, ed indi aperse l' ale;
 Disse: 'Venite! Qui son presso i gradi,
 Ed agevolmente omai si sale.
 A questo annunzio vengon molto radi.'

77. Cf. Luke xxi, 28: 'look up, and lift up your heads, for your redemption draweth nigh.'

81. The sixth hour of daylight is drawing to a close; it is nearly noon.

82. Adorna is imperative.

83. I = gli, dependent on the verb diletta, of which lo inviàrci is subject.

94. Cf. Mat. vii, 14: 'Because strait is the gate, and narrow is the way, which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it.' We cannot be perfectly sure whether ll. 94, 95, 96 are a part of the angel's speech or a reflection of the poet.

- O gente umana, per volar su nata, 95
 Perchè a poco vento così cadì?’
 Menocci ove la roccia era tagliata.
 Quivi mi battèo l’ ali per la fronte;
 Poi mi promise sicura l’ andata.
 Come a man destra, per salire al monte 100
 Dove siede la Chiesa che soggioga
 La ben guidata sopra Rubaconte,
 Si rompe del montar l’ ardita foga
 Per le scalee (che si fero ad etade
 Ch’ era sicuro il quaderno e la dogà), 105
 Così s’ allenta la ripa che cade
 Quivi ben ratta dall’ altro girone;
 Ma quinci e quindi l’ alta pietra rade.
 Noi volgendo ivi le nostre persone,
 ‘Beati pauperes spiritu,’ voci 110
 Cantaron sì che nol diria sermone.
 Ahi, quanto son diverse quelle foci
 Dalle infernali! Chè quivi per canti
 S’ entra, e laggiù per lamenti feroci.
 Già montavam su per li scaglion santi, 115

97. Menocci = ci menò.

98. Battèo = battè.

101. ‘The church that dominates the well-governed city across the Rubaconte bridge’ is San Miniato. Ben guidata is of course ironical. The bridge, now called Ponte alle Grazie, was first named after honest Messer Rubaconte da Mandello, who was mayor when it was begun in 1237.

103. L’ardita foga, ‘the bold sweep.’

105. By way of contrasting the ‘age’ of Rubaconte with later, degenerate times, Dante here refers to two notorious local scandals of his own day. In 1209 a certain Niccolò Acciaiuoli, to conceal a false entry made in his favor with the connivance of the mayor, tore a leaf out of the municipal record (quaderno). A salt commissioner, Durante de’ Chiamontesi, enriched himself by receiving the salt from the commune with an honest measure, and dealing it out with a measure diminished by one stave (doga): cf. Par. XVI, 105.

108. The flight of steps is so narrow that the wall ‘grazes’ on either side.

110. Mat. v, 3: ‘Blessed are the poor in spirit.’ This beatitude suits those who are leaving pride behind.

112. Foci, ‘passes.’

Ed esser mi pareo troppo più lieve
 Che per lo pian non mi pareo davanti.
 Ond' io: 'Maestro, di', qual cosa greve
 Levata s' è da me, che nulla quasi
 Per me fatica andando si riceve?' 120
 Rispose: 'Quando i P che son rimasi
 Ancor nel volto tuo, presso ch' estinti,
 Saranno, come l' un, del tutto rasi,
 Fien li tuoi piè dal buon voler sì vinti
 Che non pur non fatica sentiranno, 125
 Ma fia diletto loro esser su pinti.'
 Allor fec' io come color che vanno
 Con cosa in capo non da lor saputa,
 Se non che i cenni altrui sospicar fanno;
 Per che la mano ad accertar s' aiuta, 130
 E cerca e trova, e quell' officio adempie
 Che non si può fornir per la veduta:
 E, con le dita della destra scempie,
 Trovai pur sei le lettere che incise
 Quel dalle chiavi a me sopra le tempie. 135
 A che guardando il mio Duca sorrise.

116. Troppo, 'far.' — It is now easier for Dante to climb than it has been for him to walk on 'the level terrace. By the removal of pride, the foundation of all evil, Dante is relieved of the greater part of his other sins. The angel has obliterated the P of pride, and the other six letters have thereby become dim (l. 122). See Eccus. x, 15: 'the beginning of all sin is pride.' Cf. St. Thomas, Summa Theologiae, Prima Secundae, Qu. lxxxiv, Art. 2.

122. Presso ch' estinti, 'almost extinct.'

124. Fien = saranno.

126. Pinti = spinti, 'urged.'

129. Sospicar, 'suspect': cf. Inf. X, 57.

133. Scempie, 'spread.' — Cf. the surprise of Cipus when he saw in a spring the reflection of horns on his head (Mct., XV, 566-8):

'Vidit enim, falsamque in imagine credens
 Esse fidem, digitis ad frontem sæpe relatis
 Quæ vidit, tetigit.'

CANTO XIII

ARGUMENT

To purge ourselves of envy, we must cultivate a spirit of humility and resolutely shut our eyes — agonizing as the effort may be — to all that has beguiled them. The spirits in the second circle, then, sit in a row, meanly clad, like beggars, their eyes sewed up with an iron wire. Falcons that were tamed full-grown used to have their eyes closed in this cruel way. In the Magnæ Derivationes of Uguccone da Pisa the poet had read: 'Invideo tibi, idest non video tibi, idest non fero videre te bene agentem'; and this definition of envy may have suggested to him the particular form of punishment. Line 57 is probably intended to indicate that, in the mystic (but not the literal) sense, Dante himself is subjected to this discipline; but we learn from lines 133-5 that he merits but a slight penance here, having sinned far less from envy than from pride.

Turning to the right, — as they do on every terrace of Purgatory, — the travellers proceed toward the north, facing the noon-day sun, the symbol of enlightenment. Here they find no carvings on wall or pavement: such lessons would have been wasted on the sightless penitents. Instead, the examples of love — the opposite of envy — are called aloud by mysterious voices. The first illustration is drawn, as in the other circles, from the life of the Virgin.

Among the willing sufferers is a certain woman of Siena, who (as she declares), in spite of her name, Sapia, was not wise. In 1269, having passed the age of thirty-five, she was still so full of envy of her fellow-townsmen that when, under the leadership of Provenzano Salvani (XI, 121), they met the Florentines in battle at Colle di Valdelsa, she prayed God that they might be worsted. This, as it proved, was what the Lord had already decreed, for the Sienese were overwhelmingly defeated by a smaller force of Florentines. Thereupon Sapia's exultation was so mad that she did not care what fate God might send her. Only the intercession of one of her countrymen, Pier Pettinagno, — a poor comb-dealer, so honest, pious, and kindly that he was regarded as a saint, — secured for her prompt admission to Purgatory.

Siena and Florence, like other rival cities, had many standing jokes at each other's expense. Dante puts into the mouth of Sapia, who in life had hated her own people, two of Florence's stock gibes at Siena. This ambitious town aspired to become a maritime power, like Venice and Genoa; in 1303 she succeeded in acquiring a little seaport on the shore of the Tuscan Maremma, called Talamone, and in improving it she spent large sums of money. At one time the Florentines asked for a concession there. Furthermore, Siena, perched on the top of a hill, had difficulty in getting water; it was said that her inhabitants were continually digging to find an underground river, the Diana, which was supposed to flow under the city.

For Sapia, see Bull., VIII, 131.

Noi eravamo al sommo della scala,
 Ove secondamente si risega
 Lo monte che salendo altrui dismala.
 Ivi così una cornice lega
 Dintorno il poggio, come la primaia, 5
 Se non che l' arco suo più tosto piega.
 Ombra non gli è, nè segno che si paia;
 Par sì la ripa, e par sì la via schietta
 Col livido color della petraia.
 'Se qui per domandar gente s' aspetta,' 10
 Ragionava il Poeta, 'io temo forse
 Che troppo avrà d' indugio nostra eletta.'
 Poi fisamente al sole gli occhi porse;
 Fece del destro lato al mover centro,
 E la sinistra parte di sè torse. 15

2. Si risega, 'is cut in again,' by the second shelf, which, of course, has a smaller circumference than the first (l. 6).

3. 'The mountain which cures by climbing.'

7. Cf. XII, 65.

9. A 'livid color' is the proper hue of envy: cf. XIV, 84.

12. Eletta, 'choice': whether to turn to the right or to the left, as they face the cliff.

13. Cf. l. 107.

15. He turns to the right, wheeling on his right foot. The stronger part of his nature directs the weaker.

'O dolce lume, a cui fidanza i' entro
 Per lo nuovo cammin, tu ne conduci,'
 Dicea, 'come condur si vuol quinc' entro.
 Tu scaldi il mondo, tu sopr' esso luci;
 S' altra ragione in contrario non pronta, 20
 Esser den sempre li tuoi raggi duci.'
 Quanto di qua per un migliaio si conta,
 Tanto di là eravam noi già iti,
 Con poco tempo, per la voglia pronta.
 E verso noi volar furon sentiti, 25
 Non però visti, spiriti, parlando
 Alla mensa d' amor cortesi inviti.
 La prima voce che passò volando
 ' Vinum non habent! ' altamente disse,
 E retro a noi l' andò reïterando. 30
 E prima che del tutto non s' udisse
 Per allungarsi, un' altra 'Io sono Oreste!'
 Passò gridando, ed anco non s' affisse.
 'O,' diss' io, 'Padre, che voci son queste?'
 E com' io domandava, ecco la terza 35
 Dicendo: 'Amate da cui male aveste!'

20. Pronta, 'disposes.' — Unless a higher power ordain otherwise, our own enlightened election should guide us. — Some texts have cagione for ragione.

21. Den = devono.

22. Migliaio (= miglio, 'mile') counts as two syllables: cf. XIV, 66.

29. At the marriage feast in Cana, 'when they wanted wine, the mother of Jesus saith unto him, They have no wine' (John ii, 3); and Jesus turned the water into wine. This speech is cited here as an example of loving solicitude; in XXII, 142-4, it appears again as an example of temperance.

32. When the tyrant Ægisthus had condemned Orestes, whom he did not know by sight, Orestes and his friend Pylades both claimed that name, each wishing to save the other. Cf. Cicero, De Amicitia, VII, xxiv. In De Finibus Bonorum et Malorum (a work which Dante repeatedly cites) V, xxii, Cicero tells how excited the audience at the theatre becomes on hearing the words 'I am Orestes' in Pacuvius's tragedy.

36. A condensation of Mat. v, 44: 'Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you and persecute you.'

E 'l buon Maestro: 'Questo cinghio sferza
 La colpa della invidia, e però sono
 Tratte d' amor le corde della ferza.
 Lo fren vuol esser del contrario suono; 40
 Credo che l' udirai, per mio avviso,
 Prima che giunghi al passo del perdono.
 Ma ficca gli occhi per l' aere ben fiso,
 E vedrai gente innanzi a noi sedersi,
 E ciascun è lungo la grotta assiso.' 45
 Allora più che prima gli occhi apersi;
 Guarda'mi innanzi, e vidi ombre con manti
 Al color della pietra non diversi.
 E poi che fummo un poco più avanti,
 Udi' gridar: 'Maria, ora per noi!' 50
 Gridar Michele, e Pietro, e tutti i Santi.
 Non credo che per terra vada ancoi
 Uomo sì duro che non fosse punto
 Per compassion di quel ch' io vidi poi:
 Chè quand' io fui sì presso di lor giunto 55
 Che gli atti loro a me venivan certi,
 Per gli occhi fui di grave dolor munto.
 Di vil cilicio mi parean coperti,
 E l' un sofferia l' altro con la spalla,
 E tutti dalla ripa eran sofferti. 60
 Così li ciechi, a cui la roba falla,

40. By 'the check' is meant the examples of the sin of 'this belt' — envy.

42. Giunghi = giunga. — 'The pass of forgiveness' is the beginning of the ascent to the next circle.

48. Cf. l. 9.

51. 'I heard Michael, etc., called upon, invoked.' The souls seem to be repeating the second half of the Confiteor: cf. Romanic Review, I, 208.

52. Ancoi, 'to this day.'

57. 'I was milked off hard pain through my eyes,' i. e., painful tears of sympathy were drawn from my eyes. For the curious figure, cf. Inf. XII, 135-6.

61. A cui la roba falla, 'who lack sustenance': cf. Inf. XXIV, 7. For falla cf. Purg. X, 129.

Stanno ai perdoni a chieder lor bisogna,
 E l' uno il capo sopra l' altro avvalla,
 Perchè in altrui pietà tosto si pogna,
 Non pur per lo sonar delle parole, 65
 Ma per la vista che non meno agogna.
 E come agli orbi non approda il sole,
 Così all' ombre, là 'v' io parlav' ora,
 Luce del ciel di sè largir non vuole;
 Chè a tutte un fil di ferro il ciglio fora 70
 E cuce sì, come a sparvier selvaggio
 Si fa, però che queto non dimora.
 A me pareva andando fare oltraggio,
 Veggendo altrui, non essendo veduto;
 Perch' io mi volsi al mio consiglio saggio. 75
 Ben sapev' ei che volea dir lo muto;
 E però non attese mia domanda,
 Ma disse: 'Parla, e sii breve ed arguto.'
 Virgilio mi venia da quella banda
 Della cornice onde cader si puote, 80
 Perchè da nulla sponda s' inghirlanda;
 Dall' altra parte m' eran le devote
 Ombre, che per l' orribile costura
 Premevan sì che bagnavan le gote.
 Volsimi a loro, ed: 'O gente sicura,' 85

62. On the 'pardon' days of various churches, pilgrims come in crowds for indulgences, and beggars collect at the doors.

63. Avvalla, 'sinks.'

64. Pogna = ponga: cf. XVI, 123; Par. VIII, 81.

66. Agogna, 'craves': cf. Inf. VI, 28.

67. Approda, 'profits': cf. Inf. XXI, 78.

73. This delicate scruple reveals a fineness of feeling, an instinctive gentleness, that contrasts strangely with Dante's sterner moods.

78. Arguto, 'to the point.'

81. The outer 'side of the shelf' is 'wreathed with no rim,' i. e., has no parapet. Cf. Inf. XIV, 10.

82. Virgil is on Dante's right; on his left, against the wall, are the 'devout shades.'

85. Dante begins with words of good cheer.

Incominciai, 'di veder l' alto lume
 Che il disio vostro solo ha in sua cura,
 Se tosto grazia risolva le schiume
 Di vostra coscienza, sì che chiaro
 Per essa scenda della mente il fiume, 90
 Ditemi (chè mi fia grazioso e caro)
 S' anima è qui tra voi che sia latina;
 E forse a lei sarà buon, s' io l' apparo.'
 'O frate mio, ciascuna è cittadina
 D' una vera città; ma tu vuoi dire, 95
 Che vivesse in Italia peregrina.'
 Questo mi parve per risposta udire
 Più là alquanto che là dov' io stava;
 Ond' io mi feci ancor più là sentire.
 Tra l' altre vidi un' ombra che aspettava 100
 In vista; e se volesse alcun dir: 'Come?'
 Lo mento, a guisa d' orbo, in su levava.
 'Spirto,' diss' io, 'che per salir ti dome,
 Se tu se' quelli che mi rispondesti,
 Fammiti conto o per loco o per nome.' 105
 'I fui Sanese,' rispose, 'e con questi
 Altri rimondo qui la vita ria,
 Lagrimando a colui, che sè ne presti.

88. The hortative sc: Inf. X, 82; Purg. II, 16.

90. 'So that the river of memory may flow down through it undefiled': so that the conscience shall retain no recollection of sin.

93. Apparo = imparo: cf. Canzone XVI, 25.

94. Ephesians ii, 19: 'Now therefore ye are no more strangers and foreigners, but fellow-citizens with the saints, and of the household of God.'

96. Peregrina: cf. II, 63.

100, 101. Aspettava in vista, 'looked expectant.'

102. If anyone should ask me how it showed its expectancy, I should reply that 'it was lifting up its chin like a blind man.'

103. Dome = domi.

105. Conto, 'known': cf. Inf. III, 76.

107. Rimondo, 'I am making clean again.'

108. Che sè ne presti, 'that he (God) may lend himself to us.'

Savia non fui, avvegna che Sapia
 Fossi chiamata, e fui degli altrui danni 110
 Più lieta assai che di ventura mia.
 E perchè tu non credi ch' io t' inganni,
 Odi se fui, com' io ti dico, folle,
 Già discendendo l' arco de' miei anni.
 Eran li cittadin miei presso a Colle 115
 In campo giunti coi loro avversari,
 Ed io pregava Iddio di quel ch' ei volle.
 Rotti fur quivi, e volti negli amari
 Passi di fuga; e, veggendo la caccia,
 Letizia presi a tutte altre dispari — 120
 Tanto ch' io volsi in su l' ardita faccia,
 Gridando a Dio: "Omai più non ti temo!"
 Come fa il merlo per poca bonaccia.
 Pace volli con Dio in su lo stremo
 Della mia vita; ed ancor non sarebbe 125
 Lo mio dover per penitenza scemo,
 Se ciò non fosse che a memoria m' ebbe
 Pier Pettinagno in sue sante orazioni,
 A cui di me per caritate increbbe.
 Ma tu chi se', che nostre condizioni 130
 Vai domandando, e porti gli occhi sciolti,
 Sì come io credo, e spirando ragioni?'
 'Gli occhi,' diss' io, 'mi fieno ancor qui tolti;
 Ma picciol tempo, chè poca è l' offesa
 Fatta per esser con invidia volti. 135

112. Credi = creda.

123. This characteristic of the black-bird was probably known from general observation: see Sacchetti, Novelle, CXLIX; also T. Gautier, Le merle. The variant reading fe' for fa has led some to see in the line a reference to a popular fable, but no such fable has been found: see Ida Luisi in Giorn. dant., VIII, 109.

126. Dover, 'due': cf. X, 92.

133. Dante's 'eyes shall be taken' from him, in the literal sense of the poem, when he shall return to this circle after death.

Troppa è più la paura, ond' è sospesa
 L' anima mia, del tormento di sotto,
 Chè già lo incarco di laggiù mi pesa.'
 Ed ella a me: 'Chi t' ha dunque condotto
 Quassù tra noi, se giù ritornar credi?' 140
 Ed io: 'Costui ch' è meco, e non fa motto.
 E vivo sono; e però mi richiedi,
 Spirito eletto, se tu vuoi ch' io mova
 Di là per te ancor li mortai piedi.'
 'O questa è ad udir sì cosa nuova,' 145
 Rispose, 'che gran segno è che Dio t' ami;
 Però col prego tuo talor mi giova.
 E chieggioti per quel che tu più brami,
 Se mai calchi la terra di Toscana,
 Che a' miei propinqui tu ben mi rinfami. 150
 Tu li vedrai tra quella gente vana
 Che spera in Talamone, e perderagli
 Più di speranza che a trovar la Diana;
 Ma più vi metteranno gli ammiragli.'

138. 'The load' of the circle of pride 'already weighs' upon Dante.

144. Mortai = mortali.

148. Chieggioti = ti chiedo.

150. Mi rinfami. 'restore my good fame.'

151. Cf. Inf. XXIX, 122.

152. Perderagli = vi perderà.

154. The meaning seems to be: 'But those who shall spend, or waste, most upon Talamone shall be those who expect to be admirals,' to command the non-existent Sienese fleet.

CANTO XIV

ARGUMENT

THERE is an uncanny realism in the discussion of Dante by two blind spirits from Romagna; the poet is standing close beside them, but in their sightlessness they converse about him as if he were miles away. One of the speakers is Guido del Duca, a gentleman of Bertinoro, probably a Guelf, who lived in the first half of the thirteenth century. The other is the Guelf Rinieri (or Ranieri) of the powerful family of the lords of Cálboli, a stronghold near Rocca San Casciano in the valley of the Montone; prominent in peace and war, he was mayor of various cities, was defeated by Guido da Montefeltro (Inf. XXVII) in 1276, and was killed at Forlì in 1296.

Questioned by the penitents, Dante modestly withholds — as in the Vita Nuova — not only his own name but that of his city and that of the river Arno. This reticence leads to a description of the stream and a satirical picture of the dwellers on its banks. The passage falls into three parts of twelve lines each. First comes a general introductory portrayal of the river and of the Tuscans, who 'avoid virtue as if it were a snake' and resemble those unhappy men whom the enchantress Circe had turned into beasts. Next we have four tercets devoted to the inhabitants of the Casentino, Arezzo, Florence, and Pisa, who are likened respectively to swine, curs, wolves, and foxes. The mountainous Casentino, on the upper Arno, was, in fact, a pig-raising country, and the stream near its source flows by a hill called Porciano; in at least one of his lyrics (Canzone XI, 67-70) Dante complains of the rudeness of its people. The Aretines — those 'curs who snarl more than their strength warrants' — were described in nearly the same terms by Sacchetti in a letter to R. Gianfigliuzzi, captain of Arezzo (Tor., 437). The greed of the Florentines and the cunning of the Pisans made the wolf and the fox their proper symbols. The general suggestion of the beast-names came, no doubt, from Boethius (Cons., IV, Pr. iii). Following this characterization, the closing twelve lines of the passage contain a prophecy of the slaughter of the Florentine wolves by a bloodthirsty nephew of Rinieri da Calboli.

For Guido del Duca, see F. Torraca in Nuova Antologia, XLVII, 5; cf. Bull., X, 329. For Rinieri da Calboli: Tor., 439. For the story of Circe: Met., XIV, 248-307; Æn., VII, 10-20. For a discussion of the passage in Boethius: Studien zur vergleichenden Literaturgeschichte, VIII, 2; R. Murari, Dante e Boezio, 1905, 384. For Romagna, see F. Torraca, Studi Danteschi, 1912, 137.

‘Chi è costui che il nostro monte cerchia
 Prima che morte gli abbia dato il volo,
 Ed apre gli occhi a sua voglia e coperchia?’
 ‘Non so chi sia; ma so ch’ ei non è solo.
 Domandal tu che più gli t’ avvicini, 5
 E dolcemente, sì che parli, acco’ lo.’
 Così due spirti, l’ uno all’ altro chini,
 Ragionavan di me ivi a man dritta;
 Poi fer li visi, per dirmi, supini,
 E disse l’ uno: ‘O anima, che fitta 10
 Nel corpo ancora in ver lo ciel ten vai,
 Per carità ne consola, e ne ditta
 Onde vieni, e chi sei; chè tu ne fai
 Tanto maravigliar della tua grazia
 Quanto vuol cosa che non fu più mai.’ 15
 Ed io: ‘Per mezza Toscana si spazia
 Un fiumicel che nasce in Falterona,
 E cento miglia di corso nol sazia.
 Di sopr’ esso rech’ io questa persona.
 Dirvi chi io sia, saria parlare indarno; 20
 Chè il nome mio ancor molto non suona.’
 ‘Se ben lo intendimento tuo accarno
 Con lo intelletto,’ allora mi rispose

5. Domandal = domandalo.

6. Acco' = accogli: cf. Inf. XVIII, 18.

9. Fer = fecero. ‘Then they made their faces level (threw back their heads) to speak to me.’

10. ‘The one’ is Guido del Duca.

15. Vuol, ‘demands.’ Cosa is the subject.

17. Falterona: one of the highest mountains in the Tuscan Apennines.

22. Accarno, ‘seize.’

Quei che diceva pria, 'tu parli d' Arno.'
 E l' altro disse a lui: 'Perchè nascose 25
 Questi il vocabol di quella riviera,
 Pur com' uom fa dell' orribili cose?'
 E l' ombra che di ciò domandata era
 Si sdebitò così: 'Non so, ma degno
 Ben è che il nome di tal valle pera; 30
 Chè dal principio suo (dov' è sì pregno
 L' alpestro monte, ond' è tronco Peloro,
 Che in pochi lochi passa oltra quel segno)
 Infìn là 've si rende per ristoro
 Di quel che il ciel della marina asciuga, 35
 Ond' hanno i fiumi ciò che va con loro,
 Virtù così per nimica si fuga
 Da tutti come biscia, o per sventura
 Del loco o per mal uso che li fruga;
 Ond' hanno sì mutata lor natura 40
 Gli abitor della misera valle
 Che par che Circe gli avesse in pastura.

25. 'The other' is Rinieri da Calboli.

29. Si sdebitò, 'paid its scot,' i. e., answered.

30. The valley is the Valdarno. — Cf. Job xviii, 17: 'His remembrance shall perish from the earth.'

31. Its 'source' is in the Falterona, which was regarded also as the source of the Tiber. — Pregno, 'teeming,' abundant in water. Cf. Phars., II, 399, 403:

'mons inter geminas medius se porrigit undas.'

'Fontibus hic vastis immensos concipit amnes.'

32. 'The Alpine range from which Pelorus is severed' means the Apennine chain, of which Pelorus, at the eastern end of Sicily, is the continuation. Cf. Phars., II, 438: 'Extremi colles Siculo cessere Peloro.'

33. 'That it is more so (i. e., more teeming) in but few places.' Passa oltra quel segno, 'it passes that mark,' i. e., 'it exceeds.' Only a few of the Apennine peaks are wetter than Falterona.

34. Down to its mouth, 'where it (the Arno) gives itself up to replace' the water that evaporates from the sea.

36. 'What goes with them' is their supply of water.

37. All along the Arno, from source to mouth, 'virtue is shunned.'

39. Fruga, 'goads,' incites: cf. III, 3.

Tra brutti porci, più degni di galle
 Che d' altro cibo fatto in uman uso,
 Dirizza prima il suo povero calle. 45
 Botoli trova poi, venendo giuso,
 Ringhiosi più che non chiede lor possa,
 Ed a lor, disdegnosa, torce il muso.
 Vassi cadendo, e quanto ella più ingrossa
 Tanto più trova di can farsi lupi 50
 La maledetta e sventurata fossa.
 Discesa poi per più pelaghi cupi,
 Trova le volpi, sì piene di froda
 Che non temono ingegno che le occupi.
 Nè lascerò di dir, perch' altri m' oda; 55
 E buon sarà a costui, se ancor s' ammenta
 Di ciò che vero spirto mi disnoda.
 Io veggio tuo nipote, che diventa
 Cacciator di quei lupi in sulla riva
 Del fiero fiume, e tutti gli sgomenta. 60
 Vende la carne loro, essendo viva;
 Poscia gli ancide come antica belva.
 Molti di vita, e sè di pregio priva.

Down to Romena the Arno is nothing but a brook.

. Torce il muso, 'turns away its snout.' The Arno, which descends south ugh the Casentino and then flows eastward toward Arezzo, suddenly turns o the west when it has come within three miles of that city.

. Vassi = si va. The subject of the verbs in this tercet is fossa, at the end

.. 51.

52. Pelaghi cupi, 'hollow (i. e., deep) pools.'

54. Ingegno che le occupi, 'trap to catch them.'

57. Disnoda, 'unties,' i. e., 'reveals.'

58. The nephew of Rinieri, Folcieri da Calboli, while mayor of Florence in 1303, had many White Guelph and Ghibelline citizens tortured and put to death on accusations of treason. He was mayor again in 1312.

62. 'Then he kills them like old cattle,' or, possibly, 'like beasts of old' (of Circe's time). The word belva, which properly means 'wild animal,' seems to have been suggested by the passage in Cons., IV, Pr. iii: cf. Studien zur vergleich- enden Literaturgeschichte, VIII, 3. It may be noted that in Purg. VI, 94, Dante uses the noun fiera for a horse.

Sanguinoso esce della trista selva;
 Lasciala tal che di qui a mill' anni 65
 Nello stato primaio non si rinselva.⁶⁶
 Come all' annunzio de' dogliosi danni
 Si turba il viso di colui che ascolta,
 Da qualche parte il periglio lo assanni,
 Così vid' io l' altr' anima, che volta 70
 Stava ad udir, turbarsi e farsi trista,
 Poi ch' ebbe la parola a sè raccolta.
 Lo dir dell' una, e dell' altra la vista,
 Mi fe' voglioso di saper lor nomi,
 E domanda ne fei con preghi mista. 75
 Per che lo spirto che di pria parlòmi
 Ricominciò: 'Tu vuoi ch' io mi deduca
 Nel fare a te ciò che tu far non vuo' mi.
 Ma da che Dio in te vuol che traluca
 Tanta sua grazia, non ti sarò scarso: 80
 Però sappi ch' io son Guido del Duca.
 Fu il sangue mio d' invidia sì riarso
 Che, se veduto avessi uom farsi lieto,
 Visto m' avresti di livore sparso.
 Di mia semente cotal paglia mieto. 85
 O gente umana, perchè poni il core
 Là 'v' è mestier di consorto divieto?

66. Primaio counts as two syllables: cf. migliaio in XIII, 22. — Non si rinselva, 'it shall not be reforested': cf. VII, 96.

69. Qualche, 'whatsoever.' — Assanni, 'nips.'

76. Parlòmi = parlommei, i. e., mi parlò: for the imperfect rhyme, see Inf. VIII, 17.

77. Mi deduca, 'condescend.'

78. Vuo' mi = mi vuoi. — Dante has avoided giving his name: ll. 20, 21.

85. Semente, 'sowing.' Cf. Galatians vi, 7: 'whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap.'

87. 'In that quarter where there must needs be exclusion of sharing': upon earthly possessions, in which there can be no sharing, because no two men can own the same thing. In the next Canto, ll. 44-5, Dante asks for an explanation of this difficult phrase. Cf. Cons., II, Pr. v: 'vestræ vero divitiæ nisi comminutæ in plures transire non possunt.'

Questi è Rinier; quest' è il pregio e l' onore
 Della casa da Calboli, ove nullo
 Fatto s' è reda poi del suo valore. 90
 E non pur lo suo sangue è fatto brullo —
 Tra il Po e il monte e la marina e il Reno —
 Del ben richiesto al vero ed al trastullo;
 Chè dentro a questi termini è ripieno
 Di venenosi sterpi, sì che tardi 95
 Per coltivare omai verrebber meno.
 Ov' è il buon Lizio, ed Arrigo Mainardi,
 Pier Traversaro, e Guido di Carpigna?
 O Romagnoli tornati in bastardi!
 Quando in Bologna un Fabbro si ralligna? 100
 Quando in Faenza un Bernardin di Fosco,
 Verga gentil di picciola gramigna?
 Non ti maravigliar, s' io piango, Tosco,
 Quando rimembro con Guido da Prata
 Ugolin d' Azzo, che vivette nosco, 105
 Federico Tignoso e sua brigata,
 La casa Traversara e gli Anastagi
 (E l' una gente e l' altra è diredata),

90. Reda = crede.

91. His is not the only family in Romagna that has become 'bare' (cf. Inf. XVI, 30; XXXIV, 60), i. e., destitute, of goodness.

92. Romagna is bounded on the north by the Po, on the south by the Apennines, on the east by the Adriatic, on the west by the river Reno.

93. 'Of the goodness requisite for earnest and pastime.'

94. È is impersonal: cf. X, 79; XXI, 43.

96. Per, 'through.'

97-107. In these lines are enumerated sundry noble and famous citizens and houses of Romagna in the 12th and 13th centuries. For Dante, Romagna included Bologna.

100. Si ralligna, 'shall take root': carrying out the figure begun in ll. 95-6 and continued in l. 102.

102. 'Noble scion of a tiny creeper.' Unlike the others mentioned, he was of lowly birth, and rose to importance by his merit alone. In 1249 he was mayor of Siena and Pisa.

108. Diredata, 'without heirs.'

Le donne e i cavalier, gli affanni e gli agi
 Che ne invogliava amore e cortesia, 110
 Là dove i cor son fatti sì malvagi.
 O Brettinoro, chè non fuggi via,
 Poichè gita se n' è la tua famiglia
 E molta gente, per non esser ria?
 Ben fa Bagnacaval che non rifiglia, 115
 E mal fa Castrocaro, e peggio Conio,
 Che di figliar tai Conti più s' impiglia.
 Ben faranno i Pagan, dacchè il Demonio
 Lor sen girà; ma non però che puro
 Giammai rimanga d' essi testimonio. 120
 O Ugolin de' Fantolin, sicuro
 È il nome tuo, da che più non s' aspetta
 Chi far lo possa tralignando oscuro.
 Ma va via, Tosco, omai, ch' or mi diletta
 Troppo di pianger più che di parlare, 125
 Sì m' ha nostra ragion la mente stretta.'

110. 'Which love and courtesy made dear to us.'

112. Brettinoro (now Bertinoro), a little town between Forlì and Cesena, was the birthplace of Guido del Duca. The family of the counts of Bertinoro died out in 1177. They and others who have departed are represented as having left the world to avoid the contamination of modern life.

115. Non rifiglia, 'gets no sons.' — Bagnacavallo is a little place near Ravenna. Its counts left no male heirs after Dante's generation. Among the heiresses was the wife of Guido da Polenta, Dante's host in Ravenna.

117. S' impiglia, 'takes the trouble.' — The counts of Castrocaro (near Forlì) and Cunio (near Imola) were very numerous in 1300. — The good pass away and the wicked multiply.

118. 'The Pagani,' a noble family of Faenza, 'will do well' to get no more sons, 'when their demon,' Maghinardo di Susina (Inf. XXVII, 49-51), shall have died. Maghinardo, the head of the family, died in 1302, leaving two daughters and a grandson.

119, 120. But they will not do so well as ever to leave 'clean witness of themselves,' i. e., an undefiled reputation. To do that, they should have died out before Maghinardo came.

121. Ugolino was a worthy gentleman of Faenza, who died in 1278. His two sons died not many years later, and the inheritance fell to his daughters.

123. Tralignando, 'by degenerating.'

126. Ragion, 'discourse.' — Stretta, 'wrung.'

Noi sapevam che quell' anime care
 Ci sentivano andar; però tacendo
 Facevan noi del cammin confidare.
 Poi fummo fatti soli procedendo, 130
 Folgore parve, quando l' aere fende,
 Voce che giunse d' incontra, dicendo:
 'Anciderammi qualunque m' apprende!'
 E fuggì, come tuon che sì dilegua,
 Se subito la nuvola scoscende. 135
 Come da lei l' udir nostro ebbe tregua,
 Ed ecco l' altra con sì gran fracasso
 Che somigliò tuonar che tosto segua:
 'Io sono Aglauro, che divenni sasso.'
 Ed allor, per ristringermi al Poeta, 140
 Indietro feci e non innanzi il passo.
 Già era l' aura d' ogni parte queta,
 Ed ei mi disse: 'Quel fu il duro camo
 Che dovria l' uom tener dentro a sua meta.
 Ma voi prendete l' esca, sì che l' amo 145
 Dell' antico avversario a sè vi tira;
 E però poco val freno o richiamo.

129. We knew that if the 'dear souls' had heard us taking the wrong way, they would have warned us.

130. Poi = poiché. — When we had left them behind.

133. The first of the examples of envy, proclaimed by spirit voices, is that of Cain: 'every one that findeth me shall slay me' (Gen. iv, 14).

135. Scoscende, 'splits.'

136. 'When our hearing had respite from it (voce, l. 132).'

137. Altra, 'second,' sc., voce.

139. The princess Aglauros, of Athens, envious of her sister Herse, who was loved by Mercury, tried to prevent the god from reaching her, and was turned into a statue. Cf. Met., II, 708 ff.

143. Ps. xxxii (Vulg. xxxi), 9: 'whose mouth must be held in with bit (camo) and bridle (freno)'; quoted in part in Mon., III, xvi, 74.

145. Voi: men in general. — Cf. Eccles. ix, 12: 'sicut pisces capiuntur hamo'; in the English version, 'as the fishes that are taken in an evil net.'

147. Richiamo, 'lure': cf. Inf. III, 117.

Chiamavi il cielo, e intorno vi si gira,
Mostrandovi le sue bellezze eterne,
E l' occhio vostro pure a terra mira;
Onde vi batte chi tutto discerne.'

151. 'He who sees all' is God: cf. 2 Macc. ix, 5.

CANTO XV

ARGUMENT

THE most important feature of this canto is a discussion — adroitly introduced in explanation of an obscure phrase — of the difference between spiritual and temporal possessions. In earthly property there can be no companionship, because what one man has another must lack. Not so with heavenly goods, knowledge and love, which all can possess together. God's love is poured out in proportion to the readiness of each soul to accept it, and upon every one of the blest is lavished all the love that it is capable of receiving. The divine love runs to meet the aspiring human affection, and, uniting with it, doubles its ardor and its joy. The more happy spirits there are in Paradise, the greater is the sum total of divine love bestowed; and, — inasmuch as every soul receives love, not only from God directly, but from all its fellows as well, — the greater is the share of each participant.

This doctrine is expounded by Virgil while the two poets are climbing up the stairway from the second terrace to the third. In the circle of wrath the punishment consists of a blinding, suffocating cloud of smoke, which rolls along the path, enveloping the penitents — a symbol of the energetic stifling of angry passion. In this discipline Dante evidently shares.

At the foot of the steps, before their ascent, the travellers are met by an angel so shining that Dante's mortal eyes are blinded. At first he imagines that he is dazzled by the sun, which is directly in front, half way between the meridian and the horizon; but when he shades his brows with his hands, the blaze is in no wise diminished. Then it seems to him that the brightness, from which his arched hands cannot shield him, must be a reflection of the sunbeam from some pool before him. A ray descending at a slant of 45 degrees to a mirror on the ground would be refracted up into his eyes at the same angle. Not until Virgil tells him the truth is he aware of the presence of the heavenly guardian; and he does not note the removal of the P from his forehead. He has been saved from envy not so much by conscious renunciation of worldly things as by unconscious contemplation of the divine.

C. E. Norton, in The Divine Comedy of Dante Alighieri, Purgatory, 1902, p. 114, cites some appropriate passages from Milton, Shelley, and Emerson.

Quanto, tra l' ultimar dell' ora terza
 E il principio del dì, par della spera
 Che sempre a guisa di fanciullo scherza,
 Tanto pareva già in ver la sera
 Essere al sol del suo corso rimaso: 5
 Vespero là, e qui mezza notte era.
 E i raggi ne ferian per mezzo il naso,
 Perchè per noi girato era sì il monte
 Che già dritti andavamo in ver l' occaso,
 Quand' io senti' a me gravar la fronte 10
 Allo splendore assai più che di prima,
 E stupor m' eran le cose non conte.
 Ond' io levai le mani in ver la cima
 Delle mie ciglia, e fecimi il solecchio,
 Che del soperchio visibile lima. 15
 Come quando dall' acqua o dallo specchio
 Salta lo raggio all' opposta parte,

1, 2. 'As much of the ecliptic as is visible (par, l. 2) between the end of the third hour (9 A. M.) and the beginning of day (6 A. M.).' Between dawn and mid-morning there is a difference of three hours, or 45° .

2, 3. 'The circle that is always playing like a child' is probably the ecliptic (the sun's annual revolution through the sky), which dodges now to one side, now to the other, of the equator: cf. IV, 63. See Giorn. dant., XIII, 108.

4, 5. 'So much (45°) of the sun's course seemed to be left on the evening side': the sun still had 45° to descend. It was three hours before sunset, or mid-afternoon; the sun was therefore in the northwest.

6. 'Vespers,' as Dante uses it, means the last of the four canonical divisions of the day, i. e., from 3 to 6 P. M.: cf. III, 25; Conv., IV, xxiii, 156. 'It was the beginning of vespers there, in Purgatory; here, in Italy (where I am writing), it was midnight.' The time of Italy is three hours earlier than that of Jerusalem. It was 3 P. M. in Purgatory, 3 A. M. in Jerusalem, midnight in Italy.

9. The poets, who climbed up the east side of the mountain as far as the first shelf, and walked to the right (or north) on each terrace, are now on the north-east side, facing the declining sun in the northwest.

10. An excessively bright light produces on the beholder an impression of heaviness over the eyes.

12. Conte, 'known': cf. XIII, 105.

15. A shade, or visor, 'files down the excess of visibility,' i. e., reduces the excess of visible light.

17. Raggio, 'sunbeam.' A ray of light, falling on a horizontal surface of glass or water, is refracted upward at the angle at which it descends, but 'in the opposite direction.'

Salendo su per lo modo parecchio
 A quel che scende, e tanto si diparte
 Dal cader della pietra in egual tratta, — 20
 Sì come mostra esperienza ed arte, —
 Così mi parve da luce rifratta
 Ivi dinanzi a me esser percosso,
 Per che a fuggir la mia vista fu ratta.
 ‘Che è quel, dolce Padre, a che non posso 25
 Schermar lo viso tanto che mi vaglia,’
 Diss’ io, ‘e pare in ver noi esser mosso?’
 ‘Non ti maravigliar, se ancor t’ abbaglia
 La famiglia del cielo,’ a me rispose;
 ‘Messo è, che viene ad invitar ch’ uom saglia. 30
 Tosto sarà che a veder queste cose
 Non ti fia grave, ma fiati diletto
 Quanto natura a sentir ti dispose.’
 Poi giunti fummo all’ Angel benedetto,
 Con lieta voce disse: ‘Entrate quinci!’ 35
 Ad un scaleo vie men che gli altri eretto
 Noi montavam, già partiti da linci,
 E Beati misericordes fue
 Cantato retro, e: ‘Godi tu che vinci!’
 Lo mio Maestro ed io soli ambedue 40
 Suso andavamo, ed io pensai, andando,

18. Parecchio, ‘same.’

20. Cader della pietra, ‘plumb line.’ — Tratta, ‘distance.’ — The angle of refraction is equal to the angle of incidence.

21. Esperienza ed arte, ‘experiment and science.’

33. Quanto, ‘as great as.’

36. Scaleo = scala. — Vie, ‘far.’ — Dante, in this case, omits mention of the obliteration of one of the letters from his forehead.

38. Mat. v, 7: ‘Blessed are the merciful.’ Mercy (caritas) is here regarded as the opposite of envy: cf. St. Thomas, Summa Theologiæ, Secunda Secundæ, Qu. xxxvi, Art. 3.

39. Cf. Mat. v, 12: ‘Rejoice, and be exceeding glad: for great is your reward in heaven.’ Also Rev. ii, 7: ‘To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the tree of life.’

Prode acquistar nelle parole sue;
 E dirizza' mi a lui sì domandando:
 'Che volle dir lo spirto di Romagna,
 E "divieto" e "consorto" menzionando?' 45
 Per ch' egli a me: 'Di sua maggior magagna
 Conosce il danno; e però non s' ammiri
 Se ne riprende perchè men sen piagna.
 Perchè s' appuntan li vostri disiri
 Dove per compagnia parte si scema, 50
 Invidia move il mantaco ai sospiri.
 Ma se l' amor della spera suprema
 Torcesse in suso il desiderio vostro,
 Non vi sarebbe al petto quella tema.
 Chè per quanti si dice più lì "nostro," 55
 Tanto possiede più di ben ciascuno,
 E più di caritate arde in quel chiostro.'
 'Io son d' esser contento più digiuno,'
 Diss' io, 'che se mi fossi pria taciuto,
 E più di dubbio nella mente aduno. 60
 Com' esser puote che un ben distributo
 I più posseditor faccia più ricchi
 Di sè che se da pochi è posseduto?'

42. Prode, 'profit': from Virgil's teaching.

45. The words of Guido del Duca in XIV, 87.

47. Non s' ammiri, 'it is not surprising.'

48. Ne riprende, 'he rebukes (men) for it': in order that men may have less cause to mourn for it.

49. Perchè, 'inasmuch as.' — S' appuntan, 'concentrate.'

50. 'Upon things in which the portion is diminished by sharing.'

52. 'The highest sphere' is the Empyrean, the abode of God, the angels, and the blest.

54. Tema: the 'fear' of sharing.

55. 'For there (in the Empyrean), the more there are to say "our," i. e., the more sharers there are. Cf. St. Gregory, Moralia, IV, xxxi.

58. Più digiuno (di), 'more empty of,' i. e., further from: cf. Inf. XVIII, 42; XXVIII, 87.

60. Aduno, 'I collect': cf. Inf. VII, 52.

Ed egli a me: 'Perocchè tu rificchi
 La mente pure alle cose terrene, 65
 Di vera luce tenebre dispicchi.
 Quello infinito ed ineffabil bene
 Che è lassù, così corre ad amore
 Come a lucido corpo raggio viene.
 Tanto si dà, quanto trova d'ardore; 70
 Sì che quantunque carità si estende,
 Cresce sopr' essa l' eterno valore.
 E quanta gente più lassù s' intende,
 Più v' è da bene amare, e più vi s' ama,
 E come specchio l' uno all' altro rende. 75
 E se la mia ragion non ti disfama,
 Vedrai Beatrice, ed ella pienamente
 Ti torrà questa e ciascun' altra brama.
 Procaccia pur che tosto sieno spente,
 Come son già le due, le cinque piaghe, 80
 Che si richiudon per esser dolente.'
 Com' io voleva dicer: 'Tu m' appaghe,'
 Vidimi giunto in sull' altro girone,
 Sì che tacer mi fer le luci vaghe.
 Ivi mi parve in una visione 85

64. Tu rificchi, 'thou dost still fix.'

69. Naturally bright objects were thought to attract the sun's rays: see Conv., III, xiv, 21-8. Cf. Guido Guinizelli, Al cor gentil ripara sempre amore, 11-14.

72. 'The eternal goodness is grafted upon it.' God's blessing corresponds to the affection of the loving soul, and is added to it.

73. S' intende, 'are affectionate.'

74. 'The more there are deserving of love, and the more love there is.'

76. Disfama, 'appeases': cf. l. 58. The use of disfamare for 'satisfy' was not uncommon.

81. 'Which are healed by being painful.'

82. A ppaghe = appaghi.

84. Fer = fecero. — Le luci vaghe, 'my eager eyes.'

85. The examples of gentleness — the opposite of wrath — appear as 'ecstatic visions.'

Estatica di subito esser tratto,
 E vedere in un tempio più persone,
 Ed una donna in sull' entrar con atto
 Dolce di madre, dicer: 'Figliuol mio,
 Perchè hai tu così verso noi fatto? 90
 Ecco, dolenti, lo tuo padre ed io
 Ti cercavamo.' E come qui si tacque,
 Ciò che pareva prima disparìo.
 Indi m' apparve un' altra, con quelle acque,
 Giù per le gote, che il dolor distilla, 95
 Quando di gran dispetto in altrui nacque;
 E dir: 'Se tu se' sire della villa
 Del cui nome ne' Dei fu tanta lite,
 Ed onde ogni scienza disfavilla,
 Vendica te di quelle braccia ardite 100
 Che abbracciar nostra figlia, o Pisistrato!
 E il signor mi pareva, benigno e mite,
 Risponder lei con viso temperato:
 'Che farem noi a chi mal ne disira,
 Se quei che ci ama è per noi condannato?' 105
 Poi vidi genti accese in foco d' ira
 Con pietre un giovinetto ancider, forte

86. The first vision represents the infant Jesus, who, after three days' absence, is found in the temple disputing with the doctors. See Luke ii, 42-50.

88. Una donna: Mary. Cf. Luke ii, 48: 'and his mother said unto him, Son, why hast thou thus dealt with us? behold, thy father and I have sought thee sorrowing.'

93. Disparìo = disparì.

94. Altra: sc., donna. This is the wife of Pisistratus, ruler of Athens, enraged because a young man has dared to embrace their daughter, with whom he is in love. Cf. Valerius Maximus, Facta et Dicta Memorabilia, V, i, Ext. 2.

96. Altrui, 'one.'

97. Villa, 'city': Athens.

98. The contest between Neptune and Minerva (as to which should name the city) and the victory of Minerva are told in Met., VI., 70-82.

101. Abbracciar = abbracciarono.

105. Per, 'by.'

107. For the stoning of St. Stephen, the first Christian martyr, see Acts vii, 54-60. From early times Stephen was always pictured as a youth.

Gridando a sè pur: 'Martira, martira!'
 E lui vedea chinarsi per la morte,
 Che l' aggravava già, in ver la terra; 110
 Ma degli occhi facea sempre al ciel porte,
 Orando all' alto Sire, in tanta guerra,
 Che perdonasse a' suoi persecutori,
 Con quell' aspetto che pietà disserra.
 Quando l' anima mia tornò di fuori 115
 Alle cose che son fuor di lei vere,
 Io riconobbi i miei non falsi errori.
 Lo Duca mio, che mi potea vedere
 Far sì com' uom che dal sonno si slega,
 Disse: 'Che hai, che non ti puoi tenere, 120
 Ma se' venuto più che mezza lega
 Velando gli occhi, e con le gambe avvolte
 A guisa di cui vino o sonno piega?'
 'O dolce Padre mio, se tu m' ascolte,
 Io ti dirò,' diss' io, 'ciò che mi apparve 125
 Quando le gambe mi furon sì tolte.'
 Ed ei: 'Se tu avessi cento larve
 Sopra la faccia, non mi sarien chiuse
 Le tue cogitazion, quantunque parve.
 Ciò che vedesti fu perchè non scuse 130
 D' aprir lo core all' acque della pace
 Che dall' eterno fonte son diffuse.
 Non domandai "Che hai?" per quel che face

108. Sè, 'one another.' — Martira, 'kill': this trait is not in the Bible.

115. Di fuori, 'outward.'

124. Ascolte = ascolti.

128. Sarien = sarebbero.

129. Parve, 'small.'

130. Perchè non scuse (= scusi), 'to the end that thou refuse not.'

131. The visions were intended to teach Dante to cool the heat of anger with the waters of peace.

133. 'I did not ask "What ails thee?" for the same reason that he does' who

Chi guarda pur con l' occhio che non vede
 Quando disanimato il corpo giace; 135
 Ma domandai per darti forza al piede.
 Così frugar conviensi i pigri, lenti
 Ad usar lor vigilia quando riede.'
 Noi andavam per lo vespero attenti
 Oltre, quanto potean gli occhi allungarsi 140
 Contra i raggi serotini e lucenti,
 Ed ecco a poco a poco un fummo farsi
 Verso di noi, come la notte oscuro;
 Nè da quello era loco da cansarsi.
 Questo ne tolse gli occhi e l' aere puro. 145 sees only with mortal eyes. For per quel che, cf. XXXIII, 77-8. Virgil's immortal sight, which could penetrate 'a hundred masks,' reads all of Dante's thoughts; he does not ask for information, but only to arouse his companion.

134, 135. 'The eye which ceases to see when the body lies lifeless' is a periphrasis for 'the mortal eye,' which is unable to read the mind. Virgil's sight is spiritual and eternal.

137. Frugar: cf. III, 3, XIV, 39.

144. The smoke covered the whole width of the terrace, so that 'there was no room to turn out from it.'

CANTO XVI

ARGUMENT

THE human soul, created at the birth of each infant, is guileless and naturally inclined to good and to gladness; the child of a happy maker, its first tendency is to seek happiness. All that seems excellent, all that appears to promise joy attracts it. But in its inexperience it may mistake false delight for true. It needs guidance; and for this end society, with its laws and rulers, was constituted. The laws still exist, but there is no one left to execute them, since the Papacy has usurped the Imperial power and joined the sword of worldly supremacy to the crozier of ecclesiastical authority. In the old days, when mankind fared well, Rome was the seat of two brother monarchs, neither of whom encroached upon the other — the Pope and the Emperor. Now the temporal chief is gone, and the spiritual leader does not suffice; for he whose province is religious thought cannot possess the gift of practical discrimination. This difference of office is indicated allegorically in the Bible in the Mosaic law which restricts the meat of the Israelites to 'whatsoever parteth the hoof, and is clovenfooted, and cheweth the cud' (Levit. xi, 3; Deut. xiv, 6). According to St. Thomas, Summa Theologiæ, Prima Secundæ, Qu. cii, Art. 6, chewing the cud signifies meditation of the Scriptures, and the cloven foot means, among other things, the distinction of good and evil. The Pope may ruminate, but his own acts show that he does not 'part the hoof.' Lack of temporal direction, then, rather than universal corruption of the human heart, is the cause of modern depravity. The stars are not to blame. The heavenly bodies, indeed, governed by angels, determine, to a certain extent, our characters, so that our first inclinations are generally under their control; but we have the innate knowledge of right and wrong, and free will to combat wicked desires, if only our first steps are guided aright.

Thus speaks Mark the Lombard, a penitent in the circle of wrath. Nothing is known of his family or history, but Villani and the Novelle Antiche corroborate his excellent reputation. With his companions he marches in the smoke, chanting the 'Lamb of God': 'Agnus Dei, qui tollis peccata mundi, miserere nobis; Agnus

Dei, qui tollis peccata mundi, miserere nobis; Agnus Dei, qui tollis peccata mundi, dona nobis pacem.' Joining Dante, he deplores with him the decline of courtesy and virtue. In all Lombardy, he declares, — the province which, less than a century before, was the favorite resort of courtiers and poets, — there are but three worthy men left, noble survivors of an elder generation. We are reminded of the 'giusti son duo' of Inf. VI, 73, and the 'tre men rei della nostra terra' of Canzone IX, 76. The first of the three Lombards is Conrad (Corrado or Currado) da Palazzo, of Brescia, vicar general of Charles of Anjou in Florence in 1276, mayor of Piacenza in 1288. The second is Gherardo da Camino, captain general of Treviso from 1283 to 1306, upon whom Dante incidentally bestows high praise in the Convivio (IV, xiv, 114-23). The third, Guido da Castello, of Reggio, is also favorably mentioned in the Convivio (IV, xvi, 65-74); Mark says of him that he is most fitly called, 'in the French fashion, the "simple Lombard,"' but we do not know why. To emphasize the fame of the second of the three — to whom, one would think, he must have been bound by ties of personal gratitude — the poet resorts to an ingenious device. Mark refers to him merely as 'the good Gherardo,' and Dante, asking who is meant, calls forth the statement that no Tuscan can be unfamiliar with that name. If any other epithet than 'good' is needed to identify him, the only suitable one is that suggested by the name of his daughter, Gaia — namely, gaio, or 'well bred.' He is 'good' and 'well bred'; in other words, an example of 'valore e cortesia' (l. 116).

For the influence of the stars and its limitations, see St. Thomas, Summa Theologiae, Prima, Qu. cxv, Arts. 4 and 6. For a discussion of free will by Boethius, see R. Murari, Dante e Boezio, 1905, 299 ff. For the need of double guidance, cf. Mon., III, xvi, 75-101. For Marco Lombardo: Bull., X, 187; Tor., 455. For Gaia: Giorn. stor., XLIII, 411; Bull., XI, 349; and especially G. B. Picotti in Giorn. dant., XII, 81.

Buio d' inferno e di notte privata
 D' ogni pianeta sotto pover cielo,
 Quant' esser può di nuvol tenebrata,
 Non fecè al viso mio sì grosso velo
 Come quel fummo ch' ivi ci coperse,
 Nè a sentir di così aspro pelo;

2. Pover: 'poor' in fixed stars.

6. Pelo, 'texture,' carrying out the figure of the veil:

Chè l' occhio stare aperto non sofferse.
 Onde la Scorta mia saputa e fida
 Mi s' accostò, e l' omero m' offerse.
 Sì come cieco va dietro a sua guida 10
 Per non smarrirsi, e per non dar di cozzo
 In cosa che il molesti o forse ancida,
 M' andava io per l' aere amaro e sozzo,
 Ascoltando il mio Duca che diceva
 Pur: 'Guarda, che da me tu non sie mozzo.' 15
 Io sentia voci, e ciascuna pareva
 Pregar, per pace e per misericordia,
 L' Agnel di Dio, che le peccata leva.
 Pure Agnus Dei eran le loro esordia.
 Una parola in tutte era ed un modo, 20
 Sì che pareva tra esse ogni concordia.
 'Quei sono spirti, Maestro, ch' i' odo?'
 Diss' io. Ed egli a me: 'Tu vero apprendi,
 E d' iracundia van solvendo il nodo.'
 'Or tu chi se', che il nostro fummo fendi, 25
 E di noi parli pur come se tue
 Partissi ancor lo tempo per calendi?'
 Così per una voce detto fue.
 Onde il Maestro mio disse: 'Rispondi,
 E domanda se quinci si va sue.' 30
 Ed io: 'O creatura, che ti mondi

54. Dante represents himself as enveloped in a 'doubt,' which binds him so tight that he will 'burst' if he does not 'extricate' himself from it. He wonders what is the cause of the degeneracy of modern times.

55. When the doubt was first suggested to him by the words of Guido del Duca in XIV, 37-41, it was 'single'; now it is 'doubled' by Marco's 'speech' in l. 48, which assures him of that with which he 'couples it' (namely, Guido's utterance).

CANTO XVII

ARGUMENT

A THICK mist in the mountains, gradually clearing until 'the sun's disk' can be faintly discerned — such is the picture which, with a few strokes, Dante sets vividly before us, to convey an idea of the passing of the cloud of smoke on the third terrace. An apostrophe to Imagination, that mysterious power which constructs images within the mind, introduces the examples of wrath, presented in ecstatic visions. At the top of the stairway leading to the next shelf, night overtakes the travellers and compels them to stop. Just as in Hell (Inf. XI) the Latin poet utilizes a necessary halt, half way down the abyss, to set forth the general arrangement of the lower world, so here, half way up the slope of Purgatory, he explains to Dante the categories of sin and atonement.

To begin with, the 'seed' of every act in the universe, good or evil, is love. God himself is impelled by love, and none of his creatures is devoid of it. But love is of two kinds, instinctive and elective. Instinctive love — the only kind felt by inanimate things, plants, and beasts — is directly inspired by God, and consequently unerring. Aristotle, in his Ethics, III, xi, 3 and 4, taught a similar doctrine. This primal impulse to return to the maker and conform to his law is innate in man also; but man, endowed with free will, has power to divert his love to other objects, good or bad. The elective love, then, is subject to error. As long as it is bent upon heavenly things, it cannot go astray; nor is it harmful when turned to the good things of earth in due measure. But when man is lukewarm in his affection for the divine, or immoderate in his craving for worldly good, and when he loves evil, he misuses his liberty and opposes the will of his creator.

The choice of a bad object, insufficient devotion to a heavenly object, excessive attachment to a temporal object not evil in itself — these are the three wrong courses open to man's love. The first error results in the sins of the spirit, the three vices punished in the three lower circles; the second produces the negative vice of sloth, expiated in the fourth, or middle, circle; the third is responsible for the sins of the flesh, the three vices of the three upper circles. The last two categories are not further discussed by Virgil, but the first — the love of evil — is treated in detail. At the outset this question arises: what kind of evil can man love, or, in other words, to whom may he wish harm? Having proved that it is impossible to hate one's self, or to hate God, Virgil shows that man is capable of hating his fellow-creatures alone — he may wish harm to his neighbor, but to no one else. Hatred of our neighbor springs up in three ways, and manifests itself accordingly in the three vices of pride, envy, and anger, which are defined in three consecutive tercets.

For St. Thomas's definitions of pride ('amor propriæ excellentiæ'), envy ('tristitia de alienis bonis'), and anger, see Summa Theologiæ, Secunda Secundæ, Qu. cxlii, Art. 3; Qu. xxxvi, Arts. 2 and 3; Qu. clvi, Art. 4. For envy, cf. Conv., I, iv, 42-56.

Ricorditi, lettor, — se mai nell' alpe
 Ti colse nebbia, per la qual vedessi
 Non altrimenti che per pelle talpe, —
 Come, quando i vapori umidi e spessi
 A diradar cominciarsi, la spera 5
 Del sol debilmente entra per essi;
 E fia la tua imagine leggiera
 In giugnere a veder com' io rividi
 Lo sole in pria, che già nel corcare era.
 Sì, pareggiando i miei co' passi fidi 10
 Del mio Maestro, uscii fuor di tal nube
 Ai raggi, morti già nei bassi lidi.
 O imaginativa, che ne rube
 Tal volta sì di fuor ch' uom non s' accorge

1. Alpe, 'mountains.'

3. According to Aristotle and Mediæval authorities, the eye of the mole is covered by a membrane which prevents it from seeing.

7. Imagine means a mental picture, generally derived from visual impression. Imaginativa (l. 13) and fantasia (l. 25) signify the faculty of receiving such pictures; imaginazione is the power of composing them.

10. Cf. XVI, 8-9.

12. The 'shores' of the Island of Purgatory.

13. Imaginativa: see note to l. 7. — Ne rube, 'stealest us.'

14. Di fuor, 'from the outer world.' — Uom, 'one': cf. French on.

Perchè d' intorno suonin mille tube, 15
 Chi move te, se il senso non ti porge?
 Moveti lume che nel ciel s' informa
 Per sè, o per voler che giù lo scorge?
 Dell' empiezza di lei che mutò forma
 Nell' uccel che a cantar più si diletta 20
 Nell' imagine mia apparve l' orma;
 E qui fu la mia mente sì ristretta
 Dentro da sè, che di fuor non venia
 Cosa che fosse allor da lei ricetta.
 Poi piovve dentro all' alta fantasia 25
 Un crocifisso, dispettoso e fiero
 Nella sua vista, e cotal si moria.
 Intorno ad esso era il grande Assüero,
 Ester sua sposa e il giusto Mardocheo,

15. Perchè, 'although.'

16. Non ti porge, 'offers thee naught.' What is it that arouses the faculty of mental vision in the case of hallucinations, when no impression of sight comes from without? Is it some physical stellar influence, or the divine will operating through the stars? Cf. St. Thomas, Summa Theologiae, Prima, Qu. lxxxiv, Art. 6.

17. S' informa, 'takes shape.'

18. Per sè: spontaneously. — Voler: the 'will' of God. — Scorge, 'directs.'

19. The first example is that of Progne (or Procne), who, to avenge the cruel and infamous wrong done by her husband, Tereus, king of Thrace, to her sister Philomela, made him eat of the flesh of his own child, Itys. Tereus and the two sisters were then turned into birds. According to Aristotle (Rhetoric, III, 3) and most of the Greeks, Progne became a nightingale and Philomela a swallow; the Latins, followed by modern poets, usually made Philomela the nightingale. But Ovid (Met., VI, 424 ff.), the Latin poet from whom Dante got the story, does not tell, and Virgil (Eclogue VI, 79) seems to follow the Greek version, which Dante also adopted. Cf. IX, 13-5. See D' Ovidio, 579-81. — Dell' empiezza depends on l' orma, 'the impress,' in l. 21.

24. Ricetta = ricevuta.

26. The 'one crucified' is Haman, minister of King Ahasuerus, who 'reigned from India even unto Ethiopia' (Esther i, 1). Enraged at the independence of the Jew, Mordecai, 'so upright in word and deed' (l. 30), who 'bowed not, nor did him reverence' (Esther iii, 5), 'Haman sought to destroy all the Jews that were throughout the whole kingdom' (v, 6); but through the influence of Esther, Mordecai's cousin and adopted daughter, who had become the wife of Ahasuerus, he was himself 'hanged on the gallows that he had prepared for Mordecai' (vii, 10). In the Vulgate, the 'gallows fifty cubits high' (vii, 9) is 'cross.' The scene of the execution is not described in the Bible.

Che fu al dire ed al far così intero. 30
 E come questa imagine rompeo
 Sè per sè stessa, a guisa d' una bulla
 Cui manca l' acqua sotto qual si feo,
 Surse in mia visione una fanciulla,
 Piangendo forte, e diceva: 'O regina, 35
 Perchè per ira hai voluto esser nulla?
 Ancisa t' hai per non perder Lavina —
 Or m' hai perduta: io son essa che lutto,
 Madre, alla tua pria ch' all' altrui ruina.'
 Come si frange il sonno, ove di butto 40
 Nuova luce percote il viso chiuso,
 Che fratto guizza pria che moia tutto;
 Così l' immaginar mio cadde giuso,
 Tosto ch' un lume il volto mi percosse,
 Maggiore assai che quel ch' è in nostr' uso. 45
 Io mi volgea per vedere ov' io fosse,
 Quand' una voce disse: 'Qui si monta,'
 Che da ogni altro intento mi rimosse,
 E fece la mia voglia tanto pronta
 Di riguardar chi era che parlava, 50
 Che mai non posa, se non si raffronta.

31. Rompeo = rumpe.

32. Bulla = bolla, 'bubble': the air that is enclosed in a spherical film of water.

35. The 'queen' is Amata, wife of King Latinus, who hanged herself in a fit of rage on hearing a premature report of the death of Turnus, the intended husband of her daughter Lavinia (cf. Inf. IV, 126). She feared that her daughter would be taken from her by the victorious Æneas. See Æn. VII, 341 ff.; XII, 604 ff. Cf. Dante, Epistola VII, vii, 148.

37. Such forms as Lavina for Lavinia were common in early Italian.

39. Lavinia has to 'mourn' the death of her mother before that of Turnus.

40. Ove di butto (cf. Inf. XXII, 130), 'when suddenly.'

42. Che guizza, 'which (i. e., sleep) quivers.'

51. Se non si raffronta, 'until it is face to face.' For the abrupt substitution (suggested by the rhyme) of the vivid present tense for the imperfect, cf. XI, 75. — Cf. Giacomo da Lentini, Madonna dir vi voglio, ll. 29-30:

'Che [lo cor] giamai non è kito [= cheto]
 Fintanto che non vene al suo sentore.'

Ma come al sol, che nostra vista grava
 E per soperchio sua figura vela,
 Così la mia virtù quivì mancava.
 'Questi è divino spirito, che ne la 55
 Via d' andar su ne drizza senza prego,
 E col suo lume sè medesimo ceta.
 Sì fa con noi come l' uom si fa sego;
 Chè quale aspetta prego, e l' uopo vede,
 Malignamente già si mette al nego. 60
 Ora accordiamo a tanto invito il piede:
 Procacciam di salir pria che s' abbuï,
 Chè poi non si poria, se il dì non riede.'
 Così disse il mio Duca, ed io con lui
 Volgemmo i nostri passi ad una scala; 65
 E tosto ch' io al primo grado fui,
 Senti' mi presso quasi un mover d' ala,
 E ventarmi nel viso, e dir: 'Beati
Pacifici, che son senza ira mala.'
 Già eran sopra noi tanto levati 70
 Gli ultimi raggi che la notte segue,
 Che le stelle apparivan da più lati.
 'O virtù mia, perchè sì ti dilege?'
 Fra me stesso dicea, chè mi sentiva
 La possa delle gambe posta in tregue. 75

53. Soverchio, 'excess.'

55. Nella = nella: for the imperfect rhyme, cf. Inf. VIII, 17. Petrarch usually spelled such combinations with one l. Weak words in the rhyme are rare in Dante.

58. Sego = seco = con sè. Cf. Mat. vii, 12.

59. Quale, 'whosoever.' — Uopo, 'need.' — The logical order of the two clauses is inverted.

60. Nego, 'refusal.' Cf. Canzone XII, 39: 'E quei d'ogni mercè par messo al niego.'

63. Poria = potrebbe.

67. Cf. XII, 98. The third letter is removed from Dante's brow.

68, 69. Mat. v, 9: 'Blessed are the peacemakers.'

73. Virtù, 'strength.' — Ti dilege, 'meltest thou.'

75. Posta in tregue, 'suspended.'

Noi eravam dove più non saliva
 La scala su, ed eravamo affissi,
 Pur come nave ch' alla spiaggia arriva.
 Ed io attesi un poco s' io udissi
 Alcuna cosa nel nuovo girone; 80
 Poi mi volsi al Maestro mio, e dissi:
 'Dolce mio Padre, di', quale offensione
 Si purga qui nel giro dove semo?
 Se i piè si stanno, non stea tuo sermone.'
 Ed egli a me: 'L' amor del bene, scemo 85
 Di suo dover, quiritta si ristora,
 Qui si ribatte il mal tardato remo.
 Ma perchè più aperto intendi ancora,
 Volgi la mente a me, e prenderai
 Alcun buon frutto di nostra dimora. 90
 Nè creator, nè creatura mai,'
 Cominciò ei, 'figliuol, fu senza amore,
 O naturale o d' animo; e tu il sai.
 Lo natural è sempre senza errore;
 Ma l' altro puote errar per malo obbietto 95
 O per poco o per troppo di vigore.
 Mentre ch' egli è ne' primi ben diretto,
 E ne' secondi sè stesso misura,
 Esser non può cagion di mal diletto;

85, 86. 'The love of right, diminished of its due (i. e., less than it should be), is here made good.' The sin punished is acedia, or sloth.

87. Si ribatte, 'is plied again.'

93. D' animo, 'of the will,' elective.

97. Ne' primi ben diretto, 'turned to the primal goods,' i. e., heavenly blessings.

98. 'And while it is moderate in its attachment to secondary goods,' i. e., worldly blessings.

99. Mal diletto, 'sinful pleasure.'

Ma quando al mal si torce, o con più cura 100
 O con men che non dee corre nel bene,
 Contra il fattore adopra sua fattura.
 Quinci comprender puoi ch' esser conviene
 Amor sementa in voi d' ogni virtute
 E d' ogni operazion che merta pene. 105
 Or perchè mai non può dalla salute
 Amor del suo soggetto volger viso,
 Dall' odio proprio son le cose tute.
 E perchè intender non si può diviso,
 E per sè stante, alcuno esser dal primo, 110
 Da quello odiare ogni affetto è deciso.
 Resta (se dividendo bene estimo)
 Che il mal che s' ama è del prossimo, ed esso
 Amor nasce in tre modi in vostro limo.
 È chi per esser suo vicin soppresso 115
 Spera eccellenza, e sol per questo brama
 Ch' e' sia di sua grandezza in basso messo.
 È chi podere, grazia, onore e fama
 Teme di perder perch' altri sormonti,

100, 101. O con più cura, etc.: when it runs to worldly good with more ardor, or to heavenly good with less ardor, than it should.

102. Adopra, 'is working': the subject is sua fattura, 'his own creature.'

106, 107. 'Now, since love can never avert its gaze from the welfare of its own subject,' i. e., can never be hostile to the interest of the person in whose heart it dwells.

108. 'Things are safe (i. e., exempt) from self-hate': we cannot hate ourselves. Cf. Ephesians v, 29: 'For no man ever yet hated his own flesh.'

109, 110. 'And since no being can be conceived of as severed from the primal being and existing independently.' Cf. Acts xvii, 28: 'For in him [the Lord] we live, and move, and have our being.'

111. 'Every heart is debarr'd from hating him.' It is impossible to hate God, in whom we exist. Cf. Conv., IV, xii, 138-37.

112. 'It follows, if I judge rightly in my distinctions.' Resta is used like the scholastic relinquitur or restat.

114. In vostro limo, 'in your (mortal) clay.'

115, 116. 'There is the man who hopes to excel through his neighbor being crushed down,' i. e., 'by the abasement of his neighbor.'

117. E' is the neighbor.

119. Perch' altri sormonti, 'because another may rise,' i. e., 'through another's success.'

Onde s' attrista sì che il contrario ama. 120
 Ed è chi per ingiuria par ch' adonti
 Sì che si fa della vendetta ghiotto;
 E tal convien che il male altrui impronti.
 Questo triforme amor quaggiù disotto
 Si piange; or vo' che tu dell' altro intende, 125
 Che corre al ben con ordine corrotto.
 Ciascun' confusamente un bene apprende,
 Nel qual si queti l' animo, e disira;
 Per che di giugner lui ciascun contende.
 Se lento amore in lui veder vi tira, 130
 O a lui acquistar, questa cornice,
 Dopo giusto penter, ve ne martira.
 Altro ben è che non fa l' uom felice;
 Non è felicità, non è la buona
 Essenza, d' ogni ben frutto e radice. 135
 L' amor ch' ad esso troppo s' abbandona
 Di sopra noi si piange per tre cerchi;
 Ma come tripartito si ragiona,
 Tacciolo, acciocchè tu per te ne cerchi.'

120. Il contrario: 'the contrary' of another's success.

121. Adonti, 'is shamed': cf. Inf. VI, 72.

123. Impronti, 'prepares.'

124. Quaggiù disotto: in the three circles below us.

CANTO XVIII

ARGUMENT

Acedia is defined by St. Thomas (Summa Theologiæ, Prima, Qu. lxiii, Art. 2) as 'a certain sadness by which man is made slow to spiritual acts on account of physical difficulty.' Elsewhere (Secunda Secundæ, Qu. xxxv, Art. 1) he calls it 'weariness of doing,' and 'sorrow over apparent ill which is real good.' Throughout the Middle Ages it was regarded as a capital vice. In our day we should be likely to attribute its most characteristic manifestations to a disease, melancholia or neurasthenia. To Dante, as we have seen, it meant a spiritual sluggishness due to insufficiency of love. The cure must obviously be enforced spiritual activity, and consequently the souls in the fourth circle are represented as rushing at the top of their speed around their ledge, filled with righteous zeal. Dante takes no part in the penance. The examples on this terrace are recited by the penitents themselves, two at the head of the band proclaiming instances of celerity, two at the rear calling tales of sloth. Startling is the swiftness with which the whole throng comes and goes.

When the spirits appear, the moon is newly risen. Not far from the horizon, but already 'making the stars seem fewer,' its half-disk looks like a red-hot kettle. The moon, in its monthly circuit around the earth, moves from west to east, and therefore passes through the constellations, night after night, in a direction opposite to the general course of the heavens. The annual march of the sun, too, is backward — not directly, however, but diagonally, as Dante points out in Conv., III, v, 126-30. When he speaks of the moon as 'running contrary to the sky' (l. 70), he refers to this continuous backing, not to any motion visible to an observer in a single night. The moon's revolution is accomplished in a little less than twenty-eight days. On its fourteenth day, or thereabouts, it is full, and rises at sunset; on or near its twenty-first day it enters into its last quarter, when it rises at midnight. Inasmuch as the moon was full on the night when Dante was lost in the wood (Inf. XX, 127-0), it has now reached its eighteenth or nineteenth day, and is 'delayed' in its rising 'almost until midnight' (l. 76). Furthermore, it is moving 'over that road which the sun kindles at the time of year when the Roman sees it (the sun) set between Sardinia and Corsica' (ll. 79-81). That is to say, the moon is now in that part of the sky where the sun is to be found at the season when a line drawn from Rome toward sunset would pass between Sardinia and Corsica. Of course the Roman cannot really see the two islands; he merely perceives the sun disappearing in that direction. Now, such a line points nearly west-southwest, the quarter where the sun, as seen from Rome, descends toward the end of November; and at that time the sun is in Sagittarius. Against this constellation, then, the moon shows itself to Dante as it rises.

The time before the arrival of the spirits is employed by Virgil to expound to his pupil the doctrine of love (which, as he has already stated, is the motive power of the whole universe) and of free will. But inasmuch as the full comprehension of free will transcends mere Reason, the teacher must leave the completion of his exposition to Beatrice, who, in fact, discusses the subject in Par. V, 19 ff. In every soul, from its creation, love is latent, ready to be aroused to activity by a pleasing object. This theory we find already formulated by Dante — as far as the love of gentleman and lady is concerned — in the tenth sonnet of the Vita Nuova, Amor e 'l cor gentil sono una cosa. The senses convey to the mind the impression of some attractive object in the material world; the understanding then develops this impression in such a way that it is brought to the notice of the will, which may or may not lean toward the object in question. Or, in Dante's words, 'the human perception derives from a real being (esser verace, l. 22) a conception (intenzionc, l. 23), and unfolds it within the mind, so that it makes the desire turn towards it; and if, having thus turned, the desire inclines to it, that inclination is love.' This definition follows that of St. Thomas in the Summa Theologiæ, Prima Secundæ, Qu. xxvi. The process is illustrated in dramatic form by Dante in Canzone XI, ll. 16-36, where it is especially interesting to compare the 'colà dov' ella è vera' of l. 35 with the 'esser verace' of the present passage. The poet adds that this inclination is the natural human instinct (natura, l. 26), which, through a pleasing impression (piacer, l. 27), is once more bound in the soul. Before it is awakened to action, it is 'bound,' because it exists only in a potential state; after it is quickened and fixed, it is 'bound' again, in the sense that it is restricted to one object. Passion, according to St. Thomas (Summa Theologiæ, Prima Secundæ, Qu. lxxvii, Art. 2), is a sort of bodily modification which 'binds' the reason. The captive will, then, is moved to desire, and has no rest until it attains its object. This motion of the will is as natural, in the spiritual world, as, in the physical universe, the upward tendency of the flame, which is constantly striving to regain the sphere of fire, where its element is eternal. It is the 'form,' or character, of fire to rise, as it is the 'form' of the soul to love.

From the principle that love, in the abstract, is a general craving for good the Epicureans have deduced the conclusion that all love is, in itself, praiseworthy; but they overlook the fact that the especial object of desire may be evil, possessing only a false semblance of goodness. Even as a poor seal may stamp on excellent wax a bad imprint, so an unworthy object may kindle the good instinct of love to a wrongful passion. The first impulse to a particular affection comes from without, and is therefore not under our control; nevertheless, we are responsible, because we have the inborn knowledge of good and evil, and the free will to take or reject. 'Every substantial form,' says Dante in ll. 49-51, 'which is distinct from matter and yet combined with it, has, appropriated to itself, a specific faculty.' A 'substance,' in scholastic language, is something that has an independent being (Summa Theologiae, Prima, Qu. iii, Art. 5); the 'form' is the fundamental character of a thing; 'substantial form' (cf. Conv., III, ii, 25) means the particular basic principle, that which gives an object its separate existence (Summa Theologiae, Prima, Qu. lxxvi, Art. 4), and the substantial form of mankind is the intellective soul, which is utterly different from matter, and yet is united with it in the human body. A 'specific faculty' is one that is common and peculiar to a whole species. The specific faculty possessed by the intellective soul of man is an instinct which comprises innate knowledge and the inborn disposition to love. This instinct is apparent only through its works, just as in a plant life manifests itself by green leaves. Hence we are not aware of the source of our axiomatic notions, nor of our natural inclination toward all that seems good: these things are a part of us, as the honey-making proclivity is a part of the bee. Since they are not of our own begetting, they call for neither praise nor blame. This God-given instinct is necessarily innocent; we must see to it that the inclinations which we do control are equally harmless. To this end we have judgment, — 'the faculty that counsels' (l. 62), — which 'defends the threshold of consent.' Judgment tells us which desires are right and which are wrong; and although our first impulses may always take us unawares, our decisions are subject to our own free will.

CANTO XIX

ARGUMENT

DANTE's sojourn in the realm of sloth occurs at night, the time when activity is suspended, and he tarries there much longer than in the other circles. In these coincidences we are to see, no doubt, an artistic rather than a symbolic relevancy. Here, in the prophetic hour that precedes dawn, he has the second of his three allegorical dreams. This one reveals to him the true nature of the sins of the flesh, whose penitent victims he is to visit during the ensuing day; at the same time it illustrates, in concrete, dramatic form, the doctrine of temptation, discretion, and resistance expounded in the foregoing canto (XVIII, 49-66). A hideous, impotent female — stammering, cross-eyed, handless, club-footed, pale — is gradually transformed, as Dante looks on her, into a siren of perilous beauty; thus evil desire, hateful and powerless at first, becomes alluring if we let our minds dwell upon it. While the poet is listening to the sweet voice of the temptress, a 'lady quick and holy' springs up to confound her. This heaven-sent counsellor (the 'virtù che consiglia' of XVIII, 62) arouses Reason; and he, gazing steadfastly on this pure image of Conscience, never allowing his eyes to stray to the dangerous charms of the deceiver, discloses to the shocked dreamer the real foulness of her who has so attracted him. Even so, in one of the tales of Cæsarius of Heisterbach (Dialogus Miraculorum, XII, ch. iv), a sweet-voiced cleric, who has bewitched all by his song, collapses, when exorcised, into a putrid corpse.

The myth of the sirens had survived in mediæval folklore and literature. Hugh of St. Victor, for instance, in De Bestiis et Aliis Rebus, II, ch. xxxii, likens dissolute men, in the devil's clutches, to sailors lulled and killed by sirens. Dante's siren boasts that she once 'turned Ulysses from his wandering way.' While this is allegorically true, — since Ulysses was led into forbidden seas by his eagerness to have experience of 'human vices and virtue' (Inf. XXVI, 97-9), — it is not literally in accordance with Homer's narrative. Dante had never read the Odyssey, and probably got his knowledge of the episode from a passage in Cicero (De Finibus, V, xviii, 49), which, taken by itself, might easily give the impression that Ulysses succumbed.

The worst of the sins of the flesh is avarice, which, in Purgatory as in Hell (Inf. VII), is coupled with the contrary vice of prodigality. Both hoarding and squandering consist, when reduced to their underlying principle, in immoderateness with regard to property; the virtue opposed to both is moderation, the golden mean between the two extremes. But while Dante, for theoretical reasons, insists on this combination, he evidently centres his attention on avarice in his description of penance and penitents. Those whose eyes were fixed on vile earthly goods must lie with their faces in the dust; those who eschewed useful activity are now tight bound and motionless. Allegorically the discipline signifies the averting of the mind from worldly things and the humble renunciation of glory and power. As love of money has much in common with envy, so there is a resemblance between the punishments in the second circle (XIII) and the fifth, which Dante now enters.

Nell' ora che non può il calor diurno
 Intepidar più il freddo della luna,
 Vinto da terra o talor da Saturno, —
 Quando i geomanti lor maggior fortuna
 Veggiono in oriente, innanzi all' alba, 5
 Surger per via che poco le sta bruna, —
 Mi venne in sogno una femmina balba,
 Negli occhi guercia e sopra i piè distorta,
 Con le man monche, e di colore scialba.
 Io la mirava; e, come il sol conforta 10
 Le fredde membra che la notte aggrava,

1, 2, 3. The coldest hour is just before dawn. The earth itself was regarded as naturally cold, and a chill was supposed to descend from the moon, as well as from Saturn when it is above the horizon (cf. Conv., II, xiv, 201; Canzone XV, 7).

4. 'Geomancers' foretold the future by means of figures constructed on points that were distributed by chance. One of their figures, called fortuna major, or 'greater fortune,' resembled a combination of the last stars of Aquarius and the first of Pisces. As these constellations immediately precede Aries, in which the sun is from March 21 to April 21, the figure in question can be seen in the east shortly before sunrise at that season.

6. The 'road' by which fortuna major rises is 'kept dark for it only a little while,' because the sun, following close after, makes the stars fade.

11. Aggrava, 'benumbs.'

Così lo sguardo mio le facea scorta
 La lingua, e poscia tutta la drizzava
 In poco d' ora, e lo smarrito volto,
 Come amor vuol, così le colorava. 15
 Poi ch' ell' avea il parlar così disciolto,
 Cominciava a cantar sì che con pena
 Da lei avrei mio intento rivolto.
 'Io son,' cantava, 'io son dolce Sirena,
 Che i marinari in mezzo mar dismago — 20
 Tanto son di piacere a sentir piena.
 Io volsi Ulisse del suo cammin vago
 Al canto mio; e qual meco si aüsa
 Rado sen parte, sì tutto l' appago.'
 Ancor non era sua bocca richiusa, 25
 Quando una donna apparve santa e presta,
 L'unghesso me, per far colei confusa.
 'O Virgilio, o Virgilic, chi è questa?'
 Fieramente diceva; ed ei venia
 Con gli occhi fitti pure in quella onesta. 30
 L'altra prendeva, e dinanzi l' apria
 Fendendo i drappi, e mostravami il ventre;
 Quel mi svegliò col puzzo che n' uscia.
 Io mossi gli occhi, e il buon Maestro: 'Almen tre
 Voci t' ho messe,' dicea. 'Surgi e vieni! 35
 Troviam la porta per la qual tu entre.'

 Come colui che l' ha di pensier carica,
 Che fa di sè un mezzo arco di ponte,
 Quand' io udi': 'Venite, qui si varca,'
 Parlare in modo soave e benigno,
 Qual non si sente in questa mortal marca. 45
 Con l' ali aperte che parean di cigno,
 Volseci in su colui che sì parlonne,
 Tra' due pareti del duro macigno.
 Mosse le penne poi e ventilonne,
Qui lugent affermando esser beati, 50
 Ch' avran di consolar l' anime donne.
 'Che hai, che pure in ver la terra guati?'
 La Guida mia incominciò a dirmi,
 Poco ambedue dall' Angel sormontati.
 Ed io: 'Con tanta suspizion fa irmi 55
 Novella vision ch' a sè mi piega,
 Sì ch' io non posso dal pensar partirmi.'
 'Vedesti,' disse, 'quella antica strega,

 Quale il falcon che prima ai piè si mira,
 Indi si volge al grido, e si protende 65
 Per lo disio del pasto che là il tira,
 Tal mi fec' io, e tal, quanto si fende
 La roccia per dar via a chi va suso,
 N' andai infino ove il cerchiar si prende.
 Com' io nel quinto giro fui dischiuso, 70
 Vidi gente per esso che piangea,
 Giacendo a terra tutta volta in giuso.
 'Adhæsit pavimento anima mea!'
 Senti' dir lor con sì alti sospiri
 Che la parola appena s' intendea. 75
 'O eletti di Dio, li cui soffriri
 E giustizia e speranza fan men duri,
 Drizzate noi verso gli alti saliri.'
 'Se voi venite dal giacer sicuri,
 E volete trovar la via più tosto, 80
 Le vostre destre sien sempre di furi.'
 Così pregò il Poeta, e sì risposto
 Poco dinanzi a noi ne fu; per ch' io
 Nel parlare avvisai l' altro nascosto,
 E volsi gli occhi allora al Signor mio; 85

78. Saliri, 'ascents.'

81. Furi = fuori. 'To keep their right hands on the outer side of the cornice, the poets must walk, as usual, to the right.'

84. Nel parlare, 'by his speech.' — The speaker's face, turned to the ground, cannot be seen.

Ond' egli m' assentì con lieto cenno
 Ciò che chiedea la vista del disio.
 Poi ch' io potei di me fare a mio senno,
 Trassimi sopra quella creatura,
 Le cui parole pria notar mi fenno, 90
 Dicendo: 'Spirto, in cui pianger matura
 Quel senza il quale a Dio tornar non puossi,
 Sosta un poco per me tua maggior cura.
 Chi fosti, e perchè volti avete i dossi
 Al su, mi di', e se vuoi ch' io t' impetri 95
 Cosa di là ond' io vivendo mossi.'
 Ed egli a me: 'Perchè i nostri diretri
 Rivolga il cielo a sè, saprai; ma prima
Scias quod ego fui successor Petri.
 Intra Siestri e Chiàveri si adima 100
 Una fiumana bella, e del suo nome
 Lo titol del mio sangue fa sua cima.
 Un mese e poco più prova' io come
 Pesa il gran manto a chi dal fango il guarda,
 Che piuma sembran tutte l' altre some. 105
 La mia conversione, omè! fu tarda;
 Ma come fatto fui Roman Pastore,
 Così scopersi la vita bugiarda.
 Vidi che lì non si quetava il core,

87. Vista, 'look.'

92. 'That without which one cannot return to God' is the fruit of repentance.

97. Diretri, 'after part.'

99. 'Know that I was a successor of Peter.' The language of the Church is appropriate in the mouth of a Pope, and the majestic Latin emphasizes, by contrast, his present humiliation. The speaker is Adrian V, of the Fieschi family of Genoa, who held the Papal office for 38 days in 1276.

101. The Lavagna 'descends' into the Gulf of Genoa between the towns of Sestri and Chiaveri. The Fieschi were counts of Lavagna; the name of the river was the 'pinnacle' of their title.

108. 'Then I discovered how false life is.'

109. Lì: even in the Papal chair, beyond which no man can climb on earth.

Nè più salir poteasi in quella vita; 110
 Per che di questa in me s' accese amore.
 Fino a quel punto misera e partita
 Da Dio anima fui, del tutto avara.
 Or, come vedi, qui ne son punita.
 Quel ch' avarizia fa, qui si dichiara 115
 In purgazion dell' anime converse;
 E nulla pena il monte ha più amara.
 Sì come l' occhio nostro non s' aderse
 In alto, fisso alle cose terrene,
 Così giustizia qui a terra il merse. 120
 Come avarizia spense a ciascun bene
 Lo nostro amore, onde operar perdèsi,
 Così giustizia qui stretti ne tiene
 Ne' piedi e nelle man legati e presi;
 E quanto fia piacer del giusto Sire, 125
 Tanto staremo immobili e distesi.'
 Io m' era inginocchiato, e volea dire;
 Ma com' io cominciai, ed ei s' accorse,
 Solo ascoltando, del mio riverire:
 'Qual cagion,' disse, 'in giù così ti torse?' 130
 Ed io a lui: 'Per vostra dignitate
 Mia coscienza dritto mi rimorse.'
 'Drizza le gambe, levati su, frate!'

111. Questa: the eternal life.

113. Del tutto, 'wholly.'

117. Più amara, i. e., more humiliating: cf. Inf. VI, 48. The wickedness of avarice is shown by the severity of the penance of the 'converted souls.'

118. Aderse (from adgerere), 'lifted.'

120. Merse (from mergere), 'sunk.'

121. A ciascun bene, 'for all that is good.'

122. Onde operar perdèsi, 'so that our activity was lost,' i. e., our good works ceased. — Perdèsi = perdèssi = si perdè. For the rhyme, cf. Inf. VIII, 17.

127. Dire, 'speak.'

129. Solo ascoltando: by the sound alone. — Riverire: my reverent position.

132. 'My conscience stung me (for) standing.'

Rispose. 'Non errar! Conservo sono
 Teco e con gli altri ad una potestate. 135
 Se mai quel santo evangelico suono
 Che dice "Neque nubent" intendesti,
 Ben puoi veder perch' io così ragiono.
 Vattene omai! Non vo' che più t' arresti,
 Chè la tua stanza mio pianger disagio, 140
 Col qual maturo ciò che tu dicesti.
 Nepote ho io di là ch' ha nome Alagia,
 Buona da sè, pur che la nostra casa
 Non faccia lei per esempio malvagia;
 E questa sola di là m' è rimasa.' 145

134. Cf. Rev. xix, 10: 'And I fell at his (the angel's) feet to worship him. And he said unto me, See thou do it not: I am thy fellow servant, and of thy brethren that have the testimony of Jesus.'

137. Mat. xxii, 30: 'For in the resurrection they neither marry, nor are given in marriage, but are as the angels of God in heaven.' — Intendesti, 'hast understood,' i. e., hast interpreted in the broader sense, as meaning that earthly relations are not preserved in the spiritual world.

139. Vo' = voglio.

140. Stanza, 'stay.' — Disagia, 'hinders.'

141. Cf. l. 92.

142. Alagia de' Fieschi, the daughter of Adrian's brother Niccolò, was the wife of Marquis Morocello Malaspina and was therefore probably Dante's hostess in 1306.

144. One of the Fieschi, Bonifazio, appears in the circle of gluttony (XXIV, 29); a second, Innocent IV, is mentioned slightly in Epistola VIII, vii, 118; at least one other probably incurred Dante's displeasure.

CANTO XX

ARGUMENT

As the rueful souls lie flat on the outer edge of the terrace, their faces turned to the ground, they meditate, at the close of all their prayers, comforting examples of virtue and of punished vice, which they now murmur softly to themselves, now cry aloud, according to their mood. By day they recite instances of indifference to wealth, and of the proper use of it; by night, anecdotes of the fatal results of cupidity. Of these last stories, seven are quoted, corresponding to the seven sins which St. Thomas (Summa Theologiæ, Secunda Secundæ, Qu. cxviii, Art. 8) derives from avarice. With a curse upon the 'old wolf' of immoderateness, Dante invokes that saviour whom the heavens shall send to banish this devourer and restore justice to the world. Once before, in Inf. I, 94-111, the havoc done by the 'wolf' was described, and the rescuing 'hound' was foretold. Once again, in Purg. XXXIII, 34-51, after a picture of corruption by greed, we find the promise of a divinely ordained reformer; this latter prophecy is linked to our present passage by the repetition of a rhyme in -eda (XX, 11-13-15; XXXIII, 35-37-39).

In the prostrate throng is Hugh Capet, king of France from 987 to 996, founder of the Capetian line, whose descendants, in 1300, ruled over France, Spain, and Naples. Before that year four Philips and four Lewises (as well as a Robert and a Henry), sprung from him, had mounted the throne of France. In Dante's day he was often confounded with his father, Hugh the Great, Duke of France, who really governed the country in the time of the last Carolingians; in our poem these two persons are fused into one. According to a generally accepted but incorrect tradition, Hugh the Great came of a family of rich Parisian cattle dealers or butchers. When 'the old kings' — the offspring of Charlemagne — 'died out' with Louis V, there remained of the elder dynasty only Charles, duke of Lorraine, son of Louis IV; the feudal lords refused to accept him as sovereign, and crowned Hugh Capet in his stead. For Dante's assertion that the last of the Carolingians became a monk, 'a devotee in gray clothes' (l. 54), there is no historical warrant. Here again he seems to have followed a confused literary tradition. In the Old French poem on the Mort Aimeri de Narbonne, the 'Emperor Louis,' speaking of the usurpation of Hugh Capet, announces his determination to quit the world (ll. 50-2):

"Seignor," fet il, "la couronne prenez,
Cui vous plera en fetes couronner;
Rendus scrai a .i. de ces autez."

Hugh Capet, in Dante's account, gained such firm control of the state that his son was promoted to the 'widowed crown,' and from him descended the 'consecrated bones' of all the subsequent royal anointed. In reality, Robert I was almost immediately associated with his father in the government, and was crowned in 988. While the means and the domain of his family were comparatively small, — Hugh declares, — it remained insignificant but harmless; but when, by trickery, Charles of Anjou, brother of Louis IX, contrived to marry Beatrice, heiress of Provence, and so secured 'the great Provençal dowry,' his descendants lost all sense of shame. Since then their history has been a chronicle of crimes, in which Philip IV, the Fair (VII, 109), has played the leading part. England was robbed, 'by violence and by falsehood,' of Ponthieu, Normandy, and Gascony. Charles of Anjou (VII, 113, 124) came to Italy in 1265 to wrest the kingdom of Sicily from Manfred, who was defeated and slain the next year (III, 112); in 1268, in Naples, after the battle of Tagliacozzo (Inf. XXVIII, 17), he put to death Conradin, a lad of sixteen, grandson of Frederick II; he was accused also of having instigated, for political reasons, the poisoning of St. Thomas Aquinas, who died in 1274 on his journey from Naples to the Council of Lyons. Another Charles, continues Hugh Capet, — Charles of Valois, called Lackland or Senza terra, brother of Philip IV, — will come out of France in 1301, armed only with treachery ('the lance with which Judas tilted'), to betray Florence into the hands of the Blacks and to contend vainly with Frederick of Aragon (VII, 119) in Sicily. A third Charles, — the Cripple of Jerusalem, Charles II, king of Apulia, son of Charles of Anjou (VII, 127; Par. XIX, 127), — after having been taken prisoner in 1284 in a sea fight in the Bay of Naples by Ruggero di Lauria, the admiral of Peter of Aragon (VII, 112), will sell his young daughter Beatrice in marriage to the old Marquis of Ferrara, Azzo VIII d'Este. But the crowning infamy of the race, that which shall throw into the shade all past and future outrage, shall be the seizure of Pope Boniface VIII at Anagni in the Roman Campagna, in 1303, by Guillaume de Nogaret and Sciarra Colonna. Seated on his throne and clad in the Papal raiment, Boniface was roughly taken prisoner; he was then conveyed to Rome, where he was wounded in the head, and, after a little while, died of rage and shame. In spite of Dante's hostility to Boniface, whom he regarded as an unworthy prelate (Inf. XIX, 52-7), the enemy of Florence and the author of his own misfortunes (Par. XVII, 40-51), this humiliation of the head of the Church shocked him beyond measure. The fate of Christ — so it seemed to the poet — was renewed in that of his vicar, crucified, not between two thieves condemned to die with him, but between two mocking villains — Guillaume and Sciarra — who were allowed to live. These men were bearers of the fleur-de-lis, creatures of Philip the Fair. That 'modern Pilate,' not satisfied even with this crime, directed his 'greedy sails,' like a pirate ship, toward the Order of the Templars; having brought against that body a false accusation of heresy, and having arrested all the Templars in 1307, without waiting for Papal authorization, he turned them over to the Inquisition, possessed himself of their treasure, and finally caused the abolition of their order in 1312. Such is the 'evil plant' of which Hugh Capet was the root. By means of its control of the Papacy, it 'overshadows all Christendom,' and 'seldom is good fruit plucked therefrom.' If the cities of Douai, Lille, Ghent, and Bruges had the strength, they would soon wreak vengeance on Philip the Fair, who conquered Flanders in 1297. That vengeance came, in fact, in 1302, when Philip's troops were crushingly defeated in Bruges and Courtrai, and the French were driven from the country.

 Onde contra il piacer mio, per piacerli,

6. The poets step carefully along on the inner side of the cornice, close to the upright cliff, just as soldiers march on the top of a narrow rampart, close to the battlements. Such battlemented walls still surround Carcassonne and Aigues-Mortes, and may be seen also at Avignon.

Chè la gente, che fonde a goccia a goccia
 Per gli occhi il mal che tutto il mondo occupa,
 Dall' altra parte in fuor troppo s' approccia.
 Maledetta sie tu, antica lupa, 10

 Quando verrà per cui questa disceda? 15
 Noi andavam con passi lenti e scarsi,
 Ed io attento all' ombre ch' io sentia
 Pietosamente piangere e lagnarsi;
 E per ventura udi': 'Dolce Maria!'
 Dinanzi a noi chiamar così nel pianto 20
 Come fa donna che in partorir sia.

CANTO XXI

ARGUMENT

LEFT, like Dante himself, in agonizing suspense at the end of the preceding canto, we now learn why the mountain trembled and why all the souls up and down its slope cried out together. This rejoicing occurs whenever any spirit has completed its penance and feels itself free to rise to Heaven. St. Thomas, and others after him, distinguished the 'absolute' from the 'conditioned' will. The absolute will is a constant inclination toward the good; the conditioned will is a modification of this inclination by circumstances. When we sin, we follow, not our absolute, but our conditioned will, which has been perverted by false appearances. So when we make atonement, it is not the absolute will that seeks punishment, but the conditioned will, shaped by the knowledge that good can come through penance alone. A soul in Purgatory is held there only by its own conditioned will. As soon as this conditioned will, or desire, coincides with the absolute and eternal inclination to seek blessedness, the penitent knows that his expiation is over and he is at liberty to rise. 'The only proof of purity is the will itself, which suddenly finds the soul quite free to change its company, and by its volition enables it to do so': ll. 61-3. 'Before that moment (prima), to be sure (ben), the soul wills absolutely to rise (vuol), but it is prevented by its desire or conditioned will (ma non lascia il talento), which divine justice inclines to suffering (che pone al tormento), its operation being now contrary to the tendency of the absolute will (contra voglia), just as was the case when it sinned (come fu al peccar)': ll. 64-6.

Purgatory itself, like the Garden of Eden, is exempt from physical change, and only spiritual causes operate there. 'The law of the mountain never experiences anything that is unregulated or abnormal': ll. 40-2. 'In this place there is an absence of all innovation; out of that which Heaven receives from itself into itself' — namely, out of spirit, which originates in God and returns to him — 'there may arise an occasion' for the interruption of the ordinary course, 'but from naught else': ll. 43-5. A spiritual phenomenon — the release of a soul — may move both spirits and earth to a display of gladness, but even this manifestation is in accordance with the everlasting nature of the sacred mount. Although the peak does not rise above the earth's mantle of air, its upper part, like the Isle de Voirre described in the Old French Erec (ll. 1047-51), is beyond the reach of atmospheric change. As Lucan says, in Pharsalia, II, 271-3:

'Nubes excedit Olympus
Lege Deum. Minimas rerum discordia turbat;
Pacem summa tenent.'

Wet vapors are unknown; 'no rain, hail, snow, dew, nor frost falls any higher up than the short stairway of three steps,' where is the entrance to Purgatory: ll. 46-8. Dry vapors, which cause lightning, meteors, comets, wind, and earthquake, are absent also. 'Lower down on the slope, the earth may quake, much or little; but up here its shaking was never due,' — as it is elsewhere, — 'to the mysterious confinement of wind in the belly of the globe': ll. 55-7. 'It trembles when any soul feels itself clean enough to arise and start on its ascent, and such a shout' as its companions have just raised 'accompanies' the upward faring spirit: 58-60.

The penitent whose liberation from the fifth circle has produced such a commotion is Statius, a famous Latin poet of the first century of our era. His two great epics, the Thebaid and the Achilleid (the second unfinished), highly artificial and ornate in style, were assiduously studied throughout the Middle Ages, and were looked upon as models of rhetorical elegance. Dante, who knew them thoroughly, must have found in them a vast storehouse of classical mythology; with characteristic gratitude he honored Statius for the good he had derived from him. A third work, a miscellany known as the Silva, in which the author names Naples as his birthplace, had not been recovered in the 14th century, and Dante and his contemporaries seem to have confounded the epic poet with another Statius, a certain rhetorician from Toulouse. The admiration of Statius for Virgil is attested by a passage at the close of the Thebaid (XII, 816 ff.), in which he bids his narrative 'follow, at a distance, the divine Æneid, and ever adore its steps.' The meeting between these ancient poets is described by Dante in a vein of demure humor quickened by love. At the end of the canto is a scene that reminds one of the encounter of Virgil and Sordello (VI, 75): but whereas Sordello embraces his brother Mantuan, it is apparently impossible for Statius to clasp the feet of Virgil.

The real Statius was a pagan, and the story of his conversion, related in the next canto, is, as far as we know, of Dante's invention, although he may have found it suggested in some lost source. The author of the Thebaid represents, in the Commedia, Reason illumined by Faith, and seemingly has the mission of elucidating certain questions that transcend unassisted Reason; he is doubtless to be regarded, then, as an auxiliary to Virgil and a secondary guide to Beatrice, or, in other words, as an intermediary between human Reason and Revelation. At the same time he serves as an example of a soul in transit from earth to Heaven. With Dante's extraordinary love of symmetry, it is rather surprising that he should have furnished only two great conductors for the three journeys. One is almost tempted to surmise that in his original conception Statius played a more important part.

CANTO XXII

ARGUMENT

IN his fourth Eclogue, Virgil rejoices in the conclusion of peace during the consulate of his protector, Caius Asinius Pollio, under the second triumvirate; and, in strangely obscure language, celebrates the birth of a son to Pollio himself. The last of the periods predicted by the Cumæan Sibyl has come, he declares — the return to the golden age, which was to be restored after the ages of silver, bronze, and iron. A vast cycle of years is starting afresh. The virgin Astræa, goddess of Justice, the last of the gods to forsake mankind, is now returning, with the good old times when Saturn, father of Jupiter, ruled the world. A new offspring is sent down from high Heaven. Verses 4-7, the last three of which are translated by Dante in ll. 70-2 of this canto, run as follows:

‘Ultima Cumæi venit jam carminis ætas:
Magnus ab integro sæclorum nascitur ordo;
Jam redit et Virgo, redeunt Saturnia regna;
Jam nova progenies cælo demittitur alto.’

Early Christian writers often discussed the question whether the Sibyls were truly inspired, and the belief was tolerably common that, although these prophetesses were possessed by demons, God occasionally allowed them, in consideration of their virginity, to foretell the truth. From the fourth, well into the sixteenth century, the verses just cited were generally regarded as a genuine announcement of the coming of Christ, unwittingly formulated by Virgil some forty years before the event. According to a pious legend recorded by Comparetti, Virgilio nel medio evo, I, vii, 137 (ed. 1896), three persecutors of Christians, suddenly illumined by these verses, were turned from paganism to the true religion. Dante represents Statius as having been converted in the same way, but as having concealed his new faith and succored his fellow-believers by stealth. Thus another legend, cited by Torraca, 518, pictures a sister of the Emperor Domitian as secretly visiting and comforting imprisoned Christians and listening to the sermons of St. Paul. We may compare also the story of Joseph of Arimathea, who, according to John xix, 38, was 'a disciple of Jesus, but secretly for fear of the Jews.' For the case of Statius, see A. W. Verrall in the Independent Review, Nov., 1903, 246, and in the Albany Review, Aug., 1908, 499.

While the effectiveness of this hidden conversion, as a tribute to Virgil, and its allegorical appropriateness, in a figure symbolic of Reason enlightened by Faith, are obvious enough, we have small clue to the causes that led our author to select Statius for this experience. Nor do we know why Dante chose to make Statius a spendthrift — for as such he reveals himself in the present canto — unless he got the idea from Juvenal's words about the poet, in Satire VII, 87: cf. l. 14 of this canto. But whatever may have occasioned the attribution of prodigality to the author of the Thebaid, it seems likely that Dante blamed himself for this vice and ascribed to Statius some of his own feelings and ideas. Was it not our poet himself who really discovered a mysterious warning in the whimsical distortion of Virgil's apostrophe to the 'auri sacra fames' (ll. 37-42)? We know that Dante, before his exile, incurred heavy debts, and we know that he was a close friend of the happy-go-lucky Forese Donati, who appears in the next canto. When he leaves the circle of spendthrifts, he is 'lighter than at the other outlets' (XXII, 7). The insistence, both in Hell and in Purgatory, upon the doctrine that prodigality is just as much a sin as avarice, — although people do not think so (ll. 46-8), — may be accounted for in part by a desire to illustrate the Aristotelian arrangement of vices in pairs of extremes; but it appears to have behind it also some more cogent and personal reason. It is Statius, the prodigal, who asserts (ll. 40-51) that each sin is coupled with its opposite, although this scheme is carried out nowhere else in Purgatory or Hell. Many little indications, in fact, combine to suggest that Dante was eager to protect his readers from the consequences of an insidious vice from which he had miraculously escaped.

The next vice on the stairway of purification is gluttony, and the proper discipline is rigid abstinence, which, embittered by continual exposure to temptation, wastes the penitent to skin and bone. As, in the Visio Sancti Pauli, the souls of those who neglected fasts are tantalized by fruits, so Dante's gluttons have to pass, in their circuit, two fruit-trees moistened by waterfalls. These trees, with the large branches at the top and the small ones at the bottom, are so shaped that no one can climb up — a symbol of prohibition. From their foliage issue voices proclaiming examples of temperance and intemperance.

Già era l' Angel retro a noi rimasto —
 L' Angel che n' avea volti al sesto giro,
 Avendomi dal viso un colpo raso —
 E quei ch' hanno a giustizia lor disiro
 Detto n' avea Beati, e le sue voci 5
 Con sitiunt, senz' altro, ciò fornìro.
 Ed io, più lieve che per l' altre foci,
 M' andava sì che senza alcun labore
 Seguiva in su gli spiriti veloci,
 Quando Virgilio cominciò: 'Amore, 10
 Acceso di virtù, sempre altro accese,
 Pur che la fiamma sua paresse fuore.
 Onde, dall' ora che tra noi discese
 Nel limbo dello inferno Juvenale,
 Che la tua affezion mi fe' palese, 15
 Mia benvoglienza inverso te fu quale
 Più strinse mai di non vista persona,
 Sì ch' or mi parran corte queste scale.
 Ma dimmi, e come amico mi perdona
 Se troppa sicurtà m' allarga il freno, 20
 E come amico omai meco ragiona:

4. Mat. v, 6: 'Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness' — in the Vulgate, 'Beati qui esuriunt et sitiunt justitiam.' Dante here takes 'justice' in the special sense of moderation, the golden mean between avarice and prodigality, the virtue opposed to both these sins.

5. Voci, 'words.'

6. The verse as recited by the angel is: 'Beati qui sitiunt justitiam,' the esuriunt ('hunger') being left out. In the circle of gluttony the same verse is used, in a different sense, the esuriunt being retained and the sitiunt ('thirst') omitted. To obtain the requisite number of appropriate beatitudes, Dante introduced this one twice, and in both cases somewhat distorted its form and meaning.

10, 11. Virgil here says of spiritual love what Francesca said of carnal passion in Inf. V, 103.

14. The Latin poet Juvenal was a contemporary of Statius, whom he praised in his Satires, VII, 81-7. Dante mentions him twice in Conv. and once in Mon.

16, 17. Quale più strinse mai, 'the greatest that ever bound (one).'

20. Sicurtà, 'confidence.'

21. Ragiona, 'speak.'

Come potè trovar dentro al tuo seno
 Loco avarizia, tra cotanto senno
 Di quanto, per tua cura, fosti pieno?
 Queste parole Stazio mover fenno 25
 Un poco a riso pria; poscia rispose:
 'Ogni tuo dir d' amor m' è caro cenno.
 Veramente più volte appaion cose
 Che danno a dubitar falsa matera,
 Per le vere ragion che sono ascose. 30
 La tua domanda tuo creder m' avvera
 Esser ch' io fossi avaro in l' altra vita,
 Forse per quella cerchia dov' io era.
 Or sappi ch' avarizia fu partita
 Troppo da me, e questa dismisura 35
 Migliaia di lunari hanno punita.
 E se non fosse ch' io drizzai mia cura,
 Quand' io intesi là dove tu esclame,

 Dell' oro, l' appetito dei mortali?"

24. Cura, 'zeal.'

28. Veramente, 'to be sure.'

29. Matera = materia (cf. XVIII, 37; also Lavina in XVII, 37), 'ground.'

30. 'Because the real cause is hidden.'

31. Avvera, 'assures.'

33. Per, 'because of.'

36. 'Thousands of months': over 500 years (XXI, 68), or more than 6000 months.

37. Drizzai, 'set right.'

38. Intesi, 'understood,' penetrated the hidden meaning. Cf. Inf. IV, 51; Inf. XXIV, 74; Par. XIV, 126; and especially Purg. XIX, 137, where we find exactly the same use.

40, 41. En., III, 56-7:

'Quid non mortalia pectora cogis,
Auri sacra fames?'

These words evidently mean: 'To what dost thou not drive mortal hearts, accursed hunger for gold?' But Dante saw in them also, taking them apart from their context, the concealed moral significance which he here puts into the mouth of Statius: 'Why, O blessed (i. e., temperate) hunger for gold, dost thou

Voltando sentirei le giostre grame.
 Allor m' accorsi che troppo aprir l' ali
 Potean le mani a spendere, e pente'mi
 Così di quel come degli altri mali. 45
 Quanti risurgeran coi crini scemi

 Toglie il penter vivendo e negli estremi!
 E sappi che la colpa che rimbecca
 Per dritta opposizione alcun peccato 50
 Con esso insieme qui suo verde secca.
 Però, s' io son tra quella gente stato
 Che piange l' avarizia, per purgarmi,
 Per lo contrario suo m' è incontrato.'
 'Or quando tu cantasti le crude armi 55
 Della doppia tristizia di Jocasta,'
 Disse il Cantor de' bucolici carmi,
 'Per quello che Cliò teco lì tasta, not govern mortal appetite,' keeping it equally distant from avarice and prodigality? The discovery of this inner meaning in his master's verses was the beginning of Statius's reformation. — For the use of reggi, cf. Boethius, Cons., II, Met. viii, 28-30 (cited in Mon., I, ix, end):

'O felix hominum genus
 Si vestros animos amor,
 Quo cælum regitur, regat!'

42. 'Rolling (a heavy weight), I should (now) be engaged in the dismal tilts' of the misers and the prodigals in Hell: cf. Inf. VII, 25-30.

46. The 'cropped hair' is a symbol of prodigality: Inf. VII, 56-7.

47. Che, 'which,' subject of toglie in l. 48. Many are lost because they do not understand that prodigality is a sin, as well as avarice. Their ignorance, which 'robs them of repentance,' is not a sufficient excuse, because it is not insuperable or 'invincible' ignorance: they had a chance to learn better. Cf. St. Thomas, Summa Theologiæ, Prima Secundæ, Qu. lxxvi, Art. 2.

48. Negli estremi is a translation of the Latin in extremis.

49. Rimbecca, 'rebuts.'

56. By the 'twofold affliction of Jocasta' is meant her two sons, Eteocles and Polynices, whose strife and death are related in the 11th book of the Thebaid. Cf. Inf. XXVI, 52-4.

57. This mention of the Bucolics, or Ecloques, of Virgil prepares the reader for the quotation from the 4th Eclogue in ll. 70-2.

58. 'Judging from that (i. e., the music) which Clio plays with thee there': judging from the narrative which the pagan muse inspired. Clio, the muse of

85. 'And as long as I remained yonder.' For the passive impersonal construction, cf. XVI, 118-9.

86. Sovvenni, 'helped.'

88, 89. Before I told in verse the story of the campaign of the Greeks against Thebes. See Theb., VII, 424-25.

90. Chiuso, 'secret.' — Fu'mi = mi fui = fui.

93. Statius circled around the fourth circle (of sloth) 'over four centuries' before his penance of 500 years and more in the circle of prodigality. Cf. XXI, 67-8.

96. Soperchio, 'something left.'

98. Varo is probably for Vario (cf. matera in l. 29): the Latin dramatist Lucius Varius. Most texts have Varro, but this name would perhaps be inappropriate in connection with those of the dramatic poets, Terence, Cæcilius, Plautus. Horace mentions Cæcilius, Plautus, and Terence together, in the same order, in Epistula, II, i, 58-60.

100. Persius, the Latin satirist.

101. Homer: cf. Inf. IV, 88.

105. 'Our nurses' are the muses: cf. l. 102.

106, 107. The Greek lyric poet, Simonides, is mentioned with the Greek tragic poets, Euripides, Antiphon, and Agathon.

109. By 'thy people' Virgil means the characters in Statius's poems. The first six enumerated are found in the Thebaid, the last two in the Achilleid.

110, 111. Antigone and Ismène were daughters of (Edipus and Jocasta (l. 56); after fearful misfortunes, both were condemned to death by Creon. Deïphile and Argia were daughters of Adrastus, king of Argos; the first was the wife of Tydeus (Inf. XXXII, 130), the second of Polynices (see note to l. 56); Argia once possessed the 'ill-fated ornament' of XII, 51.

112. It was Hypsipyle who pointed out the fountain of Langia to Adrastus and the other Greek kings, when their troops were dying of thirst (Thebaid, IV, 716 ff.): cf. Inf. XVIII, 92; Purg. XXVI, 95.

113. Tiresias's daughter was Manto, whom Dante consigned (Inf. XX, 55), with the other soothsayers, to the 4th bolgia of the 8th circle of Hell; for a discussion of this curious inconsistency. see the Argument to Canto XX of the Inferno. — Thetis, the sea-goddess, was the wife of Peleus and the mother of Achilles: cf. IX, 37.

114. Deïdamia and 'her sisters' were daughters of Lycomedes, king of Scyros, with whom Thetis hid Achilles: IX, 34-9. Deïdamia was loved by Achilles: Inf. XXVI, 62.

118. The 'handmaids of the day' are the hours of daylight: cf. XII, 81.

119. Temo = timone, 'chariot-pole.' The hours are here represented as drawing in turn the car of day.

120. The 'blazing horn' is the bright tip of the pole, which now points 'only upward,' as it is approaching the meridian.

Quando il mio Duca: 'Io credo ch' allo estremo

 Girando il monte come far solemo.'
 Così l' usanza fu lì nostra insegna,
 E prendemmo la via con men sospetto 125
 Per l' assentir di quell' anima degna.
 Elli givan dinanzi, ed io soletto
 Diretro, ed ascoltava i lor sermoni
 Ch' a poetar mi davano intelletto.
 Ma tosto ruppe le dolci ragioni 130
 Un arbor che trovammo in mezza strada,
 Con pomi ad odorar soavi e buoni.
 E come abete in alto si digrada
 Di ramo in ramo, così quello in giuso, —
 Cred' io perchè persona su non vada. 135
 Dal lato onde il cammin nostro era chiuso,
 Cadea dell' alta roccia un liquor chiaro,
 E si spandeva per le foglie suso.
 Li due poeti all' arbor s' appressaro;
 Ed una voce per entro le fronde 140

133. Si digrada, 'tapers.'

136. On the inner side, where the path was enclosed by the cliff.

141. Caro, 'dearth.'

143. The story of Mary at the wedding feast in Cana (John ii, 1-3), which she tried to make 'honorable and perfect,' was used in XIII, 29, as an example of loving solicitude; here it appears among the examples of temperance.

144. 'Than of her own mouth (i. e., of gratifying her own appetite), which now answers (pleads) for you.'

154. Aperto, 'revealed.' — Mat. xi, 11: 'Among them that are born of women there hath not risen a greater than John the Baptist.' Cf. Luke i, 15.

CANTO XXIII

JUST as, in Hell, Dante's old master, Brunetto Latini, scorched almost beyond recognition, suddenly greets his former disciple with the exclamation 'Qual maraviglia!' (Inf. XV, 24), so among the disfigured gluttons in Purgatory one of the souls, after peering at the poet 'from the depths of his skull,' reveals himself by the cry 'Qual grazia m' è questa!' The same gentle, caressing rhythm in which the traveller accosted Francesca, Ciaccio, and Belacqua (Inf. V, 116; VI, 58; Purg. IV, 123) recurs here in the line, 'Ed io a lui: "Forese, da quel dì" . . . ' For this is the shade of Bicci Novello, called also Forese, of the Donati family, brother of that famous Corso Donati who led the Blacks, and a kinsman of the Gemma Donati who became Dante's wife. He died in 1296. From the present passage we learn that he and our poet, at one time (we cannot tell exactly when), were close friends, and that they pursued together a course which it is now painful to recall, a life symbolized by the dark wood from which Virgil, or Reason, rescued the sinner at the beginning of the Inferno. The nature and the degree of their worldliness we have no means of knowing; but we have evidence of their intimacy, and of a common coarseness of taste, in a series of six sonnets exchanged, either in anger or in blackguard jest, by the two companions. In these, Dante reproaches Forese with desertion of his wife, gluttony, thievishness, and illegitimate birth; Forese retaliates with accusations of beggary and cowardice, and a couple of incomprehensible references to some scandal connected with Dante's father. Although Bicci Novello was a rhymester, he was probably no scholar; at any rate, in the present canto the poet does not think it worth while to tell him Statius's name, and when Virgil is introduced to him he seems to show no interest. But for the really bad name he gave Forese in the vituperative sonnets, Dante now makes all possible amends. He puts into his mouth a sweet phrase of loving penitence and a stern reprobation of Florentine immodesty. Still more notable is the rehabilitation of Forese's wife, Nella, whom Dante had cruelly ridiculed in the first sonnet, jeering at her perpetual colds and her husband's neglect.

Forese now describes her as his 'dear widow,' whom he 'loved so much,' and to whose tears and prayers he owes his speedy admission to the heavenward path.

Mentre che gli occhi per la fronda verde
 Ficcava io così come far suole
 Chi retro agli uccellin sua vita perde,
 Lo più che padre mi dicea: 'Figliuole,
 Vienne oramai, chè il tempo che c'è imposto 5
 Più utilmente compartir si vuole.'
 Io volsi il viso, e il passo non men tosto
 Appresso ai savi, che parlavan sì
 Che l'andar mi facean di nullo costo.
 Ed ecco piangere e cantar s' udìe: 10
 'Labia mea Domine,' per modo
 Tal che diletto e doglia parturìe.
 'O dolce Padre, che è quel ch' i' odo?'
 Comincia' io. Ed egli: 'Ombre che vanno
 Forse di lor dover solvendo il nodo.' 15
 Sì come i peregrin pensosi fanno,
 Giugnendo per cammin gente non nota,
 Che si volgono ad essa e non ristanno,
 Così dietro a noi, più tosto mota,

3. Perde, 'wastes.' Bird-hunting was the favorite aristocratic sport in the Middle Ages, and is still (in different forms) ardently pursued in Italy. Dante draws many similes from it.

4. Figliuole is the Latin vocative, filiole, written as Dante probably pronounced it: 'my son.'

8. Sic = sì: cf. IV, 47.

11. Ps. li, 15 (Vulg. l, 17): 'O Lord, open thou my lips; and my mouth shall shew forth thy praise.' The mouth, which was put to a bad use on earth, now makes amends: cf. XXII, 144. This verse is from the beautiful psalm of repentance and faith called the 'Miserere,' which was sung by the waiting spirits in V, 24.

15. Dover, 'debt.'

16. Cf. V. N., Sonnet XXIV, 55: 'Deh peregrini, che pensosi andate.'

19. Mota = mossa, 'moving.'

Venendo e trapassando, ci ammirava 20
 D' anime turba tacita e devota.
 Negli occhi era ciascuna oscura e cava,
 Pallida nella faccia, e tanto scema
 Che dall' ossa la pelle s' informava.
 Non credo che così a buccia estrema 25
 Eresitone fosse fatto secco
 Per digiunar, quando più n' ebbe tema.
 Io dicea fra me stesso pensando: 'Ecco
 La gente che perdè Jerusalemme,
 Quando Maria nel figlio diè di becco!' 30
 Parean l' occhiaie anella senza gemme.
 Chi nel viso degli uomini legge omo,
 Ben avria quivi conosciuto l' emme.
 Chi crederebbe che l' odor d' un pomo
 Sì governasse, generando brama, 35
 E quel d' un' acqua — non sapendo como?

23. Scema, 'wasted.' Cf. Job xix, 20.

25. A buccia estrema, 'to the very rind.' Cf. Met., VIII, 801-4, the description of Erysichthon:

'Hirtus erat crinis, cava lumina, pallor in ore,
 Labra incana situ, scabrae rubigine fauces,
Dura cutis, per quam spectari viscera possent;
 Ossa sub incurvis exstabant arida lumbis.'

26. Fatto secco, 'dried up.' Erysichthon was punished for sacrilege, by Ceres, with consuming hunger, so that, having devoured all he possessed, he finally began to eat himself: Met., VIII, 738-878.

27. Tema, 'fear': when he found himself obliged to feed on his own body: Met., VIII, 877-8.

30. The Jews besieged in Jerusalem were horribly reduced by famine, until they were at last compelled to open the gates to the Emperor Titus. A lady named Mary killed, cooked, and 'stuck her beak into' her own child: Flavius Josephus, De Bello Judaico, VI, iii, 8.

32. Capital M, in the handwriting of Dante's time, resembled two O's side by side, the second a little open at the bottom. Inasmuch as this figure is not unlike a nose between two eye-sockets, it was sometimes said that man (homo) had his name (omo, i. e., uomo) written in his face, the two sockets furnishing the initial and the final O, and the whole contour of the sockets and nose furnishing the medial M. In a skull the likeness is much more striking.

36. Quel: i. e., odor. — Como = come.

Già era in ammirar che sì gli affama,
 Per la cagione ancor non manifesta
 Di lor magrezza e di lor trista squama;
 Ed ecco del profondo della testa 40
 Volse a me gli occhi un' ombra, e guardò fiso;
 Poi gridò forte: 'Qual grazia m' è questa?'
 Mai non l' avrei riconosciuto al viso;
 Ma nella voce sua mi fu palese
 Ciò che l' aspetto in sè avea conquiso. 45
 Questa favilla tutta mi raccese
 Mia conoscenza alla cambiata labbia,
 E ravvisai la faccia di Forese.
 'Deh non contendere all' asciutta scabbia,
 Che mi scolora,' pregava, 'la pelle, 50
 Nè a difetto di carne ch' io abbia!
 Ma dimmi il ver di te, e chi son quelle
 Due anime che là ti fanno scorta!
 Non rimaner che tu non mi favelle!'
 'La faccia tua, ch' io lagrimai già morta, 55
 Mi dà di pianger mo non minor doglia,'
 Rispos' io lui, 'veggendola sì torta.
 Però mi di', per Dio, che sì vi sfoglia!
 Non mi far dir mentr' io mi maraviglio,
 Chè mal può dir chi è pien d' altra voglia.' 60
 Ed egli a me: 'Dell' eterno consiglio

 Tutta esta gente che piangendo canta,
 Per seguitar la gola oltra misura, 65

 Di bere e di mangiar n' accende cura
 L' odor ch' esce del pomo e dello sprazzo
 Che si distende su per la verdura;
 E non pure una volta, questo spazzo 70
 Girando, si rinfresca nostra pena.
 Io dico "pena," e dovrei dir "sollazzo";
 Chè quella voglia all' arbore ci mena
 Che menò Cristo lieto a dire "Eli,"

 Ed io a lui: 'Forese, da quel dì

74. Mat. xxvii, 46: 'And about the ninth hour Jesus cried with a loud voice, saying, Eli, Eli, lama sabachthani, that is to say, My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?' — That same love of sacrifice which led Christ gladly to the crucifixion leads us to our penance. — Ll. 74, 76, 78 are versi tronchi: cf. Inf. IV, 56.

75. Vena, 'vein,' i. e., blood.

78. 'Five' is here a round number. In fact, as Forese died on July 28, 1296, the time is less than four years. — Dante wonders why Forese is not waiting outside of Purgatory, since he postponed repentance until the end of life. Cf. IV, 130-5.

CANTO XXIV

ARGUMENT

WHEN Dante wrote the first canzone of the Vita Nuova, 'Ye ladies who understand what love is,' he felt that he was inaugurating a new era in poetry. The prose introduction to the verses testifies to the solemnity of the event. Following in part the indications of his master, Guido Guinizelli of Bologna (XXVI, 91-102), and strongly influenced in style by Virgil (Inf. I, 85-7), the youthful poet was creating — or renewing — a type of composition based directly upon truth, inspired by, and faithfully recording, the author's own emotions and the fruits of his eager study (V. N., XLIII, 1-7). In Dante's opinion, his Italian forerunners and probably (in spite of frequent protestations of sincerity) their Provençal forbears had regarded poetry as a rhetorical, metrical, and musical exercise, a working out of old themes in new keys, with fresh variations of technique; while the 'sweet new style' of the young Florentine made rhetoric, metre, and music subservient to the expression of real thought and feeling. For him, amore meant not only love, but also the enthusiastic pursuit of knowledge (Conv., II, xvi, 79-83). The phrase 'dolce stil nuovo' is nowadays employed rather loosely to designate all the work of a little group comprising Guido Cavalcanti, Lapo Gianni, Dante Alighieri, and Cino da Pistoia, who are mentioned together in De Vulgari Eloquentia, I, xiii, 33-40, as experts in the vulgar tongue; but as our author uses it in Canto XXIV, it evidently refers only to the maturer lyric product of Dante himself and those who followed him, — perhaps excluding Cavalcanti, who did not share in the cult of Virgil (Inf. X, 62-3). Italy had already seen in the 13th century more than one glorious artificer of modern speech: Giacomo da Lentini, — or, as he signed himself, 'the Notary,' — a secretary at the court of Frederick II, a prolific and versatile composer, perhaps the inventor of the sonnet, leader of the Sicilian school (Vulg. El., I, xii, 5-35), to which Pier delle Vigne (Inf. XIII) belonged; Guittone d'Arezzo (Vulg. El., I, xiii, 7-8; Purg. xxvi, 124), an ingenious but uninspired and laborious love-poet and a rugged satirist, the chief of the early Tuscan versifiers; and his follower, Bonagiunta Orbicciani of Lucca (Vulg. El.,

I, xiii, 8-9), a not altogether servile imitator of Provençal and Italian models. But they and their fellows substituted convention for introspection, and this fundamental error, from which all their faults of conception and diction derived, was the 'knot' that bound them, keeping them always 'on the hither side' of the heights scaled by unfettered genius. Of the comparative importance of substance and form Dante speaks in the Convivio, II, xii, 21-7: 'La bontà e la bellezza di ciascuno sermone sono intra loro partite e diverse; chè la bontà è nella sentenza, e la bellezza nell' ornamento delle parole: l' una e l' altra è con diletto; avvegnachè la bontade sia massimamente dilettoosa.'

The last of the above mentioned predecessors of the new style, Bonagiunta Orbicciani, is presented to Dante by Forese. In this region, where aspects are so altered by fasting, there is no discourtesy in pointing at people and calling them by their names. In fact, all the shades designated by Forese are glad to serve as warning examples to the new-comer, and not one of them scowls, or shows 'a dark mien,' at having his former weakness disclosed. Among them, 'plying their teeth on empty air,' are seen: Martin IV of Tours, Pope from 1281 to 1285, the supporter of Charles of Anjou (VII, 113) in Sicily and the stubborn opponent of Guido da Montefeltro at Forlì (Inf. XXVII, 43-4), who, for all his honesty and valor, was overfond of white wine and of the fat eels of Lake Bolsena, in the province of Rome; Ubaldino dalla Pila, brother of Cardinal Ottaviano (Inf. X, 120) and father of Archbishop Ruggieri (Inf. XXXIII, 14), a Ghibelline prominent among those who triumphed at Montaperti in 1260, a jovial personage in one of Sacchetti's stories (Novelle, CCV); Bonifazio de' Fieschi, the 'shepherd of many people,' archbishop of Ravenna from 1274 to 1294, who, in his will, devoted his fortune to the recovery of the Holy Land; Master Marchese (or Marchesino) degli Orgogliosi of Forlì, mayor of Faenza in 1296.

There was a rhymester called Bonagiunta in Florence, where the name was very common; but the one our poet meets among the gluttons is from Lucca, a judge and notary, whom we find recorded in documents from 1250 to 1296. Although his city has been condemned as a nest of bribery (Inf. XXI, 37-42), he foresees that a lady, a certain Gentucca, who does not yet, in 1300, wear the married woman's veil (cf. VIII, 74), shall one day make Lucca a pleasant sojourn for Dante. In this dim prophecy we doubtless have one more of those discreetly gracious compliments offered in grateful return for hospitality to the exile in his wanderings. Who his kind hostess was, we do not know. The name

Gentucca occurs several times in Luccese records. A Gentucca Morla, married to Coscio di Fondora, is mentioned in a will of 1317, at which time she was apparently a young wife. Dante's visit to Lucca — of which this passage is our only evidence — may well have been paid in 1315.

A very different prophecy — though similarly cloaked in vagueness — is made by Forese concerning his brother, Corso Donati, the Catiline of Florence. This great leader of the Blacks, noble, handsome, proud, ambitious, daring, crafty, and cruel, at last fell out with the other chiefs of his party, who accused him of treason and had him condemned and arrested. As he was being led into the city on a horse or a mule, on October 6, 1308, he threw himself upon the ground, where a Catalan guardsman despatched him with a lance thrust in the throat. According to one story, his foot caught in the stirrup, and he was dragged some distance before the Catalan overtook him. In Dante's version, which is not found elsewhere, Corso is kicked to death by the animal that is hauling him. 'Him who is most to blame for Florence's downfall,' says Forese, 'I see dragged, at the tail of a beast, toward that valley where there is no remission of sin' — in other words, dragged to death, which, for Corso, means Hell; 'the creature runs faster at each step, ever increasing, until it strikes him and leaves his body ignominiously destroyed.' This end is the more disgraceful in that dragging at a horse's tail was a punishment inflicted upon particularly vile criminals.

In the circle of avarice and prodigality (XXII, 4-6) this beatitude was used, with the omission of the esuriunt, in a changed sense. Here it is the sitiunt that disappears, and the iustitiam is ingeniously rendered by 'quanto è giusto,' which means both 'after all that is righteous' and 'as much as is right.'

CANTO XXV

ARGUMENT

IN response to Dante's question how, when there is nothing in common between souls and matter, a bodiless spirit can grow thin from hunger, Virgil cites, as examples of things equally wonderful, a familiar incident from Ovid and a common physical phenomenon. The life of Meleager (Met. VIII, 273 ff.) was made by the fates to depend on that of a firebrand, which his mother plucked from the flames; there was no visible connection between the youth and the brand, and yet when the stick, restored after many years to the fire, burned itself out, Meleager simultaneously wasted away. Furthermore, we can see no bond between a mirrored image and the body before the glass, and nevertheless the reflection — a thing as unsubstantial as a shade — follows every movement of the solid form. Having thus prepared his disciple's mind, Virgil leaves the real explanation to Statius; and he accepts the task, but not without an apology so phrased as to suggest that the matter is not absolutely beyond the reach of pure Reason.

The main problem to be solved is the relation of soul to body, and to grasp it one must understand the physical and spiritual processes which lead up to the birth of both flesh and ghost. The limbs and organs of man are fed by his blood, which contains within it, potentially, all the parts of his frame. Not all of the blood, however, is used in this way: some of it remains, intact and unsullied, in the heart, retaining its complete formative power. This 'perfect blood,' once more 'digested,' or transformed, becomes the parent seed. In the act of generation it unites with the blood of the female. The active male blood then operates upon the passive female blood, which it first condenses into an embryo and then quickens into life. This life, or anima, is at first merely that of a plant — the 'vegetative soul.' Next, — by means of the formative power transmitted, through the seed, from the begetter's heart, — the senses are developed, the embryo changes little by little from a plantlike creature to an animal, and its life is that of the 'sensitive soul.' Both of these 'souls' are perishable.

The real incorruptible spirit, the 'intellective soul,' is breathed into each child by God at the moment of its birth, and immediately takes unto itself the vegetative and sensitive functions, absorbing the powers of life and sense which had been previously developed by physical activity.

Every man has, then, but one soul, specially created for him and endowed with life, sense, and intellect. 'And the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; and man became a living soul' (Gen. ii, 7). This is the orthodox view, supported by Lactantius, St. Augustine, and their followers, among whom are St. Thomas, Hugh of St. Victor, and Peter Lombard. At the outset it had to contend with other doctrines. Origen had adopted the Platonic theory that all souls were created together at the beginning of the world; this opinion the Church condemned as heretical. Tertullian had maintained that one soul is begotten by another at the moment when the body is generated. Dante follows, in the main, St. Thomas (apparently preferring Aristotle, however, when it comes to the origin of the 'sensitive soul'), but he doubtless gathered from other Christian sources as well—for instance, from Hugh of St. Victor, De Anima, II, xii (Migne XL, p. 788). In the Convivio, IV, xxi, 32-48, he treats, very summarily, the same subject.

In this chapter of the Convivio Dante says that as soon as the living spirit is produced, it receives from the Mover of Heaven the 'potential intellect'—'lo Intelletto possibile, il quale potenzialmente in sè adduce tutte le forme universali, secondochè sono nel suo Produttore, e tanto meno, quanto più è dilungato dalla Prima Intelligenza' (ll. 44-8). Further on (ll. 68-70) he states that in proportion to the purity of the soul, 'discende in essa la Virtù intellettuale possibile.' Guido Cavalcanti, in his poem Donna mi prega, 21-3, declares that love

'Ven da veduta forma che s' intende,
Che prende nel possibile intelletto,
Come in subiecto, loco e dimoranza.'

It was Aristotle, in De Anima, III, who distinguished the 'potential' or passive, internal, perishable intelligence, which receives impressions or images, from the active, external, imperishable intellect, a sort of oversoul, which interprets images and forms ideas. His teaching was carried further by his great commentator, the Spanish Moor, Averrhoës (cf. Inf. IV, 144). This philosopher, who had an immense vogue in the 13th and 14th centuries, combined the two intellectual principles, active and passive, into one universal mind, situated outside the individual soul and only temporarily connected with it; to the latter he allowed only the functions of sense and instinct, thus denying the immortality of the individual intelligence. As far as we can judge, Dante accepts the combination of the passive and active principles, but rejects for man the theory of the external, impersonal mind. He has nothing to say of the 'active intellect,' and his possibile intelletto appears to comprise both the capacity to receive impressions and, stimulated by grace, the ability to understand and reason. Now, in our canto, ll. 61-6, he says that the problem of the transformation of the 'vegetative,' 'sensitive' embryo into a child is 'a point which once led astray a wiser man than thou, so that in his philosophy he parted the potential intellect from the soul, because he saw no organ appropriate to that intellect.' It seems likely, on the whole, that the 'wiser man' is Aristotle, interpreted more or less through the medium of Averrhoës. For the actual separation of the 'potential intellect' from the soul, the Moor is responsible; on the other hand, it is Aristotle who states (De Anima, III, iv, 4) that the passive intelligence has no organ of its own.

To complete the answer to Dante's question, which has led to wide and important digressions, Statius describes the acquisition, by the soul, of an aërial body (cf. the Argument to Canto II). In this invention Dante seems to run counter to St. Thomas, who denies (Summa contra Gentiles, II, xc; Summa Theologiæ, Prima, Qu. lxxvi, Art. 5) that the human soul can unite formally with the elements, although he affirms (Summa Theologiæ, Prima, Qu. li, Art. 2) that angels and devils can shape for themselves bodies of condensed air.

For the theory of generation, see St. Thomas, Summa Theologiæ, Prima, Qu. cxviii, Art. 2, and Qu. cxix, Art. 2; see also Tertia, xxxi, 5, xxxii, 4, xxxiii, 1. — For the possibile intelletto: Moore, I, 115; Tor., 549; K. 107. Si figura, 'is shaped.'

108. Di che tu ammiri, 'of that at which thou wond'rest': ll. 20-1.

109. Venuto . . . s' era per noi, 'we had come': cf. XXII, 85; Inf. I, 126. — Tortura, 'twist,' turn: circle of Purgatory.

Quivi la ripa fiamma in fuor balestra,
 E la cornice spira fiato in suso
 Che la riflette e via da lei sequestra;
 Onde ir ne convenìa dal lato schiuso 115
 Ad uno ad uno, ed io temeva il foco
 Quinci, e quindi temea cadere in giuso.
 Lo Duca mio dicea: 'Per questo loco
 Si vuol tenere agli occhi stretto il freno,
 Però ch' errar potrebbesi per poco.' 120
 'Summæ Deus clementiæ' nel seno
 Al grande ardore allora udii cantando,
 Che di volger mi fe' caler non meno;
 E vidi spirti per la fiamma andando.
 Per ch' io guardava a loro ed a' miei passi, 125
 Compartendo la vista a quando a quando.
 Appresso il fine ch' a quell' inno fassi,
 Gridavano alto: 'Virum non cognoscol'
 Indi ricominciavan l' inno bassi.
 Finitolo, anco gridavano: 'Al bosco 130
 Si tenne Diana, ed Elice caccionne,
 Che di Venere avea sentito il toscò.'

114. The upright bank on the left shoots forth, all the way around, a continuous horizontal flame, which extends across the terrace; but a wind blows up vertically along the mountain-side, and, deflecting upward the outer edge of the ring of flame, 'secures a path from it' on the outside rim of the shelf. Fire is the symbol of purification from lust.

119. Stretto il freno, 'a tight rein.'

121. Summæ Deus clementiæ, 'God of clemency supreme,' is the beginning, in old breviaries, of the hymn sung on Saturday at matins, praying for purification by fire and cleanness of heart and body. It is attributed to St. Ambrose. Cf. A. Bonaventura, Dante e la musica, 1904, 91.

123. Caler, 'care.'

128. 'I know not a man,' is the reply of Mary to the angel at the Annunciation: Luke i, 34. After each singing of the hymn the souls call aloud an example of chastity. The examples of lust are proclaimed (as we shall see in the next canto) by two troops of shades as they pass.

131. The chaste goddess Diana banished her nymph Helice, who had been seduced by Jupiter: Mt., II, 453-65. Helice (or Callisto) and her child form the constellations of the Great and Little Bear.

Indi al cantar tornavano; indi donne
 Gridavano e mariti che fur casti,
 Come virtute e matrimonio imponne. 135
 E questo modo credo che lor basti
 Per tutto il tempo che il foco gli abbrucia;
 Con tal cura convien, con cotai pasti
 Che la piaga dassezzo si ricucia.

135. Imponne, 'enjoin upon us.'

136. Basti, 'lasts': cf. Inf. XXIX, 89.

138. Cura, 'treatment.' — Pasti, 'diet.'

139. Dassezzo, 'finally': cf. Inf. VII, 130. — Si ricucia, 'shall be knit,' healed.

CANTO XXVI

ARGUMENT

AROUND the ledge of carnal vice there go circling through the fire, in opposite directions, two ghostly companies, composed of the abnormally and the normally lecherous. As they meet, they exchange a kiss of pure brotherly affection, such as the early Christians gave one another in their services. Then, on parting, they all rebuke themselves, the members of the first troop shouting 'Sodom and Gomorrah!' (Gen. xix, 1-28), those of the second recalling the bestial sin of Pasiphaë. This woman, the wife of King Minos of Crete (Inf. V, 4), being cursed by Venus with a passion for a bull, satisfied her lust by concealing herself in a wooden cow: Æn., VI, 24-6; Met., VIII, 132-7. The fruit of their union was the Minotaur (Inf. XII, 11-3). In the Middle Ages her story was interpreted allegorically.

Among those whose offence was not contrary to nature is Guido Guinizelli of Bologna, the most important Italian writer before Dante. He was mayor of Castelfranco in 1270 and died in 1276. Like Arnaut Daniel, he is doubtless consigned to this circle on the general ground that he was a sincere poet of love. At first he looked upon Guittone d' Arezzo (XXIV, 56) as his literary master, and followed the current artificial fashion; but later he took a new direction, expressing real feeling and earnest thought in verse whose ease, clearness, and harmony made him an excellent model for the next generation. In his famous poem, Al cor gentil ripara sempre amore (Vulg. El., II, v, 41-2; I, ix, 28-30), is rhymed for the first time the new symbolic conception of love, which was adopted by Dante and his group. Guido was thus doubly a predecessor of the dolce stil nuovo (XXIV, 57); and Dante's affectionate cry of admiration and gratitude, in lines 94-8, testifies to the magnitude of his debt. In the tenth sonnet of the Vita Nuova, l. 14, Dante refers to him as 'il Saggio'; in the Convivio, IV, xx, 67 he is 'quel nobile Guido Guinizelli'; and in De Vulgari Eloquentia he is cited four times, once (I, xv, 41) as 'maximus.'

It must have been this same sentiment of gratitude, always dominant in Dante's heart, that led him to award the palm in modern Gallic literature to the 12th century troubadour, Arnaut Daniel, who to our taste seems, to be sure, the most minutely ingenious and metrically resourceful, but at the same time one of the most laborious and tiresome of the Provençal versifiers. His works are a mosaic of odd conceits and rare and difficult forms. The sestina, imitated by Alighieri and Petrarch, is one of his inventions. Three of his compositions are cited in De Vulgari Eloquentia, where he is mentioned four times. Dante, — as he tells us in the Vita Nuova, III, 69-71, — learned by himself 'the art of uttering words in rhyme,' and he can have done so only by studying attentively the works of his predecessors, preëminent among whom was surely Arnaut Daniel. To Arnaut, then, more than to any one else, he owed (or thought he owed) his command of metrical form; as far as the sestina is concerned, he expressly acknowledges his indebtedness in De Vulgari Eloquentia, II, x, 24-8. That is why, in our canto, Guido rates the clever troubadour above himself, calling him 'a better smith of the mother tongue.' 'Verse of love and prose of romance . . . ' continues Guido, 'he surpassed them all.' Provençal was the first language of amatory poetry (Vulg. El., I, x, 20-5), French the recognized idiom of narrative and didactic literature and of any kind of prose (Vulg. El., I, x, 12-20); 'romance' signified originally a literary composition in the vulgar tongue. Arnaut, as far as we are aware, never wrote in French nor in prose; Guido means simply that he was superior to all other authors of Gaul, whether they used verse or prose, Provençal or French. It is in quite a different sense that Guittone d'Arezzo says, in a lament on the death of another Aretine poet (Chomune perta fa comun dolore, 20-1):

'Francesca lingua e poensal labore
Più de l'artina [i. e., aretina] è bene in te.'

'Let fools talk on,' — adds Guido, — 'who think that the Limousin poet excels.' Many songsters (among them Arnaut himself) were of Limousin origin, but the particular one here indicated is evidently Giraut de Bornelh, a younger contemporary of Arnaut; according to his Provençal biographer, he was called 'the master of the troubadours,' and others bear witness to his high repute. His poetry, much of which has survived, justifies in some measure his great fame. He was the principal champion of the clear style, as Arnaut was perhaps the best representative of the purposely obscure. Dante cites him once in the Convivio and four times in De Vulgari Eloquentia. In the latter work, II, ii, 77-98, he speaks of Bertran de Born as a poet of arms, Arnaut and Cino da Pistoia as poets of love, and Giraut and himself as poets of righteousness. When he wrote the Purgatorio, he evidently regarded Giraut as artistically inferior to Arnaut — perhaps too popular and commonplace to merit the highest rank, which ‘fools’ had accorded him.

The same undeserved glory had been enjoyed by Guittone d’Arezzo (XXIV, 56), on whom alone ‘many people of old’ bestowed praise, — following fashion ‘from cry to cry,’ — until at last ‘the truth has got the better of him, as concerns more men than one’ — that is, the superiority of several other writers (Guinizelli, Cavalcanti, Dante, Cino?) is now acknowledged. This Guittone, though a prolific imitator of the Provençal school in his amatory verse, had a good deal of vigor and eccentric ingenuity and originality, but was poor in sentiment and unhappily destitute of the sense of beauty. He is better in his religious, moral, and especially his political poetry, where his fierce irony is very effective. He was also one of the first to attempt artistic Italian prose. He joined the order of the Frati Gaudenti (Inf. XXIII, 103), founded a monastery in Florence, and died in 1294. In De Vulgari Eloquentia, I, xiii, 1–8, Dante blames him for using his local dialect.

Mentre che sì per l' orlo, uno innanzi altro,
 Ce n' andavamo, e spesso il buon Maestro
 Diceva: 'Guarda! Giovi ch' io ti scaltro,'

6. Di cilestro, 'from blue.'

7. As Dante passes along close to the mass of flame, in which the spirits are walking, his shadow, cast on the fire at his left, restores to it its natural 'ruddy' hue, which the sunlight has paled.

Parer la fiamma. E pure a tanto indizio
 Vid' io molt' ombre andando poner mente.
 Questa fu la cagion che diede inizio 10
 Loro a parlar di me; e cominciarsi
 A dir: 'Colui non par corpo fittizio.'
 Poi verso me, quanto potevan farsi,
 Certi si feron, sempre con riguardo
 Di non uscir dove non fossero arsi. 15
 'O tu che vai — non per esser più tardo,
 Ma forse reverente — agli altri dopo,
 Rispondi a me che in sete ed in foco ardo!
 Nè solo a me la tua risposta è uopo;
 Chè tutti questi n' hanno maggior sete 20
 Che d' acqua fredda Indo o Etiopo.
 Dinne com' è che fai di te parete
 Al sol, come se tu non fossi ancora
 Di morte entrato dentro dalla rete.'
 Sì mi parlava un d' essi; ed io mi fora 25
 Già manifesto, s' io non fossi atteso
 Ad altra novità ch' apparse allora.
 Chè per lo mezzo del cammino acceso
 Venia gente col viso incontro a questa,
 La qual mi fece a rimirar sospeso. 30
 Lì veggio d' ogni parte farsi presta
 Ciascun' ombra, e baciarsi una con una,
 Senza restar, contente a breve festa.

77. Ugucione da Pisa in his Magnæ Derivationes (cited in Conv., IV, vi, 39-40), combining two anecdotes from Suetonius, relates that Cæsar, returning to Rome in triumph, was hailed by some one as 'queen': Toynbee, 118. It is not likely that Dante believed in the charge of sodomy brought against Cæsar.

"Regina" contra sè chiamar s' intese.
 Però si parton "Soddoma" gridando,
 Rimproverando a sè, com' hai udito, 80
 Ed aiutàn l' arsura vergognando.

82. Ermafrodito, 'hermaphrodite,' i. e., bisexual, not contrary to nature. Hermaphroditus was the son of Hermes and Aphrodite, and resembled both his parents, whence his name: Met., IV, 290-1. He fused with the nymph Salmacis into one body that was of both sexes: Met., IV, 285-388.

85. Per noi si legge, 'is recited by us.'

87. Imbestiate schegge, 'beastlike boards' of the wooden cow.

91. 'I will, indeed, diminish (i. e., rid) thee of wish (i. e., curiosity) about me.'

93. 'Because of righteous sorrow before the end of life': cf. XIII, 124.

94. Hypsipyle (Inf. XVIII, 92), to show the thirsty Greeks the fountain of Langia (Purg. XXII, 112), left Archemorus (Conv., III, xi, 165-9), the child of King Lycurgus of Nemea, who had been entrusted to her. A serpent killed the child, and the father, blinded by 'grief' and rage, was about to have her put to death, when her two sons suddenly rushed in and saved her. Cf. Statius, Thebaid, V, especially 718 ff.

96. Dante is as full of delight and love as Hypsipyle's sons 'on seeing their mother again,' and would like to plunge into the fire and clasp Guido to his heart, as they embraced their mother, but he does not 'rise to such a pitch,' being afraid of the flame.

Rime d' amore usar dolci e leggiadre;
 E senza udire e dir pensoso andai 100
 Lunga fiata rimirando lui,
 Nè per lo foco in là più m' appressai.
 Poi che di riguardar pasciuto fui,
 Tutto m' offersi pronto al suo servizio,
 Con l' affermar che fa credere altrui. 105

 Ed io a lui: 'Li dolci detti vostri

 Faranno cari ancora i loro inchiostri.'
 'O frate,' disse, 'questi ch' io ti scerno 115

 Poi forse per dar loco altrui secondo,
 Che presso avea, disparve per lo foco,
 Come per l' acqua pesce andando al fondo. 135
 Io mi feci al mostrato innanzi un poco,
 E dissi ch' al suo nome il mio disire
 Apparecchiava grazïoso loco.
 Ei cominciò liberamente a dire:
 'Tan m' abellis vostre cortes deman 140

Ieu sui Arnaut, que plor, e vau cantan.
Consiros vei la passada folor,
E vei jauzen lo jorn qu' esper, denan.
Ara vos prec, per aquella valor 145
Que vos guida al som de l' escalina,

Sadly I see my past folly, and joyously I see before me the day that I await. Now I pray you, by that power which guides you to the top of this stairway, while it is yet time be heedful of my pain!' — These Provençal verses are presumably of Dante's own composition.

148. Affina, 'purifies.'

CANTO XXVII

ARGUMENT

IN mediæval legend the Earthly Paradise is generally situated in an inaccessible spot, often surrounded by a barrier of flame. In both Germanic and Celtic myth a wall of fire occurs. The Bible also offers a hint of it, in Gen. iii, 24: 'And he placed at the east of the garden of Eden Cherubims, and a flaming sword which turned every way.' Tertullian, Lactantius, St. John Chrysostom, Isidore, and, after him, many others speak of the fiery wall. Dante makes his encircling fire serve a double purpose: it obstructs, according to tradition, the road to the home of terrestrial bliss, and at the same time it constitutes the punishment of the last cornice. 'Mortify therefore your members which are upon the earth,' — says St. Paul in Colossians iii, 5, — 'fornication, uncleanness, inordinate affection.' In the Moralia, XXI, xii, 688, St. Gregory declares: 'Si per cordis munditiam libidinis flamma non extinguitur, incassum quælibet virtutes oriuntur.' The burning path signifies the quenching of carnal desire by purification of the heart. This penance is imposed upon Dante, who now, for the first time in Purgatory, recoils from his duty. A high pitch of excitement is reached in the brief scene of Virgil's impassioned exhortation and his pupil's stubborn refusal. Not until the master invokes the name of Beatrice, whose image once before turned the youthful poet from unworthy love (V. N., XL, 1-16), can Dante be induced to obey. Then, preceded by Virgil and followed by Statius (who apparently do not feel the heat), he traverses the flames.

Previous to this trial, there comes to Dante, in the hour before dawn, the third of his prophetic dreams. He is in reality about to visit the Garden of Eden, the abode of innocence and harmless activity, from which he is to rise to Heaven, the goal of contemplation. Consequently the active and the contemplative life are revealed to him in the form of Laban's daughters, Leah and Rachel, the fertile and the barren wife of Jacob (Gen. xxix, 10-35). From early Christian times their story has been interpreted as an allegory of work and meditation: cf. St. Thomas, Summa

Theologiæ, Secunda Secundæ, Qu. clxxix, Art. 2. In De Monarchia, III, xvi, 43-52, Dante distinguishes two kinds of divinely ordained human blessedness: 'beatitudinem scilicet huius vitæ, quæ in operatione propriæ virtutis consistit, et per terrestrem Paradisum figuratur; et beatitudinem vitæ eternæ, quæ consistit in fruitione divini aspectus ad quam propriâ virtus ascendere non potest, nisi lumine divino adiuta, quæ per Paradisum cœlestem intelligi datur.' Leah's innocent activity is symbolized by picking flowers to adorn herself; Rachel's contemplation, by gazing into a mirror, where she is 'eager to see her own beauteous eyes.' In the Convivio, III, xv, 12-15, the eyes of Wisdom are defined as 'its demonstrations, with which the Truth is unerringly beheld' (cf. Canzone II, 55-8). The idea of Philosophy cherishing and jealously guarding the image of her own eyes is strikingly worked out in Ballata X, 12-20.

Sì come quando i primi raggi vibra
 Là dove il suo Fattore il sangue sparse, —
 Cadendo Ibero sotto l' alta Libra,
 E l' onde in Gange da nona rïarse, —
 Sì stava il sole (onde il giorno sen giva), 5
 Quando l' Angel di Dio lieto ci apparse.
 Fuor della fiamma stava in sulla riva,
 ' E cantava: 'Beati mundo corde!'
 In voce assai più che la nostra viva.
 Poscia: 'Più non si va, se pria non morde, 10
 Anime sante, il foco. Entrate in esso,
 Ed al cantar di là non siate sorde,'
 Ci disse, come noi gli fummo presso.
 Per ch' io divenni tal, quando lo intesi,

1. The time described is the approach of sunset. The sun was in the position it occupies when it 'shoots its first rays' upon Jerusalem. Dawn in Jerusalem is simultaneous with sunset in Purgatory.

3. It is midnight at the Strait of Gibraltar: the river Ebro is coming under the constellation of Libra, which is opposite Aries.

4. The sun, in Aries, is over eastern Asia, so that the waters of the river Ganges are 'scorched by noon.' Dante discusses the meaning of nona in Conv., IV, xxiii, 156-60.

8. Mat. v, 8: 'Blessed are the pure in heart.'

Quale è colui che nella fossa è messo. 15
 In sulle man commesse mi protesi,
 Guardando il foco, e imaginando forte
 Umani corpi già veduti accesi.
 Volsersi verso me le buone scorte,
 E Virgilio mi disse: 'Figliuol mio, 20
 Qui può esser tormento, ma non morte.
 Ricordati, ricordati! . . . E se io
 Sopr' esso Gerïon ti guidai salvo,
 Che farò ora presso più a Dio?
 Credi per certo che, se dentro all' alvo 25
 Di questa fiamma stessi ben mill' anni,
 Non ti potrebbe far d' un capel calvo.
 E se tu credi forse ch' io t' inganni,
 Fatti ver lei, e fatti far credenza
 Con le tue mani al lembo de' tuoi panni. 30
 Pon giù omai, pon giù ogni temenza!
 Volgiti in qua, e vieni oltre sicuro!'
 Ed io pur fermo, e contro a coscïenza.
 Quando mi vide star pur fermo e duro,
 Turbato un poco, disse: 'Or vedi, figlio, 35
 Tra Beatrice e te è questo muro.'
 Come al nome di Tisbe aperse il ciglio

15. I became as cold as a corpse.

16. 'I leaned forward over my hands,' which were 'clasped' in front of me.

18. Burning to death was not an uncommon punishment. Dante was himself condemned to death by fire, if taken in Florentine territory.

37. The tragic story of the young lovers, Pyramus and Thisbe, is told in Mét., IV, 55-166. See especially 145-6:

'Ad nomen Thisbes oculos jam morte gravatos
 Pyramus erexit, visaque recondidit illa.'

Piramo in sulla morte, e riguardolla,
 Allor che il gelso diventò vermiglio,
 Così, la mia durezza fatta solla, 40
 Mi volsi al savio Duca, udendo il nome
 Che nella mente sempre mi rampolla.
 Ond' ei crollò la fronte, e disse: 'Come?
 Volemci star di qua?' Indi sorrise,
 Come al fanciul si fa ch' è vinto al pome. 45
 Poi dentro al foco innanzi mi si mise,
 Pregando Stazio che venisse retro,
 Che pria per lunga strada ci divise.
 Come fui dentro, in un bogliente vetro
 Gittato mi sarei per rinfrescarmi, 50
 Tant' era ivi lo incendio senza metro.
 Lo dolce Padre mio, per confortarmi,
 Pur di Beatrice ragionando andava,
 Dicendo: 'Gli occhi suoi già veder parmi.'
 Guidavaci una voce che cantava 55
 Di là; e noi, attenti pure a lei,
 Venimmo fuor là dove si montava.
 'Venite, benedicti patris mei!'
 Sonò dentro ad un lume che lì era,
 Tal che mi vinse, e guardar nol potei. 60

CANTO XXVIII

ARGUMENT

‘AND the Lord God planted a garden eastward in Eden. . . . And the Lord God took the man, and put him into the garden of Eden to dress it and to keep it’ (Gen. ii, 8, 15). This terrestrial paradise naturally offered itself to Dante as a symbol of the youth or golden age of mankind, the life of innocent activity which, but for Adam’s sin, humanity would have enjoyed, without death, until the Judgment Day. But the garden was to him not a symbol alone: it was a real spot, still in existence in a remote quarter of the globe. Mediæval literature is rich in tales of journeys to it. Ephraim the Syrian, deacon of Edessa in the fourth century, tells us that it is circular, situated on a high mountain surrounded by the sea, and divided into an outer and an inner, more sacred, part. Barinthus, in the Voyage of St. Brendan (p. 4), finds on his island paradise a river which cannot be crossed; and St. Brendan himself, in his ‘terra repromissionis sanctorum’ (p. 35), sees fruit trees, and a river running through the middle. In the Old Venetian version of the story (Ch. XXXI, XXXVII), the beautiful trees and birds are enlarged upon, and the river occurs again (Ch. XLII). This stream goes back to the Bible, Gen. ii, 10: ‘And a river went out of Eden to water the garden; and from thence it was parted, and became into four heads,’ namely Pison (or Ganges), Gihon (the Nile), Hiddekel (Tigris), and Euphrates. Those who located the garden on an island were hard pressed to account for the transfer of these ‘four heads’ to the mainland; it was sometimes maintained — by St. Augustine, for example (De Genesi ad Litteram, VIII, vii) — that they burrowed under ground. Dante perhaps had some such idea, but he wisely refrained from expressing it. His river is divided, from its very source in the middle of the earthly paradise, into two branches. Lethe and Eunoe, which flow out on opposite sides. So Brendan and his companions (p. 7) ‘viderunt ripam altissimam sicut murum et diversos rivulos discendentes de summitate insule, fluentes in mare.’ It may be their spray which falls upon the two trees in the circle of gluttony. It is perhaps Lethe, with its burden of sinful recollection, that bores its crooked way from the shore of the island to the feet of Satan; in that case Eunoe would presumably have to be, at some spot, the source of the four great streams of the inhabited world. On these points Dante is silent. What concerns him is the allegorical significance of the waters. Of Lethe, the ancient river of oblivion, and Eunoe, a stream of his own devising, he makes the symbol of absolution, the remission of sin, the complete restoration of purity. Lethe means forgetfulness of past wrongdoing; Eunoe, memory of past good work. This last name our poet seems to have constructed for himself out of the Greek εὐνοία (Bull., XI, 238), or directly from εὖ, 'well,' and νοῦς or νόος, 'mind.'

It is on the morning of Wednesday, April 13, the sixth day of his journey, and the fourth of his sojourn on the island, that Dante enters the abode of earthly happiness. His daintily phrased account of it combines into an artistic whole the various conventional elements of the mediæval Eden. One factor, however, is lacking — the traditional inhabitants, Enoch and Elijah. In the Apocalypse of St. Paul (p. 18), after the apostle has seen the four great rivers in the terrestrial paradise, he is greeted by Enoch, Elijah, and seven other patriarchs. The first two became almost constant features of the garden. In the Venetian Brendan both occur — Enoch, by the way, under the name of Enoe (Ch. XXXVIII). Ever since they were caught up from this world, they have lived, in flesh and blood, in the 'paradiso delitiarum,' whence, on the Judgment Day, they are to go forth to fight against the Antichrist. In addition, we find (Ch. XLII), near the dividing stream, a beautiful youth, who sings sweetly. There is also a lovely angel (XL), 'si chomo uno fante de .XV. any,' who lights on a tree full of golden apples; he, too, sings, 'e fo canto d'amor fato si como de femena donzela ad un so amador.' Fra Benedetto d'Arezzo, in his journey to the terrestrial paradise, also meets at the foot of a mountain a beautiful youth, who shows him the way up (Giorn. dant., IX, 43). In the Latin Navigatio Sancti Brendani, the youthful figure is already present beside the river (p. 35): 'Ecce juvenis occurrit illis obviam osculans eos cum magna leticia et singulos nominatim appellabat.' Earlier in the tale (p. 4), near the stream, a 'vir quidam magni splendoris' appears to the travellers, and forthwith calls them by name; he will not reveal his own identity, but tells them that the island has been unchanged from the beginning of the world. It has already been intimated, in the Argument to Canto I, that Dante, — who, unwilling to mar a scene of youthfulness by the introduction of elderly dwellers, kept Enoch and Elijah out of sight and apparently out of mind, — may have utilized the suggestion of the Navigatio in the creation of his Cato, at the foot of the mountain, corresponding to his Matilda, at the top. Another contrasted pair that may possibly have impressed his imagination is furnished by St. Augustine's De Mirabilibus Sacrae Scripturae, Cap. III, De Abel et Enoch primatum tenentibus in hominum iustitia: 'Abel totius humanæ iustitiæ princeps et secundus post eum Enoch, . . . quibus summa iustitiæ in initio ipso mundi et fine committitur.' Matilda, like Abel, represents original goodness; Cato, like Enoch, goodness after evil. But such parallels could be multiplied almost to infinity. Whatever may have been his starting-point, Dante evolved, as guardian of his Eden and personification of its spirit, a lovely girlish form, one of his prettiest conceptions. Such a figure had always haunted his fancy: it lurks in nearly all his lyric verse, whether dedicated to Beatrice, to the Donna Pietosa, to Philosophy, or to the unknown lady of the Casentino. In her solitude, her joyousness, her amorous song, her association with birds and flowers, Matilda belongs to the pastoral type. All her attributes and surroundings indicate that she symbolizes the early, immaculate stage of humanity, the life of harmless activity, the purity and gladness that can and should be regained. It is she, the embodiment of Innocence, who, by the remission of sin through Lethe and Eunoe, restores innocence to Dante. Even so Cato, the personification of Free Will, showed Dante how his free will was to be restored.

Who Matilda was in the flesh — or, in other words, why the custodian of the garden is called 'Matelda' — is a problem that has given rise to endless controversy. Her name is disclosed, and only once (XXXIII, 119), by Beatrice; a little earlier (XXX, 55) Dante's name is proclaimed, for the first and last time in all his poetic works, by the same speaker. Matilda's fresh girlishness would seem to preclude the possibility of identification with a grave ruler like the Countess Matilde of Tuscany; her amorousness, her active rather than contemplative existence should exclude the suggestion of a nun — such, for instance, as that German St. Mechteldis of Hackeborn who, towards the end of the 13th century, had a vision of seven terraces of torment in the vicinity of a beautiful garden. That she stands for some actual person appears most likely, if we consider our author's whole method of symbolism: unlike most mediæval allegory, Dante's always proceeds from the real to the unreal, from the particular to the general. The most plausible conjecture is that which sees in her an early friend of Beatrice, a Florentine girl whose premature demise is mourned in the Vita Nuova, VIII, Sonnets III and IV. Addressing Death, the poet says:

‘Dal secolo hai partita cortesia
E ciò che ’n donna è da pregiar virtute.
In gaia gioventute
Distrutta hai l’amorosa leggiadria.’

He refuses to tell who she is:

‘Più non vo’ discovrir qual donna sia
Che per le proprietà sue conosciute.
Chi non merta salute
Non sperì mai d’aver sua compagnia.’

Now, on the way to salvation, he meets her again as she was in life, the picture of ‘gaia gioventute’ and ‘amorosa leggiadria’; and both his name and hers are revealed by their common friend and guide.

See H. Brandes, Visio Sancti Pauli, 1885; C. Schröder, Sancti Brandan (text of the Peregrinatio S. Brandani Abbatis), 1871; F. Novati, La ‘Navigatio Sancti Brendani’ in antico veneziano, 1892. The Book of Enoch (R. Lawrence, 1888) is interesting in connection with the earthly paradise; it is repeatedly cited as authentic by Tertullian (for instance, in the Liber de Idolatria, Cap. IV), and is regarded by St. Augustine as inspired and trustworthy, though not canonical (De Civitate Dei, Lib. XV, Cap. xxiii, § 4; Lib. XVIII, Cap. xxxviii). With regard to the state of Enoch and Elijah, there are some curious remarks by St. Jerome, Liber contra Joannem Hierosolymitanum, § 32. For the configuration of Dante’s Garden of Eden, see P. Gambèra, La topografia del viaggio di Dante nel Paradiso terrestre, in Giorn. dant., IX, 126. For the legendary descriptions of it: A. 13. 'But, for all that, not so deflected from their upright state' . . .

15. Lasciasser, 'should forbear.'

16. Ore: most editors print ôre, 'winds'; but if the movement of the air is eternal and unchanging (ll. 7-8, 103-8), there can be no 'first breezes.' The birds greet with song the morning 'hours.'

17. Ricevieno = riceverano, 'greeted.'

 Coi piè ristetti e con gli occhi passai
 Di là dal fiumicello, per mirare 35
 La gran variazion dei freschi mai:
 E là m' apparve, — sì com' egli appare
 Subitamente cosa che disvia
 Per maraviglia tutt' altro pensare, —
 Una Donna soletta, che si gia 40
 Cantando ed iscegliendo fior da fiore,
 Ond' era pinta tutta la sua via.
 'Deh, bella Donna, ch' ai raggi d' amore
 Ti scaldi (s' io vo' credere ai sembianti
 Che soglion esser testimon del core), 45
 Vegnati in voglia di trarreti avanti,'
 Diss' io a lei, 'verso questa riviera,
 Tanto ch' io possa intender che tu canti.

33. Ps. cxxi (Vulg. cxx), 6: 'The sun shall not smite thee by day, nor the moon by night.' Cf. Met., V, 388-9.

36. Mai (plural of maio), 'May-branches,' i. e., spring foliage. In some parts of Italy a branch, called maio or maggio, is used in the celebration of May Day, serving the purpose either of May-pole or of May-basket.

37. Egli, 'there.'

40. Gia: imperfect of gire.

41. Iscegliendo: the older form of scegliendo.

45. The 'features' in question are particularly the eyes.

46. Vegnati in voglia, 'may it be thy pleasure.'

48. Intender che, 'understand what.'

50. When Proserpine, the daughter of Ceres, was suddenly carried off to the lower world by Pluto, she had been picking flowers in the 'perpetual springtime' of the valley of Henna: cf. Met., V, 385-408, especially 391.

52. Piante, 'feet.' — Strette, 'close.'

A terra ed intra sè, donna che balli,
 E piede innanzi piede a pena mette,

60. Intendimenti, 'meaning.'

66. It was contrary to the custom of Cupid to wound unintentionally, as he did when, coming to kiss his mother, he pricked her with an arrow projecting from his quiver, and caused her to love Adonis: Met., X, 525-32.

68. Traendo, 'carrying' or 'trailing.' The 'many colors' are varied flowers.

70. The 'three steps' may signify simply a very short distance which separates Dante from that which he is eager to reach: cf. VIII, 46. If the words have an allegorical meaning, they probably refer to the three stages of the sacrament of penance through which Dante must pass to attain perfect happiness on earth: cf. XXXI, 1-90.

71. Xerxes, king of Persia, crossed the Hellespont with a vast army, to conquer Greece, but was defeated and forced to flee ignominiously. Cf. Phars., II, 672-5:

'Tales fama canit tumidum super æquora Xerxen

104. The air that envelops the earth is surrounded by a layer of fire, which in turn is enclosed in the heaven of the moon. As there are no intervals of empty space between these spheres, the two mobile elements — air and fire — are swept around the earth by the heavens in their 'primal revolution,' or daily circuit. Dante can hardly have estimated the velocity of such a motion of the atmosphere.

105. 'If its course is not broken in some quarter.' On the rugged surface of the earth the daily revolution of the air encounters so many obstacles that it is not felt; but this mountain-top, rising so high that it is 'quite free in the quick air,' receives the atmospheric current unobstructed.

109. Tanto puote, 'has such force.'

111. The air, in its revolution around the earth, scatters far and wide the vital power of the plant.

114. Di, 'from.' — This explanation of the diversity of vegetation in each climate has not been found in any other author.

 E frutto ha in sè che di là non si schianta. 120
 L' acqua che vedi non surge di vena
 Che ristori vapor che gel converta,
 Come fiume ch' acquista e perde lena;
 Ma esce di fontana salda e certa,
 Che tanto dal voler di Dio riprende 125
 Quant' ella versa, da due parti aperta.
 Da questa parte con virtù discende
 Che toglie altrui memoria del peccato;
 Dall' altra, d' ogni ben fatto la rende.

 Eünoè si chiama, e non adopra
 Se quinci e quindi pria non è gustato.
 A tutt' altri sapori esto è di sopra. —
 Ed avvegna ch' assai possa esser sazia
 La sete tua perch' io più non ti scopra, 135
 Darotti un corollario ancor per grazia;
 Nè credo che il mio dir ti sia men caro,
 Se oltre promission teco si spazia.
 Quelli che anticamente poetaro
 L' età dell' oro e suo stato felice, 140

117. Vi s' appiglia, 'takes root there.'

120. Di là non si schianta, 'is not plucked in your world.' The Garden of Eden contains all the flora of the rest of the world, and some besides.

121. L'ena, 'spring': cf. Canzone XV, 53. The water of this stream comes from a miraculous fount, not from any natural spring fed by condensed aqueous vapor.

131. Adopra, 'works.' To be operative, the water must be tasted in both streams.

138. Promission, 'my promise.' — Si spazia, 'extends.'

140. The golden age was 'poetized' by Ovid, Met., I, 89-112. The ancient poets were gifted with sight beyond that of their contemporaries (cf. the 'nobile castello' in Inf. IV), and had some inkling of the truth. When they sang of Parnassus and the golden age, they may have been dimly conscious of the real origin of man.

Forse in Parnaso esto loco sognaro.
Qui fu innocente l' umana radice;
Qui primavera è sempre, ed ogni frutto;
Nettare è questo, di che ciascun dice.'

Io mi volsi dietro allora tutto 145
A' miei Poeti, e vidi che con riso
Udito avevan l' ultimo costrutto.
Poi alla bella Donna tornai il viso.

144. 'This (stream) is the nectar of which they all sing.'

147. Costrutto, 'passage,' words.

CANTO XXIX

ARGUMENT

AT the solemn moment when Dante is to pass through the stages of contrition, confession, and satisfaction to absolution, the Church, with Beatrice, or Revelation, as its guiding power, appears to him in all its majesty. He is following the stream of Lethe up towards its source, when a splendid pageant approaches on the other bank. At a signal from Heaven, it comes to a halt opposite him. Then, after the sacrament of penance and the remission of sin, Dante joins the radiant host. Thus does the Church come to meet the penitent sinner, thus does it reveal itself to him and finally receive him into its bosom. In all this episode the poet makes use of a symbolism more formal and more minute than is his wont. The kind of ceremonial that he describes is remote from modern experience, though not unfamiliar to Dante's contemporaries. In his day elaborate allegorical processions, both religious and secular, were common enough. We find something similar in the Arbor Vitæ Crucifixæ Jesu, written in 1305 by Ubertino da Casale, the leader of the Franciscan sect known as the Spirituales (Par. XII, 124). At a later date the type was developed by Petrarch in his Trionfi.

Dante's inspiration came, in large measure, from the Apocalypse and from Ezekiel. His procession is in the shape of a cross, in the middle of which is the Chariot of the Church, drawn by Christ, its founder, in the form of a griffin. Christ, to Dante's mind, was always a divine figure, a part of the triune God, who could be conceived by the human intellect only through the medium of symbols. He seldom thought of him as an historical person or as a model for human life. What particularly impressed him was the mystery of his dual nature, a fusion of man and God; and this duality he expresses by means of the griffin, a creature half eagle, half lion, belonging both to heaven and to earth. He may have got the idea of this beast from St. Isidore's Etymologia, XII, ii, 17, where it is described; in the same chapter, but not in connection with the griffin, Christ is compared both to a lion and to an eagle (43, 44). The griffin is often pictured in ancient art, notably in the frieze of the temple of Faustina in Rome. In Christian art, too, it is not uncommon; it is the emblem of the city of Perugia, and is displayed everywhere in that old town; it is seen also on the 11th century façade of the cathedral of Assisi. In Dante's portrayal there are several traits taken from the Song of Solomon, which from very early times was interpreted as an allegory of Christ and the Church. Beside the two wheels of the chariot are two groups of figures symbolizing the Theological and the Cardinal Virtues.

At the head of the procession, at first unrecognizable, then gradually revealing themselves as they approach, are seven golden candlesticks. Seven lamps or candlesticks are repeatedly mentioned in the Bible. Exod. xxv, 37: 'And thou shalt make the seven lamps thereof.' Rev. i, 12: 'I saw seven golden candlesticks.' Rev. i, 13: 'And in the midst of the seven candlesticks one like unto the Son of man' (cf. ii, 1: 'who walketh in the midst of the seven golden candlesticks'). Rev. i, 20: 'the seven candlesticks which thou sawest are the seven churches' (cf. 11). Rev. iv, 5: 'and there were seven lamps of fire burning before the throne, which are the seven Spirits of God.' This last interpretation is apparently the one that Dante chose: his candlesticks represent the sevenfold Spirit of God. The flame of each candle leaves, as it passes, a trail of colored light, which stretches as far as the eye can reach. These seven streaks of brightness, all of different hues, form a canopy over the marching band. They probably symbolize the gifts of the Spirit of the Lord, mentioned in Isaiah xi, 2, 3: 'And the spirit of the Lord shall rest upon him' (the 'rod out of the stem of Jesse'), 'the spirit of wisdom and understanding, the spirit of counsel and might, the spirit of knowledge and of the fear of the Lord. And shall make him of quick understanding in the fear of the Lord.' The Vulgate, instead of repeating 'fear of the Lord,' has in the first verse pictatis, in the second timoris, making seven gifts in all. In the Convivio, IV, xxi, 105-12, Dante discusses the 'Doni di Spirito Santo, li quali, secondochè li distingue Isaia Profeta, sono sette, cioè: Sapienza, Intelletto, Consiglio, Fortezza, Scienza, Pietà e Timor di Dio.'

After the candlesticks, come twenty-four old men. Rev. iv, 4: 'And round about the throne were four and twenty seats: and upon the seats I saw four and twenty elders sitting, clothed in white raiment; and they had on their heads crowns of gold' (cf. also 10 and 11). St. Jerome, in the Prologus Galcatus to the Vulgate, refers to an interpretation of these elders as the books of the Old Testament, namely: the five books of Law, written by Moses (Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers, Deuteronomy); eight books of Prophets, i. e., seven major prophets and one book made up of the twelve minor prophets; nine books of sacred writings, historical and didactic; Ruth and Lamentations, which Jerome himself was inclined to regard as not canonical. Dante's elders are clad in white and crowned with lilies, white being the color of faith: the Old Testament is the expression of faith in the coming Saviour.

Next, surrounding the chariot and the griffin, are four animals representing the Gospels; they are crowned with green, the color of hope. Each has six wings, to carry it abroad through the world; and the wings seem full of eyes, for nothing can escape its flight. Ezekiel i, 4, 5, 6, 11, 12: 'And I looked, and, behold, a whirlwind came out of the north, a great cloud, and a fire infolding itself, and a brightness was about it, and out of the midst thereof as the color of amber, out of the midst of the fire. Also out of the midst thereof came the likeness of four living creatures. And this was their appearance; they had the likeness of a man. And every one had four faces, and every one had four wings. . . . And their wings were stretched upward. . . . And they went every one straight forward; whither the spirit was to go, they went.' Rev. iv, 6, 7, 8: 'and round about the throne, were four beasts full of eyes before and behind. And the first beast was like a lion, and the second beast like a calf, and the third beast had a face as a man, and the fourth beast was like a flying eagle. And the four beasts had each of them six wings about him; and they were full of eyes within: and they rest not day and night, saying, Holy, holy, holy, Lord God Almighty, which was, and is, and is to come.' These four beasts were early adopted by Christian art as emblems of the four Evangelists. Ezekiel x, with its account of cherubims and wheels, may be compared also. At the end of the troop, dressed in white and garlanded with red, are seven personages, who stand for the remaining books of the New Testament.

Cantando come donna innamorata,

Continuò col fin di sue parole:

'Beati quorum tecta sunt peccata!'

E come ninfe che si givan sole

2. Matilda continued her song 'at the end' of her speech.

3. Ps. xxxii (Vulg. xxxi), 1: 'Blessed is he whose transgression is forgiven, whose sin is covered.' The earthly paradise represents the stage of the soul's journey at which sin is remitted.

Per le salvatiche ombre, disiando 5
 Qual di veder, qual di fuggir lo sole,
 Allor si mosse contra il fiume, andando
 Su per la riva, ed io pari di lei,
 Picciol passo con picciol seguitando.
 Non eran cento tra i suo' passi e i miei, 10
 Quando le ripe igualmente dier volta,
 Per modo ch' a levante mi rendei.
 Nè ancor fu così nostra via molta,
 Quando la Donna tutta a me si torse,
 Dicendo: 'Frate mio, guarda ed ascolta!' 15
 Ed ecco un lustro subito trascorse
 Da tutte parti per la gran foresta,
 Tal che di balenar mi mise in forse.
 Ma perchè il balenar, come vien, resta,
 E quel durando più e più splendeva, 20
 Nel mio pensar dicea: 'Che cosa è questa?'
 Ed una melodia dolce correva
 Per l' aere luminoso; onde buon zelo
 Mi fe' riprender l' ardimento d' Eva,
 Che, là dove ubbidia la terra e il cielo, 25
 Femmina sola, e pur testè formata,
 Non sofferse di star sotto alcun velo;
 Sotto il qual, se devota fosse stata,
 Avrei quelle ineffabili delizie

8. Matilda on one side of the river and the three travellers on the other turn to Dante's right and proceed up-stream, i. e., to the south.

12. At this point the river turns a right angle, and Dante and his companions, still walking up-stream, face the east, as they did before they came to the water.

16. Lustro, 'gleam': cf. Par. XIV, 68.

18. Mi mise in forse, 'it was suggestive to me.'

19. Come vien, resta, 'stops as quickly as it comes.'

20. Quel: sc., lustro.

27. 'She could not endure remaining under any veil' of ignorance. Cf. Gen. iii, 4-6.

Sentite prima, e più lunga fiata. 30
 Mentr' io m' andava tra tante primizie
 Dell' eterno piacer, tutto sospeso,
 E disioso ancora a più letizie,
 Dinanzi a noi, tal quale un foco acceso
 Ci si fe' l' aere, sotto i verdi rami, 35
 E il dolce suon per canto era già inteso.
 O sacrosante Vergini, se fami,
 Freddi, o vigilie mai per voi soffersi,
 Cagion mi sprona ch' io mercè ne chiami.
 Or convien ch' Elicona per me versi, 40
 Ed Urania m' aiuti col suo coro,
 Forti cose a pensar mettere in versi.
 Poco più oltre sette arbori d' oro
 Falsava nel parere il lungo tratto
 Del mezzo, ch' era ancor tra noi e loro; 45
 Ma quando fui sì presso di lor fatto
 Che l' obbietto comun, che il senso inganna,
 Non perdea per distanza alcun suo atto,

30. If Eve had not yielded, all mankind would have been born in the Garden of Eden and would have lived there until the Day of Judgment. Cf. St. Augustine, De Mirabilibus Sacrae Scripturae, Cap. III.

37. Dante appeals once more to the muses, as in I, 8.

38. Cf. 2 Cor. xi, 27.

39. 'My need goads me to ask you for my reward.'

40. Cf. Æn., VII, 641: 'Pandite nunc Helicon, Dææ, cantusque movete.' Helicon was a mountain near Parnassus, sacred to the muses. — Versi, 'pour forth' the water of its springs.

41. Urania, muse of astronomy, genius of the 8th or starry heaven, is regarded as the leader of the 'choir.'

42. Ferti cose a pensar, 'things hard to conceive.'

44. 'The long stretch' of intervening space 'produced a false impression' of seven golden trees.

47. By the obbietto comun Dante seems to mean the sensibile comune, the sum of attributes perceptible to more than one sense, the 'variously recognizable character' of a thing. Such attributes are shape, size, number, and motion or stillness; whereas color and light are perceived by the eye alone: Conv., III, ix, 55-66. In Conv., IV, viii, 46-50, we learn that we are often deceived by our senses, especially with regard to 'variously recognizable characters,' or sensibili comuni.

48. Atto, 'attribute.'

La virtù ch' a ragion discorso ammanna
 Sì com' elli eran candelabri apprese, 50
 E nelle voci del cantare, 'Osanna !'
 Di sopra fiammeggiava il bello arnese
 Più chiaro assai che luna per sereno
 Di mezza notte nel suo mezzo mese.
 Io mi rivolsi d' ammirazion pieno 55
 Al buon Virgilio, ed esso mi rispose
 Con vista carica di stupor non meno.
 Indi rendei l' aspetto all' alte cose,
 Che si moveano incontro a noi sì tardi
 Che foran vinte da novelle pose. 60
 La Donna mi sgridò: 'Perchè pur ardi
 Sì nell' aspetto delle vive luci,
 E ciò che vien diretto a lor non guardi?'
 Genti vid' io allor, com' a lor duci,
 Venire appresso, vestite di bianco; 65
 E tal candor di qua giammai non fuci.
 L' acqua splendeva dal sinistro fianco,
 E rendea a me la mia sinistra costa,
 S' io riguardava in lei, come specchio anco.
 Quand' io dalla mia riva ebbi tal posta 70

49. 'The faculty that supplies procedure for the reason': the power of estimation, or discernment.

50. Sì come, 'that.' — Apprese, 'apprehended,' understood.

52. Arnese, 'array.'

58. Rendei l' aspetto, 'I turned back my eyes.'

60. Foran vinte, 'they would have been outstripped' by a bride in a wedding procession.

64. Com' a lor duci is to be connected with appresso in l. 65.

66. Fuci = ci fu: for the rhyme see Inf. VIII, 17. — Cf. Mark ix, 3: 'And his raiment became shining, exceeding white as snow; so as no fuller on earth can white them.'

67. Dante, walking up-stream on the left bank, has the water on his left. The procession is coming down-stream on the opposite side.

68. Rendea, 'reflected' — 'even as a mirror' (l. 69). Though released from sin, Dante is not yet free from remorse; in the light of the 'seven Spirits of God' he sees his own worst part, his 'left side.'

Che solo il fiume mi facea distante,
 Per veder meglio ai passi diedi sosta,
 E vidi le fiammelle andar davante,
 Lasciando retro a sè l' aër dipinto,
 E di tratti pennelli avean sembiente; 75
 Sì che lì sopra rimanea distinto
 Di sette liste, tutte in quei colori
 Onde fa l' arco il sole, e Delia il cinto.
 Questi ostendali dietro eran maggiori
 Che la mia vista; e, quanto al mio avviso, 80
 Dieci passi distavan quei di fuori.
 Sotto così bel ciel com' io diviso,
 Ventiquattro seniori, a due a due,
 Coronati venian di fiordaliso.
 Tutti cantavan: 'Benedetta tue 85
 Nelle figlie d' Adamo, e benedette
 Sieno in eterno le bellezze tue.'
 Poscia che i fiori e l' altre fresche erbette,
 A rimpetto di me dall' altra sponda,
 Libere fur da quelle genti elette, 90
 Sì come luce luce in ciel seconda,
 Vennero appresso lor quattro animali,
 Coronato ciascun di verde fronda.

73. Andar davante, 'marching on.'

75. 'And they looked like moving paint-brushes,' i. e., 'brushes drawn' across a wall or ceiling, leaving lines of color behind.

78. Delia = Diana, born in Delos, goddess of the moon.

79. Ostendali, 'banners': the streaks of colored light. — Eran maggiori, 'extended further.'

81. Quei di fuori, 'the (two) outer ones,' representing wisdom and fear of the Lord. All seven gifts are contained within the ten commandments, by which God transmitted them to man.

82. Diviso, 'describe.'

85. Tue = tu: cf. XVI, 26. — The books of the Old Testament anticipate the greeting to Mary uttered by Gabriel and by Elizabeth (Luke i, 28, 42) at the time of the annunciation.

91. Luce: star. — Seconda, 'follows': cf. XVI, 33.

Ognuno era pennuto di sei ali,
 Le penne piene d' occhi; e gli occhi d' Argo, 95
 Se fosser vivi, sarebber cotali.
 A descriver lor forme più non spargo
 Rime, lettor; ch' altra spesa mi strigne
 Tanto che a questa non posso esser largo.
 Ma leggi Ezechiël, che li dipigne 100
 Come li vide dalla fredda parte
 Venir con vento, con nube e con igne;
 E quali i troverai nelle sue carte
 Tali eran quivi, salvo ch' alle penne
 Giovanni è meco, e da lui si diparte. 105
 Lo spazio dentro a lor quattro contenne
 Un carro, in su due rote, trionfale,
 Ch' al collo d' un grifon tirato venne.
 Esso tendea in su l' una e l' altr' ale
 Tra la mezzana e le tre e tre liste, 110
 Sì ch' a nulla fendendo facea male;
 Tanto salivan che non eran viste.

95. The hundred-eyed Argus was the guardian of Io: cf. Met., I, 625-9.

100. Ezekiel i, 4-6, 11, 12.

102. Ignè, 'fire.'

103. I = li.

105. In the Revelation of St. John the Divine iv, 6-8, the animals have six wings, while in Ezekiel they have only four.

107. Carro is the object of contenne. — The two wheels are probably the Franciscan and Dominican orders: cf. Par. XI, 35-6, and XII, 106-10.

108. Song of Solomon i, 3: 'Draw me, we will run after thee.' Cf. Mon., III, iii, 78-9: 'dicit Ecclesia, loquens ad Sponsum: Trahe me post te.' Here the passage in the song is distinctly applied to the Church and Christ.

109. The wings extending up out of sight indicate the divine origin of Christ, his miraculous descent from Heaven without really leaving it.

110. The wings extend upward on either side of the middle strip of the colored canopy, the strip representing might. On the right of the right wing are wisdom, understanding, and counsel; on the left of the left wing, knowledge, piety, and fear of the Lord.

111. The supernatural advent and return of Christ were entirely in accord with the prophecy of the gifts of the Holy Spirit.

113. The eagle-like, or divine, part is of gold, the symbol of purity. Cf. Song of Solomon v, 11: 'His head is as the most fine gold.'

E bianche l' altre, di vermiglio miste.
 Non che Roma di carro così bello 115
 Rallegrasse Affricano, o vero Augusto,
 Ma quel del Sol saria pover con ello —
 Quel del Sol, che, svïando, fu combusto
 Per l' orazion della Terra devota,
 Quando fu Giove arcanamente giusto. 120
 Tre donne in giro, dalla destra rota,
 Venian danzando: l' una tanto rossa
 Ch' a pena fora dentro al foco nota;
 L' altr' era come se le carni e l' ossa
 Fossero state di smeraldo fatte; 125
 La terza pareva neve testè mossa.
 Ed or parevan dalla bianca tratte,
 Or dalla rossa, e dal canto di questa
 L' altre togliean l' andare, e tarde e ratte.
 Dalla sinistra quattro facean festa, 130
 In porpora vestite, dietro al modo

114. The lion-like, or earthly, part is white and red, like human flesh. These are the colors of faith and love. Cf. Song of Solomon v, 10: 'My beloved is white and ruddy.'

115, 116. 'Not only did Africanus (Publius Cornelius Scipio, the conqueror of Hannibal) and Augustus never gladden Rome with a chariot so beautiful (on returning in triumph).'

117. Con, 'compared with.'

118. Combusto: cf. Inf. I, 75. At the prayer of the scorched earth, Phaethon, the unsuccessful driver of the chariot of the sun, was stricken down by Jove, who thus punished the crime which, for unknown reasons, he had allowed: Met., II, 227-332. Cf. Inf. XVII, 107.

122. Red is the color of Love, or Charity, the greatest of the three Christian virtues. Cf. VIII, 88-93.

124. 'The next' is Hope, whose color is green.

126. Mossa, 'fallen.' White symbolizes Faith.

127. Tratte, 'led.' Hope must arise either from Faith or from Love: cf. St. Thomas, Summa Theologiae, Secunda Secundæ, Qu. xvii, Art. 7 and 8. Love, the foundation of all goodness (1 Cor. xiii, 2), sets the pace by her song for the other two virtues.

130. The four beside the left wheel are the cardinal virtues, Prudence, Temperance, Justice, and Fortitude. Cf. I, 22-7.

131. They are clad in 'purple' (which in the Middle Ages was a color nearly identical with red) to indicate that they depend for their existence on Love: see

D' una di lor, ch' avea tre occhi in testa.
 Appresso tutto il pertrattato nodo,
 Vidi due vecchi in abito dispari,
 Ma pari in atto ed onesto e sodo. 135
 L' un si mostrava alcun de' famigliari
 Di quel sommo Ippocrate che natura
 Agli animali fe' ch' ell' ha più cari.
 Mostrava l' altro la contraria cura
 Con una spada lucida ed acuta, 140
 Tal che di qua dal rio mi fe' paura.
 Poi vidi quattro in umile paruta,
 E dietro da tutti un veglio solo
 Venir dormendo, con la faccia arguta.
 E questi sette col primaio stuolo 145
 Erano abitudiati, ma di gigli
 Dintorno al capo non facevan brolo,
 Anzi di rose e d' altri fior vermigli;

St. Thomas, Summa Theologia, Prima Secundæ, Qu. lxxv, Art. 2. Cf. Moore, III, 184-6.

132. Their leader is Prudence, who sees past, present, and future. Cf. Conv., IV, xvii, 81-4; IV, xxvii, 42-6. Also St. Thomas, Summa Theologia, Prima Secundæ, Qu. lxxv, Art. 1; Tertia, Qu. xi, Art. 1.

133. Il pertrattato nodo, 'the group described.'

138. Nature created Hippocrates, the famous Greek doctor and father of medical science, for the benefit of mankind. His follower represents the book of the Acts of the Apostles, written by 'Luke, the beloved physician' (Colossians iv, 14).

140. 'The other,' who seemed more disposed to cut than to cure, represents the Epistles of Paul. St. Paul is generally pictured with a sword, perhaps 'the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God' of Ephesians vi, 17; cf. Hebrews iv, 12.

142. The 'four of humble mien' are the minor Epistles, those of Peter, James, John, and Jude.

144. The 'old man' stands for the Revelation of St. John the Divine, the last book of the New Testament. In art John is often depicted asleep. It was commonly believed that he was sleeping in Ephesus, not to wake until the Judgment Day: see A. Bassermann in the Zeitschrift zur vergleichenden Literaturgeschichte, VIII, 2.

145. They were dressed 'like the first band,' the 24 elders.

147. Brolo, 'garland.' Instead of white wreaths, they had red, symbolic of love.

Giurato avria poco lontano aspetto,
Che tutti ardesser di sopra dai cigli.
E quando il carro a me fu a rimpetto,
Un tuon s' udì; e quelle genti degne
Parvero aver l' andar più interdetto,
Fermandos' ivi con le prime insegne.

150

149. Aspetto, 'eye' (i. e., spectator), is the subject of avria.

154. 'The first ensigns' are the candlesticks with their streamers.

CANTO XXX

ARGUMENT

AT the culmination of a climax subtly contrived at every step to whet increasingly the reader's curiosity and to intensify his impression of majesty and loveliness, Beatrice emerges into view from the midst of a rain of flowers. And before he sees her features, Dante recognizes her by the love that fills him. Inasmuch as the Christian Church is founded on Revelation, from which it derives its authority, Beatrice now appears as its dominating spirit and mouthpiece, and takes back to herself its power and its functions. She it is who leads the penitent through contrition, confession, and satisfaction to the final remission of sin, administered under her direction. Contrition, the first stage of the sacrament of penance, must spring from a full recognition of guilt. Just as Lady Philosophy greets with stern rebuke the captive Boethius, in De Consolatione Philosophiæ, I, Pr. ii, so the divine Beatrice bitterly chides Dante for his recreancy after the death of her mortal part. Without entering upon specific charges, she accuses him of having forsaken the true way and 'given himself to others,' following 'false images of good.' Worldliness, ambition, unworthy companionship or unworthy love — among these is perhaps to be found the fault so discreetly recalled. Canto XXXI will perhaps afford a clue. The first word the accuser speaks (l. 56) is Dante's name, which occurs nowhere else in the poem. 'Di necessità qui si registra,' the author explains (l. 63): without this humiliating record of his identity, his confession — which is not merely an incident in the fiction, but also a real admission, before the world, of real sin — would have been incomplete.

Quando il settentrion del primo cielo, —

Che nè occaso mai seppe nè orto,

Nè d' altra nebbia che di colpa velo,

1. The Septentrion is the constellation of Ursa Minor, the Little Dipper, which contains the North Star, the sailors' guide. The seven candlesticks, representing the sevenfold Spirit of the Lord, are called the Septentrion, or sevenfold guiding light, of the 'first heaven,' or Empyrean. — Settentrion is the subject of si affisse in l. 7.

3. Nothing but man's sinfulness has ever hidden from him the light of the Spirit of the Lord.

E che faceva lì ciascuno accorto
 Di suo dover, come il più basso face 5
 Qual timon gira per venire a porto, —
 Fermo si affisse, la gente verace,
 Venuta prima tra il grifone ed esso,
 Al carro volse sè, come a sua pace.
 Ed un di loro, quasi da ciel messo, 10
 ‘Veni, sponsa, de Libano!’ cantando,
 Gridò tre volte, e tutti gli altri appresso.
 Quali i beati al novissimo bando
 Surgeran presti ognun di sua caverna,
 La rivestita voce alleluando, 15
 Cotali, in sulla divina basterna,
 Si levar cento (ad vocem tanti senis)
 Ministri e messaggier di vita eterna.
 Tutti dicean: ‘Benedictus qui venis!’
 E, fior gittando di sopra e dintorno, 20
 ‘Manibus o dale lilia plenis!’

4. Lì: in the procession of the Church.

5. Il più basso (sc., scittrion): the real Ursa Minor, in the starry sphere, below the Empyrean.

6. Qual, ‘him who’: the helmsman.

7. The ‘truthful people’ are the elders representing the prophetic Old Testament.

10. The one who stands for the Song of Solomon.

11. Song of Solomon iv, 8: ‘Come with me from Lebanon, my spouse.’ The ‘spouse’ is the Church. In the Vulgate the word veni, ‘come,’ occurs three times.

13. Novissimo bando, ‘last trump.’

15. An absolute construction. — Rev. xix, 1: ‘And after those things I heard a great voice of much people in Heaven, saying, Alleluia.’

16. Basterna, ‘carriage.’

17. A hundred angels suddenly arose ‘at the voice of so great an elder.’ The Latin, appropriate enough to the ecclesiastical tone of the whole passage, is evidently needed here to prepare for the coming rhymes.

19. Mat. xxi, 9: ‘And the multitudes that went before, and that followed’ (Christ as he entered Jerusalem), ‘cried, saying, Hosanna to the son of David: Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord.’ The last clause is taken from Ps. cxviii (Vulg. cxvii), 26. Dante changes venit, ‘cometh,’ to venis, ‘comest.’ — The elder has sung the invitation of Christ to the Church; the angels in the chariot of the Church now respond with the greeting to Christ.

21. Æn., vi, 883: ‘Oh, give lilies with full hands!’ On the point of dismissing

Io vidi già nel cominciar del giorno
 La parte orïental tutta rosata,
 E l' altro ciel di bel sereno adorno,
 E la faccia del sol nascere ombrata, 25
 Sì che per temperanza di vapori
 L' occhio la sostenea lunga fiata;
 Così dentro una nuvola di fiori,
 Che dalle mani angeliche saliva,
 E ricadea in giù dentro e di fuori, 30
 Sopra candido vel cinta d' oliva
 Donna m' apparve, sotto verde manto
 Vestita di color di fiamma viva.
 E lo spirito mio, che già cotanto
 Tempo era stato che alla sua presenza 35
 Non era di stupor tremando affranto,
 Senza degli occhi aver più conoscenza,
 Per occulta virtù che da lei mosse,
 D' antico amor sentì la gran potenza.
 Tosto che nella vista mi percosse 40
 L' alta virtù, che già m' avea trafitto
 Prima ch' io fuor di puerizia fosse,
 Volsimi alla sinistra col rispetto

Virgil from his narrative, Dante pays him the supreme honor of putting a phrase from his Aeneid into the mouth of angels, together with words from the Bible.

22. Io vidi già, 'I have sometimes seen.'

26. Temperanza, 'tempering.'

31. 'Garlanded with olive over a white veil.' Olive is the emblem of peace. In these three lines are the colors of the three Christian virtues; but green, the symbol of hope, really occurs twice. In XXXI, 116, Beatrice's eyes, too, are green; and in Par. XXXI, 79, she is addressed as 'donna in cui mia speranza vige.'

35, 36. 'Had been so long without being stricken with awe, trembling, in her presence.' Cf. V. N., II, 10-25; XI, 17-25; XIV, 24-34; XXIV, 1-5. As Beatrice had died in 1290 (V. N., XXX, 7-13), Dante had not seen her, except in dreams, for ten years: cf. Purg. XXXII, 2.

42. When Dante first saw Beatrice, he was but nine years old: V. N., II, 1-6.

43. Rispetto, 'expectation,' is a noun taken from the old verb ri- or re-spillare, 'expect,' which occurs in the Fiore. The word is used also by G. Villani.

Col quale il fantolin corre alla mamma,
 Quando ha paura o quando egli è afflitto, 45
 Per dicere a Virgilio: 'Men che dramma
 Di sangue m'è rimaso che non tremi;
 Conosco i segni dell' antica fiamma.'
 Ma Virgilio n' avea lasciati scemi
 Di sè — Virgilio, dolcissimo padre — 50
 Virgilio, a cui per mia salute die' mi!
 Nè quantunque perdè l' antica madre
 Valse alle guance nette di rugiada,
 Che lagrimando non tornassero adre.
 'Dante, perchè Virgilio se ne vada, 55
 Non pianger anco, non pianger ancora;
 Chè pianger ti convien per altra spada!'
 Quasi ammiraglio, che in poppa ed in prora
 Viene a veder la gente che ministra
 Per gli altri legni, ed a ben far la incuora, 60
 In su la sponda del carro sinistra,
 Quando mi volsi al suon del nome mio,
 Che di necessità qui si registra,
 Vidi la Donna, che pria m' appario
 Velata sotto l' angelica festa, 65
 Drizzar gli occhi ver me di qua dal rio,

48. Cf. Æn., IV, 23: 'Agnosco veteris vestigia flammæ.'

49. Scemi, 'bereft.' This parting, so intensely pathetic in the literal narrative, corresponds spiritually to the shock experienced by the soul passing from the guidance of Reason to that of divine Authority.

52. Not all Eden . . .

53. 'Could prevent my dew-cleansed cheeks': cf. I, 121-9.

54. 'From being darkened once more by weeping.' — Adre = atre.

55. Perchè, 'though.'

56. Anco, 'yet.'

57. Hebrews iv, 12: 'For the word of God is quick, and powerful, and sharper than any two-edged sword, . . . and is a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart.'

59. Ministra, 'serves.' Cf. Æn., VI, 302: 'Ipse ratem conto subigit, velisque ministrat.'

Tutto che il vel che le scendea di testa,
 Cerchiato dalla fronde di Minerva,
 Non la lasciasse parer manifesta.
 Regalmente, nell' atto ancor proterva, 70
 Continùò, come colui che dice
 E il più caldo parlar dietro serva:
 'Guardaci ben! Ben sem, ben sem Beatrice!
 Come degnasti d' accedere al monte?
 Non sapei tu che qui è l' uom felice?' 75
 Gli occhi mi cadder giù nel chiaro fonte;
 Ma veggendomi in esso, i trassi all' erba,
 Tanta vergogna mi gravò la fronte.
 Così la madre al figlio par superba
 Com' ella parve a me, perchè d' amaro 80
 Sente il sapor della pietate acerba.
 Ella si tacque, e gli Angeli cantaro
 Di subito: 'In te, Domine, speravi,'
 Ma oltre 'pedes meos' non passaro.
 Sì come neve tra le vive travi 85

67. Tutto che, 'although.'

68. Cerchiato, 'wreathed.' — The olive was sacred to Minerva. The phrase perhaps suggests that peace comes through knowledge; cf. the 'warfare of ignorance' in XX, 145.

70. Proterva, 'wrathful.' Her anger shows itself in the impetuosity of the following speech.

72. Il più caldo: his hottest rebukes. — Dietro serva, 'reserves for the end.' Cf. Conv., II, ix, 9-13.

73. Beatrice speaks in the first person plural, like a monarch.

74. Degnasti, 'hast thou deigned.' From the imperiousness of the first line, she passes abruptly to the irony of the second, and thence, with equal suddenness, to the direct rebuke of the third. — Cf. Ps. xxiv (Vulg. xxiii), 3, 4.

75. Sapei = sapevi.

77. I = li. — Contrition is caused by seeing our real selves.

81. Acerba, 'unripe': pity that is not yet ready to reveal itself.

83. Ps. xxxi (Vulg. xxx): 'In thee, O Lord, do I put my trust.' It expresses trust and gratitude, and prays for continued defence and deliverance.

84. Verse 8 (Vulg. 9) ends with: 'thou hast set my feet in a large room' (Vulg.: 'statuisti in loco spatioso pedes meos'). After this verse the tone of the psalm is rather mournful than jubilant.

85. The 'living rafters' are trees.

Per lo dosso d' Italia si congela,
 Soffiata e stretta dalli venti schiavi,
 Poi liquefatta in sè stessa trapela, —
 Pur che la terra che perde ombra spiri, —
 Sì che par foco fonder la candela: 90
 Così fui senza lagrime e sospiri
 Anzi il cantar di quei che notan sempre
 Dietro alle note degli eterni giri;
 Ma poi che intesi nelle dolci tempre
 Lor compatire a me, — più che se detto 95
 Avesser: 'Donna, perchè sì lo stembre?' —
 Lo gel che m' era intorno al cor ristretto
 Spirito ed acqua fessi, e con angoscia
 Per la bocca e per gli occhi uscì del petto.
 Ella, pur ferma in su la detta coscia 100
 Del carro stando, alle sustanzie pie
 Volse le sue parole così poscia:
 'Voi vigilate nell' eterno dìe,
 Sì che notte nè sonno a voi non fura
 Passo che faccia il secol per sue vie; 105
 Onde la mia risposta è con più cura
 Che m' intenda colui che di là piagne,

86. The 'back of Italy' is the Apennine range.

87. Stretta, 'packed.' — Schiavi, 'Slavic.'

89. Pur che, 'if but.' — 'The land that loses shadow' is the African desert, where the sun is sometimes directly overhead.

90. Cf. Ps. lxviii, 2 (Vulg. lxvii, 3): 'as wax melteth before the fire.'

92. Notan, 'sing.'

93. In harmony with the music of the spheres. Cf. Par. I, 78, 82.

94. Tempre, 'airs.'

96. Stembre, 'confoundest.'

98. Fessi = si fece. — It is the pity of the angels that finally awakens complete contrition of the heart, the first stage of the sacrament of penance.

100. Detta coscia, 'aforesaid (l. 61) flank' of the chariot.

101. The 'kindly substances' are the angels.

103. Dìe = di, 'day.'

104. A voi . . . fura, 'steals from you' a single step of the world's course.

106. È con più cura, 'is more concerned.'

Perchè sia colpa e duol d' una misura.
 Non pur per opra delle rote magne,
 Che drizzan ciascun seme ad alcun fine, 110
 Secondo che le stelle son compagne,
 Ma per larghezza di grazie divine
 Che sì alti vapori hanno a lor piova
 Che nostre viste là non van vicine,
 Questi fu tal nella sua vita nuova, 115
 Virtüalmente, ch' ogni abito destro
 Fatto averebbe in lui mirabil prova.
 Ma tanto più maligno e più silvestro
 Si fa il terren col mal seme e non colto,
 Quant' egli ha più del buon vigor terrestre. 120
 Alcun tempo il sostenni col mio volto;
 Mostrando gli occhi giovinetti a lui,
 Meco il menava in dritta parte volto.
 Sì tosto come in su la soglia fui
 Di mia seconda etade, e mutai vita, 125
 Questi si tolse a me e diessi altrui.
 Quando di carne a spirto era salita,
 E bellezza e virtù cresciuta m' era,
 Fu' io a lui men cara e men gradita;

109. The 'great wheels' are the revolving heavens, which determine, by the arrangement of the stars at his birth, the disposition of every human being.

112. God bestows upon every individual a special degree of grace, upon which his keenness of spiritual vision depends. The reasons that govern God's uneven distribution of grace neither men nor angels can fathom. His graces rain down from so high — 'have such high vapors for their rain' (l. 113) — that no eye can approach their source. See St. Thomas, Summa Theologiæ, Prima, Qu. lvii, Art. 5. Cf. Conv., IV, xxi, 100-5.

115. Questi: Dante. — Nuova, 'young.'

116. Virtüalmente, 'potentially.' — Abito destro, 'right disposition.'

125. The 'second age,' gioventù, begins at 25; see Conv., IV, xxiv, 3-5, 11-3. — Dante was born (probably) in May, 1265. Beatrice, who was nearly a year younger (V. N., II, 9-15), was doubtless born in the first third of 1266. She died in June, 1290: V. N., XXX, 1-13. — Mutai: 'changed' the temporal for the eternal.

126. Diessi = si diede.

E volse i passi suoi per via non vera, 130
 Imagini di ben seguendo false,
 Che nulla promission rendono intera.
 Nè impetrare spirazion mi valse,
 Con le quali ed in sogno ed altrimenti
 Lo rivocai; sì poco a lui ne calse. 135
 Tanto giù cadde che tutti argomenti
 Alla salute sua eran già corti,
 Fuor che mostrargli le perdute genti.
 Per questo visitai l' uscio dei morti,
 Ed a colui che l' ha quassù condotto 140
 Li preghi miei piangendo furon porti.
 Alto fato di Dio sarebbe rotto,
 Se Letè si passasse e tal vivanda
 Fosse gustata senza alcuno scotto
 Di pentimento che lagrime spanda.' 145

131. Boethius uses the phrase 'imagines veri boni' in Cons., III, Pr. ix. Cf. Purg. XVI, 91.

132. Promission, 'promise': cf. XXVIII, 138. — Cf. Cons., III, Pr. viii: 'hæ quæ nec præstare quæ pollicentur bona possunt.'

133. 'And it availed me not to obtain (from God) inspirations.' See V. N., XL, 1-26; XLII, Sonnet XXV; XLIII, 1-6.

136. Argomenti, 'means.'

142. Fato, 'decree.'

143. The 'viand' is the living water of Lethe.

144. Scotto, 'payment.' It would be contrary to God's justice to allow forgetfulness of sin without previous contrition.

CANTO XXXI

ARGUMENT

Contritio cordis is followed by confessio oris and satisfactio operis, after which comes remission of sin. This whole solemn and elaborate episode — far more elaborate than the allegory itself would seem to require — strikes one as having been devised by the author partly for the purpose of making real amends for past wrong, and setting himself right before the world. What may have been the nature of the guilt thus expiated, as it were, by avowal? Was it a mundane love or an undue literary or scientific ambition? Our evidence is slight.

On the completion of Dante's confession Beatrice rebukes him once more, 'that he may be stronger another time when he hears the sirens' (ll. 44-5). It will be remembered that in Dante's second dream a siren (XIX, 19) represented the sins of the flesh. On the other hand, in De Consolatione Philosophiæ, I, Pr. i, in a situation somewhat analogous to the one under discussion, Philosophy, finding the exiled and imprisoned author in the company of the muses of poetry, drives them away, saying: 'Sed abite potius, Sirenes usque in exilium dulces, meisque eum Musis curandum relinquit' — the sirens of poetry must yield the place to the muses of philosophy. Beatrice's 'sirens,' then, can be used on either side of the argument.

A few lines further on (58-60), after recalling the keen sorrow and disappointment that came to him from her own departure from this world, Beatrice declares that he should not have allowed any 'little maid, or other so short-lived vanity,' to attach him to earth, to be wounded again. Here the question arises anew: is the pargoletta to be taken literally, or does she symbolize some intellectual pursuit (for instance, poetry, as the author's son Pietro thought)? Dante's sixth ballad begins 'Io mi son pargoletta bella e nova.' Now this lyric, from its tone and style, seems distinctly to belong to the same group as the tenth ballad and the first two canzoni of the Convivio (also, probably, Canzone IX and a few miscellaneous shorter poems), all concerned with a maiden who, Dante tells us (Conv., II, ii), is identical with the compassionate lady of the latter part of the Vita Nuova (Ch. XXXVI-XL, Son.

XIX-XXII). This young person attracted his notice and then his affection by her apparent pity for him after the death of Beatrice. Of his passion for her — a harmless enough infatuation, as far as one can judge — he was profoundly ashamed (V. N., XXXVIII-XL); his acquaintances, no doubt, and his literary circle were likewise dissatisfied and expressed their disapproval of his celebration of this pargoletta. When, therefore, he undertook the Convivio, he did so partly to defend himself from such criticism (Conv., I, ii, 114-30) by showing that the poems in question are allegorical, the lady being none other than Philosophy (Conv., II, xiii). For the unprejudiced reader of the Vita Nuova it is difficult, if not impossible, to believe that the sympathetic young lady there described is a purely allegorical figure. The incident is peculiarly lifelike; and such an allegory is quite foreign to the spirit of that early work. It is certainly true that Dante found comfort in the study of philosophy at about the same time that he was consoled by the sight of this donna gentile. It would have been, then, quite in accordance with his practice (with the example of Boethius before him) to make her the symbol of the consolation of Philosophy, and of Philosophy herself; and it would have been equally natural for him, when his moody yearning for her had died away, to try to forget that she had ever been anything more to him than the embodiment of the subject of his absorbing study. To make others accept her as a pure symbol was one of the objects of the Convivio. It is noteworthy that this treatise was never finished. Dante's conscience, apparently, was ill at ease; and here, in the Commedia, he at last tells the whole truth, admitting that his love for the pargoletta was not merely an innocent devotion to that 'figlia d' Iddio, regina di tutto, nobilissima e bellissima Filosofia' (Conv., II, xiii, 71-2), but also, and originally, a sentiment deserving reprobation. Now, as far as we can see, Dante's devotion to Philosophy never ceased, his admiration never waned; throughout the Commedia, as in the Convivio, she is the handmaid of religion and, though not omniscient, the guide to revelation. That she ever was a dangerous companion for him, or that he ever thought of his pursuit of her as excessive, there is no clear indication. He could scarcely have referred to her, at any time, as a 'short-lived vanity.' If, then, we are to see in the pargoletta of the Commedia anything more than a woman, it is more likely that she represented, to Dante's repentant mind, a whole mode of life and thought, a practical, imaginative, and artistic materialism inconsistent with the spiritual ideal he always cherished.

An interesting question remains, and we have no means of answering it. What part, if any, in Dante's guilt and confession had the damsel of the Casentino, that mysterious 'Pietra' to whom the poet dedicated his most impassioned lyrics, unsurpassed in beauty by any of those inspired by Beatrice or the donna gentile? Even if these poems were composed long after 1300, they must have been present in the author's memory when he wrote this canto. Are we to see a reference to 'Pietra' in the 'altra vinità con sì breve uso'? And, if so, does she stand for some other mood of the poet, some other mundane interest or aspiration?

'O tu, che sei di là dal fiume sacro,'
 Volgendo suo parlare a me per punta,
 Che pur per taglio m' era paruto acro,
 Ricominciò, seguendo senza cunta,
 'Di', di', se questo è vero! A tanta accusa
 Tua confession conviene esser congiunta.'
 Era la mia virtù tanto confusa
 Che la voce sì mosse, e pria si spense
 Che dagli organi suoi fosse dischiusa.
 Poco sofferse, poi disse: 'Che pense?
 Rispondi a me; chè le memorie triste
 In te non sono ancor dall' acqua offense.'
 Confusione e paura insieme miste
 Mi pinsero un tal 'sì' fuor della bocca

2. Per punta, 'with the point.' Her speech is a sword: cf. XXX, 57.

3. Per taglio, 'with the edge,' i. e., addressed to me indirectly, being ostensibly directed to the angels: cf. XXX, 103-8. — Acro, 'keen': cf. IX, 136.

4. Cunta, 'delay.'

10. Sofferse, 'she waited.' — Che pense: cf. Inf. V, III.

12. Acqua: of Lethe. — Offense, 'impaired.'

Al quale intender fur mestier le viste. 15
 Come balestro frange, quando scocca
 Da troppa tesa, la sua corda e l' arco,
 E con men foga l' asta il segno tocca,
 Sì scoppia' io sott' esso grave carco,
 Fuori sgorgando lagrime e sospiri, 20
 E la voce allentò per lo suo varco.
 Ond' ella a me: 'Per entro i miei disiri,
 Che ti menavano ad amar lo bene
 Di là dal qual non è a che si aspiri,
 Quai fossi attraversati o quai catene 25
 Trovasti, per che del passare innanzi
 Dovessiti così spogliar la spene?
 E quali agevolezze o quali avanzi
 Nella fronte degli altri si mostraro,
 Per che dovessi lor passeggiare anzi?' 30
 Dopo la tratta d' un sospiro amaro,
 A pena ebbi la voce che rispose,
 E le labbra a fatica la formaro.
 Piangendo dissi: 'Le presenti cose
 Col falso lor piacer volser miei passi, 35
 Tosto che il vostro viso si nascose.'
 Ed ella: 'Se tacessi, o se negassi

17. Da troppa tesa, 'from excessive tension.' — Corda and arco are objects of frange in l. 16.

18. Foga, 'force.' — Asta, 'shaft.'

21. Cf. En., XI, 150-1:

'hæret lacrimansque remensque
Et via vix tandem voci laxata dolore est.'

25. Obstacles, such as were used to prevent the passage of a hostile army or fleet. — Fossi attraversati, 'cross ditches.'

28. Agevolezze, 'comforts.' — Avanzi, 'advantages.'

29. Altri, sc., beni: cf. l. 23.

30. Lor passeggiare anzi, 'dally with them.' Cino da Pistoia (ed. Bindi and Fanfani, Sonnet LII), describing spiritual contemplation of his beloved, says: 'Quando davanti passo.'

31. Tratta, 'heaving.'

Ciò che confessi, non fora men nota
 La colpa tua: da tal giudice sassi!
 Ma quando scoppia dalla propria gota 40
 L' accusa del peccato, in nostra corte
 Rivolge sè contra il taglio la rota.
 Tuttavia, perchè mo vergogna porte
 Del tuo errore, e perchè altra volta
 Udendo le Sirene sie più forte, 45
 Pon giù il seme del piangere, ed ascolta;
 Sì udirai come in contraria parte
 Mover doveati mia carne sepolta.
 Mai non t' appresentò natura o arte
 Piacer, quanto le belle membra in ch' io 50
 Rinchiusa fui, e sono in terra sparte.
 E se il sommo piacer sì ti fallio
 Per la mia morte, qual cosa mortale
 Dovea poi trarre te nel suo disio?
 Ben ti dovevi, per lo primo strale 55
 Delle cose fallaci, levar suso
 Diretro a me che non era più tale.
 Non ti dovea gravar le penne in giuso,
 Ad aspettar più colpi, o pargoletta
 O altra vanità con sì breve uso. 60

39. Sassi = si sa.

40. The use of gota, 'cheek,' instead of 'lips,' was perhaps suggested, not only by the rhyme, but also by the idea of the blush of shame that accompanies the words.

42. 'The grindstone turns back against the edge': the sword of justice is blunted, i. e., tempered with mercy.

43. Porte = (tu) porti.

46. The odd phrase, 'the seed of weeping,' is evidently due to a reminiscence of Ps. cxxvi (Vulg. cxxv), 5: 'They that sow in tears shall reap in joy.'

50. Piacer quanto, 'a delight equal to' . . . Cf. F. V., Sonnets XV, XVI.

51. Cf. Gen. iii, 19: 'unto dust shalt thou return.'

57. Tale: i. e., fallace.

58. The subjects of dovea are pargoletta, 'little maid,' and altra vanità, in ll. 59, 60.

60. Uso, 'duration.' — Cf. Eccles. i, 2: 'Vanity of vanities.'

Nuovo augelletto due o tre aspetta;
 Ma dinanzi dagli occhi dei pennuti
 Rete si spiega indarno o si saetta.'
 Quali i fanciulli vergognando muti,
 Con gli occhi a terra, stannosi ascoltando 65
 E sè riconoscendo e ripentuti,
 Tal mi stava io. Ed ella disse: 'Quando
 Per udir sei dolente, alza la barba,
 E prenderai più doglia riguardando.'
 Con men di resistenza si dibarba 70
 Robusto cerro, o vero al nostral vento
 O vero a quel della terra di Iarba,
 Ch' io non levai al suo comando il mento;
 E quando per la barba il viso chiese,
 Ben conobbi il velen dell' argomento. 75
 E come la mia faccia si distese,
 Posarsi quelle prime creature
 Da loro aspersion l' occhio comprese;
 E le mie luci, ancor poco sicure,
 Vider Beatrice volta in su la fiera 80

61. Nuovo, 'young.' — Due o tre, sc., colpi: cf. l. 59.

62. Pennuti, 'full-fledged': experienced.

63. Cf. Pr. i, 17: 'Surely in vain the net is spread in the sight of any bird' — 'ante oculos pennatorum.'

66. Sè riconoscendo, 'conscience-stricken.'

67. Quando, 'since.'

68. In the Middle Ages, barba, in many regions, meant both 'beard' and 'chin': cf. Zeitschrift für romanische Philologie, XXXIV, 191. Dante apparently plays on the double sense of the word.

70. Si dibarba, 'is uprooted.'

71. Nostral, 'native,' coming from our pole.

72. Iarbas was king of Libya: Æn., IV, 106.

75. The 'venom of her speech' consists in the implication that the beard, the plumage of the full-fledged (cf. l. 42), is inconsistent with Dante's youthful vagaries.

76. Si distese, 'was upstretched.'

77, 78. 'My eye perceived those primal creatures (the angels) resting from their sprinkling (of flowers).'

80. Volta in su la fiera, 'turned toward the animal' (the griffin).

Ch' è sola una persona in due nature.
 Sotto suo velo, ed oltre la riviera,
 Vincer pareami più sè stessa antica —
 Vincer — che l' altre qui, quand' ella c' era.
 Di penter sì mi punse ivi l' ortica 85
 Che di tutt' altre cose, qual mi torse
 Più nel suo amor, più mi si fe' nimica.
 Tanta riconoscenza il cor mi morse
 Ch' io caddi vinto; e quale allora femmi,
 Salsi colei che la cagion mi porse. 90
 Poi quando il cor di fuor virtù rendemmi,
 La Donna ch' io avea trovata sola
 Sopra me vidi, e dicea: 'Tiemmi, tiemmi.'
 Tratto m' avea nel fiume infino a gola,
 E tirandosi me dietro, sen giva 95
 Sopr' esso l' acqua, lieve come spola.
 Quando fui presso alla beata riva,
 'Asperges me' sì dolcemente udissi
 Ch' io nol so rimembrar, non ch' io lo scriva.
 La bella Donna nelle braccia aprissi, 100
 Abbracciommi la testa, e mi sommerse
 Ove convenne ch' io l' acqua inghiottissi;

84. Vincer, 'surpass,' is insistently repeated. — Che l' altre, 'than she surpassed all other women.'

86. Di, 'of.' — Qual mi torse, 'whatsoever one had drawn me.'

88. Riconoscenza, 'remorse.' — This swoon evidently represents satisfaction, the last stage of the sacrament of penance.

89. Femmi = mi f.i., i. e., mi feci.

90. Salsi = se lo sa.

91. Di fuor virtù, 'my outward faculties,' my senses.

92. Donna: Matilda.

93. Tiemmi = tienimi, 'cling to me.'

98. Ps. li, 7 (Vulg. l, 9.): 'Purge me with hyssop, and I shall be clean: wash me, and I shall be whiter than snow' — a verse that accompanies absolution. — Udissi = si udì.

99. Non che, 'far less.'

100. Nelle braccia aprissi (= si aprì), 'spread her arms open.' The figure in the poet's mind seems to be that of a butterfly unfolding its wings.

Indi mi tolse, e bagnato mi offerse
 Dentro alla danza delle quattro belle,
 E ciascuna del braccio mi coperse. 105
 'Noi sem qui ninfe, e nel ciel semo stelle.
 Pria che Beatrice discendesse al mondo,
 Fummo ordinate a lei per sue ancelle.
 Merrenti agli occhi suoi; ma nel giocondo
 Lume ch' è dentro aguzzeranno i tuoi 110
 Le tre di là, che miran più profondo.'
 Così cantando cominciare; e poi
 Al petto del grifon seco menarmi,
 Ove Beatrice stava volta a noi.
 Disser: 'Fa che le viste non risparmi! 115
 Posto t' avem dinanzi agli smeraldi
 Ond' Amor già ti trasse le sue armi.'
 Mille disiri più che fiamma caldi
 Strinsermi gli occhi agli occhi rilucenti,
 Che pur sopra il grifone stavan saldi. 120
 Come in lo specchio il sol, non altrimenti
 La doppia fiera dentro vi raggiava,
 Or con uni, or con altri reggimenti.
 Pensa, lettor, s' io mi maravigliava,
 Quando vedea la cosa in sè star queta, 125

106. Sem = siamo. — Stelle: cf. I, 23; VIII, 91. — The cardinal virtues, which are within the reach of pagans (VII, 34-6), are both human and divine. They existed before God revealed himself to man.

109. Merrenti = ti meneremo.

111. Le tre: the theological virtues, who are beside the right wheel. The cardinal virtues may lead up to Revelation, but the Christian virtues are needed for its comprehension.

116. The eyes of Beatrice are called emeralds: green is the color of hope. The emerald, too, was thought to preserve and strengthen the sight.

117. Trasse, 'shot.' Cf. V. N., Canzone I, 70-3; Sonnet XI, 1.

120. The eyes of Revelation are fixed upon Christ alone.

123. Now with its human, now with its divine 'bearing.' Revealed theology analyzes the nature of Christ into its two component parts, although in reality they are eternally fused into one.

E nell' idolo suo si trasmutava.
 Mentre che, piena di stupore e lieta,
 L' anima mia gustava di quel cibo
 Che saziando di sè, di sè asseta;
 Sè dimostrando di più alto tribo 130
 Negli atti, l' altre tre si fero avanti,
 Danzando al loro angelico caribo.
 'Volgi, Beatrice, volgi gli occhi santi,'
 Era la lor canzone, 'al tuo fedele,
 Che per vederti ha mossi passi tanti! 135
 Per grazia fa noi grazia che disvele
 A lui la bocca tua, sì che discerna
 La seconda bellezza che tu cele!'
 O isplendor di viva luce eterna,
 Chi pallido si fece sotto l' ombra 140
 Sì di Parnaso, o bevve in sua cisterna,
 Che non paresse aver la mente ingombra,
 Tentando a render te qual tu paresti
 Là dove, armonizzando, il ciel t' adombra,
 Quando nell' aere aperto ti solvesti? 145

126. Idolo, 'image.'

129. Cf. Eccclus. xxiv, 29.

130. Tribò, 'order.'

132. Caribo, 'measure.' Caribo is a kind of dance music.

138. The first beauty is the eyes; the second, the mouth. Cf. Conv., III, xv, 12-23: 'E qui si conviene sapere che gli occhi della Sapienza sono le sue dimostrazioni, colle quali si vede la Verità certissimamente; e l' suo riso sono le sue persuasioni, nelle quali si dimostra la luce interiore della Sapienza sotto alcuno velamento: e in queste due si sente quel piacere altissimo di beatitudine, il qual è massimo bene in Paradiso. Questo piacere in altra cosa di quaggiù esser non può, se non nel guardare in questi occhi e in questo riso.'

140. Chi, 'who ever?'

144. T'adombra, 'is thine only veil.' Brunetto Latini, describing Lady Nature (in imitation of Boethius's picture of Lady Philosophy), says, in the Tesoretto, III, 29-30:

'Talor toccava il cielo
 Sì che pareva suo velo.'

145. Ti solvesti, 'didst unfold thyself.'

CANTO XXXII

ARGUMENT

WHEN the sinner has chosen the road to reformation, the Church comes to meet him, takes him to itself, directs him in the way he should go, and leads him Heavenward. Such is the spiritual meaning of the procession which comes out of the east, stops opposite Dante, receives him as a companion, and then, turning to the right, wheels about and marches eastward, with the sun and the seven candlesticks in front — with God-given intelligence and the sevenfold Spirit of the Lord as its guides. These movements, however, probably contain also an historical allegory: the Church originated in the Orient, made its way westward to the Atlantic, and then took up its abode in Rome, midway between its eastern and its western frontier. This last event is symbolized by the halt of the band after it has gone back a distance of some three arrow shots, — that is, perhaps, has crossed Spain, France, and Italy. Then Beatrice descends from her chariot beneath the tree of Law: the Church puts itself under the authority of the State. Christ himself is careful not to trespass on the field of temporal power, as is shown by the griffin's forbearing to harm the tree. 'Let every soul be subject unto the higher powers,' says St. Paul in Romans xiii, 1. 'For there is no power but of God: the powers that be are ordained of God.'

Law naturally takes the form, 'thou shalt not'; and the tree of knowledge of good and evil, the subject of God's first prohibition to man (Gen. ii, 17), is a fit symbol of divine Law. This tree, of vast height, is shaped like those in the circle of gluttony (XXII, 132-5), its offshoots: it tapers downward, the branches being long above and short below, so that no one can climb it — a token of prohibition. According to a legend wide-spread in the Middle Ages, Seth, returning to the Garden of Eden, found there a bare tree of lofty stature, the tree of knowledge, thus denuded since his parents' disobedience (Gen. iii, 6, 17); taking a branch, — or, as another version says, three seeds of the apple eaten by Adam, — he planted another tree, from which, later, the Cross was made. Thus sin and atonement sprang from the same wood. Dante's tree is likewise bare until the griffin, Christ, draws up the chariot of the Church and, fastening the pole — which is the Cross — to the mother trunk, 'leaves bound to it that which came from it' (l. 51). Then the tree clothes itself in purple foliage — divine Law is revived in the form of Empire. Church and State being thus allied, humanity enjoys (or would have enjoyed, had this ideal condition lasted) a perfect tranquillity, which is symbolized by the deep sleep into which Dante now falls, as he listens to a mysterious hymn of peace.

When the sleeper comes to himself, he finds that the scene has been transformed. Christ and the Scriptures have left the earth and returned to Heaven, whence they came. They have left below as their representative the Church, with Revelation for its guide, and the sevenfold Spirit of God in the keeping of the seven Virtues. A change as wonderful as this was experienced once before, when the three disciples who had witnessed the Transfiguration recovered from their fright. Mat. xvii, 1-8: 'And after six days Jesus taketh Peter, James, and John his brother, and bringeth them up into an high mountain apart. And was transfigured before them: and his face did shine as the sun, and his raiment was white as the light. And, behold, there appeared unto them Moses and Elias talking with him. Then answered Peter, and said unto Jesus, Lord, it is good for us to be here . . . While he yet spake, behold, a bright cloud overshadowed them: and behold a voice out of the cloud . . . And when the disciples heard it, they fell on their face, for they were sore afraid. And Jesus came and touched them, and said, Arise, and be not afraid. And when they had lifted up their eyes, they saw no man, save Jesus only.' Dante discusses the moral sense of this episode in the Convivio, II, i, 45-51, and refers to its allegorical significance in De Monarchia, III, ix, 81-6.

There is now revealed to Dante, for the benefit of mankind, a picture of the vicissitudes of the Church. The persecution of the Christians by the early Roman Emperors, harmful to the State even more than to the victim, is represented by the descent of an eagle, which breaks flowers, leaves, and bark from the tree, and shakes the chariot. A fox, rebuked and put to flight by Beatrice (Truth revealed), stands for a more insidious foe, heresy, which attacks the Church within. The Song of Solomon ii, 15, speaks of 'little foxes, that spoil the vines.' According to Origen (and others after him), these foxes, in the 'third,' or 'spiritual,' sense, signify false doctrines distracting the Church. If Dante had in mind any particular heresy, it must have been an early one,

Gnosticism or Arianism. After the fox, the eagle returns, this time with no hostile intent but with more damaging effect, and leaves its feathers in the chariot. The Emperor thus designated is Constantine, whose donation of his western possessions to the Church was accepted by Dante and his contemporaries as an historical fact: cf. Inf. XIX, 115-7; XXVII, 94-5; Par. XX, 55-60; Mon., III, x. Next is recorded a great schism, either the secession of the Greek Church or the Mohammedan movement, which was regarded as a departure from Christianity: cf. Inf. XXVIII, 31. This disaster, brought about by Satan, is pictured as the removal of a part of the bottom of the chariot by the sting of a dragon that has emerged from the ground beneath it. The figure is suggested by Rev. xii, 3, 4, 9: 'And . . . behold a great red dragon. . . . And his tail drew the third part of the stars of heaven, and did cast them to the earth. . . . And the great dragon was cast out, that old serpent, called the Devil, and Satan, which deceiveth the whole world' (cf. xx, 2). Meanwhile the gift of temporal possessions has borne its inevitable fruit of corruption. The love of wealth possesses the clergy and disfigures the Church. Feathers suddenly cover the whole chariot; and seven heads, representing the seven capital vices, spring forth on its pole and its corners. The three on the pole are two-horned, and stand for pride, envy, and anger, which are harmful to both the sinner and his neighbor (cf. XVII, 112-23); the other four, single-horned, symbolize sloth, avarice, gluttony, lust, which do not necessarily affect anyone but the vicious man himself. Here again Dante drew his inspiration from the Apocalypse: 'and I saw a beast rise up out of the sea, having seven heads and ten horns' (Rev. xiii, 1). Riding fearlessly, 'with swift roving eyes,' upon the monstrous chariot — like the woman 'upon a scarlet coloured beast, full of names of blasphemy, having seven heads and ten horns' in Rev. xvii, 3 — is an 'unbridled harlot,' who evidently personifies the corrupt Papacy. The House of France, her master, stands beside her in the form of a giant. In Epistola VII, viii, 178, Philip the Fair, the worst offender among the French kings, is called Goliath. Inasmuch as Philip and Boniface VIII were sometimes in accord for evil ends, the giant and the harlot are described as 'kissing from time to time.' But when she turns 'her greedy, restless eye' on Dante, her 'fierce lover' beats her 'from head to foot.' This scourging apparently signifies the outrage perpetrated by Philip on Boniface at Anagni (cf. XX, 85-90). The eager glance at Dante is harder to interpret, but seems to indicate the covetous designs of Boniface on Tuscany. In that case Anagni would appear to be a retribution for the betrayal of Florence. After the punishment, the giant drags off the chariot through the forest — an allegory of the removal of the Papal see to Avignon in 1305 by the French Pope, Clement V, who was thought to be under the control of Philip. The chariot is drawn so far, Dante says, that the wood alone screens it from his eyes. As the forest is used in l. 100 distinctly as a symbol of this world, contrasted with Heaven, the closing lines may mean that the worldliness of the Papal court, more than its physical distance from Rome, destroys its moral influence in Italy.

For a discussion of the allegory of this canto, and an explanation different in some respects, see Moore, III, 201 ff. For a radically different interpretation of the latter part, see E. Proto, L'Apocalissi nella Divina Commedia, 1905. For the legend of Seth: Tor., 614-5. For the scourging of the 'puttana sciolta': F. M. Josselyn in Modern Philology, III, 333.

Tanto eran gli occhi miei fissi ed attenti
 A disbramarsi la decenne sete
 Che gli altri sensi m' eran tutti spenti,
 Ed essi quinci e quindi avean parete
 Di non caler (così lo santo riso 5
 A sè traeanli con l' antica rete!),
 Quando per forza mi fu volto il viso
 Ver la sinistra mia da quelle Dee,
 Perch' io udia da loro un: 'Troppo fiso!'
 E la disposizion ch' a veder èe 10
 Negli occhi pur testè dal sol percossi,
 Senza la vista alquanto esser mi fee;

2. Ten years: from June, 1290, to April, 1300.

3. Cf. IV, 1-12. The same fact was noted by Ristoro d'Arezzo and Fra Giordano: see Tor., 612.

4. Essi: the eyes.

5. Non caler, 'indifference.'

8. The 'Divinities' are the three Christian Virtues.

9. By 'Too fixedly!' the Virtues remind Dante that Revelation cannot be directly comprehended, in its entirety, by the ordinary human mind, but can be best understood through its manifestation in the Church. A similar warning is uttered by Beatrice herself in Par. XVIII, 21.

10. Ee = è: cf. IV, 47. So in l. 12 fee = fe = face. — 'The ability to see that is in eyes,' etc., i. e., the dazzled condition. The contemplation of divine mysteries blinds mortal man to material reality.

Ma poi che al poco il viso riformossi
 (Io dico 'al poco' per rispetto al molto Sensibile, onde a forza mi rimossi), 15
 Vidi in sul braccio destro esser rivolto
 Lo glorioso esercito, e tornarsi
 Col sole e con le sette fiamme al volto.
 Come sotto gli scudi per salvarsi
 Volgesi schiera e sè gira col segno 20
 Prima che possa tutta in sè mutarsi,
 Quella milizia del celeste regno
 Che precedeva, tutta trapassonne
 Pria che piegasse il carro il primo legno.
 Indi alle rote si tornar le donne, 25
 E il grifon mosse il benedetto carco
 Sì che però nulla penna crollonne.
 La bella donna che mi trasse al varco
 E Stazio ed io seguitavam la rota
 Che fe' l' orbita sua con minore arco. 30
 Sì passeggiando l' alta selva vota
 (Colpa di quella ch' al serpente crese),
 Temprava i passi un' angelica nota.

13. Poco: sc., sensibile (l. 15), 'perceptibility,' i. e., visibility, the light of the procession. — Viso, 'sight.' — Riformossi, 'readjusted itself.'

16. Sul braccio destro, 'to the right.'

19. The figure is that of a troop of soldiers retreating, with their shields locked over their heads.

20. 'A rank turns, and wheels with its standard.'

21. 'Before it can completely face about.'

24. The candlesticks and the 24 elders all 'passed us,' 'before the chariot bent its first wood,' i. e., its pole, which is the Cross.

25. The seven Virtues returned to their two wheels (XXIX, 121, 130), which they had left (XXXI, 109, 131).

27. 'In such wise that not a feather of him shook withal': Christ set the Church in motion, by means of the Cross, without disturbing his divine part.

28. Matilda: XXXI, 91-104.

30. The wheel 'that made its turn with the smaller curve' is the right wheel, inasmuch as the chariot is turning to the right. Dante and Statius, with Matilda, join the Theological Virtues.

32. Colpa is used like the Latin ablative, culpa, 'through the fault.' — Crese = credette.

Forse in tre voli tanto spazio prese
 Disfrenata saetta quanto eramo 35
 Rimossi, quando Beatrice scese.
 Io sentii mormorare a tutti: 'Adamo!'
 Poi cerchiaro una pianta dispogliata
 Di fiori e d' altra fronda in ciascun ramo.
 La coma sua, che tanto si dilata 40
 Più quanto più è su, fora dagl' Indi
 Nei boschi lor per altezza ammirata.
 'Beato sei, grifon, che non discindi
 Col becco d' esto legno dolce al gusto,
 Posciachè mal si torce il ventre quindi.' 45
 Così d' intorno all' arbore robusto
 Gridaron gli altri; e l' animal binato:
 'Sì si conserva il seme d' ogni giusto.'
 E volto al temo ch' egli avea tirato,
 Trasselo al piè della vedova frasca; 50
 E quel di lei a lei lasciò legato.
 Come le nostre piante, quando casca
 Giù la gran luce mischiata con quella

35. Disfrenata, 'loosed' from the string. — Eramo = eravamo. — Cf. Met., VIII, 695-6; Thebaid, VI, 354.

37. Cf. 4 Esdras vii, 48: 'O thou Adam, what hast thou done? For though it was thou that sinned, thou art not fallen alone, but we all that come of thee.'

40. Coma, 'tresses,' i. e., branches.

41. India was famous for high trees: cf. Virgil, Georgics, II, 122-4. For a symbolical tree of great height, cf. Daniel iv, 10-2, 20-2.

43. Discindi, 'breakest off.' Cf. Mon., III, x, 34-6: 'Sed contra officium deputatum Imperatori est scindere imperium.' — See Mon., II, xii, xiii; Mat. xxii, 21.

45. 'For the belly is sadly racked afterwards.'

47. Binato, 'dual,' of two natures.

48. Mat. iii, 15: 'For thus it becometh us to fulfil all righteousness' — 'Sic enim decet nos implere omnem justitiam.' Cf. Rom. v, 19: 'For as by one man's disobedience many were made sinners, so by the obedience of one shall many be made righteous.' — Justice is identical with the divine will: Mon., II, ii, 39-61.

49. Temo (cf. XXII, 119) = timone, 'pole': the Cross.

50. Frasca, 'trunk.'

53. When the sun's light descends 'mingled with that' of Aries, — the constellation which follows Pisces, the 'heavenly carp,' — it is spring.

Che raggia retro alla celeste lasca,
 Turgide fansi, e poi si rinnovella 55
 Di suo color ciascuna, pria che il sole
 Giunga li suoi corsier sott' altra stella:
 Men che di rose e più che di viole
 Colore aprendo, s' innovò la pianta
 Che prima avea le ramora sì sole. 60
 Io non lo intesi nè qui non si canta
 L' inno che quella gente allor cantaro,
 Nè la nota sofferarsi tutta quanta.
 S' io potessi ritrar come assonnaro
 Gli occhi spietati, udendo di Siringa, — 65
 Gli occhi a cui più vegghiar costò sì caro, —
 Come pittor che con esempio pinga,
 Disegnerei com' io m' addormentai;
 Ma qual vuol sia che l' assonnar ben finga!
 Però trascorro a quando mi svegliai, 70
 E dico ch' un splendor mi squarciò il velo
 Del sonno, ed un chiamar: 'Surgi! Che fai?'
 Quale, a veder dei fioretti del melo

57. The 'next constellation' to which the sun 'hitches his steeds' is Taurus, which follows Aries.

58. The color between red and violet is the Imperial purple.

60. Ramora = rami, 'branches.'

61. Qui: 'on earth.' — Cf. Rev. xiv, 3: 'And they sung as it were a new song before the throne . . . : and no man could learn that song . . .'

63. Nota, 'tune.' — Soffersi, 'I heard out.'

65. The hundred eyes of Argus, the guardian of Io (cf. XXIX, 95), were put to sleep by Mercury's song of the nymph Syrinx, loved by Pan; Mercury then slew the over-vigilant guardian: Met., I, 568-747.

69. 'But let him who will make a good counterfeit presentment of the act of falling asleep!' — Qual vuol sia, 'let it be he who wishes.' Cf. Patecchio's phrase, 'cui illi vol sia': E. Monaci, Crestomazia italiana, I, 102, l. 17.

73-8. 'As Peter, John, and James, led to behold the flowerlets of that apple-tree which makes the angels greedy for its fruit and holds eternal wedding feasts in Heaven, and overwhelmed at that sight, came to themselves at the sound of that voice by which deeper sleep had been broken . . .'

73. Quale is correlative with tal in l. 82. — A veder is to be connected both with condotti, l. 76, and with vinti, l. 77. — Fioretti: the foretaste of Christ's

Che del suo pomo gli Angeli fa ghiotti

 Tal torna' io, e vidi quella pia
 Sopra me starsi che conduttrice
 Fu de' miei passi lungo il fiume pria.
 E tutto in dubbio dissi: 'Ov' è Beatrice?' 85
 Ond' ella: 'Vedi lei sotto la fronda
 Nuova sedere in su la sua radice.
 Vedi la compagnia che la circonda;
 Gli altri dopo il grifon sen vanno suso,
 Con più dolce canzone e più profonda.' 90
 E se più fu lo suo parlar diffuso

 Quella ch' ad altro intender m' avea chiuso.

glory. — Melo: Christ. Cf. Song of Solomon ii, 3: 'As the apple tree among the trees of the wood, so is my beloved among the sons.'

74. Pomo: the full glory of Christ. Cf. Rev. xviii, 14: 'the fruits that thy soul lusted after' — 'poma desiderii animæ tuæ'; 1 Peter i, 12: 'which things the angels desire to look into.'

75. Rev. xix, 9: 'Blessed are they which are called unto the marriage supper of the Lamb.'

76. Mat. xvii, 1.

77. Mat. xvii, 5-7.

78. Maggior sonni: the sleep of death. Cf. Luke vii, 14-5; John xi, 43-4.

79. 'And saw their company diminished': Mat. xvii, 8.

80. 'Both by Moses and by Elias': Mat. xvii, 3.

81. 'And their Master's raiment changed,' no longer 'white as the light,' as it had been at the moment of the Transfiguration: Mat. xvii, 2.

87. Beatrice sits upon the root of the tree: Revelation (Religion) and Law (Empire) come from the same source.

88. Compagnia: the Virtues.

93. Quella: Beatrice. — Intender, 'attention.'

Sola sedeasi in sulla terra vera,
 Come guardia lasciata lì del plaustro 95
 Che legar vidi alla biforme fiera.
 In cerchio le facevan di sè claustro
 Le sette ninfe, con quei lumi in mano
 Che son sicuri d' Aquilone e d' Austro.
 'Qui sarai tu poco tempo silvano, 100
 E sarai meco senza fine cive
 Di quella Roma onde Cristo è Romano.
 Però, in pro del mondo che mal vive,
 Al carro tieni or gli occhi, e quel che vedi,
 Ritornato di là, fa che tu scrive.' 105
 Così Beatrice; ed io, che tutto ai piedi
 De' suoi comandamenti era devoto,
 La mente e gli occhi, ov' ella volle, diedi.
 Non scese mai con sì veloce moto
 Foco di spessa nube, quando piove 110
 Da quel confine che più va remoto,
 Com' io vidi calar l' uccel di Giove
 Per l' arbor giù, rompendo della scorza,
 Non che dei fiori e delle foglie nuove.

94. Beatrice, the divine, has descended to the 'real earth,' putting herself at the disposal of the lowliest through the medium of the Church.

95. Plaustro, 'car.'

96. 'Which I had seen bound by the twoshaped beast': l. 51.

97. Claustro, 'ring.'

98. Lumi: the candlesticks.

99. 'Which are safe from Aquilo and Auster,' the north and the south wind: which no physical blast can extinguish.

100. Silvano, 'forester.' Thou shalt dwell a little while on earth.

101. Cive, 'citizen.' Then thou shalt dwell forever in Heaven. Cf. Ephesians ii, 19: 'fellowcitizens with the saints, and of the household of God.'

103. In pro, 'for the benefit.'

105. Scriva = scriva. Cf. Rev. i, 11: 'What thou seest, write in a book.'

110. Spessa, 'dense.' — Piove, 'it (the lightning) falls:' cf. Bull., XVI, 147.

112. The emblem of the Roman Empire is the eagle, 'Jove's bird': Æn., I, 394. — Cf. Ezekiel xvii, 3-4.

114. Non che, 'likewise.'

E ferì il carro di tutta sua forza, 115
 Ond' ei piegò, come nave in fortuna,
 Vinta dall' onda, or da poggia or da orza.
 Poscia vidi avventarsi nella cuna
 Del trionfal veicolo una volpe,
 Che d' ogni pasto buon pareva digiuna. 120
 Ma, riprendendo lei di laide colpe,
 La Donna mia la volse in tanta futa
 Quanto sofferson l' ossa senza polpe.
 Poscia, per indi ond' era pria venuta,
 L' aquila vidi scender giù nell' arca 125
 Del carro, e lasciar lei di sè pennuta.
 E qual esce di cor che si rammarca,
 Tal voce uscì del cielo e cotal disse:
 'O navicella mia, com' mal sei carca!'
 Poi parve a me che la terra s' aprisse 130
 Tr' ambo le rote, e vidi uscirne un drago,
 Che per lo carro su la coda fisse;
 E come vespa che ritragge l' ago,
 A sè traendo la coda maligna,
 Trasse del fondo, e gissen vago vago. 135
 Quel che rimase, — come di gramigna
 Vivace terra, — della piuma, offerta

116. Fortuna, 'storm.'

117. Poggia, 'leeward.' — Orza, 'windward.'

118. The 'cradle' is the body of the chariot.

119. Cf. Ezekiel xiii, 4: 'O Israel, thy prophets are like the foxes in the deserts.'

121. Riprendendo, 'rebuking.' — Laide, 'ugly.'

122. Futa, 'flight.'

123. 'Such as its fleshless bones permitted.'

125. The 'ark,' like the 'cradle' above, means the body of the chariot.

129. According to a familiar legend, after the donation of Constantine a voice from Heaven was heard crying: 'Hodie diffusus est venenum in Ecclesia Dei.' — For Dante's views on the donation, see Mon., III, x.

135. 'It pulled out some of the bottom, and twisted and twined itself away.'

136. Come, etc., as 'live earth' does 'with dog's grass.'

137. Della piuma goes with Si ricoperse in l. 139.

Forse con intenzion sana e benigna,
 Si ricoperse, e funne ricoperta
 E l' una e l' altra rota e il temo, in tanto 140
 Che più tiene un sospir la bocca aperta.
 Trasformato così, il dificio santo
 Mise fuor teste per le parti sue,
 Tre sopra il temo ed una in ciascun canto.
 Le prime eran cornute come bue, 145
 Ma le quattro un sol corno avean per fronte.
 Simile mostro visto ancor non fue!
 Sicura quasi rocca in alto monte,
 Seder sopr' esso una puttana sciolta
 M' apparve, con le ciglia intorno pronte. 150
 E come perchè non gli fosse tolta,
 Vidi di costa a lei dritto un gigante;
 E baciavansi insieme alcuna volta.
 Ma perchè l' occhio cupido e vagante
 A me rivolse, quel feroce drudo 155
 La flagellò dal capo infin le piante.
 Poi, di sospetto pieno e d' ira crudo,
 Disciolse il mostro, e trassel per la selva
 Tanto che sol di lei mi fece scudo
 Alla puttana ed alla nuova belva. 160

140. In tanto: so quickly.

142. Dificio, 'engine' (cf. Inf. XXXIV, 7): the chariot.

144. Temo: cf. l. 49.

152. Di costa a lei, 'beside her.'

153. Cf. Rev. xviii, 2, 3: 'Babylon the great is fallen, . . . and the kings of the earth have committed fornication with her.'

157. Sospetto, 'jealousy.'

158. The 'monster' is the chariot; so is the 'strange beast' of l. 160. — Trassel = lo trasse.

CANTO XXXIII

ARGUMENT

THE 13th and 14th centuries witnessed a considerable vogue of prophetic literature and mystic interpretation. Aside from the Kabbalistic method, — which assigned numerical values to the letters, and explained one word by another whose letters added up to the same sum, — the transposition of letters was used, and the attribution of special significances to letters and numbers. Speculation as to the secret meaning of numbers, which is so curiously illustrated in the Vita Nuova, Ch. XXX, was common enough among scholars and theologians. A standing problem was the 'number of the beast,' in Rev. xiii, 18: 'Here is wisdom. Let him that hath understanding count the number of the beast; for it is the number of a man; and his number is Six hundred threescore and six.' St. Joachim and St. Thomas discuss the possible values of the letters and the numbers that make up DCLXVI, and point out (as Victorinus had done in the fourth century) that with a shift of its last two members the combination reads DIC LVX, the not very relevant Latin phrase, dic, lux.

This idea of transposition seems to have been adopted by Dante when, in the present canto, he follows up the prophecies of a temporal redeemer uttered in Inf. I, 100-11, and Purg. XX, 13-5, with the solemn and mysterious announcement of an approaching heir to the vacant Imperial throne, a 'cinquecento diece e cinque,' sent by God, who shall slay the harlot and the giant. The number DXXV, with a shift similar to that noted above, gives DVX, the Latin word dux, or 'leader.' An Imperial leader of mankind, ordained by God, is soon to correct the greedy and unscrupulous Papacy and overthrow the power of the House of France. In choosing 515 as a symbol, Dante undoubtedly had in mind also the mystic attributes (whatever he may have thought them to be) of the numbers that compose it. His imagination may have been touched, furthermore, by the familiar abbreviation of the name of Christ, a Greek X (= CH) and P (= R), so combined as to look like a P superposed on an X, or a D connected by a downward prolongation of its upright line with a V which forms the upper half of an X. This sign was sometimes interpreted as Deus CHristus Venturus, 'Lord Christ to come,' just as I. H. S., the first three letters of Jesus in Greek spelling, is explained as Jesus Hominum Salvator. The word Christ, as Dante knew, means 'king'; and the temporal Christ, who is to appear near the end of the world, corresponds to the spiritual Messiah, who inaugurated our era.

To emphasize the mysteriousness of his prediction, Dante compares it to the utterances of the goddess Themis, whose obscure oracle is recorded in Mct., I, 377-94, and to the riddle of the bloodthirsty Theban Sphinx, finally guessed by Ædipus (Mct., VII, 750-61; Thebaid, I, 66-7). Dark though his words may be, — he adds, — the events shall ere long solve the problem — even as Ædipus, the son of Laius, unravelled the Sphinx's puzzle. Ovid, in Mct., VII, 750-60, relates that this son of Laius had cleared up the riddles which had never been understood before:

'Carmina Laiades non intellecta priorum
Solverat ingeniis.'

Dante, however, evidently read the passage in a faulty text, which substituted Naiades for Laiades and solvunt for solverat, and was thus led to believe that Naiads, or water-nymphs, were the successful guessers. Therefore, instead of saying 'the events shall be the Ædipus (or Laiades) that shall explain the mystery,' he puts it: 'The facts shall soon be the Naiads that shall solve this hard enigma.'

See I. Della Giovanna in the Giornale d' Italia, Jan. 26, 1905 (cf. Bull., XIII, 37-9); P. Chistoni in Giorn. dant., XIII, 194 (cf. D. Guerri in Giorn. dant., XIII, 306). An ingenious and interesting attempt to explain the prophecy as a Kabbalistic reference to Henry VII is to be found in Moore, III, 253 ff. (cf. Bull., IX, 40). — Cf. G. Lizerand, Clément V et Philippe le Bel, 1910.

'Deiis venerunt gentes,' alternando

Or tre or quattro, dolce salmodia

Le donne incominciario, e lagrimando;

E Beatrice sospirosa e pia

Quelle ascoltava sì fatta che poco

1. Ps. lxxix (Vulg. lxxviii), 1: 'O God, the heathen are come into thine inheritance; thy holy temple have they defiled.' This psalm, depicting the destruction of Jerusalem by the Chaldeans, and closing with a prayer for restitution, is now applied to the profanation of the Church described at the end of Canto XXXII. The Theological and the Cardinal Virtues sing the verses alternately.

5. Sì fatta, 'with such an expression.'

Più alla croce si cambiò Maria.
 Ma poi che l' altre vergini dier loco
 A lei di dir, levata dritta in piè
 Rispose, colorata come foco:
 ' Modicum, et non videbitis me, 10
Et iterum, sorelle mie dilette,
Modicum, et vos videbitis me!'
 Poi le si mise innanzi tutte e sette,
 E dopo sè, solo accennando, mosse
 Me e la Donna, e il Savio che ristette. 15
 Così sen giva, e non credo che fosse
 Lo decimo suo passo in terra posto
 Quando con gli occhi gli occhi mi percosse;
 E con tranquillo aspetto: 'Vien più tosto,'
 Mi disse, 'tanto che s' io parlo teco, 20
 Ad ascoltarmi tu sie ben disposto.'
 Sì com' io fui, com' io doveva, seco,
 Dissemi: 'Frate, perchè non ti attenti
 A domandarmi omai venendo meco?'
 Come a color che troppo reverenti 25
 Dinanzi a' suoi maggior parlando sono,

6. Mary at the foot of the cross — the Mater dolorosa of art and song — was scarcely more altered by grief than Beatrice.

7. Dier = didero.

10. In answer to the complaint and prayer of the Virtues, Beatrice repeats the prophecy of Christ to his disciples in John xvi, 16: 'A little while, and ye shall not see me: and again, a little while, and ye shall see me.' Truth, as revealed through the Church, shall be hidden for a time, but shall shine forth again.

14. Solo accennando, 'merely beckoning': she had no need to speak.

15. Donna: Matilda. — Savio: Statius.

17. The 9 to 10 steps probably represent a period of over 9 years, between 1305, when Clement V was induced by Philip the Fair to make Avignon the seat of the Papacy, and 1314, when both Clement and Philip died. After their death the world was in a better condition to expect a redeemer. Cf. E. Gorra in Mélanges Chabaneau, 1907, 585. Moore, III, 263, offers a different explanation.

22. Sì com', 'as soon as.' — Seco, 'with her.'

23. Ti attenti, 'thou venturest.'

24. Domandarmi, 'question me.'

Che non traggon la voce viva ai denti,
 Avvenne a me, che senza intero suono
 Incominciai: 'Madonna, mia bisogna
 Voi conoscete, e ciò ch' ad essa è buono.' 30
 Ed ella a me: 'Da tema e da vergogna
 Voglio che tu omai ti disviluppe,
 Sì che non parli più com' uom che sogna.
 Sappi che il vaso che il serpente ruppe
 Fu e non è; ma chi n' ha colpa creda 35
 Che vendetta di Dio non teme suppe.
 Non sarà tutto tempo senza reda
 L' aquila che lasciò le penne al carro,
 Per che divenne mostro e poscia preda.
 Ch' io veggio certamente, — e però il narro, — 40
 A darne tempo già stelle propinque,
 (Sicure d' ogni intoppo e d' ogni sbarro)
 Nel quale un cinquecento diece e cinque,
 Messo da Dio, anciderà la fuia
 Con quel gigante che con lei delinque. 45

34. The 'vessel' is the chariot, and the 'serpent' is the dragon of XXXII, 131.

35. Rev. xvii, 8: 'The beast that thou sawest was, and is not.' The material Church has ceased to exist. — Chi n' ha colpa, 'he who is to blame': Clement and Philip shall both be stricken down (cf. l. 17).

36. 'God's vengeance fears no bullying,' like that of the harlot by the giant. It seems that suppe, in the colloquial language, sometimes had this sense: see D. Guerri in Giorn. Stor., LIII, 297. The old and most of the modern commentators explain the verse as a reference to a hypothetical custom of eating sops on a murdered man's grave. Tor., 624-5, suggests an emendation.

37. Reda, 'heir': note the rhymes in -eda in the prophetic lines 13 and 15 of Canto XX. — In Conv., IV, iii, 38-43, Dante calls Frederick II, who died in 1250, the last Roman Emperor — 'ultimo dico per rispetto al tempo presente, non ostante che Ridolfo e Adolfo e Alberto poi eletti sieno appresso la sua morte e de' suoi discendenti,' inasmuch as these three never came to Italy. Cf. VI, 97; VII, 94.

41, 42. 'Stars — safe from every let and hindrance — on the point of giving us a time . . .'

44. Fuia: the 'thief' is the harlot who has usurped the place of the rightful authority.

45. Delinque, 'sins.'

E forse che la mia narrazion, buia
 Qual Temi e Sfinge, men ti persuade,
 Perch' a lor modo lo intelletto attuaia;
 Ma tosto fien li fatti le Naiade
 Che solveranno questo enigma forte, 50
 Senza danno di pecore o di biade.
 Tu nota; e sì come da me son porte,
 Così queste parole segna ai vivi
 Del viver ch' è un correre alla morte;
 Ed abbi a mente, quando tu le scrivi, 55
 Di non celar qual hai vista la pianta
 Ch' è or due volte dirubata quivi.
 Qualunque ruba quella o quella schianta,
 Con bestemmia di fatto offende a Dio,
 Che solo all' uso suo la creò santa. 60
 Per morder quella, in pena ed in disio
 Cinquemil' anni e più l' anima prima
 Bramò Colui che il morso in sè punio.
 Dorme lo ingegno tuo, se non estima
 Per singular cagione essere eccelsa 65
 Lei tanto, e sì travolta nella cima.
 E se stati non fossero acqua d' Elsa

48. 'Because it clouds the understanding, as they did.'

51. Themis, to avenge the death of the Sphinx, sent the Thebans a beast to lay waste their flocks and fields: Met. VII, 763 ff. But the followers of the new Œdipus, the Redeemer to come, will have nothing to fear from Themis, the goddess of Justice.

57. The tree of Law has been despoiled by Adam and by the giant.

59. Bestemmia di fatto, 'blasphemy of deed.'

61. Per, 'because of.'

62, 63. Adam longed for redemption by Christ, — who took upon himself the punishment for Adam's sin, — during more than 5000 years, i. e., 930 on earth (Gen. v, 5) and 4302 in Limbus (Par. XXVI, 118–20). According to the chronology of Eusebius, Christ was born in the year 5200 after the creation.

65. Singular cagione, 'a special reason.' — Eccelsa: cf. XXXII, 41–2.

66. Travolta: cf. XXXII, 40–1.

67. The water of the Tuscan river, Elsa, coats with carbonate of lime anything that falls into it. The 'vain thoughts' have petrified Dante's mind.

Li pensier vani intorno alla tua mente,
 E il piacer loro un Piramo alla gelsa,
 Per tante circostanze solamente 70
 La giustizia di Dio nello interdetto
 Conosceresti all' arbor moralmente.
 Ma perch' io veggio te nello intelletto
 Fatto di pietra, ed, impietrato, tinto
 Sì che t' abbaglia il lume del mio detto, 75
 Voglio anco, e se non scritto, almen dipinto,
 Che il te ne porti dentro a te, per quello
 Che si reca il bordon di palma cinto.'
 Ed io: 'Sì come cera da suggello, —
 Che la figura impressa non trasmuta, — 80
 Segnato è or da voi lo mio cervello.
 Ma perchè tanto sopra mia veduta
 Vostra parola disiata vola
 Che più la perde quanto più s' aiuta?'
 'Perchè conoschi,' disse, 'quella scuola 85
 Ch' hai seguitata, e veggì sua dottrina
 Come può seguitar la mia parola;
 E veggì vostra via dalla divina
 Distar cotanto quanto si discorda
 Da terra il ciel che più alto festina.' 90

69. His 'delight in them' has discolored his mind, as the blood of Pyramus stained the mulberry: cf. XXVII, 39.

72. 'Thou wouldst have recognized in the tree, in the moral sense.'

77. Il: detto, l. 75. — Per quello, 'for the same reason' (cf. XV, 133): pilgrims bring back their 'staff wreathed with palm' from the Holy Land, to show where they have been and what they have seen.

84. S' aiuta, 'it strives.'

85. Conoschi = (tu) conosca. — Scuola: the 'school' of those who live according to the senses, and thus become deaf and blind to spiritual truth.

86. Veggì = (tu) veda.

87. Come, 'how (little).'

90. Il ciel: the Primum Mobile, the swiftest and most distant of the heavens. — Cf. Isaiah lv, 9: 'For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my ways higher than your ways, and my thoughts than your thoughts.'

Ond' io risposi lei: 'Non mi ricorda
 Ch' io straniassi me giammai da voi,
 Nè honne coscienza che rimorda.'
 'E se tu ricordar non te ne puoi,'
 Sorridendo rispose, 'or ti rammenta 95
 Come bevesti di Letè ancoi;
 E se dal fummo foco s' argomenta,
 Cotesta oblivion chiaro conchiude
 Colpa nella tua voglia altrove attenta.
 Veramente oramai saranno nude 100
 Le mie parole, quanto converrassi
 Quelle scoprire alla tua vista rude.' —
 E più corrusco, e con più lenti passi,
 Teneva il sole il cerchio di merigge, —
 Che qua e là, come gli aspetti, fassi, — 105
 Quando s' affisser (sì come s' affigge
 Chi va dinanzi a gente per iscorta,
 Se trova novitate o sue vestigge)
 Le sette donne al fin d' un' ombra smorta,
 Qual sotto foglie verdi e rami nigri 110
 Sopra suoi freddi rivi l' Alpe porta.

96. Ancoi, 'this day': cf. XIII, 52; XX, 70.

98. Chiaro conchiude, 'clearly proves.'

99. 'That there was guilt in the turning of thy desire to another quarter.' Inasmuch as Lethe removes only the memory of sin, the fact that he has now forgotten his recreancy to Beatrice — which he remembered just before drinking of the stream (XXXI, 34-6) — proves that this estrangement was sinful.

100. Veramente, 'be that as it may.'

103. It is noon. When the sun is overhead, it seems to move slower than when it is near the horizon: cf. Par. XXIII, 11-2.

105. The 'noonday circle,' or meridian, 'shifts to one side and the other, according to the point of view': it is not a fixed line, like the equator.

106. S' affisser, 'stopped.'

108. 'If he finds something strange, or any indication of it.'

109. The 'pallid shade' is a dark pool under the trees.

110. Nigri = neri.

111. Sopra: at the source of . . .

Dinanzi ad esse Eüfrates e Tigri
 Veder mi parve uscir d' una fontana,
 E quasi amici dipartirsi pigri.
 'O luce, o gloria della gente umana, 115
 Che acqua è questa che qui si dispiega
 Da un principio, e sè da sè lontana?'
 Per cotal prego detto mi fu: 'Prega
 Matelda che il ti dica.' E qui rispose,
 Come fa chi da colpa si dislega, 120
 La bella Donna: 'Questo ed altre cose
 Dette gli son per me; e son sicura
 Che l' acqua di Letè non gliel nascose.'
 E Beatrice: 'Forse maggior cura,
 Che spesse volte la memoria priva, 125
 Fatta ha la mente sua negli occhi oscura.
 Ma vedi Eünoè che là deriva:
 Menalo ad esso, e come tu sei usa,
 La tramortita sua virtù ravviva.'

112. Boethius, Cons., V, Metr. i, 3-4:

'Tigris et Euphrates uno se fonte resolvunt
 Et mox abjunctis dissociantur aquis.'

Cf. Lucan, Phars., III, 256-9. So Brunetto Latini in the Trésor and St. Isidore in the Origines (both citing Sallust as an authority) describe these two rivers as coming from the same source. — Obliviousness to evil and consciousness of good spring from the same spiritual condition, and neither can be complete without the other (XXVIII, 131-2).

115. John viii, 12: 'I am the light of the world.'

116. Si dispiega, 'gushes.'

119. This is the only mention of the lady's name.

120. Da colpa si dislega, 'frees himself from blame.'

123. There can be no guilt in any words spoken by Matilda, the personification of Innocence.

125. Priva, 'robs.' — Remorse for his sin had made Dante forget the promise of good (XXVIII, 127-33); now the recollection of sin has been removed by Lethe, and the memory of the good that is his due must be revived by Eunoe.

126. 'Has darkened his mental eyes.'

128. Apparently Matilda performs this office for all souls that reach this stage. The complete restoration of Innocence implies that all evil is banished from the mind and the memory of all good is revived.

Com' anima gentil che non fa scusa, 130
 Ma fa sua voglia della voglia altrui,
 Testo ch' ell' è per segno fuor dischiusa,
 Così, poi che da essa preso fui,
 La bella Donna mossesi, ed a Stazio
 Donnescamente disse: 'Vien con lui.' 135
 S' io avessi, lettor, più lungo spazio
 Da scrivere, io pur canterei in parte
 Lo dolce ber che mai non m' avria sazio;
 Ma perchè piene son tutte le carte
 Ordite a questa Cantica seconda, 140
 Non mi lascia più ir lo fren dell' arte.
 Io ritornai dalla santissim' onda
 Rifatto sì come piante novelle
 Rinnovellate di novella fronda,
 Puro e disposto a salire alle stelle. 145

135. Donnescamente, 'with womanly grace.' — Statius now disappears from the narrative.

144. Cf. Ephesians iv. 23: 'And be renewed in the spirit of your mind.'

145. Like the first and third, this second cantica ends with the word stelle pointing to the goal of Dante's journey.

PARADISO

PRELIMINARY NOTE

OF the three parts of the Commedia, the Purgatorio seems to a twentieth century reader most modern, the Paradiso most mediæval. The idea of everlasting progress, apparently so indispensable to latterday thought, is here quite absent. We of the present generation are so devoted to perpetual betterment that a state of perfection is almost abhorrent to us. It is the approach that concerns us, not the attainment. An eternity of absolute but unchanging and unproductive happiness does not attract mankind now as it did of old. Furthermore, the scholastic philosophy that pervades the third book of the poem has to-day lost much of its vital interest. The physical universe, too, is of course constructed by our author on the Ptolemaic model, a system rational in its assumptions and logically worked out, but long since abandoned in favor of the Copernican. The permanent charm of Dante's Paradise abides solely on its power to satisfy our craving for pure beauty and for purely religious emotion.

In this cantica the Almighty is disclosed to us, first through his works, then through Christian dogma, and lastly in his own essence. The real theme of the whole Paradiso is, in fact, an allegory of contemplation, of the human soul rising by stages from consideration of God's universe to the understanding of its Maker. Lacking the dramatic element of his Hell, and the human appeal of his Purgatory, Dante's Paradise reveals — especially in its unrivaled climax — a reach of imagination not to be found in either of the preceding parts. Out of such unsubstantial materials as light, motion, and sound the poet constructs those wondrous scenes which make visible to us the unseen and intangible realm of the spirit.

The reader of the Paradiso must be prepared for much instruction. Certain fundamental principles are established in the first five cantos, and the discussion of many difficult philosophical and theological questions runs through the following ones, although the very last are reserved for the divine vision. The didactic matter which here abounds must not be regarded as intrusive: it is an integral part, if not indeed the nucleus, of the whole conception. We must remember, too, that for a keenly inquisitive mind like Dante's a large share of the happiness which Heaven has in store must consist in the true solution of the great problems that have so vexed us during life. The blest see all things in God; and the fullness of their knowledge is a source of intellectual satisfaction, as the vast love which they give and receive satisfies the affection.

The blessedness of Heaven is not the same for all. In proportion to the grace bestowed on them by divine predestination, human souls (as well as angels) have diverse powers of sight, and consequently see their Maker in diverse ways; and upon their vision of God their ardor and happiness depend. This variety in happiness is asserted by many theologians, Popes, and councils (cited by G. Busnelli, Il concetto e l'ordine del 'Paradiso' dantesco, II, 1912, 18). 'In my Father's house are many mansions'; and the 'mansions,' according to St. Augustine and St. Thomas, in their exposition of John xiv, 2, are different degrees of knowledge of God. The Divine Care, in itself, is equal for all, but is unequal in its gifts to one and to another (Summa Theologiæ, Prima Secundæ, Qu. cxii, Art. 4). Every soul, however, is perfectly content, being aware that it receives knowledge, joy, and love to the full extent of its capacity, and that its capacity has been foreordained by God's just but mysterious will. The mystery of predestination is the keynote of the third cantica. The degree of celestial beatitude is not primarily determined, then, by one's earthly conduct, although admission to Heaven is, of course, contingent on the right use of free election in the first life.

Even more than his picture of Hell, and far more than his Purgatory, Dante's portrayal of Heaven is to be looked upon as visualized allegory rather than as an interpretation of concrete reality. The general structure of the physical world is, to be sure, conceived according to the astronomical science of the author's day; but, aside from this framework, nearly all the supermundane description is of purely symbolic import. For instance, the appearance of the various orders of the blest in the several spheres, as Dante traverses them, does not indicate that these regions are really inhabited by souls, but is merely a visible token of the different grades of beatitude. The device has the further advantage of peopling with hosts of spirits the immense lonely spaces through which the journey lies.

Some figures in the Convivio give us an idea of the extent of these uninhabited expanses and of the size of the heavenly bodies. When Venus is nearest to us, she is 542,750 miles away (II, vii, 100-108); the diameter of the sun is 35,750 miles (IV, viii, 56-64), that of the earth 6500 (IV, viii, 58-60), that of Mercury, the smallest planet, 232 (II, xiv, 92-98). The earth, being so much smaller than the sun which illumines it, casts into space a tapering shadow, whose apex extends to the sphere of Venus. The three nearest heavens, — those of the moon, Mercury, and Venus, — within reach of the earth's shadow, form the lowest group of spheres. Then come the heavens of the sun, Mars, and Jupiter. The highest group is composed of the heaven of Saturn, that of the fixed stars, and the Crystalline Heaven or Primum Mobile. It will be remembered that each heaven is a transparent hollow sphere, or shell, of rare matter, invisible save for the heavenly body (or bodies) which it contains. The spheres fit into one another, with no empty space between. At the centre of the universe is the solid, round, motionless earth, about which the heavens revolve, carrying with them their luminous orbs. Dante's transfer from sphere to sphere is instantaneous, and he is conscious of no motion; as he reaches each sphere, he enters into its star — or, in the eighth heaven, into one of its constellations — and revolves with it as long as he remains there. In the ninth sphere there is no heavenly body, and therefore nothing visible and no special station for the traveler.

In the heavens upon which the earth's shadow falls, appear the souls whose goodness was foreordained to have some earthly strain: in the moon, the religious but inconstant; in Mercury, the beneficent but ambitious; in Venus, the affectionate but sensual. These enjoy the lower degrees of beatitude. The sun, Mars, and Jupiter display spirits of masterful, righteous activity, the souls respectively of great teachers (mainly theologians), of warriors of the Faith, and of just rulers. In Saturn are seen the contemplative spirits. The seeming dwellers in these last four heavens may be said to exemplify the four cardinal virtues: prudence, fortitude, justice, temperance. In the heaven of the fixed stars, Dante beholds the Apostles, Christ, and Mary; in the Crystalline Heaven he has a vision of God and the angels. It must be understood that the real home of all of these is the true Paradise or Empyrean, the world of spirit, which lies outside the spherical universe of matter.

The operation of the heavens and the influence of their various stars constitute the power called Nature, which is governed by God, not directly, but through his ministers, the heavenly Intelligences or angels. One order of angels presides over each sphere. There are, then, nine orders, which fall into three groups, or hierarchies, of three orders each. Every order has its own character and functions; the Cherubim, for example, embody divine wisdom, the Seraphim divine love. The nine orders, with their spheres, and the classes of souls associated with them, may be tabulated as follows:

Angels	MOON	Inconstant Nuns
Archangels.	MERCURY	Ambitious Statesmen
Principalities.	VENUS	Sensual Lovers
Powers.	SUN	Teachers of Wisdom
Virtues.	MARS	Soldiers of the Faith
Dominations.	JUPITER	Just Rulers
Thrones.	SATURN	Monks
Cherubim	FIXED STARS	(Apostles)
Seraphim.	PRIMUM MOBILE

From a theological standpoint, Dante's rating of the blest should be based on the intensity of their love, which is a product of Grace. This principle of gradation is harmonized, as far as possible, with the astronomical order of the spheres. Such a combination is appropriate, inasmuch as both Grace and stellar influence contribute to the shaping of character. See Purgatorio XXX, 109-117. St. Paul, in 1 Cor. xiii, 1-8, dwells on the all-importance of charity; and St. Thomas insists on charity, or love of God, as the basis of merit and reward, the moral virtues being merely its instruments (Summa Theologiæ, Prima, Qu. xii, Art. 6; Secunda Secundæ, Qu. clxxxiv, Art. 1). The same author (Secunda Secundæ, Qu. xxiv, Art. 9) distinguishes three degrees of charity, — the incipient, the proficient, and the perfect, — corresponding in a way to three stages of perfection (Secunda Secundæ, Qu. clxxxiv, Art. 2). Now charity manifests itself in deed, in will, and in intellect, the first of these types being the lowest, the last the highest. Assuming that in the incipient stage all three types are imperfect, we arrive at a sevenfold gradation of charity, which matches the seven planetary heavens: Incipient Charity (moon); Proficient Charity of Deed (Mercury), of Will (Venus), of Intellect (sun); Perfect Charity of Deed (Mars), of Will (Jupiter), of Intellect (Saturn). The planets, it will be seen, are here divided into three groups, consisting of one, three, and three; and they are so divided in Paradiso XXII, 139-150, when Dante looks down on them from above. Furthermore, St. Thomas avers that three kinds of life are symbolized by the planets: the active, the voluptuous, the contemplative. To these modes of life correspond three desires, which, by subdivision, increase to seven (De Veritate Catholicæ Fidei contra Gentiles, III, lxiii). If the order of their enumeration be changed, they fit Dante's seven planetary spheres, as well as the seven grades of charity already discussed: Desire of Self-Preservation (voluptuous) — Incipient Charity (Moon); Desire of Fame (active) — Proficient Charity of Deed (Mercury), Desire of Pleasure (voluptuous) — Proficient Charity of Will (Venus), Desire of Wealth of Wisdom (active) — Proficient

Charity of Intellect (sun); Desire of Strong and Rational Action (active)—Perfect Charity of Deed (Mars), Desire of Government (active)—Perfect Charity of Will (Jupiter), Desire of Knowledge of Truth (contemplative)—Perfect Charity of Intellect (Saturn). These correspondences are developed by Busnelli in the work cited below.

CANTO I

ARGUMENT

THE keynote of the third cantica is struck in its majestic opening verse, 'La gloria di colui che tutto move.' Dante's Inferno deals with man's failure to appreciate God's goodness and his own opportunity; the Purgatorio illustrates God's mercy to his erring but repentant creatures; the Paradiso proclaims the splendor of the divine idea and its realization in the heavens. It is God's love that moves the universe: so Dante has told us in the Convivio (III, xv, 155-164); and our poem closes with the words, 'L'Amor che move il sole e le altre stelle.' His glory penetrates everything; but, even as those objects that are inherently bright receive most of the sunshine, so the noblest parts of the world respond best to the spiritual radiance from on high (Conv., III, vii, 10-64). The realm in which the divine light shines brightest is the Empyrean, the abode of pure spirit, the real home of the angels and the blest.

The universe is regulated by an order which reveals the Maker's plan and keeps the material world in harmony with its Creator. To this order all things are subject, each in its own way. Matter and spirit and their compounds, animate and inanimate, have an infallible instinct that tells them what to do. This instinct impels fire to strive upward towards its sphere, which lies just below the heaven of the moon; it compresses the earth into a globe; it makes the Primum Mobile revolve, whirling the other spheres in their course. This same instinct constantly inclines the human soul to mount up to its Creator; but, inasmuch as man's will is free, his primal instinct may be thwarted by a perverse use of this freedom, and his soul may sink instead of rising, just as, under certain conditions, fire may move downwards, in the form of lightning. If, however, the original impulse is undisturbed by sin, spirit moves upward as naturally and inevitably as unhampered flame. Thus it is that Dante, cleansed of all impurity, shoots heavenward with Beatrice, passing through the light matter which constitutes the spheres.

His rise to God begins appropriately at noon, in the full glory of the day; with like fitness, the ascent of Purgatory began in the hopeful hour of morning, and the descent into Hell in the sad eventide. Furthermore, the season of his journey is the best season of the year. At the creation, the world was shaped in its vernal state, the sun in the sign of Aries; and the Conception and the Redemption found the sun in this same constellation. Coupled with the Ram, the sun moulds the earthly wax better than it can fashion it from any other part of the zodiac. At noontide of a spring day Dante leaves the earth.

On quitting our globe, the poet apostrophizes Apollo and the Muses. Upon the latter powers he has already called, at the beginning of each of the first two cantiche (Inf. II, 7; Purg. I, 7-12). In the Vita Nuova (XXV, 88-93) Dante defines the Muses as the writer's 'own science,' the poetic art; this has sufficed for the portrayal of Hell and Purgatory. For the description of Heaven, divine inspiration is needed as well, and he invokes it under the name of Apollo, as did Statius in the Achilleid (I, 9-11). Parnassus, as Lucan tells us (Phars., III, 173), has two peaks, one of which Dante assigns to Apollo, the other to the Muses. The invocation fills verses 13-36 of the canto, the preceding twelve lines being devoted to a proem; the proem and the invocation together, according to the Letter to Can Grande (Epistola X, xviii), form the prologue to the Paradiso.

For the hour and season see Moore, III, 60-62; D'Ovidio³, 545 ff. — For a discussion of St. Paul's rapture and the meaning of his 'third heaven' (2 Cor. xii, 2), see St. Thomas, Summa Theologiæ, Secunda Secundæ, Qu. clxxv, Art. 3. According to the second sense of the vision, he declares it appropriate 'ut primum cælum dicatur cognitio cælestium corporum; secundum, cognitio cælestium spirituum; tertium, cognitio ipsius Dei.'

La gloria di colui che tutto move
 Per l' universo penetra, e risplende
 In una parte più, e meno altrove.
 Nel ciel che più della sua luce prende
 Fu' io, e vidi cose che ridire
 Nè sa nè può chi di lassù discende;
 Perchè, appressando sè al suo disire,
 Nostro intelletto si profonda tanto
 Che retro la memoria non può ire.

8. Si profonda tanto, 'sinks so deep.'

9. La memoria is subject.

Veramente quant' io del regno santo 10
 Nella mia mente potei far tesoro
 Sarà ora materia del mio canto.
 O buono Apollo, all' ultimo lavoro
 Fammi del tuo valor sì fatto vaso
 Come domandi a dar l' amato alloro! 15
 Infino a qui l' un giogo di Parnaso
 Assai mi fu, ma or con ambedue
 M' è uopo entrar nell' aringo rimaso.
 Entra nel petto mio, e spira tue
 Sì come quando Marsia traesti 20
 Della vagina delle membra sue!
 O divina virtù, se mi ti presti
 Tanto che l' ombra del beato regno
 Segnata nel mio capo io manifesti,
 Venir vedra' mi al tuo diletto legno, 25
 E coronarmi allor di quelle foglie
 Che la materia e tu mi farai degno.
 Sì rade volte, padre, se ne coglie, —
 Per trionfare o Cesare o Poeta
 (Colpa e vergogna delle umane voglie), — 30

10. Veramente, 'nevertheless.'

12. Materia = materia.

15. Come domandi a dar, 'as thou requirest before thou wilt bestow.' — Amato: Daphne, loved and pursued by Apollo, was changed to a laurel. Cf. Met., I, 452-567; especially 557-565.

17. Assai, 'enough.'

18. Aringo, 'arena': the remaining cantica of the poem.

19. Tue = tu: cf. Purg. IV, 47.

20. The satyr Marsyas, having challenged Apollo to a musical contest, was defeated and then flayed by him: Met., VI, 382-400.

23. Ombra: the shadowy recollection.

25. The 'beloved tree' is the laurel: cf. l. 15.

27. Che = di cui. — Farai is used for farete, both materia and tu being subjects.

29. 'For the triumph of soldier or poet.'

30. 'Because of the sin and shame of human desires.' Colpa and vergogna are used in the ablative construction.

Che partorir letizia in sulla lieta
 Delfica deità dovria la fronda
 Peneia, quando alcun di sè asseta.
 Poca favilla gran fiamma seconda:
 Forse retro da me con miglior voci 35
 Si pregherà perchè Cirra risponda. —
 Surge ai mortali per diverse foci
 La lucerna del mondo; ma da quella
 Che quattro cerchi giunge con tre croci,
 Con miglior corso e con migliore stella 40
 Esce congiunta, e la mondana cera
 Più a suo modo tempera e suggella.
 Fatto avea di là mane e di qua sera
 Tal foce quasi; e tutto era là bianco
 Quello emisferio, e l' altra parte nera, 45

32. Fronda is the subject of dovria (= dovrebbe) partorir, of which letizia is the object. — The 'joyous Delphic deity' is Apollo, whose most famous temple was at Delphi, below Mt. Parnassus.

33. The 'Peneian leaf' is the laurel: Daphne was the daughter of the river god Penēus. — Quando alcun di sè asseta, 'when it (the laurel leaf) makes anyone thirst for it.'

34. Favilla is the object, fiamma the subject, of seconda, 'follows.'

36. 'Prayer will be made that Cyrrha may respond': i. e., poets will pray for Apollo's aid. Cyrrha was the seaport of Delphi.

37-44. In these lines Dante describes the season. On every day of the year the sun rises from a particular point in the horizon, and this point differs from day to day. The points are called foci, 'outlets.' The best 'outlet' is the one from which the sun emerges on March 21, the vernal equinox. This is the foce that 'brings together four circles with three crosses': it is the point where three great heavenly circles intersect the horizon, each of them forming a cross with it. The circles are the equator, the ecliptic, and the colure of the equinoxes; this last is a great circle that traverses the two heavenly poles and crosses the ecliptic at Aries and Libra. When the sun rises from this point, it is 'coupled with its best orbit, and with its best constellation,' namely Aries. In that sign, the sun has the most benign influence on the earth. Now on the day when Dante rose to heaven, the sun had passed 'almost' through that foce: it was considerably later than March 21 (it was, in fact, Wednesday, April 13, 1300), but the sun was still in Aries; 'almost this outlet,' then, 'had made morning yonder (in Eden) and evening here (in the Hemisphere of Land).'

44-45. Here Dante tells the hour. It was noon in Eden, midnight in Jerusalem: the Hemisphere of Water was all light, the Hemisphere of Land all dark.

Quando Beatrice in sul sinistro fianco
 Vidi rivolta, e riguardar nel sole:
 Aquila sì non gli s' affisse unquanco.
 E sì come secondo raggio suole
 Uscir del primo, e risalire insuso, 50
 Pur come peregrin che tornar vuole,
 Così dell' atto suo, per gli occhi infuso
 Nell' imagine mia, il mio si fece,
 E fissi gli occhi al sole oltre a nostr' uso.
 Molto è licito là, che qui non lece 55
 Alle nostre virtù, mercè del loco
 Fatto per proprio dell' umana spece.
 Io nol sofferarsi molto, nè sì poco
 Ch' io nol vedessi sfavillar dintorno,
 Qual ferro che bogliente esce del foco. 60
 E di subito parve giorno a giorno
 Essere aggiunto, come quei che puote
 Avesse il ciel d' un altro sole adorno.
 Beatrice tutta nell' eterne rote
 Fissa con gli occhi stava, ed io in lei 65
 Le luci fissi, di lassù remote.
 Nel suo aspetto tal dentro mi fei
 Qual si fe' Glauco nel gustar dell' erba
 Che il fe' consorte in mar degli altri Dei.

49. Secondo: i. e., reflected.

53. Imagìne, 'imagination': cf. Purg. XVII, 7.

56. Mercè del loco, 'thanks to the place,' Eden: cf. Gen. ii, 8, 15.

62. Without knowing it, Dante has left the earth and is speeding heavenwards. — Come = come se. — 'He who can' is God.

63. Adorno = adornato.

64. The 'eternal wheels' are the revolving heavens.

66. Le luci, 'my eyes,' which I had 'turned away' from the sky. — It is by gazing on Beatrice, or Revelation, that Dante is 'transhumanized.'

67. Fei = feci.

68. The fisherman Glaucus, tasting of a certain herb that had revived his fishes, became a sea god: Met., XIII, 898-968.

Trasumanar significar per verba 70
 Non si poria; però l' esempio basti
 A cui esperienza grazia serba.
 S' io era sol di me quel che crëasti
 Novellamente, Amor che il ciel governi,
 Tu il sai, che col tuo lume mi levasti. 75
 Quando la rota, che tu sempiterni
 Desiderato, a sè mi fece atteso
 Con l' armonia che temperi e discerni,
 Parvemi tanto allor del cielo acceso
 Dalla fiamma del sol che pioggia o fiume 80
 Lago non fece mai tanto disteso.

70. Trasumanar, 'transhumanizing,' rising above the human state, as Glaucus did. For the attributes of the glorified body, see St. Thomas, De Veritate Catholicae Fidei contra Gentiles, IV, lxxxvi. — Per verba, 'in words.'

71. Poria = potrebbe. — The 'example' is that of Glaucus.

72. 'To those for whom Grace reserves a like experience' — the experience of sanctification. Cf. Flam., II, 110.

73. Se, 'whether,' — Sol di me quel, 'only that part of me,' i. e., the soul: cf. Purg. XXV, 70-72.

74. Novellamente, 'most recently,' 'latest.' — Dante is not sure whether he took his body with him to Heaven, or left it behind. St. Paul expresses the same doubt with regard to his own experience, 2 Cor. xii, 2-4: '... And I knew such a man (whether in the body, or out of the body, I cannot tell; God knoweth;) How that he was caught up into paradise, and heard unspeakable words, which it is not lawful for a man to utter.' St. Augustine (De Genesi ad Litteram, XII, iii-vi) and St. Thomas discuss the question, but leave it undecided. The poet considers his rapture as similar in kind to St. Paul's, and therefore repeats St. Paul's words. In the following narrative Dante seems to think of himself as still in the flesh, although he ultimately sees God. Whether St. Paul actually beheld God or not is a matter on which theologians have disagreed, St. Augustine and St. Thomas holding the affirmative opinion. Cf. Exod. xxxiii, 20: 'Thou canst not see my face: for no man shall see me, and live.'

76. Rota: the revolution of the heavens. — Sempiterni, 'makest eternal.'

77. Desiderato, 'by being desired.' The swift motion of the Primum Mobile, the outermost sphere of the material universe, is due to the eagerness of every one of its parts to come into contact with every part of God's own Heaven, the Empyrean; and the Primum Mobile imparts its revolution to all the heavens within it. Cf. Conv., II, iv, 19-27. — Atteso, 'attentive.'

78. 'The harmony which thou dost attune and modulate' is the harmony of the spheres, imagined by Pythagoras, derided by Aristotle, and described by Cicero in the Somnium Scipionis (De Republica, VI, xi).

79-81. As Dante approaches the sun, its fiery disk grows bigger and bigger. Cf. l. 61.

La novità del suono e il grande lume
 Di lor cagion m' accesero un disio
 Mai non sentito di cotanto acume.
 Ond' ella, che vedea me sì com' io, 85
 A quïetarmi l' animo commosso,
 Pria ch' io a domandar, la bocca aprìo,
 E cominciò: 'Tu stesso ti fai grosso
 Col falso imaginar, sì che non vedi
 Ciò che vedresti, se l' avessi scosso. 90
 Tu non se' in terra, sì come tu credi;
 Ma folgore, fuggendo il proprio sito,
 Non corse come tu ch' ad esso riedi.'
 S' io fui del primo dubbio disvestito
 Per le sorrise parolette brevi, 95
 Dentro ad un nuovo più fui irretito;
 E dissi: 'Già contento requïevi
 Di grande ammirazion; ma ora ammiro
 Com' io trascenda questi corpi lievi.'
 Ond' ella, appresso d' un pïo sospiro, 100
 Gli occhi drizzò ver me con quel sembiante
 Che madre fa sopra figliuol deliro;
 E cominciò: 'Le cose tutte quante
 Hann' ordine tra loro; e questo è forma
 Che l' universo a Dio fa simigliante. 105

87. A pïo = apri.88. Grosso, 'dull.'90. Se l' avessi scosso, 'if thou hadst cast it (falso imaginar) off.'

92-93. When lightning descends, it leaves its proper abode, the sphere of fire. Dante's real home is the Empyrean, toward which he is returning more swiftly than lightning ever fell from the sky.

96. Irretito, 'enmeshed,' caught; cf. irretivit in Pr. vii. 21.97-102. Cf. St. Thomas, De Veritate Catholica Fidei contra Gentiles, IV, lxxxvii.98. Di, 'concerning.' — Ammirazion, 'wonder.' — Ammiro, 'I wonder.'101. Ver = verso. 104. Forma, 'character.' 105. Che is subject of fa.

Qui veggion l' alte crëature l' orma
 Dell' eterno valore, il quale è fine
 Al quale è fatta la toccata norma.

106. Qui, 'in it' (the order of the universe). — The 'exalted creatures' are angels and men, who have intelligence. — Orma, 'mark.'

107. Valore, 'goodness.' — Fine, 'the end.'

108. La toccata norma, 'the aforesaid rule.'

109. Accline, 'bent,' obedient.

110. Sorti, 'fates.'

111. Their source, to which some are ordained to be nearer than others, is God.

114. Che la porti, 'to carry it.'

115. 'This (instinct)' is the subject. Ne is the adverb, 'off.'

118. Nè pur, 'not only.' — Creature is the object of saëtta, of which arco is subject. The bow of instinct pierces with its arrows not only things devoid of intelligence, but also angels and men, who possess love and understanding.

121. Che cotanto assetta, 'which adjusts all this.'

122. Il ciel, 'that heaven': the Empyrean, within which the swift Primum Mobile revolves.

124. Lì: to the Empyrean. Thither the power of the bowstring of instinct is carrying us on.

 Come a terra quïete in foco vivo.'
 Quinci rivolse inver lo cielo il viso.

127-129. Often the character (forma) of the product does not equal the intention of the artisan, because matter — the material with which the artisan (God) must work — is unresponsive.

132. Pinta, 'propelled' by instinct. Only a creature that possesses free will has 'power to incline in another direction.'

134-135. 'If the primal impulse (instinct), diverted by deceptive pleasure, brings it (the creature) down to earth.'

136. Dei = devi. — Ammirar, 'wonder at (thine ascent).'

137. Se non come, 'any more than' thou wouldst wonder at a brook.

141. '(As great a wonder) as immobility in a live fire on earth.'

CANTO II

ARGUMENT

'MA chi cantare vole nè valer bene,
In suo legno nocchier dritto pone,
Ed orrato saver mette al timone;
Dio fa sua stella, e vera lausor sua spene,' sang Guittone d' Arezzo in his Ora parà s'eo saverò cantare, ll. 16-19. In the Paradiso our author is about to expound to us not only the structure of the universe, but also the fundamental truths of Christianity, a theme never before attempted in a poem. Setting sail on this untried sea, — with wisdom (Minerva) for his favoring wind, Inspiration (Apollo) for his helmsman, and the nine muses for pilots, — he warns his followers to turn back, save only those who have from early years accustomed themselves to feed upon sacred knowledge, 'the bread of the angels.' 'Man,' says Ps. lxxviii (Vulg. lxxvii), 25, 'did eat angels' food (panem angelorum).' Even here on earth, then, one may eat of it, but one is never satisfied: cf. Purg. XXXI, 129; also Ecclus. xxiv, 29. In the Convivio, I, i, 51-54, Dante exclaims: 'Oh beati que' pochi che seggono a quella mensa ove il pane degli Angeli si mangia, e miseri quelli che colle pecore hanno comune cibo!'

As he pictures himself rising with Beatrice to the sphere of the moon, the poet takes advantage of the occasion to explain — through the lips of his guide — the function of Nature, the power to which all the activities of the material universe are due. By Nature Dante means the operation of the heavenly bodies, directed by celestial Intelligences, or angels, which are the ministers of God. The world of matter, therefore, exactly corresponds to the world of spirit, and is its visible image. From the Maker, in his Empyrean abode, descends a vital principle, which is received by the ninth sphere, or Primum Mobile, the outermost of the revolving heavens. This sphere, which contains no stars, is alike in all its parts; and for that reason it does not analyze the force bestowed upon it, but imparts it, translated into material energy, to the heavens within its circuit. The eighth sphere — that of the fixed stars — by means of these bodies differentiates, in accordance with the needs of the world, the single but potentially multiform power that comes from the Primum Mobile: cf. Quæstio de Aqua et Terra, xxi, 11-29. This diversified power then sifts downward to the earth, passing through the other spheres, each of which combines with those energies which are akin to its own essence, and transmits them still further modified. The brightness of the heavenly bodies is due ultimately to this same power, derived from God, whose gladness is the source of all light. The various stars, according to their nature, combine to a greater or less degree with this energizing and light-giving principle; and that is why one star differs from another in glory. So it is with the moon. Some parts of this orb are less sensitive than others to the illumining energy, and hence, when seen from below, appear as spots on the lunar surface. Looked at from above, the moon has no such marks: Par. XXII, 139-141 (Bull., VII, 385). To the dwellers on earth the spots are the 'man in the moon,' whom ignorant people called Cain. He was represented as carrying a bundle of thorns for his offering: cf. Inf. XX, 126.

Averrhoës and Albertus Magnus believed the moon-spots to be the results of the presence, in some regions of the moon, of rarer matter, which was unfit to refract the sun's light; and they attributed this opinion to Aristotle (Toynbee, 78-79). The same view is expressed by Dante in Conv., II, xiv, 72-76. By the time he wrote the Paradiso, however, he had evidently become dissatisfied with such a material explanation, and had worked out a more spiritual one, which applies to the stars as well as to the moon. The refutation of his former theory is conducted, in scholastic style, by Beatrice, some of whose arguments may be found in Albertus Magnus, De Cælo et Mundo, Lib. II, Tr. ii and iii (Toynbee, 82).

In the first place, we must assume that the obscurity of some parts of the moon is due to the same cause as the comparative dimness of some of the stars. The question then is, whether this difference in brightness is caused by a difference in density, or quantity of matter, or by a difference in quality. Now we know that each of the several heavenly bodies and groups of stars has a special influence on the earth. If the stars differed only in the density of their matter, the quality being the same, the effect of all would be the same in kind, and would differ only in degree. Different influences must be the result of different fundamental principles; and these principles, if Dante's earlier view were correct, would be reduced to one. Therefore the celestial bodies — and, by inference, the various parts of the moon — must differ in kind.

As far as the moon is concerned, there is another argument, a purely physical one. Supposing the moon contained streaks of rarer matter, these layers would either extend through the moon, from side to side, or not. If they did, we should see the sun shining through them at the time of a solar eclipse, when the moon is between the sun and the earth. If they did not, there must be dense matter behind the rare; and in that case this dense matter would refract the light, just as if it were on the surface. But — it may be objected — the light refracted from further back would be fainter than that reflected from the outside, and the fainter reflections would appear as spots. To be convinced that this is not true, says Beatrice, try an experiment. Aristotle has declared that experiment is the source of science (Metaphysics, I, i). Place three mirrors upright at a distance from you, one a little further back than the other two. Somewhere behind you put a light in such a position that it will shine into the glasses and be reflected by them. You will see that the reflection in the three mirrors is equally bright, although its image in the more remote one is of somewhat smaller dimensions. If, as seems likely, Dante had actually performed this experiment, he must have done so under such conditions that, to the eye, his conclusion was correct.

For the 'panem angelorum,' see St. Augustine, In Joannis Evangelium, Tractatus XIII, 4-5. For the relation of light to stellar influence, St. Thomas, Summa Theologiae, Prima, Qu. lxxvii, Art. 3.

O voi che siete in piccioletta barca,
 Desiderosi d' ascoltar, seguiti
 Retro al mio legno che cantando varca,
 Tornate a riveder li vostri liti,
 Non vi mettete in pelago; chè forse 5
 Perdendo me rimarreste smarriti.
 L' acqua ch' io prendo giammai non si corse.
 Minerva spira, e conducemi Apollo,
 E nove Muse mi dimostran l' Orse.

1. Siete goes with the seguiti of l. 2.

9. Orse: the constellations of the Great and Little Bear, by which sailors are guided.

Voi altri pochi, che drizzaste il collo 10
 Per tempo al pan degli Angeli, del quale
 Vivesi qui, ma non sen vien satollo,
 Metter potete ben per l' alto sale
 Vostro navigio, servando mio solco
 Dinanzi all' acqua che ritorna eguale. 15
 Quei gloriosi che passaro a Colco
 Non s' ammiraron, come voi farete,
 Quando Jason vider fatto bifolco.
 La concrëata e perpetüa sete
 Del deiforme regno cen portava 20
 Veloci quasi come il ciel vedete.
 Beatrice in suso, ed io in lei guardava;
 E forse in tanto in quanto un quadrel posa
 E vola e dalla noce si dischiava,
 Giunto mi vidi ove mirabil cosa 25
 Mi torse il viso a sè; e però quella
 Cui non potea mia opra essere ascosa,
 Volta ver me sì lieta come bella:
 'Drizza la mente in Dio grata,' mi disse,
 'Che n'ha congiunti con la prima stella.' 30

13. Sale, 'salt sea.'

14. Solco, 'wake.'

16. The bold Argonauts, who crossed to Colchis in quest of the golden fleece, were amazed to see Jason, their leader, compel two monstrous, fire-breathing bulls to draw a plough: Met., VII, 101-122.

21. Our 'inborn and eternal thirst' for Heaven 'was sweeping us on almost as swift as you see the sky' — a curious comparison, since we are ordinarily not conscious of the sky's motion. If, however, we follow the position of a heavenly body from hour to hour, we see that in a brief period it traverses an immense distance. The sky, without seeming to move, is really traveling with inconceivable velocity; and so were we.

23-24. 'And perhaps in as much time as that in which a bolt (from a cross-bow) stops and flies and quits the notch': the three incidents in the flight of the arrow are arranged in inverse order, to indicate that, to the eye, they are simultaneous. The same device is used in XXII, 109.

27. Opra, 'doing.'

30. La prima stella: the moon.

Pareva a me che nube ne coprisse
 Lucida, spessa, solida e polita,
 Quasi adamante che lo sol ferisse.
 Per entro sè l' eterna margarita
 Ne ricevette, com' acqua recepe 35
 Raggio di luce, permanendo unita.
 S' io era corpo (e qui non si concepe
 Com' una dimension altra patio —
 Ch' esser convien, se corpo in corpo repe),
 Accender ne dovria più il disio 40
 Di veder quella essenza, in che si vede
 Come nostra natura e Dio s' unìo.
 Lì si vedrà ciò che tenem per fede,
 Non dimostrato, ma fia per sè noto,
 A guisa del ver primo che l' uom crede. 45
 Io risposi: 'Madonna, sì devoto
 Com' esser posso più, ringrazio lui
 Lo qual dal mortal mondo m' ha remoto.
 Ma ditemi, che son li segni bui
 Di questo corpo, che laggiuso in terra 50
 Fan di Caïn favoleggiare altrui?'

33. Adamante, 'diamond.'

35. Recepe = riceve. A ray of light can penetrate water without displacing its particles. Cf. IX, 114; Canzone IX, 27; Guinizelli, Al cor gentil, 39.

37. S' io era corpo: cf. I, 73. — Qui, 'in this case.'

38. 'How one bulk brooked another': how one solid body could, without displacement, be penetrated by another. This, according to St. Thomas (Summa Theologiae, Tertia, Suppl., Qu. lxxxiii, Art. 3), may be brought about by a miracle. See also St. Thomas, De Veritate Catholica Fidei contra Gentiles, IV, lxxxvii.

39. Che, 'which,' referring to the preceding clause. — Repe, 'creeps.'

40. Ne, 'us.' — Disio is the subject of dovria (= dovrebbe) accendere.

41. In the 'essence' of Christ the human and the divine nature are miraculously united. The thought of my body and the matter of the moon occupying simultaneously the same space should make us eager to rise to Heaven and behold, in the person of Christ, the greatest miracle of the kind — a miracle which we accept on faith, without being able to understand it. In Heaven it will be as clear and natural as a 'primal truth,' or axiom.

51. 'People' (altrui) 'down on earth' called the dark spots Cain.

Ella sorrise alquanto, e poi: 'S' egli erra
 L' opinion,' mi disse, 'dei mortali,
 Dove chiave di senso non disserra,
 Certo non ti dovrien punger gli strali 55
 D' ammirazione omai; poi retro ai sensi
 Vedi che la ragione ha corte l' ali.
 Ma dimmi quel che tu da te ne pensi?'
 Ed io: 'Ciò che n' appar quassù diverso,

CANTO III

ARGUMENT

‘IN my Father’s house are many mansions’ (John xiv, 2). By ‘mansions’ are meant degrees of happiness: so says St. Thomas in the Summa Theologiae, Tertia, Suppl., Qu. xciii, Art. 2, 3; see also his Commentary on John xiv, and St. Augustine’s Treatise on John, lxvii. Every soul in Heaven receives all the gladness of which it is capable, but the capacity differs. God, on creating each soul, endows it — according to his mysterious grace — with a certain degree of keenness of spiritual sight, upon which (if the soul attains Heaven) depends its vision of God, and upon the clearness of this vision depend the soul’s love and joy. Every soul is contented with its kind of beatitude, because it knows that its condition was predestined by its Maker, and because it feels that its own state of happiness is the only one for which it is fit. ‘E questa è la ragione per che li Santi non hanno tra loro invidia; perocchè ciascuno aggiugne il fine del suo desiderio, il quale desiderio è colla natura della bontà misurato’ (Conv., III, xv, 100–104).

The real abode of the blest is the Empyrean, the realm of pure spirit, outside the confines of the world of matter; there they dwell with God and the angels. But in order to make evident to Dante the difference in their degrees, and to illustrate the correspondence of the material universe to the world of spirit, the souls first reveal themselves to him in the spheres that symbolize their state. In his Commentary on Aristotle’s De Calo et Mundo, II, x–xviii, St. Thomas informs us that while the Primum Mobile has only one motion, eternal and immutable, the other spheres have two or more, and therefore generate change; but they approach uniformity as they approach the Primum Mobile in position, the moon, which is the most distant from it, being the most variable. So it is fitting that the angels should be seen in the Primum Mobile, the Apostles in the next (or eighth) heaven, and the inconstant in the sphere of the moon.

In the heaven of Venus, and in all above it, the spirits appear merely as bright lights: the happiness that envelops them conceals their individual forms. In the sphere of Mercury, just below Venus, the poet has a glimpse of the soul within the light. In the lowest heaven, that of the Moon, the spirits are discerned as faint translucent images of human shapes, like the reflections we sometimes catch in window-panes or in shallow water, when there is no dark background to make the figure clear. They are as difficult to see as a pearl against a white forehead. These are the ghosts of nuns who were compelled to break their vows. Among them he finds one for whom he had previously inquired (Purg. XXIV, 10), Piccarda Donati, a kinswoman of his wife and the sister of his old friend Forese (Purg. XXIII). We may suppose that all weak and inconstant persons who win salvation at all are to be connected with this sphere, the nuns being chosen as extreme examples.

Dante leaves us in doubt whether, in the literal sense of his narrative, the souls actually leave their seats in the Empyrean and come to meet him, or merely project their images into the several spheres. In the eighth heaven all the elect are seen by him, even those who have previously appeared below. The idea that the blest can change their places, without losing sight of God and thus interrupting their beatitude, is in no wise contrary to Christian doctrine. St. Thomas tells us as much in his Summa Theologiae, Tertia, Suppl., Qu. lxix, Art. 3, and Qu. lxxxiv, Art. 1 and 2; also in De Veritate Catholicæ Fidei contra Gentiles, IV, lxxxvi, where he discusses the active life of the spirits in Heaven. For their existence does not wholly consist of passive receptivity; they have the power of locomotion, they take interest in one another and (without diminution of their everlasting joy) in the world beneath. Their active and their quiet being may be symbolized by the physical heavens and the Empyrean. The 'essential reward' of the just is the vision of God, which never changes; their 'accidental reward' is the enjoyment of good done by themselves or others, and this may vary: see G. Busnelli, Il concetto e l'ordine del 'Paradiso' dantesco, I, 1911, 100-101. 'Accidentally,' then, their gladness is increased by the salvation of a fellow-creature, and their love goes forth to him, as does that of the angels. 'There is joy in the presence of the angels of God over one sinner that repenteth.' In the Convivio, IV, xxviii, 34-39, Dante pictures the blest coming to meet a new companion; and the same figure recurs in Paradiso XXI, 64-66.

In this sphere, as in most of the others, our author places sovereign and subject side by side. With the simple nun, Piccarda, is the great Empress, Constance. A similar contrast is to be found in the heavens of Mercury, Venus, the sun, Mars, and Jupiter. In Saturn, where only monks appear, both hermit and cenobite are seen. And in the sun a grammarian, Donatus, accompanies the great theologians. It is curious, too, that only the planets with feminine names — Luna and Venus — show the spirits of women.

In Summa Theologiæ, Prima, Qu. lxii, Art. 2, St. Thomas explains that the kind of beatitude of each soul depends on the nature of its vision of God, which is an effect of predestination. In Summa Theologiæ, Prima, Qu. lxxxix, Art. 8, and Qu. cxvii, Art. 4, also Tertia, Suppl., Qu. lxix, Art. 1, he tells how souls may miraculously assume a body and appear to the living; cf. Purg. II, Argument. The question whether souls have a body before the Resurrection is discussed by St. Augustine in De Genesi ad Litteram, XII, xxxii-xxxiii.

Quel sol, che pria d' amor mi scaldò il petto,
 Di bella verità m' avea scoperto,
 Provando e riprovando, il dolce aspetto;
 Ed io, per confessar corretto e certo
 Me stesso, tanto quanto si convenne 5

CANTO IV

ARGUMENT

PLATO sets forth in his Timæus the idea that human souls were all created at once at the beginning of the world, each one being lodged in an appropriate star to await the birth of the body which it shall inhabit; and that after death the souls of those who have made a good use of earthly life shall go back to their stars again. Cicero's adaptation, the Timæus (Ch. xii), may have been Dante's source of information about the doctrine in question. Plato's theory appealed strongly to some of the early Christian theologians, but had to be abandoned after 540, when the Council of Constantinople decided that every soul is created by God at the birth of its body.

The real home of the elect, then, is not in the stars, nor anywhere in the material heavens, but in the Empyrean. Only to afford a visible image to Dante's understanding do they project their forms into the several spheres. In the lowest heaven, that of the inconstant moon, appear to him the souls least endowed with intellectual vision and therefore least capable of love and happiness in the realm of light. These, as we have seen, are the spirits of nuns who, under constraint, broke their vows and married. The compulsion does not justify their act, because no outside power can force the will. If these women returned to secular life and remained in it, they did so because they regarded such a course as better than death, ill treatment, or whatever the alternative might have been. Their 'absolute will' still chose the veil: that is, the convent, in itself, was always more attractive to them than any other place. Their 'conditioned will,' on the other hand, — namely, their preference as shaped by given circumstances, — inclined them to the easier way.

For St. Thomas's views on violence, see Summa Theologiæ, Prima Secundæ, Qu. vi, Art. 4 and 5. For his references to absolute and conditioned will, see the note at the end of the Argument to Purg. XXI. — For Cicero's Timæus, see G. Busnelli, Il concetto e l'ordine del 'Paradiso' dantesco, I, 1911, 64-65.

 Dall'i miei dubbi d' un modo sospinto, —

Queste son le question che nel tuo velle 25
 Pontano egualmente; e però pria
 Tratterò quella che più ha di felle.
 Dei Serafin colui che più s' india,
 Moïse, Samüel, e quel Giovanni
 Qual prender vuoi — io dico, non Maria — 30
 Non hanno in altro cielo i loro scanni
 Che quegli spirti che mo t' appariro,
 Nè hanno all' esser lor più o meno anni.
 Ma tutti fanno bello il primo giro,
 E differentemente han dolce vita, 35
 Per sentir più e men l' eterno spiro.
 Qui si mostraron, non perchè sortita
 Sia questa spera lor, ma per far segno
 Della celestial ch' ha men salita.
 Così parlar conviensi al vostro ingegno, 40
 Però che solo da sensato apprende
 Ciò che fa poscia d' intelletto degno.
 Per questo la Scrittura condiscende
 A vostra facultate, e piedi e mano
 Attribuisce a Dio, ed altro intende; 45

E santa Chiesa con aspetto umano
 Gabriël e Michel vi rappresenta,
 E l' altro che Tobia rifece sano.
 Quel che Timeo dell' anime argomenta
 Non è simile a ciò che qui si vede, 50
 Però che come dice par che senta.
 Dice che l' alma alla sua stella riede,
 Credendo quella quindi esser decisa
 Quando natura per forma la diede.
 E forse sua sentenza è d' altra guisa 55
 Che la voce non suona, ed esser puote
 Con intenzion da non esser derisa.
 S' egl' intende tornare a queste rote
 L' onor dell' influenza e il biasmo, forse
 In alcun vero suo arco percote. 60
 Questo principio, male inteso, torse

 Ma or ti s' attraversa un altro passo
 Dinanzi agli occhi, tal che per te stesso
 Non usciresti: pria saresti lasso.
 Io t' ho per certo nella mente messo
 Ch' alma bēata non poria mentire, 95

CANTO V

ARGUMENT

ONCE more we are reminded that happiness depends on love, which in turn depends on perfection of spiritual sight. Inasmuch as happiness manifests itself by light, the brightness of a soul grows with any increase of joy. Justinian, when he has an opportunity to add to Dante's knowledge, appears more shining; and Beatrice becomes more splendid when she perceives that Dante is already illumined by divine truth. Justinian's narrative falls in the next canto, but Beatrice's answer to a question put by her pupil is the main theme of Canto V.

Can one offer, for broken vows, reparation sufficient to win salvation? This is the problem suggested to Dante by the sight of the souls in the moon. It was discussed by St. Thomas in the Summa Theologiae, Secunda Secundæ, lxxxviii, Art. 10-12. In the first place, it must be understood that a vow is a covenant between God and man, and must be accepted by both parties. A bad promise is not received by God. Men must be cautious in their pledges, for they may sin in keeping a foolish or wicked pact that has not been sanctioned by the Lord. Thus Agamemnon erred, when he sacrificed his daughter to obtain from the gods a favorable wind to carry him and his army to Troy. Equally mistaken was Jephthah (Judges xi, 30-40), who, having sworn, in return for victory, to offer up whatever first came to meet him on his return, made a victim of his only child.

There are two elements in a good vow: the promise itself and the thing promised. The first can never be set aside, even by the highest earthly authority; it is an offering of the free will, accepted by God. If we have once entered into such an agreement, we are bound to fulfil our obligation. But may we not alter the terms of it, substituting another sacrifice for the one specified? In other words, is not the second element — the thing promised — subject to change? In Leviticus xxvii sundry privileges of this kind are accorded the Hebrews. In the Christian Church, we are told, the thing originally pledged may sometimes be replaced, but only by something manifestly more valuable, and only with the approval of a properly authorized member of the clergy.

If, however, the thing promised is more precious than any other possession of the promiser, no exchange is possible. It follows that when we have vowed abdication of the will, there can be no release. For the free will is the best of God's gifts to man, the one most in conformity with divine goodness. 'Hæc libertas,' says Dante in Mon., I, xii, 30-44, 'sive principium hoc totius libertatis nostræ, est maximum donum humanæ naturæ a Deo collatum, sicut dixi; quia per ipsum hic felicitamur ut homines, per ipsum alibi felicitamur ut Dii.'

'S' io ti fiammeggio nel caldo d' amore
 Di là dal modo che in terra si vede,
 Sì che degli occhi tuoi vinco il valore,
 Non ti maravigliar; chè ciò procede
 Da perfetto veder, che, come apprende, 5
 Così nel bene appreso move il piede.
 Io veggio ben sì come già risplende
 Nello intelletto tuo l' eterna luce
 Che, vista sola, sempre amore accende;
 E s' altra cosa vostro amor seduce, 10
 Non è se non di quella alcun vestigio
 Mal conosciuto, che quivi traluce.
 Tu vuoi saper se, con altro servizio,
 Per manco voto si può render tanto
 Che l' anima sicuri di litigio.' 15
 Sì cominciò Beatrice questo canto;

5. For the perfection of the beatific vision, see Summa Theologiæ, Tertia, Suppl., Qu. xcv, Art. 5. — Come apprende, 'as it perceives,' i. e., perfectly, not confusedly as on earth (Purg. XVII, 127).

6. 'Turns, in the same (perfect) way, to the good it has perceived.'

9. Vista sola, 'merely seen.'

11. Vestigio: unworthy things mislead the love of you mortals (vostro amor), not because they are evil, but because they have in them some 'trace' of the 'eternal light.' Mon., I, viii, 15-17: 'quum totum universum nihil aliud sit quam vestigium quoddam divinæ bonitatis.' Cf. Summa Theologiæ, Prima, Qu. xciii, Art. 1-4.

15. Che is the subject of sicuri. — Litigio, 'contradiction' of its right to enter Heaven.

E sì com' uom che suo parlar non spezza,
 Continüò così il processo santo:
 'Lo maggior don che Dio per sua larghezza
 Fesse creando, ed alla sua bontate 20
 Più conformato, e quel ch' ei più apprezza,
 Fu della volontà la libertate,
 Di che le crëature intelligenti —
 E tutte e sole — furo e son dotate.
 Or ti parrà, se tu quinci argomenti, 25
 L' alto valor del voto, s' è sì fatto
 Che Dio consenta quando tu consenti;
 Chè nel fermar tra Dio e l' uomo il patto,
 Vittima fassi di questo tesoro,
 Tal qual io dico, e fassi col suo atto. 30
 Dunque che render puossi per ristoro?
 Se credi bene usar quel ch' hai offerto,
 Di mal tolletto vuoi far buon lavoro.
 Tu se' omai del maggior punto certo;
 Ma perchè santa Chiesa in ciò dispensa, — 35
 Che par contra lo ver ch' io t' ho scoperto, —
 Convienti ancor sedere un poco a mensa,
 Però che il cibo rigido ch' hai preso
 Richiede ancora aiuto a tua dispensa.
 Apri la mente a quel ch' io ti paleso, 40

20. Fesse = facesse.

24. E tutte e sole, 'all of them, and they alone.' Cf. Mon., I, xii, 27-37; Summa Theologiæ, Prima, Qu. lix, Art. 3, and Qu. lxxxiii, Art. 2.

29-30. 'This treasure' — free will — 'precious as I describe it, becomes the offering, and it does so by its own act,' i. e., by an act of the will itself. — Fassi = si fa.

32-33. If thou thinkest to make amends by putting to a good use that which thou hast promised and then withdrawn, thou art like a thief who is trying to do good deeds with ill-gotten gain (mal tolletto).

35. Dispensa, 'does give dispensation,' or release from the fulfilment of vows.

39. Dispensa, 'digestion.' Cf. Hugh of St. Victor, Eruditio Didascalica, VI, iv: 'Solidus est cibus iste, et nisi masticetur, transglutiri non potest.'

E fermalvi entro; chè non fa scïenza,
 Senza lo ritenere, avere inteso.
 Due cose si convengono all' essenza
 Di questo sacrificio: l' una è quella
 Di che si fa, l' altra è la convenenza. 45
 Quest' ultima giammai non si cancella,
 Se non servata; ed intorno di lei
 Sî preciso di sopra si favella.
 Però necessità fu agli Ebrei
 Pur l' offerere, ancor che alcuna offerta 50
 Si permutasse, come saper dei.
 L' altra, che per matera t' è aperta,
 Puote bene esser tal che non si falla
 Se con altra matera si converta.
 Ma non trasmuti carco alla sua spalla 55
 Per suo arbitrio alcun, senza la volta
 E della chiave bianca e della gialla;
 Ed ogni permutanza creda stolta,
 Se la cosa dimessa in la sorpresa,
 Come il quattro nel sei, non è raccolta. 60

44-45. 'The thing of which the sacrifice is made' is the thing promised; 'the other' element in a vow 'is the act of agreement.'

47. Se non servata, 'except by observance.'

48. Si favella: I spoke.

49. Necessità, 'obligatory.'

50. Pur, 'still.' — The offerere (cf. XIII, 140) is the act of offering, the offerta is the thing offered.

51. Si permutasse, 'could be exchanged': cf. Levit. xxvii, 10-13, 28-33. — Dei = devi.

52. The other element, which has been described to thee as the subject-matter of the vow: l. 44.

53. Puote = può. — Si falla (from fallare), 'one errs.'

55. The subject of trasmuti is alcun in l. 56. — The 'burden' is the substance of the vow.

57. Cf. Purg. IX, 117-126. The 'turn' of the 'white key' of discrimination and the 'yellow key' of authority signifies ecclesiastical permission.

59-60. 'If the thing put aside is not contained, as easily as four in six, in the thing assumed.' Probably no exact proportion is intended, merely a manifest superiority of the new obligation to the old. It follows (ll. 61-63) that if the

70. To Agamemnon's sacrifice of his daughter Iphigenia reference is made by Virgil in Æn., II, 116; by Ovid in Mét., XII, 24-38. Her bewailing her fair face (which made her an acceptable offering) is a trait transferred probably by Dante from the story of Jephthah's daughter, who, before her death, 'bewailed her virginity upon the mountains': Judges xi, 38.

 Così Beatrice a me, com' io scrivo; 85
 Poi si rivolse tutta disiante
 A quella parte ove il mondo è più vivo.
 Lo suo tacere e il trasmutar sembante
 Poser silenzio al mio cupido ingegno,
 Che già nuove questioni avea davante. 90
 E sì come saëtta, che nel segno
 Percote pria che sia la corda queta,
 Così corremmo nel secondo regno.
 Quivi la Donna mia vid' io sì lieta, —

 Che pria m' avea parlato, ond' ella fessi
 Lucente più assai di quel ch' ell' era.
 Sì come il sol, che si cела egli stessi
 Per troppa luce, — come il caldo ha rose
 Le temperanze dei vapori spessi, — 135

CANTO VI

ARGUMENT

THE 'little star' of Mercury is 'adorned with good spirits' whose activity was due rather to a craving for earthly honor and fame than to direct love of God. When human desires rise toward celestial things by such a devious course, — that is, by fondness for worldly glory, — it follows that 'the rays of true affection mount heavenward less quick,' for the degree of spiritual vision and zeal possessed by such souls is not of the highest. Their reward in happiness is proportionate to their innate merit; but they yearn for nothing greater, the exact correspondence between desert and wage being an endless source of joy to them. The vast harmony of Heaven must be composed of various kinds of beatitude.

Among these spirits is a certain Romeo of Villeneuve, minister of Count Raymond Berenguer of Provence in the first half of the 13th century. Romeo served his master ably, and helped to bring about the marriage of the count's youngest daughter, Beatrice, to Charles of Anjou. The three elder daughters were also united to royal personages: Margaret to Louis IX of France; Eleanor to Henry III of England; Sancha to Henry's brother Richard, Earl of Cornwall, elected King of the Romans. These alliances likewise were later ascribed to Romeo's diplomacy. According to a legend followed by Dante, but not recorded before him, Romeo came to Raymond's court as a poor pilgrim, won his confidence, and increased his wealth and influence; then, being unjustly accused by jealous Provençal nobles, asked for his mule, his staff, and his scrip, and departed, never to be seen again. The character of pilgrim attributed to him may have been suggested by his name: see Vita Nuova, XL, 34-52. G. Villani, in his Croniche, VI, xcii, tells the story in a fashion similar to our poet's. The final touch — the mortification of the outcast 'begging his livelihood crust by crust' — is evidently drawn from Dante's own bitter experience, pictured in the Convivio, I, iii, 20-37. This part of Romeo's life, the most worthy, was hidden from the world, which knew and admired his successful ambition.

This same celestial 'pearl,' Mercury, contains the soul of Justinian, Emperor of the East in the 6th century, under whose direction was achieved the great compilation of Roman law known as the Justinian Code. In his day Byzantium was torn with religious strife; and, according to some, the Emperor himself, until converted to the true faith by Pope Agapētus I, shared in the Eutychedian heresy to which his wife, Theodora, adhered. Eutyches, who lived in the century before, had taught that after the incarnation there was only one nature in Christ — the divine.

Justinian, who speaks throughout this canto, proceeds to unfold the marvelous course of Roman history in the form of a narrative of the vicissitudes of the Roman Eagle. This emblematic bird, having followed Æneas from East to West — from Troy to Italy — and having dwelt in Latium until the 4th century, was carried by Constantine, contrary to the revolution of the heavens, from West to East — from Rome to Byzantium — when the Eastern Empire was founded. There it remained, on the edge of Europe, near the mountains of its native Troad, until it came into the keeping of Justinian, some 200 years after its transfer to the Orient. Dante probably followed the chronology of Brunetto Latini, who put the conversion of Constantine in 333 and the accession of Justinian in 530 (Tor., 685). The exploits of the Eagle, symbol of Roman sovereignty, from the time of Æneas down, make it a sacred object, worthy of reverence by friend and foe — by the Ghibelline who wrongfully attempts to make it an emblem of his party alone, by the Guelf who would substitute for this 'public ensign' the golden lilies of the House of France. The poet derives his incidents mainly from Virgil, Livy, Paulus Orosius, and Lucan. We find a similar outline of Roman history in the Convivio, IV, iv and v (cf. Mon., II, iii-v). The culminating event in the chronicle of the Eagle is the crucifixion of Christ under Tiberius, the third Emperor — a 'vengeance' for Adam's sin. This vengeance was in turn avenged by Titus, when he took Jerusalem. How a just punishment can itself be justly punished is a question that will demand an answer in the next canto.

'Poscia che Constantin l' aquila volse
 Contra il corso del ciel, ch' ella seguì
 Dietro all' antico che Lavina tolse,

1. Aquila is the object of volse, 'turned.'

3. 'The man of old who wedded Lavinia' is Æneas, who brought the Eagle from Troy.

Cento e cent' anni e più l' uccel di Dio
 Nell' estremo d' Europa si ritenne, 5
 Vicino ai monti de' quai prima uscìo;
 E sotto l' ombra delle sacre penne
 Governò il mondo lì di mano in mano,
 E sì cangiando in su la mia pervenne.
 Cesare fui, e son Giustiniano, 10
 Che, per voler del primo amor ch' io sento,
 D' entro le leggi trassi il troppo e il vano.
 E prima ch' io all' opra fossi attento,
 Una natura in Cristo esser, non piùè,
 Credeva, e di tal fede era contento; 15
 Ma il benedetto Agapito, che fue
 Sommo pastore, alla fede sincera
 Mi dirizzò con le parole sue.
 Io gli credetti, e ciò che in sua fede era
 Veggio ora chiaro, sì come tu vedi 20
 Ogni contraddizion e falsa e vera.
 Tosto che con la Chiesa mossi i piedi,
 A Dio per grazia piacque di spirarmi
 L' alto lavoro, e tutto a lui mi diedi.
 Ed al mio Bellisar commendai l' armi, 25

4. More than two hundred years, according to Dante's chronology, which is not quite exact.

7. Ps. xvii (Vulg. xvi), 8: 'Hide me under the shadow of thy wings.'

8. The Eagle, descending from Emperor to Emperor, 'there (in Byzantium) governed the world,' which was under the shadow of its wings.

9. Mia, sc., mano.

10. Earthly titles have no place in Heaven.

12. 'Removed from law what was superfluous and useless.'

13. Opra: the reformation and codification of law.

19-21. What he (and afterwards I) accepted on faith, without being able to comprehend it, I can now see as a fact, as clearly as thou seest an axiomatic truth — for instance, that if a proposition is false, its opposite must be true (cf. Mon., II, xii, 28-29). — Of the dual nature of Christ, Dante beheld a symbolic presentment in the Griffin: Purg. XXXI, 121-126.

25. I gave up warfare, entrusting my armies to my great general, Belisarius.

Cui la destra del ciel fu sì congiunta
 Che segno fu ch' io dovessi posarmi.
 Or qui alla question prima s' appunta
 La mia risposta; ma sua condizione
 Mi stringe a seguitare alcuna giunta, 30
 Perchè tu veggi con quanta ragione
 Si move contra il sacrosanto segno
 E chi 'l s' appropria e chi a lui s' oppone.
 Vedi quanta virtù l' ha fatto degno
 Di riverenza; e cominciò dall' ora 35
 Che Pallante morì per dargli regno.
 Tu sai ch' ei fece in Alba sua dimora
 Per trecent' anni ed oltre, infino al fine
 Che i tre ai tre pugnar per lui ancora.
 Sai quel ch' ei fe' dal mal delle Sabine 40
 Al dolor di Lucrezia, in sette regi,
 Vincendo intorno le genti vicine.
 Sai quel ch' ei fe', portato dagli egregi
 Romani incontro a Brenno, incontro a Pirro,

28. Question prima: V, 127. — S' appunta, 'comes to a stop.'

29. Sua condizione, 'its condition': the reply has necessitated mention of the Roman Eagle.

30. Seguitare, 'add.'

31. Veggi = veda. — Quanta, 'how little.'

33. Chi and chi (Ghibelline and Guelph) are subjects of muove.

35-36. It — the valor (virtù) of heroes — 'began from that hour when Pallas' — son of the Latin king Evander — 'died to give it (the segno) a kingdom.' Pallas, leading Latin troops to help Æneas, was killed by Turnus (Æn., X, 479-489); to avenge his death, Æneas slew Turnus (Æn., XII, 945-952), and gained possession of Latium.

37. Che, 'that.' — Ei: the segno, i. e., the Eagle. — Alba Longa was founded by Ascanius, son of Æneas.

39. When the three Curiatii, champions of Alba Longa, fought, for the Eagle's sake, against the three Horatii, champions of Rome. After this contest, the Eagle dwelt in Rome. — Ancora, 'again': after Pallas and Æneas.

40. Che, 'what.' — Ei: segno. — Dal mal, 'from the time of the wrong': the rape of the Sabine women.

41. 'Down to Lucretia's woe.' — In sette regi: thou knowest what the Eagle did, 'in the form of seven kings.'

44. Brennus, leader of the Gauls; Pyrrhus, king of Epirus.

E contra gli altri principi e collegi; 45
 Onde Torquato, e Quinzio (che dal cirro
 Negletto fu nomato), i Deci, e' Fabi
 Ebber la fama che volontier mirro.
 E esso atterrò l' orgoglio degli Arabi,
 Che dietro ad Annibale passaro 50
 L' alpestre rocce di che, Po, tu labi.
 Sott' esso giovinetti trionfaro
 Scipione e Pompeo, ed a quel colle
 Sotto il qual tu nascesti parve amaro.
 Poi, presso al tempo che tutto il ciel volle 55
 Ridur lo mondo a suo modo sereno,
 Cesare per voler di Roma il tolle;
 E quel che fe' dal Varo infino al Reno,
 Isara vide ed Era, e vide Senna,
 Ed ogni valle onde Rodano è pieno. 60
 Quel che fe', poi ch' egli uscì di Ravenna
 E saltò Rubicon, fu di tal volo

45. Collegi, 'confederates.'

46. Titus Manlius Torquatus condemned his own son to death. — Quinctius, called Cincinnatus from his unkempt shock of hair (cincinnus, which is a synonym of cirrus), was called to the dictatorship from the plough.

47. The Decii and Fabii fought valiantly for Rome.

48. Mirro, 'I embalm,' preserve.

49. The 'Arabs' are the Carthaginians.

51. Labi, 'descendest.'

52. Scipio and Pompey won their first victories when they were mere boys.

54. The Eagle (segno) 'seemed bitter' to the hill of Fiesole, because the Romans destroyed that town and founded Florence below.

55. Che tutto il ciel volle, 'when the whole heaven strove' to bring the world to its own peaceful mood: all the heavens, in harmony, did their best to make the world equally harmonious. Cf. Conv., IV, v, 54-69.

57. 'Cæsar takes (tolle = toglie) it (the segno) at the bidding of Rome': in accordance with a popular mandate (Phars., V, 389-394).

58. Fe', 'it (the segno) did' in Transalpine Gaul, 'from the Var to the Rhine.'

59-60. 'The rivers Isère, Loire, and Seine beheld,' and all the tributaries of the Rhone. For Era, see Giorn. dant., XIV, 47, and Rendiconti del R. Istituto Lombardo di scienze e lettere, Serie II, Vol. XLI, p. 1980.

62. Volo, 'swiftness': after the Eagle, with Cæsar, crossed the Rubicon, events came thick and fast.

Che nol seguiteria lingua nè penna.
 In ver la Spagna rivolse lo stuolo,
 Poi ver Durazzo; e Farsalia percosse 65
 Sì ch' al Nil caldo si sentì del duolo.
 Antandro e Simoenta, onde si mosse,
 Rivide, e là dov' Ettore si cuba;
 E mal per Tolommeo poi si riscosse.
 Da indi scese folgorando a Juba; 70
 Poscia si volse nel vostro occidente,
 Dove sentia la Pompeiana tuba.
 Di quel ch' ei fe' col baiulo seguente,
 Bruto con Cassio nello inferno latra;
 E Modena e Perugia fe' dolente. 75
 Piangene ancor la trista Clëopatra,
 Che, fuggendogli innanzi, dal colubro
 La morte prese subitana ed atra.
 Con costui corse infino al lito rubro;
 Con costui pose il mondo in tanta pace 80

65. Durazzo, 'Dyrrachium' in Illyria.

66. The consequences of Cæsar's victory over Pompey at Pharsalia were felt in Egypt, where Pompey was murdered.

67. It was from the town of Antandros, near the river Simöis, that the Eagle first set forth with Æneas: Æn., III, 5-6. When Cæsar was pursuing Pompey, he stopped to visit the Troad: Phars., IX, 961 ff.

68. Si cuba, 'lies.'

69. 'And then shook itself, ill for Ptolemy,' who was deprived by Cæsar of the kingdom of Egypt, and soon perished.

70. Juba, king of the Numidians, was an ally of Pompey.

71. Occidente: Spain, where the followers of Pompey were defeated in the battle of Munda.

73. Augustus was the 'next keeper' of the Eagle.

74. Brutus and Cassius, defeated by the Eagle, 'bark' of its victory in Hell (Inf. XXXIV, 64-67). For the use of latra, cf. Canzone XII, 59, and Conv., IV, iii, 59.

75. Cf. Phars., I, 41. Mark Antony was beaten at Modena, his brother Lucius at Perugia.

77. After the final defeat of Mark Antony at Actium, Cleopatra, fleeing before the Eagle, killed herself with an asp (colubro).

79. Lito rubro (Æn., VIII, 686, 'litore rubro'): the shore of the Red Sea.

Che fu serrato a Jano il suo delubro.
 Ma ciò che il segno che parlar mi face
 Fatto avea prima, e poi era fatturo
 Per lo regno mortal ch' a lui soggiace,
 Diventa in apparenza poco e scuro, 85
 Se in mano al terzo Cesare si mira
 Con occhio chiaro e con affetto puro;
 Chè la viva giustizia che mi spira
 Gli concedette, in mano a quel ch' io dico,
 Gloria di far vendetta alla sua ira. 90
 Or qui t' ammira in ciò ch' io ti replico:
 Poscia con Tito a far vendetta corse
 Della vendetta del peccato antico.
 E quando il dente Longobardo morse
 La santa Chiesa, sotto alle sue ali 95
 Carlo Magno, vincendo, la soccorse.
 Omai puoi giudicar di quei cotali
 Ch' io accusai di sopra, e di lor falli,
 Che son cagion di tutti vostri mali.
 L' uno al pubblico segno i gigli gialli 100
 Oppone, e l' altro approprià quello a parte,
 Sì che forte a veder è chi più falli.

81. The temple (delubro) of Janus, which was closed only in time of peace, was locked three times under Augustus, whereas it had been shut only twice during the whole period of the Republic.

83. Era fatturo, 'was about to do': a Latinism.

86. 'If it (the segno) be contemplated in the hand of the third Cæsar,' i. e., Tiberius, under whom Christ was crucified.

89. Gli, 'to it.'

91. Replico, 'unfold.'

94-96. In 773 Pope Adrian I invoked the aid of Charlemagne against Desiderius, king of the Longobards or Lombards. Charlemagne, — who now, in Dante's mind, represented the Empire, although he was not crowned until 800, — came to the aid of the Church under the pinions of the Eagle.

98. Cf. ll. 31-33.

101. Quello: the segno. — A parte, 'to a party': the Ghibelline.

102. Forte, 'hard.'

Faccian li Ghibellin, faccian lor arte
 Sott' altro segno; chè mal segue quello
 Sempre chi la giustizia e lui diparte. 105
 E non l' abbatta esto Carlo novello
 Coi Guelfi suoi, ma tema degli artigli
 Ch' a più alto leon trasser lo vello.
 Molte fiata già pianser li figli
 Per la colpa del padre; e non si creda 110
 Che Dio trasmuti l' armi per suoi gigli! —
 Questa picciola stella si corredda
 Dei buoni spirti che son stati attivi
 Perchè onore e fama li succeda;
 E quando li disiri poggian quivi 115
 Sì disviando, pur convien che i raggi
 Del vero amore in su poggin men vivi.
 Ma nel commensurar dei nostri gaggi
 Col merto è parte di nostra letizia,
 Perchè non li vedem minor nè maggi. 120
 Quindi addolcisce la viva giustizia
 In noi l' affetto sì che non si puote
 Torcer giammai ad alcuna nequizia.
 Diverse voci fan giù dolci note;
 Così diversi scanni in nostra vita 125
 Rendon dolce armonia tra queste rote.

106. 'This younger Charles' is Charles II of Apulia, son of Charles of Anjou.
 109-110. Charles is warned that the consequences of his folly may fall on his children.

111. Arme: God's ensign is the Eagle.

112. Justinian proceeds now to answer Dante's second question: V, 127-129.

119. È, 'there is,' consists.

120. Maggi = maggiori.

121. Giustizia is the subject of addolcisce.

123. Nequizia, 'iniquity': i. e., envy.

124. Giù: on earth.

125. Scanni, 'benches': orders of blessedness.

E dentro alla presente margarita
 Luce la luce di Romeo, di cui
 Fu l' opra bella e grande mal gradita.
 Ma i Provenzali che fer contra lui 130
 Non hanno riso; e però mal cammina
 Qual si fa danno del ben fare altrui.
 Quattro figlie ebbe, e ciascuna regina,
 Ramondo Beringhieri, e ciò gli fece
 Romeo, persona umile e peregrina; 135
 E poi il mosser le parole bieche
 A domandar ragione a questo giusto,
 Che gli assegnò sette e cinque per diece.
 Indi partissi povero e vetusto;
 E se il mondo sapesse il cor ch' egli ebbe 140
 Mendicando sua vita a frusto a frusto,
 Assai lo loda, e più lo loderebbe.'

131. E però mal cammina, 'and that proves that he travels a bad road.'

136. Il: Raymond. — Bicce = bicche, 'crooked.'

137. Ragione, 'an account.'

138. 'Who paid him back twelve for ten.'

139. Vetusto, 'old.'

142. The meaning is: 'Although it praise him much, it would praise him more.'
 For the construction, cf. VIII, 51.

CANTO VII

ARGUMENT

IN his overflowing love, which is incompatible with envy, God created the universe, that there might be others to share his happiness. Some things he shaped by his own act, others by means of his agent, Nature, which consists of the celestial bodies, with their angelic directors. The heavens and the angels are his own handiwork, and so is every human soul. So, too, is brute matter, out of which the stars fashioned the elements and their compounds. All products of Nature are perishable, but whatever comes directly from the hand of God can never die. Inasmuch as he formed human flesh by his creation of Adam, it follows that the bodies of men, as well as their souls, are indestructible. If mankind, in the exercise of its free will, had remained faithful, soul and body would never have been parted; we should all have dwelt in the Garden of Eden until taken up to Paradise, in the flesh, on the Last Day. Death is the fruit of original sin; but that sin, thanks to Christ's vicarious atonement, is not an eternal heritage of man, and therefore the separation of body and soul is not everlasting. On the Judgment Day our flesh is to be resurrected.

Men and angels, the immediate products of God's creative act, possess three advantages over the works of Nature: in addition to immortality, they have free will and likeness to their Maker. By transgression our race forfeited the last two privileges, but not the first. The lost gifts might conceivably have been restored to sinful man either by outright forgiveness or in return for due amends. 'All the paths of the Lord are mercy and truth,' says Psalm xxv (Vulg. xxiv), 10 — 'Universe viæ Domini, misericordia et veritas'; and 'truth' is interpreted as justice. Now any action is more perfect and more beautiful the more fully it represents all the good powers of the doer. Therefore God, who is perfect, chose to proceed by all his paths — in other words, to exercise both mercy and justice, pardoning humanity while exacting satisfaction. But man's presumption in defying the Lord's command was infinite, whereas his capacity for penance is but finite; hence he is incapable of any act of humility sufficient to atone for his first arrogance. And that is why God himself assumed human flesh, with all its burden of sin, and by his infinite self-abasement on the cross saved mankind from the consequences of its own proud disobedience.

For the doctrine of the atonement, see St. Anselm, Cur Deus Homo; also St. Thomas, De Veritate Catholicae Fidei contra Gentiles, IV, liv. For the resurrection of the flesh, see St. Thomas, Summa Theologiae, Tertia, Suppl., Qu. lxxv; St. Anselm, Cur Deus Homo, II, ii and iii.

*'Osanna sanctus Deus Sabaoth,
Superillustrans claritate tua
Felices ignes horum malachoth!'*

Così, volgendosi alla nota sua,
Fu viso a me cantare essa sustanza, 5
Sopra la qual doppio lume s' addua.
Ed essa e l' altre mossero a sua danza,
E, quasi velocissime faville,
Mi si velar di subita distanza.
Io dubitava, e dicea: 'Dille, dille,' 10
Fra me, 'dille,' diceva, 'alla mia donna
Che mi disseta con le dolci stille!'
Ma quella riverenza che s' indonna
Di tutto me, pur per BE e per ICE,

1-3. 'Hail, holy God of hosts, doubly illumining with thy brightness the happy fires of these kingdoms.' The blessed souls — 'happy fires' of the heavens — are illumined first by their own intelligence and secondly by God's grace. — Of the three Hebrew words mixed with the Latin, osanna and sabaoth are used in the Bible, and malachoth (a mistake for mamlachoth) occurs in St. Jerome's preface to the Vulgate called Prologus Galeatus, where it is said to be equivalent to regnum, 'of kingdoms.'

5. 'This substance' is Justinian. Angels and souls are often called substances because they exist independently of matter.

6. The 'double light' of natural intelligence and of illuminating grace 'is twofold' upon this spirit.

8. Cf. Wisdom iii, 7. — The souls, like swift sparks flying upward, return to the Empyrean.

14. BE is the name of the letter b, ICE is the rest of the name BICE, the shortened form of Beatrice. Dante is filled with reverence at the thought of the mere earthly Beatrice, and the name by which she was called: how much more reverent must he be in the presence of the heavenly Beatrice, whose full name occurs two lines below!

Mi richinava come l' uom ch' assonna. 15
 Poco sofferse me cotal Beatrice,
 E cominciò, raggiandomi d' un riso
 Tal che nel foco faria l' uom felice:
 'Secondo mio infallibile avviso,
 Come giusta vendetta giustamente 20
 Vengiata fosse, t' ha in pensier miso.
 Ma io ti solverò tosto la mente;
 E tu ascolta, chè le mie parole
 Di gran sentenza ti faran presente.
 Per non soffrire alla virtù che vuole 25
 Freno a suo prode, quell' uom che non nacque,
 Dannando sè, dannò tutta sua prole;
 Onde l' umana specie inferma giacque
 Giù per secoli molti in grande errore,
 Fin ch' al Verbo di Dio di scender piacque 30
 U' la natura, che dal suo Fattore
 S' era allungata, unìo a sè in persona
 Con l' atto sol del suo eterno amore.
 Or drizza il viso a quel ch' or si ragiona:
 Questa natura al suo Fattore unita, 35
 Qual fu creata, fu sincera e buona;
 Ma per sè stessa pur fu ella sbandita
 Di Paradiso, però che si torse
 Da via di verità e da sua vita.

20. See VI, 88-92.

24. Sentenza, 'doctrine.' — Presente, 'gift.'

25. Per non soffrire, 'because he would not endure.' — La virtù che vuole: the will.

26. A suo prode, 'for his own profit.' — Uom: Adam.

30. Verbo di Dio: Christ. Cf. John i, 1.

31. U' = ove, 'where': i. e., to mankind. — Natura is the object of unìo (= unì), 'he united.'

36. Human nature was created pure and good, but by its own act became evil and forfeited Paradise.

39. Cf. John xiv, 6: 'I am the way, the truth, and the life.'

La pena dunque che la croce porse, 40
 S' alla natura assunta si misura,
 Nulla giammai sì giustamente morse;
 E così nulla fu di tanta ingiura,
 Guardando alla persona che sofferse,
 In che era contratta tal natura. 45
 Però d' un atto uscir cose diverse;
 Ch' a Dio ed ai Giudei piacque una morte.
 Per lei tremò la terra e il ciel s' aperse.
 Non ti dee oramai parer più forte,
 Quando si dice che giusta vendetta 50
 Poscia vengiata fu da giusta corte.
 Ma io veggì' or la tua mente ristretta,
 Di pensier in pensier, dentro ad un nodo,
 Del qual con gran disio solver s' aspetta.
 Tu dici: "Ben discerno ciò ch' i' odo; 55
 Ma perchè Dio volesse, m' è occulto,
 A nostra redenzion pur questo modo."
 Questo decreto, frate, sta sepolto
 Agli occhi di ciascuno il cui ingegno
 Nella fiamma d' amor non è adulto. 60
 Veramente, però ch' a questo segno
 Molto si mira, e poco si discerne,

41. 'If it be measured by the nature assumed,' i. e., by the sinful nature of man, which Christ took.

42. Nulla (sc., pena) is the subject of morse.

43. Così, 'on the other hand.' — Ingiura (= ingiuria), 'injustice.'

45. Che, 'whom.'

48. Tremò: cf. Mat. xxvii, 51. — Earth quaked with horror and Heaven opened with joy.

52. Ristretta, 'bound.'

60. Adulto, 'full-grown' in the flame of love. Only an infinitely loving mind can comprehend the boundless love which impelled God to sacrifice himself for man.

61. Veramente, 'however.' — Segno, 'target': this problem.

62. 'Men aim much, but distinguish little.'

Dirò perchè tal modo fu più degno.
 La divina bontà, che da sè sperne
 Ogni livore, ardendo in sè, sfavilla 65
 Sì che dispiega le bellezze eterne.
 Ciò che da lei senza mezzo distilla
 Non ha poi fine; perchè non si move
 La sua impronta, quand' ella sigilla.
 Ciò che da essa senza mezzo piove 70
 Libero è tutto, perchè non soggiace
 Alla virtute delle cose nuove.
 Più l' è conforme, e però più le piace;
 Chè l' ardor santo, ch' ogni cosa raggia,
 Nella più simigliante è più vivace. 75
 Di tutte queste cose s' avvantaggia
 L' umana crëatura; e s' una manca,
 Di sua nobilità convien che caggia.
 Solo il peccato è quel che la disfranca
 E falla dissimile al Sommo Bene, 80
 Perchè del lume suo poco s' imbianca;
 Ed in sua dignità mai non riviene,
 Se non riempie dove colpa vota,

64-66. Divine Goodness, in its exuberant love, brings forth men and angels, just as a blazing fire sends out sparks. Thus it 'reveals its eternal beauties,' by giving them a visible, objective form in the created world. — Cf. Cons., III, Metr. ix, ll. 4-6 (Boethius is addressing the Creator):

'Quem non externæ pepulerunt fingere causæ
 Materię fluitantis opus, verum insita summi
 Forma boni, livore carens.'

67. Senza mezzo, 'immediately' — Distilla, 'derives.'

70. Piove, 'comes down.'

72. To the power of the heavens, which are 'recent things' compared to their Maker.

73. 'It (the created thing) is more like to it (the Goodness), and hence more pleasing to it.'

76. S' avvantaggia, 'has the advantage.'

78. Di, 'from.'

79. Cf. Summa Theologiæ, Secunda Secundæ, Qu. lxiv, Art. 2, end.

83. Vota, 'makes a void.'

Contra mal dilettrar, con giuste pene.
 Vostra natura, quando peccò tota 85
 Nel seme suo, da queste dignitadi
 (Come da Paradiso) fu remota;
 Nè ricovrar poteasi, se tu badi
 Ben sottilmente, per alcuna via,
 Senza passar per l' un di questi guadi: 90
 O che Dio solo per sua cortesia
 Dimesso avesse, o che l' uom per sè isso
 Avesse soddisfatto a sua follia.
 Ficca mo l' occhio per entro l' abisso
 Dell' eterno consiglio, quanto puoi 95
 Al mio parlar distrettamente fisso!
 Non potea l' uomo, nei termini suoi,
 Mai satisfar, per non poter ir giuso
 Con umiltate, ubbidiendo poi,
 Quanto disubbidiendo intese ir suso; 100
 E questa è la cagion per che l' uom fue
 Da poter satisfar per sè dischiuso.
 Dunque a Dio convenia con le vie sue
 Riparar l' uomo a sua intera vita —
 Dico con l' una, ovver con ambedue. 105
 Ma perchè l' opra è tanto più gradita
 Dell' operante, quanto più appresenta

85. Cf. Romans v, 12. — Tota (Latin)=tutta.

86. Seme: Adam.

91. O, 'either.'

CANTO VIII

ARGUMENT

THE nearer we come to God, the more we appreciate the charm of his Revelation. Thus Beatrice grows in loveliness as she and Dante rise from sphere to sphere; and now a fresh increase of her beauty announces the arrival of the celestial travelers in the heaven of Venus. The spheres that bear the various stars are transparent hollow globes of light matter, turning all together from east to west, and, in addition, possessing each an independent revolution in another direction and at a different speed. Moreover, the heaven of Venus, — like those of the Moon, Mercury, Mars, Jupiter, and Saturn, — has, attached to itself, a little revolving sphere carrying the planet. The circuit of this smaller ball is called an epicycle. Mathematically, an epicycle is defined as a circle whose centre is on the circumference of a greater one. By means of this device (and others) the Ptolemaic astronomers explained the varying distances of each planet from the earth. Every heavenly body, except the sun and the fixed stars, has three different revolutions: the general diurnal course, the periodic orbit of the individual sphere, and the accompanying turn of the epicycle. The sun and the fixed stars have the first two. In the heaven of Venus Dante and his guide find the third of the epicycles.

Here, as in the other spheres, they enter the planet itself, where the moving souls appear as lights flitting through the bright substance of the star, the rate of their speed being an indication of their joy and love, which depend on the distinctness of their eternal vision of God. They are perceived as sparks are seen shooting in a flame, or as, in song, a voice passing from note to note is distinguished from other voices holding one tone. Their apparent position in the universe is a symbol of the degree of beatitude enjoyed by those whose love was too much of the flesh. They are the best of the spirits whose excellence is marred by some taint of worldliness; it is therefore appropriate that their heaven should be the highest of those reached by the earth's conical shadow, as it is projected into space.

Among these souls is that of Charles Martel, son of Charles II of Apulia and grandson of Charles of Anjou, heir to the thrones of Naples, Provence, and Hungary. In 1291 he married Clemence, daughter of Rudolph I. He died in 1295, and the Neapolitan succession was transferred to his brother Robert. His father lived until 1309. The contrast between Robert's niggardliness and his father's lavish expenditures suggests a discussion of heredity. Human dispositions are moulded by the stars. God has embodied his providence in these agents — has made it a 'power' in the skies. The stars (which constitute 'Nature') do their work unerringly: a defect in them would imply a fault in their Maker. But in their operation they are cognizant of no distinction of parentage or rank. Hence, in choosing a vocation for a youth, we should consider, not his family, but the character he has received from Nature. If we do otherwise, we trouble the organism of society by putting its members into the wrong places.

In the spring of 1294 Charles Martel visited Florence with a brilliant retinue, and was received with unprecedented magnificence, as G. Villani relates in his Croniche, VIII, xiii. We may infer from the present canto that our poet then made his personal acquaintance. Indeed, we are justified in conjecturing that Charles, on this occasion, heard and applauded Dante's canzone (the first in the Convivio), Voì che intendendo il terzo ciel movete, which was presumably the great literary novelty in Florence at the time of his visit; for he greets Dante in heaven with a reference to this poem. This episode affords, then, a clue to the date of composition of the canzone in question. The powers invoked in the opening line of the lyric — those who by their intelligence move the third heaven — are the Principalities, the angels who preside over the sphere of Venus.

For the theory of the epicycle, see Conv., II, iv, 78-104; Ristoro d'Arezzo, Della composizione del mondo, I, xii. For Charles Martel's visit to Florence, Moore, III, 42.

Solea creder lo mondo, in suo periclo,
Che la bella Ciprigna il folle amore
Raggiasse, volta nel terzo epiciclo;

1. Mondo is the subject. — In suo periclo, 'to its peril': the belief that 'mad love' was sent down from a star by a goddess was a dangerous one.

2. Ciprigna, 'Cyprìote': Venus, who was born near Cyprus and had a famous temple there.

3. Volta, 'revolving.'

Per che non pure a lei facean onore
 Di sacrificio e di votivo grido 5
 Le genti antiche nell' antico errore,
 Ma Dione onoravano e Cupido, —
 Questa per madre sua, questo per figlio, —
 E dicean ch' ei sedette in grembo a Dido;
 E da costei, ond' io principio piglio, 10
 Pigliavano il vocabol della stella
 Che il sol vagheggia or da coppa or da ciglio.
 Io non m' accorsi del salire in ella;
 Ma d' esservi entro mi fece assai fede
 La Donna mia, ch' io vidi far più bella. 15
 E come in fiamma favilla si vede
 E come in voce voce si discerne,
 Quando una è ferma e l' altra va e riede,
 Vid' io in essa luce altre lucerne
 Moversi in giro più e men correnti, 20
 Al modo, credo, di lor viste eterne.
 Di fredda nube non disceser venti,
 O visibili o no, tanto festini
 Che non paressero impediti e lenti
 A chi avesse quei lumi divini 25
 Veduti a noi venir, lasciando il giro

6. Nell' antico errore: cf. Inf. I, 72.

7. Dione, daughter of Oceanus and Thetis, was the mother of Venus.

8. According to Virgil (Æn., I, 657-660, 715-722), Cupid, disguised as Æneas's son Ascanius, sat in Dido's lap. The ancients foolishly ascribed Dido's 'mad love' to divine instigation.

10. Principio, 'beginning' of this canto.

11. Cf. IV, 61-63.

12. Che is the object of vagheggia, 'woos.' — Da coppa, 'at nape,' i. e., behind; da ciglio, 'at brow,' i. e., before: according; as Venus is morning or evening star. For the odd expression da coppa, cf. Æn., I, 402: [Venus] 'avertens rosea cervice refulsit.'

23. When winds become ignited, they are 'visible' in the form of lightning or meteors: cf. Purg. V, 37-39. See Moore, I, 132.

26. Giro, 'round,' dance.

Pria cominciato in gli alti Serafini.
 E dentro a quei che più innanzi apparìro
 Sonava 'Osanna' sì che unque poi
 Di rīudir non fui senza disiro. 30
 Indi si fece l' un più presso a noi,
 E solo incominciò: 'Tutti sem presti
 Al tuo piacer, perchè di noi ti gioi.
 Noi ci volgiam coi Principi celesti
 D' un giro e d' un girare e d' una sete, 35
 Ai quali tu del mondo già dicesti:
 "Voi che intendendo il terzo ciel movete."
 E sem sì pien d' amor che, per piacerti,
 Non fia men dolce un poco di quìete.'
 Poscia che gli occhi miei si furo offerti 40
 Alla mia Donna riverenti, ed essa
 Fatti gli avea di sè contenti e certi,
 Rivoltersi alla luce, che promessa
 Tanto s' avea, e: 'Di' chi siete,' fue
 La voce mia di grande affetto impressa. 45
 E quanta e quale vid' io lei far piùe
 Per allegrezza nuova che s' accrebbe,
 Quand' io parlai, all' allegrezze sue!
 Così fatta, mi disse: 'Il mondo m' ebbe
 Giù poco tempo; e se più fosse stato, 50
 Molto sarà di mal che non sarebbe.
 La mia letizia mi ti tien celato,

27. In, 'among.' In the Emyrean, in company with the Seraphim, the highest of the angels.

33. Gioi, present subjunctive of gioiare, 'have joy.'

35. Di, 'with.'

43-44. Promessa . . . s' avea, 'had promised.'

46. Far piùe, 'increased.'

51. 'Much evil which shall be would not have befallen.' For the distorted construction, cf. VI, 142.

Che mi raggia dintorno, e mi nasconde
 Quasi animal di sua seta fasciato.
 Assai m' amasti, ed avesti bene onde; 55
 Chè, s' io fossi giù stato, io ti mostrava
 Di mio amor più oltre che le fronde.
 Quella sinistra riva che si lava
 Di Rodano, poi ch' è misto con Sorga,
 Per suo signore a tempo m' aspettava, 60
 E quel corno d' Ausonia che s' imborga
 Di Bari, di Gaëta e di Catona,
 Da ove Tronto e Verde in mare sgorga.
 Fulgeami già in fronte la corona
 Di quella terra che il Danubio riga 65
 Poi che le ripe tedesche abbandona.
 E la bella Trinacria, — che caliga
 Tra Pachino e Peloro (sopra il golfo
 Che riceve da Euro maggior briga)
 Non per Tifeo, ma per nascente solfo, — 70

54. Animal: a silk-worm.

57. I should have shown thee the fruit of my love.

58-60. Provence, which lies on the left of the Rhone below its confluence with the Sorgue, was the dowry of Beatrice, wife of Charles of Anjou, Charles Martel's grandfather: cf. VI, 133-134; Purg. XX, 61-62.

61. Ausonia: a name for Italy used by the Latin poets. — S' imborga, 'is skirted': borghi means 'outskirts,' 'suburbs.' The towns of Bari, Gaeta, and Catona mark roughly the northeast, northwest, and southwest confines of the Kingdom of Naples, won by Charles of Anjou.

63. Da ove, 'from the point where.' The rivers Tronto, on the east side, and Verde, on the west, separate the Kingdom of Naples from the Papal States at the north.

65. In virtue of a claim on his mother's side, Charles was crowned titular King of Hungary.

67-69. Trinacria is Sicily, conquered by Charles of Anjou. Between the southeasterly and northeasterly capes of Pachynus and Pelorus lies the Bay of Calabria, exposed to the 'vexation' of Eurus, the east wind. — Caliga, 'is darkened,' by clouds of smoke from Ætna.

70. The darkness from Ætna is not due, as Ovid sang (Met., V, 346-356), to the struggles of the giant Typhæus, buried under the whole island of Sicily, but is caused by the effect of the sun's heat on 'sulphur in formation.' Cf. Ristoro d'Arezzo, Della composizione del mondo, VII, iv, 7.

Attesi avrebbe li suoi regi ancora,
 Nati per me di Carlo e di Ridolfo,
 Se mala signoria, che sempre accora
 Li popoli soggetti, non avesse
 Mosso Palermo a gridar: "Mora, mora!" 75
 E se mio frate questo antivedesse,
 L' avara povertà di Catalogna
 Già fuggiria, perchè non gli offendesse;
 Chè veramente provveder bisogna
 Per lui, o per altrui, sì ch' a sua barca 80
 Carcata più di carco non si pogna.
 La sua natura, che di larga parca
 Discese, avria mestier di tal milizia
 Che non curasse di mettere in arca.'
 'Però ch' io credo che l' alta letizia 85
 Che il tuo parlar m' infonde, signor mio,
 Là 've ogni ben si termina e s' inizia
 Per te si veggia, come la vegg' io,
 Grata m' è più; e anco questo ho caro,
 Perchè il discerni rimirando in Dio. 90

72. Sicily would now be awaiting a line of kings descended from Charles of Anjou and Rudolph of Hapsburg (respectively the grandfather and the father-in-law of Charles Martel), if the revolution of 1282, known as the Sicilian Vespers, breaking out in Palermo with the cry 'Death to the French!', had not driven Charles's people from the island and given the crown to Peter III of Aragon.

76. Charles Martel's brother Robert succeeded his father, Charles II, in 1309; he had been chosen for the succession before 1300. Robert, who had spent some years as a hostage for his father in Spain, is represented as having adopted the traditional miserliness of Catalonia.

81. Pogna = ponga: cf. Purg. XIII, 64, XVI, 123.

82. The 'stingy' Robert descended from the 'lavish' Charles II. The latter, with all his faults, is said to have been liberal in his expenditures.

83. Milizia, 'knighthood.'

84. Mettere in arca, 'put (money) into his chest.'

87. In God, the beginning and end of all good.

90. 'That thou discernest it by looking into God': that thou art one of the blest, who see all things in God.

Fatto m' hai lieto, e così mi fa chiaro
 (Poichè parlando a dubitar m' hai mosso)
 Come uscir può di dolce seme amaro.'
 Questo io a lui; ed egli a me: 'S' io posso
 Mostrarti un vero, a quel che tu domandi 95
 Terrai il viso come tieni il dosso.
 Lo ben che tutto il regno che tu scandi
 Volge e contenta, fa esser virtute
 Sua provvidenza in questi corpi grandi;
 E non pur le nature provvedute 100
 Son nella mente ch' è da sè perfetta,
 Ma esse insieme con la lor salute.
 Per che quantunque questo arco saëtta
 Disposto cade a provveduto fine,
 Si come cosa in suo segno diretta. 105
 Se ciò non fosse, il ciel che tu cammine
 Producerebbe sì li suoi effetti,
 Che non sarebbero arti, ma ruïne;
 E ciò esser non può, se gl' intelletti
 Che movon queste stelle non son manchi, 110
 E manco il primo che non gli ha perfetti.
 Vuoi tu che questo ver più ti s' imbianchi?'
 Ed io: 'Non già, perchè impossibil veggio
 Che la natura, in quel ch' è uopo, stanchi.'
 Ond' egli ancora: 'Or di', sarebbe il peggio 115
 Per l' uomo in terra se non fosse cive?'

97. Scandi, 'ascendest.'

98-99. The divine goodness 'makes its providence to be a power' in the revolving heavens.

100. Non pur le nature, 'not the characters alone.' — Provvedute, 'foreseen' by divine providence.

102. 'But their welfare with them.'

105. Suo segno, 'its own target.'

103. Quest' arco: providence.

111. Primo: sc., intelletto.

116. Cive, 'citizen,' a social being. Cf. Conv., IV, iv, 1-10.

'Sì,' rispos' io, 'e qui ragion non cheggio.'
 'E può egli esser, se giù non si vive
 Diversamente per diversi offici?
 No, se il maëstro vostro ben vi scrive.' 120
 Sì venne deducendo infino a quici;
 Poscia conchiuse: 'Dunque esser diverse
 Convien dei vostri effetti le radici,
 Per che un nasce Solone, ed altro Xerse,
 Altro Melchisedech, ed altro quello 125
 Che volando per l' aere il figlio perse.
 La circular natura, ch' è suggello
 Alla cera mortal, fa ben sua arte,
 Ma non distingue l' un dall' altro ostello.
 Quinci addivien ch' Esaù si diparte 130
 Per seme da Jacob, e vien Quirino
 Da sì vil padre che si rende a Marte.
 Natura generata il suo cammino
 Simil farebbe sempre ai generanti,
 Se non vincesse il provveder divino. 135
 Or quel che t' era retro t' è davanti;
 Ma perchè sappi che di te mi giova,
 Un corollario voglio che t' ammantì.

120. Maestro: Aristotle, whose Politics Dante cites in Conv., IV, iv, 44-50

123. Effetti, 'works.' — The 'roots' are the dispositions of men.

124-126. One is born a legislator, or Solon; another a general, or Xerxes. another a priest, or Melchisedech (Gen. xiv, 18); another a mechanic, or Dādālus (who lost his son Icārus while they were flying through the air: cf. Inf. XVII, 109-111).

127. Circular natura, 'revolving nature': the spheres, which stamp human character.

129. Ostello, 'inn': the individual who receives the stellar influence.

130-132. Esau and Jacob, though brothers, were radically different from the start: Gen. xxv, 21-27. Quirinus, or Romulus, was the son of such a poor father that his paternity was ascribed to the god Mars.

133. Natura generata: heredity.

135. Provveder is the subject.

137. Di te mi giova, 'I delight in thee.'

138. 'I will have thee cloak thyself in a corollary.' The corollary is added

Sempre natura, se fortuna trova
Discorde a sè, (come ogni altra semente 140
Fuor di sua region) fa mala prova.
E se il mondo laggiù ponesse mente
Al fondamento che natura pone,
Seguendo lui, avria buona la gente.
Ma voi torcete alla religione 145
Tal che fia nato a cingersi la spada,
E fate re di tal ch'è da sermone;

to the demonstration, as a cloak to a suit of clothes. Cf. Purg. XXVIII, 136. See Cons., III, Pr. x: 'veluti geometræ solent demonstratis propositis aliquid inferre, . . . ita ego quoque tibi veluti corollarium dabo.'

CANTO IX

ARGUMENT

THERE is no repining among the blest. Each spirit is aware that the stellar influences which shaped its mortal life are directed by the same providence that determined its eternal capacity for happiness, so that there is an exact correspondence between earthly conduct and heavenly reward. All are so full of joy, of love for their Maker, of admiration for his work, and of eagerness to conform to his will, that there is no room for dissatisfaction.

Among those in whom love — the motive power of all good — was abundant, but was ill employed, we find Cunizza da Romano from the March of Treviso in northeastern Italy, the troubadour Foulques, or Folquet, from Marseilles, and the Biblical Rahab of Jericho.

Cunizza, youngest of the six sisters of the cruel tyrant Ezzelino da Romano, is said to have had three husbands and at least one lover. At the instigation of her brothers, she forsook her first spouse, Rizzardo di San Bonifazio, being aided in her escape by Sordello (Purg. VI), who was a minstrel at her court. In 1265, the year of Dante's birth, she was in Florence — an elderly lady — at the house of the Cavalcanti, and there granted freedom to her father's and brothers' slaves. She made her will in 1279, leaving her property to the sons of Alessandro da Mangona (Inf. XXXII, 55-60), who were related to her through her mother.

Folquet de Marselha, the son of a wealthy Genoese merchant, became a noted amatory poet in southern France, and addressed impassioned verse to the wives of two of his protectors. — as well as to his first patron's sister, whom he used as a screen. He was imitated by several Italian rhymesters, and is mentioned with praise in Vulg. El., II, vi, 58-59. Subsequently, repenting of his worldly life, he entered the Cistercian order, was made head of a rich abbey, became in 1205 Bishop of Toulouse, and later took a mercilessly active part in the suppression of the Albigensian heresy and the extermination of its adherents. Marvelous tales were told of his sanctity.

The story of Rahab is related in Joshua ii. When Joshua was trying to take Jericho, he sent to the city two spies, who lodged in the house of 'an harlot named Rahab.' Their presence becoming known to the enemy, their hostess saved them by sending the pursuers on a false clue, hiding her guests on the roof of the house, and, when the coast was clear, letting them 'down by a cord through the window, for her house was upon the town wall.' In return, they promised safety for her and her relatives when Jericho should fall; as a token, she was to 'bind' a 'line of scarlet thread in the window.' Her service resulted in the victory of the Children of Israel; and when the city was cursed, Joshua proclaimed (vi, 17): 'Only Rahab the harlot shall live, she and all that are with her in the house, because she hid the messengers that we sent.' Thus, too, she won salvation, and, according to Dante, was the first soul 'assumed' by the heaven of Venus, when the Hebrew spirits were liberated from Limbus. 'Likewise also was not Rahab the harlot justified by works,' says James ii, 25, 'when she had received the messengers and had sent them out another way?' And in Hebrews xi, 31, we read: 'By faith the harlot Rahab perished not with them that believed not.' In the allegorical exposition of the Scriptures, Joshua often figures as a symbol of Christ, while Rahab is sometimes interpreted as the Church, which he saved by the 'scarlet thread' of his blood.

Da poi che Carlo tuo, bella Clemenza,
 M' ebbe chiarito, mi narrò gl' inganni
 Che ricever dovea la sua semenza;
 Ma disse: 'Taci, e lascia volger gli anni!'
 Sì ch' io non posso dir se non che pianto 5
 Giusto verrà dietro ai vostri danni.
 E già la vita di quel lume santo
 Rivolta s' era al sol che la riempie,

1. The Clemence addressed is probably Charles's daughter, who in 1315 married Louis X of France. Charles's wife, also named Clemence, died in 1295.

3. Shortly after Charles's death, his son, Charles Robert, was deprived, by his uncle Robert, of the right of succession to the throne of Naples.

4-6. Here, as in all cases where Dante forecasts events subsequent to the time of writing, the prophecy is vague.

7. Vita: soul. Cf. Æn., VI, 292.

Come quel ben ch' ad ogni cosa è tanto.
 Ahi, anime ingannate, e fatture empie, 10
 Che da sì fatto ben torcete i cori,
 Drizzando in vanità le vostre tempie!
 Ed ecco un altro di quelli splendori
 Ver me si fece, e il suo voler piacermi
 Significava nel chiarir di fuori. 15
 Gli occhi di Bëatrice, ch' eran fermi
 Sopra me come pria, di caro assenso
 Al mio disio certificato fermi.
 'Deh metti al mio voler tosto compenso,
 Bëato spirto,' dissi, 'e fammi prova 20
 Ch' io possa in te rifletter quel ch' io penso.'
 Onde la luce, che m' era ancor nuova,
 Del suo profondo, ond' ella pria cantava,
 Seguette, come a cui di ben far giova:
 'In quella parte della terra prava 25
 Italica, che siede tra Rialto
 E le fontane di Brenta e di Piava,
 Si leva un colle, e non surge molt' alto,
 Là onde scese già una facella
 Che fece alla contrada un grande assalto. 30
 D' una radice nacqui ed io ed ella;

9. Tanto, 'sufficient.'

12. Tempie, 'temples,' i. e., faces.

14. Il suo voler piacermi is the object of significava.

18. Fermi = mi fecero.

19-21. Dante begs the unknown soul to answer without waiting to be questioned.

25-27. The March of Treviso, in the northeast corner of Italy, lies between the Alps, where the rivers Brenta and Piave have their source, and Venice, the most important of whose islands is called Rialto.

28-30. The 'torch,' or scourge of mankind, is Ezzelino (or Azzolino) III da Romano, the most infamous and bloodthirsty of the petty tyrants of mediæval Italy: cf. Inf. XII, 110. He was born in 1194, in the little hill town of Romano, and died in 1259. Cunizza was his sister.

Cunizza fui chiamata, e qui rifulgo,
 Perchè mi vinse il lume d' esta stella.
 Ma lietamente a me medesma indulgo
 La cagion di mia sorte, e non mi noia; 35
 Che parria forse forte al vostro vulgo.
 Di questa luculenta e cara gioia
 Del nostro cielo, che più m' è propinqua,
 Grande fama rimase, e pria che moia,
 Questo centesim' anno ancor s' incinqua. 40
 Vedi se far si dee l' uomo eccellente,
 Sì ch' altra vita la prima relinqua!
 E ciò non pensa la turba presente
 Che Tagliamento ed Adice richiude,
 Nè per esser battuta ancor si pente. 45
 Ma tosto fia che Padova al palude
 Cangerà l' acqua che Vicenza bagna,
 Per esser al dover le genti crude.
 E dove Sile e Cagnan s' accompagna,

34. A me medesma indulgo, 'I grant myself,' i. e., 'I accept.'

35. Cagion: the influence of Venus, which, in accordance with divine providence, shaped her character.

36. Forte, 'strange'

37. Gioia, 'gem': Folquet de Marselha, who reappears in l. 67.

39. Moia, 'it fades.'

40. 'This centennial year shall yet be fived' — shall return five times: five centuries shall pass. Dante probably thought the world would come to an end at about that time: cf. Bull., X, 52. In the Conv., II, xv, 115-118, he says: 'Noi siamo già nell' ultima etade del secolo, e attendemo veracemente la consumazione del celestiale movimento.'

42. Altra vita (a life of fame on earth) is the object of relinqua, 'shall leave.' Cf. XVII, 98, 119-120.

44. The rivers Tagliamento and Adige, on the east and west, bound the March of Treviso.

46-47. 'But soon it shall come to pass that the Paduans, at the swamp, shall alter (i. e., stain with their blood) the water (the river Bacchiglione) which bathes Vicenza.' In 1314 the Paduans, who were attacking Vicenza, were suddenly set upon, and defeated with great loss, by a small force under Can Grande of Verona.

48. 'Because the people are stubborn against duty' to the Imperial authority.

49. The clear river Sile and the turbid Cagnano unite at Treviso, but for some distance beyond the confluence their waters can be distinguished.

50. Tal, 'a certain man': Rizzardo da Camino, a powerful lord, son of the 'good Gherardo' of Purg. XVI, 124.

51. Carpìr, 'catch.' — Ragna, 'bird-net': cf. Canzone XV, 23. — In 1312 Rizzardo was murdered by a hired assassin while playing chess.

53. Pastor: Alessandro Novello of Treviso, bishop of Feltre. In 1314 four gentlemen of Ferrara took refuge with him, to escape the wrath of Pino della Tosa, who governed Ferrara in behalf of King Robert, Vicar of the Church. Alessandro, yielding to pressure from Treviso, surrendered them to Pino, who put them to death.

54. Malta is the name of several different prisons.

55. Bigoncia, 'vat.'

59. Parte, 'party': Guelf.

61. The Thrones are the angels that direct the seventh sphere, the heaven of Saturn.

62. These angels are executors of God's judgments. Cf. Summa Theologiae, Prima, Qu. cviii, Art. 6: 'Throni dicuntur, secundum Gregorium, per quos Deus sua judicia exercet.'

63. We see mirrored in the Thrones the punishment that God has in store for the sinners, and therefore we can speak with satisfaction of their misdeeds.

65. Rota: the round dance of bright souls.

67. Letizia: the happy spirit mentioned in l. 37.

71. Qui: on earth. — Giù: in Hell.

73. S' inluia (a word made up by Dante from the pronoun lui), 'hims itself,' i. e., identifies itself with him.

75. Di sè a te puote esser fuia, 'can be a thief of itself (can steal or secrete itself) from thee.' Thou canst see my wish in God.

77. Col canto, 'together with the song.' — Fuochi: the Seraphim, ministers of divine love.

78. Cuculla, 'cowl.' Cf. Isaiah vi, 2: 'Above it stood the seraphims: each one had six wings.'

81. 'If I could thou me, as thou mcest thee': the verbs are constructed, in the same fashion as that in l. 73, from tu and mi.

82. Valle: the Mediterranean, which was thought to extend from west to east 90°, or a quarter of the earth's circumference.

84. Mar: the great Ocean, which surrounds all the land.

85. Discordanti, 'inharmonious,' varied. — Contra il sole: as the opening of the sea is at the west end, it is thought of as stretching from west to east.

right angles to that of the meridian. The two circles are, then, 90° apart. When the water enters the Mediterranean, at the Strait, its zenith is that of Gibraltar and its horizon traverses the zenith of Jerusalem; but when it reaches the eastern end of the sea, its meridian is that of Jerusalem and its horizon passes through the zenith of Gibraltar.

88. Littorano, 'shore-dweller.'

89. Between the Spanish river Ebro and the Italian Macra or Macra.

92. Buggea, or Bougie, on the north coast of Africa, was an important town in the Middle Ages. — Terra, 'city': Marseilles, which is almost under the same meridian as Bougie.

93. In 49 B. C. there was a fierce naval battle, in the harbor of Marseilles, between Cæsar's fleet and the local supporters of Pompey: cf. Purg. XVIII, 101-102. See Phars., III, 572-73:

105. Valore: divine power.

107. Bene, 'goodness.'

108. 'By reason of which the world below (mankind) again becomes the world above.' A difficult and very obscure line.

116. 'And, she being united to our order.'

117. 'It (the order) is sealed with her in the highest degree.' Rahab is the supreme representative of our order of beatitude.

CANTO X

ARGUMENT

LEAVING behind us the spheres reached by the earth's shadow, we enter upon a new realm of the celestial world and a second division of the Paradiso, which is introduced by a prelude comprising the first twenty-seven lines of this canto. Here we are bidden, fixing our minds on the intersection of the equator and the ecliptic and the angle at which they meet, to reflect upon the marvelous Providence that shaped the courses of the stars exactly to meet the needs of man. Contemplating the system of the universe, we cannot fail to form some conception of its triune Maker. Divine Power (the Father, 'lo primo valore'), moved by Love (the Holy Ghost), and guided by Wisdom (the Son), created the world of spirit and of matter. 'Looking upon his Son with the Love which both of them endlessly breathe forth, the primal and ineffable Power produced — with a plan such that one who considers it cannot be without a taste of Him — all that revolves through mind or through space.'

In Dante's allegory the number and the sequence of the orders of beatitude necessarily depend in some measure on the Ptolemaic arrangement of the heavenly bodies and their fitness to symbolize various kinds of goodness. The 'essential reward' (to use St. Thomas's phrase) depends on the intensity of love, which is a result of Grace; but the 'accidental reward' is determined by the nature of the service done by the individual soul, and this is largely a matter of planetary influence. From the confused mass of stellar powers formulated by astrologers, the poet selected those which were obviously appropriate and harmonious with his ethical scheme. The cold and remote Saturn evidently must represent the monastic type, the life of contemplation; and it is proper that this order should be the highest. Jupiter must stand for Empire, and to its sphere are assigned those who maintained justice. Mars, emblem of war, harbors the Crusaders, who were willing to give their lives for the Faith. And the Sun, the image of enlightenment, eminently suits the theologians. Their souls are conspicuous for exceeding brightness. It may be noted that several of those now sainted had not been canonized in the poet's time, and consequently their station below the warriors was then less striking than it is to-day.

The one who speaks in our canto is Dante's great master in theology, the Angelic Doctor, St. Thomas Aquinas. Born in 1226 of the princely family of Aquino, he early entered the Dominican order. After studying at Cologne under Albertus Magnus, he taught at the University of Naples. When he died in 1274, on his way to a council at Lyons, it was reported that he had been poisoned to please Charles of Anjou, whom his kinsmen opposed: cf. Purg. XX, 60; also G. Villani, Cronica, IX, ccxviii. His huge Summa Theologiae, a precise and formal discussion, in scholastic style, of questions of Christian doctrine, has remained the principal Catholic authority on dogmatic theology. Very important also are his commentary on Aristotle and his treatise De Veritate Catholicae Fidei contra Gentiles, sometimes called Summa contra Gentiles or Contra Gentes. His mode of thought was strongly influenced by his teacher, Albertus Magnus, and, through him, by Aristotle. The final amalgamation of Christian and Aristotelian philosophy was achieved by him.

In the interpretation of stellar influence, Dante, while far simpler and clearer, is partially in accord with St. Thomas. The latter, in his Commentary on Aristotle's Metaphysics, XII, ix, ascribes to the various planets certain dominant effects, which to some extent correspond to the attributes selected by Dante. Stability, for instance, is characteristic of Saturn; mutability, of the moon. — For the double influence of Grace and the stars, see Purg. XXX, 109-117. — Attempts to connect Dante's heavens with the moral virtues enumerated by St. Thomas, and with the gifts of the Holy Spirit (correlated by St. Thomas with the virtues), have not resulted very satisfactorily.

Guardando nel suo Figlio con l' Amore
 Che l' uno e l' altro eternalmente spira,
 Lo primo ed ineffabile Valore,
 Quanto per mente o per loco si gira
 Con tanto ordine fe', ch' esser non puote 5
 Senza gustar di lui chi ciò rimira.

2. L' uno e l' altro is the subject, and che is the object, of spira. According to orthodox Catholic faith, the Holy Ghost (or Divine Love) emanates from both Father and Son, and consists in their eternal love for each other. Cf. Summa Theologiae, Prima, Qu. xxxvi and xxxvii.

4. This phrase is the object of fe' in l. 5.

6. Chi ciò rimira is the subject of puote in l. 5.

Leva dunque, lettore, all' alte rote
 Meco la vista dritto a quella parte
 Dove l' un moto e l' altro si percote;
 E lì comincia a vagheggiar nell' arte 10
 Di quel maestro che dentro a sè l' ama
 Tanto che mai da lei l' occhio non parte.
 Vedi come da indi si dirama
 L' obliquo cerchio che i pianeti porta,
 Per soddisfare al mondo che li chiama. 15
 E se la strada lor non fosse torta,
 Molta virtù nel ciel sarebbe in vano,
 E quasi ogni potenza quaggiù morta.
 E se dal dritto più o men lontano
 Fosse il partire, assai sarebbe manco 20
 E giù e su dell' ordine mondano.
 Or ti riman, lettore, sopra il tuo banco,
 Dietro pensando a ciò che si preliba,
 S' esser vuoi lieto assai prima che stanco.
 Messo t' ho innanzi: omai per te ti ciba! 25
 Chè a sè torce tutta la mia cura

9. The 'two motions' are the diurnal and the annual revolutions of the represented by the celestial equator and the celestial ecliptic. They 'strike,' or cross, each other at Aries, in which constellation the sun is at the time of Dante's journey.

10. Comincia is imperative. — Vagheggiar, 'gaze rapturously.'

11. L', like the lei in the next line, stands for the arte of l. 10.

13. Si dirama, 'branches.' At Aries the ecliptic slants across the equator.

14. Pianeti: the seven planets move through the signs of the zodiac, and thus their influence is properly distributed and modified.

15. Chiamar, 'invokes,' i. e., needs.

16. If the ecliptic, or zodiac, were not thus slanting, the solar and stellar influence could not operate as it does: cf. Com. III, v. 126-142, 190-205. There would be no seasons, and hence no generation.

19. If the obliquity of the ecliptic were greater or less, the succession of the seasons would not be so effective on the part of the globe where there is land. Cf. Ristoro d' Arezzo, Della composizione del mondo, II, iii.

21. Giù e su: on either side of the equator. Cf. Purg. IV, 63.

22. Riman is imperative.

23. Si preliba, 'is touched upon,' suggested.

Quella matera ond' io son fatto scriba.
 Lo ministro maggior della natura, —
 Che del valor del cielo il mondo imprenta,
 E col suo lume il tempo ne misura, — 30
 Con quella parte che su si rammenta
 Congiunto, si girava per le spire
 In che più tosto ognora s' appresenta;
 Ed io era con lui — ma del salire
 Non m' accors' io, se non com' uom s' accorge, 35
 Anzi il primo pensier, del suo venire.
 È Bëatrice quella che sì scorge
 Di bene in meglio sì subitamente
 Che l' atto suo per tempo non si sporge.
 Quant' esser convenia da sè lucente 40
 Quel ch' era dentro al sol, dov' io entra' mi,
 Non per color ma per lume parvente!
 Perch' io lo ingegno, l' arte e l' uso chiami,
 Sì nol direi che mai s' immaginasse;
 Ma creder puossi, e di veder sì brami! 45
 E se le fantasie nostre son basse
 A tanta altezza, non è maraviglia,

28. Lo ministro maggior: the sun.

31. Quella parte: Aries. — Su: ll. 8-9. — Si rammenta, 'is mentioned.'

32-33. The sun's apparent course around the earth, from day to day, is spiral. In the spring season it rises every day further north and earlier than the day before. Cf. Ristoro d'Arezzo, I, xxiii.

35-36. Se non, etc., 'any more than one perceives the coming of a thought before it begins.' Del suo venire depends on s' accorge. Suo, 'its,' the thought's.

37. Scorge, 'conducts.'

39. Si sporge, 'extends.' Revelation enlightens us instantaneously.

41-42. Era . . . parvente, 'was manifest.' The souls of the great theologians are brighter than the sun. Daniel xii, 3: 'And they that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament; and they that turn many to righteousness as the stars for ever and ever.' Mat. xiii, 43: 'Then shall the righteous shine forth as the sun in the kingdom of their Father.'

43. Perchè, 'though.'

45. Di veder sì brami, 'let men long to see it!' Let them make themselves fit for Heaven.

Chè sopra il sol non fu occhio ch' andasse.
 Tal era quivi la quarta famiglia
 Dell' alto padre che sempre la sazia, 50
 Mostrando come spira e come figlia.
 E Bèatrice incominciò: ' Ringrazia,
 Ringrazia il Sol degli Angeli, ch' a questo
 Sensibil t' ha levato per sua grazia!'
 Cor di mortal non fu mai sì digesto 55
 A devozione, ed a rendersi a Dio
 Con tutto il suo gradir cotanto presto,
 Com' a quelle parole mi fec' io;
 E sì tutto il mio amore in lui si mise
 Che Bèatrice eclissò nell' obbligo. 60
 Non le dispiacque; ma sì se ne rise
 Che lo splendor degli occhi suoi ridenti
 Mia mente unita in più cose divise.
 Io vidi più fulgor vivi e vincenti
 Far di noi centro e di sè far corona, 65
 Più dolci in voce che in vista lucenti.
 Così cinger la figlia di Latona
 Vedem tal volta, quando l' aere è pugno

48. Cf. Summa Theologiæ, Tertia, Suppl., Qu. lxxxv, Art. 2: 'Oculus non gloriosus non potest inspicere solem, propter magnitudinem claritatis.'

49. The 'fourth family' is the fourth order of the blest, the theologians.

50. Cf. Ps. xvii (Vulg. xvi), 15: 'I shall be satisfied (satiabor), when I awake, with thy likeness.'

51. God 'satisfies' the blest by revealing to them the mystery of the Trinity: they see how the Holy Ghost and the Son exist in him.

54. Sensibil, 'visible': sc., sun.

55. Digesto, 'disposed.'

57. Gradir, 'assent.'

60. Eclissò, 'it eclipseu.' For the moment, Revelation disappears in the direct contemplation of God.

63. 'Divided among many things my mind, which was concentrated on one.' The blessed souls are revealed again.

67. Latona's daughter is Diana, the moon. Sometimes, in moist weather, we see the moon 'girdled' with a shining halo. Cf. Purg. XXIX, 78.

Sì che ritenga il fil che fa la zona.
 Nella corte del ciel, ond' io rivegno, 70
 Si trovan molte gioie care e belle
 Tanto che non si posson trar del regno;
 E il canto di quei lumi era di quelle.
 Chi non s' impenna sì che lassù voli,
 Dal muto aspetti quindi le novelle. 75
 Poi sì cantando quegli ardenti soli
 Si fur girati intorno a noi tre volte,
 Come stelle vicine ai fermi poli,
 Donne mi parver — non da ballo sciolte,
 Ma che s' arrestin tacite, ascoltando 80
 Fin che le nuove note hanno ricolte.
 E dentro all' un senti' cominciar: 'Quando
 Lo raggio della grazia, onde s' accende
 Verace amore, e che poi cresce amando
 Moltiplicato, in te tanto risplende 85
 Che ti conduce su per quella scala
 U' senza risalir nessun discende,
 Qual ti negasse il vin della sua fiala
 Per la tua sete, in libertà non fora,

69. Moisture is 'the thread of which the belt is made.'

71. Gioie, 'jewels.' — Tor. cites from Marco Polo a couple of passages describing eastern countries whose rulers will not allow the rubies and pearls, which abound there, to be 'taken out of the kingdom.'

74. Non s' impenna, 'does not grow wings.' Cf. Isaiah xl, 31: 'But they that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles.'

75. To expect, on earth, to conceive of that song is as hopeless as expecting news from the dumb.

76. Poi = poi che, 'when.'

79. For the movements of the ballate, which were danced and sung by ladies holding one another by the hand, see Bull., IV, 180.

82. Quando, 'since.'

83. Since the original sin, man has needed grace to kindle his natural love of God: Summa Theologiæ, Prima Secundæ, Qu. cix, Art. 3.

87. U' = ove. — Here is a distinct promise of Dante's ultimate salvation. Cf. Purg. II, 91-92.

Se non com' acqua ch' al mar non si cala. 90
 Tu vuoi saper di quai piante s' infiora
 Questa ghirlanda, che intorno vagheggia
 La bella donna ch' al ciel t' avvalora.
 Io fui degli agni della santa greggia
 Che Domenico mena per cammino 95
 U' ben s' impingua, se non si vaneggia.
 Questi che m' è a destra più vicino,
 Frate e maëstro fummi, ed esso Alberto
 È di Cologna, ed io Thomas d' Aquino.
 Se sì di tutti gli altri esser vuoi certo, 100
 Diretro al mio parlar ten vien col viso
 Girando su per lo bëato serto:
 Quell' altro fiammeggiare esce del riso
 Di Grazïan, che l' uno e l' altro foro
 Aiutò sì che piace in Paradiso. 105
 L' altro, ch' appresso adorna il nostro coro,
 Quel Pietro fu che con la poverella

90. Se non come, 'any more than.' It would be as unnatural for one of these souls to refuse to satisfy Dante, who is so evidently one of the elect, as it would be for water not to run down hill.

92. The 'garland' is the ring of shining spirits: l. 65. — Vagheggia, 'gazes rapturously upon.'

93. Avvalora, 'strengthens.'

96. The speaker, St. Thomas Aquinas, who belonged to the Dominican order, declares that St. Dominic led his flock over a road where the sheep 'fatten well, if they do not stray,' i. e., they have abundance of spiritual food, as long as they adhere to his rule. This expression calls for an explanation in the next canto. Cf. Pr. xi, 25: 'The liberal soul shall be made fat (impinguabitur).'

99. The Swabian known as Albertus Magnus, Albert of Cologne, and 'Doctor Universalis,' who lived from 1193 to 1280, and taught for some time at Cologne, was the most erudite man of the Middle Ages and one of the greatest scholars of all time. His most important work was the reconciliation of Aristotelian philosophy and Christian theology. St. Thomas was his principal follower.

102. Serto, 'wreath': cf. l. 92.

104. Gratian, in the first half of the 12th century, composed the Decretum, a collection of sacred and ecclesiastical utterances, which became the leading text-book of Canon Law. This work did much to establish an agreement between religious and civil law, and thus 'helped the one and the other court.'

107. Peter Lombard, the 'Magister Sententiarum,' professor in Bologna and Paris, and Bishop of Paris, made four volumes of doctrinal excerpts from the Offerse a Santa Chiesa suo tesoro.

Church Fathers, called the Sententia, which were used in the schools as a manual of theology. In his preface he compares his work to the widow's mite (Luke xxi, 2). He lived in the 12th century.

109-110. The 'fifth light,' that of Solomon, is the 'most beautiful' of all the circle, because it emanates from the ardent love which phrased the Song of Songs, the epithalamium of Christ and Church.

111. Gola, 'is greedy.' — Novella, 'news,' concerning its fate. Some theologians (as St. Jerome) maintained that Solomon was saved, others (as St. Augustine) that he was damned. See 1 Kings xi, 4-12.

112-114. See 1 Kings iii, 12: 'Lo, I have given thee a wise and an understanding heart; so that there was none like thee before thee, neither after thee shall any arise like unto thee.' The phrase 'no second ever rose,' in l. 114, raises in Dante's mind a question which is answered in Canto XIII.

115. The 'candle' is Dionysius the Areopagite, St. Paul's convert in Athens (Acts xvii, 34), to whom was ascribed a Neo-Platonic work of the 5th or 6th century, called De Cælesti Hierarchia, the great authority on the orders of the angels, their nature, their functions, and their relation to the heavens. Cf. XXVIII, 130-139; also Letter to Can Grande, xxi, 404-406.

118-120. At the beginning of the 5th century Paulus Orosius, a Lusitanian priest, composed the first compendium of universal history, entitled Historia adversus Paganos, showing the hand of God in the direction of human affairs, and refuting the pagan attribution of present troubles to the baleful influence of Christianity. This work, which was widely read, was one of Dante's chief sources of information. It was undertaken at the suggestion of St. Augustine, whose De Civitate Dei it supplements.

121. Trani, 'drawest.'

Per vedere ogni ben, dentro vi gode
 L' anima santa che il mondo fallace 125
 Fa manifesto a chi di lei ben ode.
 Lo corpo ond' ella fu cacciata giace
 Giuso in Cieldauro, ed essa da martiro
 E da esilio venne a questa pace.
 Vedi oltre fiammeggiar l' ardente spiro 130
 D' Isidoro, di Beda, e di Riccardo,
 Che a considerar fu più che viro.
 Questi, onde a me ritorna il tuo riguardo,
 È il lume d' uno spirto che, in pensieri
 Gravi, a morir gli parve venir tardo. 135
 Essa è la luce eterna di Sigieri,

124. Per vedere, 'through seeing.'

125. 'The blessed soul that exposes the deceptive world' is Anicius Manlius Severinus Boethius, author of De Consolatione Philosophiae, a beautiful treatise in prose interspersed with poetry, much admired in the Middle Ages. It was one of the two books with which Dante began the serious study of philosophy: Conv., II, xiii, 14-16; xvi, 4-8.

127-129. Boethius, who was an important statesman as well as an author, was imprisoned, under false charges, and finally put to death by Theodoric in 525. He is known in the Church as St. Severinus, being regarded as a martyr to Christianity: cf. G. Villani, Croniche, II, v. After the 'exile' of earthly life, his body was buried in the church of S. Pietro in Cielo d' Oro (St. Peter's of the Golden Ceiling) in Pavia.

131. St. Isidore, Bishop of Seville, who died in 636, wrote a huge and very useful encyclopædia, called Origines or Etymologiae. — The Venerable Bede, an English Monk who died in 735, was the author of an important historical work, the Historia Ecclesiastica Gentis Anglorum. — Richard, prior of the Monastery of St. Victor in Paris, composed, among other things, a treatise De Contemplatione: cf. Letter to Can Grande, xxviii, 554. He died in 1173.

132. A considerar, 'in contemplation.' — Viro, 'man.' — Richard of St. Victor was called the 'Great Contemplator.'

134-135. In pensieri gravi, 'immersed in deep problems.' — A morir, etc., 'thought that he was moving too slowly toward death.' — He was eager to reach Heaven, where his questions might be answered.

136. Siger of Brabant, a brilliant and daring philosopher, was a professor at the University of Paris in the third quarter of the 13th century. After two condemnations for heresy, he went to Orvieto, and was there (it would seem) murdered by a half-crazy cleric. We may infer that Dante knew nothing of his heresy nor of his tragic end. See P. Mandonnet, Siger de Brabant et l'Averroïsme latin au XIII^e siècle, 1899; F. Tocco, Le correnti del pensiero filosofico nel secolo XIII, 1901; Toynbee, 314; Rom., XXIX, 107.

Che, leggendo nel Vico degli Strami,

 Indi come orologio, che ne chiami
 Nell' ora che la sposa di Dio surge 140
 A mattinar lo sposo perchè l' ami, —
 Che l' una parte l' altra tira ed urge,
 'Tin tin' sonando con sì dolce nota
 Che il ben disposto spirto d' amor turge, —
 Così vid' io la gloriosa rota 145
 Moversi e render voce a voce in temprà
 Ed in dolcezza ch' esser non può nota,
 Se non colà dove gioir s' insempra.

137. Siger lectured in the Latin Quarter, in the rue du Fouarre (Straw St.), which in Latin is Vicus Straminis or Straminum.

138. 'Demonstrated enviable truths'. For the use of invidiosi, cf. Epistola V, ii, 24.

140. La sposa di Dio: the Church.

141. Mattinar lo sposo, 'sing matins to her Bridegroom,' Christ.

142. Che = in cui.

144. Turge, 'swells.'

146. Tempra, 'modulation.'

148. Insempra: a word coined by Dante from sempre.

CANTO XI

ARGUMENT

THE learned St. Dominic and the loving St. Francis were sent into the world by God to enable his worshipers to follow Christ more fearlessly, guided by Dominican wisdom, and more steadfastly, moved by the seraphic ardor of the Franciscans. The two great brotherhoods established by these holy men were to be the two wheels of the chariot of the Church. Unhappily the members of both orders soon fell away from the example of their teachers, and strife and degeneracy prevailed. The sheep, straying from the fold and seeking strange pastures, ceased to fatten on the word of God.

The lives of the two founders are briefly summarized in this canto and the next — that of St. Francis being told by St. Thomas, a Dominican, that of St. Dominic by a Franciscan, St. Bonaventure. In Heaven we find the harmony and courtesy that should have existed on earth. In his portrayal of the sweet, Christlike figure of St. Francis, Dante follows in the main the Legenda Beati Francisci of St. Bonaventure (or Bonaventura) a 13th century mystic, who, after having been a professor in Paris, became general of the Franciscans, bishop, and cardinal. Of the many miracles attributed to St. Francis, our poet mentions only that of the Stigmata, the divine attestation of his conformity to Jesus; and of the rules of his order, Dante singles out the one most important, in his eyes, for the reformation of both clergy and laymen — the rule of poverty. St. Francis was born in 1182 in the Umbrian town of Assisi, the son of a well-to-do merchant. Alert and merry, he was a leader among the gay youth of his city until a series of mishaps, — imprisonment in Perugia, a severe illness, disappointment over a projected military adventure in Apulia, — followed by two startling religious experiences, turned his mind to sacred things. Forswearing ownership of property, he devoted the rest of his days to the propagation of his doctrine of pure and simple living and universal love. Neither asceticism nor care ever quite subdued his natural cheerfulness, his playful fancy, his keen interest in the doings of his fellow-men. He died in 1226, and two years later was canonized by Gregory IX.

The sight of celestial spirits and eternal joys brings home to Dante the pettiness of all that is deemed most important on earth. Compared with the pursuit of heavenly gladness, even the gravest of worldly occupations are but empty trifling. 'The child's play of grown people,' says St. Augustine (Confessiones, I, ix), 'is called business' — 'Majorum nuge negotia vocantur, puerorum autem talia cum sint, puniuntur a maioribus.'

O insensata cura dei mortali,
 Quanto son difettivi sillogismi
 Quei che ti fanno in basso batter l' ali!
 Chi dietro a iura, e chi ad aforismi
 Sen giva, e chi seguendo sacerdozio, 5
 E chi regnar per forza o per sofismi,
 E chi rubare, e chi civil negozio;
 Chi nel diletto della carne involto
 S' affaticava, e chi si dava all' ozio;
 Quando, da tutte queste cose sciolto, 10
 Con Bèatrice m' era suso in cielo
 Cotanto gloriosamente accolto.
 Poi che ciascuno fu tornato ne lo
 Punto del cerchio in che avanti s' era,
 Fermossi come a candellier candelo. 15
 Ed io senti', dentro a quella lumiera
 Che pria m' avea parlato, sorridendo
 Incominciar, facendosi più mera:

4. Iura, 'law.' — Aforismi: the Aphorisms of Hippocrates served as a text-book of medicine.

6-7. Regnar and rubare may be loosely construed as objects of seguendo in l. 5. — Per forza o per sofismi: cf. Inf. XI, 24.

13. Ciascuno: each of the shining spirits that surround Dante. For the rhyme, cf. Purg. XVII, 55, and Inf. VIII, 17.

16. Lumiera: the 'light' emanating from the soul of St. Thomas.

18. Mera, 'clear': cf. IX, 114.

'Così com' io del suo raggio risplendo,
 Sì, riguardando nella luce eterna, 20
 Li tuoi pensieri, onde cagioni, apprendo.
 Tu dubbi, ed hai voler che si ricerna,
 In sì aperta e in sì distesa lingua,
 Lo dicer mio, ch' al tuo sentir si sterna,
 Ove dinanzi dissi: "U' ben s' impingua," 25
 E là u' dissi: "Non nacque il secondo;"
 E qui è uopo che ben si distingua.
 La provvidenza che governa il mondo
 Con quel consiglio nel quale ogni aspetto
 Crëato è vinto pria che vada al fondo, — 30
 Però che andasse ver lo suo diletto
 La sposa di colui ch' ad alte grida
 Disposò lei col sangue benedetto,
 In sè sicura ed anco a lui più fida, —
 Due Principi ordinò in suo favore, 35
 Che quinci e quindi le fosser per guida.
 L' un fu tutto serafico in ardore,
 L' altro per sapienza in terra fue

21. 'I apprehend whence thou derivest thy thoughts,' i. e., what is the occasion of them.

22. Si ricerna, 'be re-explained.' The subject is lo dicer mio in l. 24.

24. Che, 'that,' connecting with the sì of l. 23. — Si sterna, 'it (lingua) shall be leveled.'

25-26. See X, 96, 114.

29. Aspetto, 'sight.'

31. Però che, 'in order that.' — The subject of andasse is sposa in l. 32. — The 'Beloved' is Christ.

32. Colui: Christ. — Alte grida: 'And about the ninth hour Jesus cried with a loud voice, saying, . . . My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?' (Mat. xxvii, 46).

33. Disposò: Christ 'wedded' the Church with his blood on the cross.

35. In suo favore, 'in her behalf.'

37. L' un: St. Francis. The Seraphim, the highest order of angels, represent heavenly love.

38. L' altro: St. Domini.. The Cherubim, the next order, represent celestial wisdom.

Di cherubica luce uno splendore.
 Dell' un dirò, però che d' ambedue 40
 Si dice l' un pregiando, qual ch' uom prende,
 Perchè ad un fine fur l' opere sue.
 Intra Tupino e l' acqua che discende
 Del colle eletto del bēato Ubaldo,
 Fertile costa d' alto monte pende, 45
 Onde Perugia sente freddo e caldo
 Da Porta Sole; e dietro le piange
 Per grave giogo Nocera con Gualdo.
 Di questa costa, là dov' ella frange
 Più sua rattezza, nacque al mondo un sole, 50
 Come fa questo talvolta di Gange.
 Però chi d' esso loco fa parole
 Non dica 'Ascesi,' che direbbe corto,
 Ma 'Orïente,' se proprio dir vuole.

40. Un: St. Francis.

41. We describe both by praising one, whichever one we choose.

42. Ad un fine, 'to one end.' — Sue, 'their.'

43. Assisi is situated between the river Topino and the Chiascio, which runs into it below. The Topino empties into the Tiber.

44. On the hill, near Gubbio, from which the Chiascio flows, St. Ubaldo had his hermitage, before he became bishop of Gubbio. He died in 1160.

45. The west slope of Mt. Subasio, facing Perugia, is less steep than the other side.

46-48. The gate called Porta Sole is on the side of Perugia nearest to Subasio. The town feels the effect of the summer sun and the winter snow on the mountain. East of the range to which Subasio belongs are the little towns of Nocera and Gualdo, which 'weep because of the heavy mountain chain' of the Apennines on their east.

50. Rattezza, 'steepness' (cf. Purg. XII, 103): Assisi lies on a spur of the mountain. — Sole: even before Dante, St. Francis had been called a Sun.

51. Questo: this real sun, where Dante now is. — Talvolta: the sun rises from the Ganges, due east, at the vernal equinox.

52-54. The spot from which this new Sun rose should be called Orient or Dayspring. Luke i, 78: 'the dayspring from on high hath visited us.' Cf. Zechariah iii, 8, 'adducam servum meum Orientem,' and vi, 12, 'ecce vir Oriens nomen ejus' (the English Bible has a different rendering of both passages). The usual form of the name Assisi, in the Tuscan of Dante's day, was Ascesi, which may be interpreted as meaning 'I have risen.' While this is suggestive of dayspring, it is inadequate (corto): 'Orient' is the only fit word.

Non era ancor molto lontan dall' orto, 55
 Ch' ei cominciò a far sentir la terra
 Della sua gran virtute alcun conforto.
 Chè per tal donna giovinetto in guerra
 Del padre corse, a cui (com' alla morte)
 La porta del piacer nessun disserra; 60
 Ed innanzi alla sua spirital corte,
Et coram patre, le si fece unito;
 Poscia di dì in dì l' amò più forte.
 Questa, privata del primo marito,
 Mille cent' anni e più dispetta e scura 65
 Fino a costui si stette senza invito;
 Nè valse udir che la trovò sicura
 Con Amiclate, al suon della sua voce,
 Colui ch' a tutto il mondo fe' paura;
 Nè valse esser costante, nè feroce, 70
 Sì che, dove Maria rimase giuso,
 Ella con Cristo salse in su la croce.
 Ma perch' io non proceda troppo chiuso,

58-59. While still a youth, he espoused Lady Poverty, against his father's will. The marriage of St. Francis and Poverty has repeatedly been depicted in art, notably by Giotto in a fresco in the church of S. Francesco in Assisi.

61-62. Summoned by his father before the episcopal court of Assisi, St. Francis stripped off his clothes and gave them to him, keeping nothing he had received from his family. Thus did he wed Poverty. — Coram patre is a Biblical phrase: Mat. x, 33, 'before my Father.'

64. Questa: Poverty. — Primo marito: Christ.

65-66. From Christ to St. Francis (who was born in 1182), no one had cared for Poverty.

67-69. 'And it availed not that men heard how he who terrified the whole world (Cæsar) found her, with Amyclas (a poor fisherman), fearless at the sound of his voice.' See Phars., V, 515-531. Amyclas, who had nothing to lose, was not afraid when Cæsar knocked at his door; he was 'securus belli' — fearless of war. But even this example of the advantages of indigence — upon which Lucan moralizes (cf. Conv., IV, xiii, 110-121) — did not make Poverty seem desirable.

70. Feroce, 'untamed,' unsubdued.

71-72. When even Mary had to remain at the foot of the cross, Poverty accompanied her Spouse: Christ's raiment was taken from him, and 'they parted his garments, casting lots upon them' (Mark, xv, 24).

Francesco e Povertà per questi amanti
 Prendi oramai nel mio parlar diffuso. 75
 La lor concordia e i lor lieti sembianti,
 Amore e meraviglia e dolce sguardo
 Facean esser cagion di pensier santi;
 Tanto che il venerabile Bernardo
 Si scalzò prima, e dietro a tanta pace 80
 Corse, e correndo gli parv' esser tardo.
 O ignota ricchezza, o ben ferace!
 Scalzasi Egidio, scalzasi Silvestro,
 Dietro allo sposo; sì la sposa piace!
 Indi sen va quel padre e quel maëstro 85
 Con la sua donna, e con quella famiglia
 Che già legava l' umile capestro;
 Nè gli gravò viltà di cor le ciglia,
 Per esser fi' di Pietro Bernardone,
 Nè per parer dispetto a meraviglia. 90
 Ma regalmente sua dura intenzione
 Ad Innocenzio aperse, e da lui ebbe
 Primo sigillo a sua religione.
 Poi che la gente poverella crebbe

74. Francesco e Povertà is the object of the imperative prendi in l. 75.

76-78. 'Love, wonder, and sweet gaze made their concord and their glad looks to be a source of holy thoughts' in the beholders.

79. His first disciple was a rich citizen of Assisi named Bernard.

80. St. Francis and his followers went barefoot.

82. Ferace, 'fruitful.'

83-4. Egidius, a simple-minded mystic, and Sylvester, a priest, followed the Bridegroom for love of the Bride.

87. St. Francis substituted a rope for the usual belt.

89. His father, Pietro Bernardone, was a tradesman of Assisi. Before his conversion, Francis had associated with youths of higher station.

90. Dispetto a meraviglia, 'wondrously despicable.' When he first visited the Papal court, his appearance excited derision.

93. Sigillo, 'seal,' approval. — Religione, 'order.' — In 1210, Innocent III verbally, and with some reluctance, sanctioned St. Francis's Rule, which seemed to him harsh and dangerous.

Dietro a costui, — la cui mirabil vita 95
 Meglio in gloria del ciel si canterebbe, —
 Di seconda corona redimita
 Fu per Onorio dall' eterno spiro
 La santa voglia d' esto archimandrita.
 E poi che, per la sete del martiro, 100
 Nella presenza del Soldan superba
 Predicò Cristo e gli altri che il seguìro;
 E per trovare a conversione acerba
 Troppo la gente, per non stare indarno,
 Reddissi al frutto dell' italica erba; 105
 Nel crudo sasso intra Tevero ed Arno
 Da Cristo prese l' ultimo sigillo,
 Che le sue membra due anni portarno.
 Quando a colui ch' a tanto ben sortillo
 Piacque di trarlo suso alla mercede 110
 Ch' ei meritò nel suo farsi pusillo,

96. 'Would more fitly be sung (by the Seraphim) in praise of Heaven' than thus related by me.

97-99. 'The holy purpose of this Arch-shepherd was rounded with a second crown by the Eternal Breath (the Holy Ghost) through Honorius.' — In 1223 St. Francis obtained a definite, official sanction of his Rule from Honorius III. — Archimandrita, 'head of the fold,' a term of the Greek Church, is one of the words that Dante got from the Magna Derivationes of Uguccone da Pisa.

100-102. In 1219 St. Francis and some of his disciples accompanied the crusaders to Egypt, where he preached before the Sultan. — Gli altri: the Apostles.

103. Per trovare, 'finding.' — Acerba, 'unripe.'

105. Reddissi, 'he returned.'

106. St. Francis retired to a shelter built by his followers on the wild and rugged Mt. Alvernia (called 'la Vernia' and 'la Verna'), between the upper Arno and the source of the Tiber.

107. There, in 1224, Christ appeared to him and imprinted on his hands, feet, and side the Stigmata, or marks of his five wounds. This miracle, attested by contemporary evidence, was confirmed by three Papal bulls.

108. These marks he bore until his death in 1226. He died in Porziuncola, where is now the Church of Santa Maria degli Angeli, in the plain below Assisi.

109. Colui: God. — Sortillo, 'chose him.'

111. Pusillo, 'little,' lowly. The word pusillus occurs several times in the Bible.

Ai frati suoi, sì com' a giuste erede,
 Raccomandò la sua donna più cara,
 E comandò che l' amassero a fede;
 E del suo grembo l' anima preclara 115
 Mover si volle, tornando al suo regno,
 Ed al suo corpo non volle altra bara.
 • Pensa oramai qual fu colui che degno
 Collega fu a mantener la barca
 Di Pietro in alto mar per dritto segno! 120
 E questi fu il nostro patriarca;
 Per che qual segue lui com' ei comanda,
 Discerner puoi che buone merce carca.
 Ma il suo peculio di nuova vivanda
 È fatto ghiotto sì ch' esser non puote 125
 Che per diversi salti non si spanda;
 E quanto le sue pecore remote
 E vagabonde più da esso vanno,
 Più tornano all' ovil di latte vote.
 Ben son di quelle che temono il danno, 130
 E stringonsi al pastor; ma son sì poche
 Che le cappe fornisce poco panno.
 Or se le mie parole non son fioche,
 Se la tua audienza è stata attenta,
 Se ciò ch' ho detto alla mente rivoche, 135
 In parte fia la tua voglia contenta,

113. Donna: Poverty.

115-117. St. Francis, desiring to rise to Heaven 'from the lap' of Poverty, commanded his followers to strip his body, after his death, and let it lie for some time on the bare ground.

118. Colui: St. Dominic. Cf. ll. 40-42.

124. Peculio, 'flock': the Dominicans. — Nuova vivanda: worldly gain.

126. Salti (Latin saltus), 'wild pastures.'

134. Audienza, 'hearing.'

135. Rivoche (= rivochi), 'recallest.'

136. In parte: only one of Dante's two questions (ll. 25-26) has been answered.

Perchè vedrai la pianta onde si scheggia,
E vedrai il coregger, che argomenta.
“U’ ben s’ impingua, se non si vaneggia.”’

137-139. 'For thou shalt see from what source (the Rule of St. Dominic) the shoot (the degenerate mass of Dominicans) is torn, and thou shalt see what my correction means.' The corregger 'spelled in most of the texts, after the old style, correggier') is the restrictive clause 'se non si vaneggia.' This obscure passage is often interpreted differently.

CANTO XII

ARGUMENT

1 St. DOMINIC, whose eulogy is pronounced by the Franciscan St. Bonaventure, was born in Calahorra in Old Castile in 1170. He studied at the University of Palencia, became a canon in the cathedral of Osma in 1194, and in 1204 went to Languedoc, to combat the Albigensian heresy, which was widespread and firmly entrenched in southern France. There he was associated with Folquet (IX, 94), Bishop of Marseilles. In 1216 the order of preachers which he had founded obtained Papal sanction. He died in Bologna in 1221, renowned for his learning, his austere and holy life, and his vigor in defending the orthodox faith. He had received the office of magister sacri palatii, or Papal theologian, which has ever since been held by a Dominican. Dante's biographical data agree with the incidents recorded in the Legenda Aurca (ed. T. Graesse, Ch. CXIII), a 13th century compilation by Jacobus de Varagine, or Jacopo da Varaggio. There are told the two prophetic dreams and the anecdote of the nurse finding the child seated on the bare ground.

As St. Thomas had deplored the decline of the Dominicans, so St. Bonaventure denounces the quarrels of the Franciscans and their distortion of their master's simple code. Two hostile factions divided the order: the Conventuales, who favored a lax interpretation of the Rule, and the Spirituales, who declared that it should be observed to the letter, and tended to exaggerate its severity. The leader of the former party was Matteo Bentivenga of Acquasparta, near Todi, general of the Franciscans, cardinal, and on several occasions Papal legate. In 1300 and 1301 he was sent to Florence by Boniface VIII to restore peace; after his second unsuccessful attempt he excommunicated the city. The Spirituales had for their champion the fervid preacher Ubertino da Casale, from Monferrato, who, incurring the disapproval of his superiors, retired to Mt. Alvernia (XI, 106), and there composed the Arbor Vitæ Crucifixæ. He finally joined the Benedictines. He died in 1338.

For Matteo Bentivenga's mission in Florence, see Dino Compagni, Cronica, I, xxi; G. Villani, Croniche, VIII, xxxix. For Ubertino, see J. C. Huck, Ubertino von Casale und dessen Ideenkreis, 1903; cf. Bull., XI, 241.

Sì tosto come l' ultima parola
 La benedetta fiamma per dir tolse,
 A rotar cominciò la santa mola;
 E nel suo giro tutta non si volse
 Prima ch' un' altra di cerchio la chiuse, 5
 E moto a moto e canto a canto colse —
 Canto che tanto vince nostre Muse,
 Nostre Sirene, in quelle dolci tube,
 Quanto primo splendor quel ch' ei refuse.
 Come si volgon per tenera nube 10
 Due archi paralleli e concolori,
 Quando Junone a sua ancella iube,
 Nascendo di quel d' entro quel di fuori
 (A guisa del parlar di quella vaga
 Ch' amor consunse, come sol vapori), 15
 E fanno qui la gente esser presaga
 Per lo patto che Dio con Noè pose
 Del mondo, che giammai più non si allaga, —
 Così di quelle sempiterne rose
 Volgeansi circa noi le due ghirlande, 20
 E sì l' estrema all' intima rispose.
 Poi che il tripudio e l' alta festa grande

2. Per dir tolse, 'removed by utterance,' i. e., 'finished uttering.'

3. Mola, 'mill-stone': the ring of spirits.

5. Di cerchio la chiuse, 'encircled it.'

6. Colse, 'matched.'

8. Tube, 'pipes': the singing souls.

9. 'As a direct ray surpasses its reflection' — 'the one it has reflected.'

12. Ancella: Iris, the rainbow. — Iube (Latin jubet), 'commands.'

13. The outer arc of a double rainbow is called the reflection, or echo, of the inner one.

14. Vaga, 'wanderer': the nymph Echo, who for love of Narcissus wasted away to a voice. Cf. Met., III, 395-401.

16. Presaga, 'weather-wise.'

17. Per, 'because of.' — Patto, 'covenant': Gen. ix, 8-17.

18. Si allaga, 'shall be flooded.'

21. Intima: many texts have ultima.

(Sì del cantare e sì del fiammeggiarsi,
 Luce con luce gaudiose e blande)
 Insieme a punto ed a voler quetarsi, — 25
 Pur come gli occhi ch' al piacer che i move
 Convien insieme chiudere e levarsi, —
 Del cor dell' una delle luci nuove
 Si mosse voce, che l' ago alla stella
 Parer mi fece in volgermi al suo dove; 30
 E cominciò: 'L' amor che mi fa bella
 Mi tragge a ragionar dell' altro duca,
 Per cui del mio sì ben ci si favella.
 Degno è che dove l' un, l' altro s' induca,
 Sì che com' elli ad una militaro, 35
 Così la gloria loro insieme luca.
 L' esercito di Cristo, che sì caro
 Costò a riarmar, dietro all' insegna
 Si movea tardo, suspiccioso e raro,
 Quando lo imperador che sempre regna 40
 Provvide alla milizia, ch' era in forse,
 Per sola grazia, non per esser degna;
 E, com' è detto, a sua sposa soccorse
 Con due campioni, al cui fare, al cui dire
 Lo popol disviato si raccorse. 45

23. Sì . . . sì, 'both . . . and.'

25. A punto ed a voler, 'at one instant and of one accord.'

26. Piacer, 'will.' — I = li.

27. 'Must be closed and lifted together.' The two circles operate simultaneously, like a pair of eyes. Dante seems here to confuse the turning of the eyes, which must affect both at once, with shutting and opening, which may affect one without the other.

29. Ago: the 'needle' of a compass. — Stella: the North Star, or north.

33. 'For whose sake there is such fair speech here concerning mine.' St. Thomas, for love of his own leader, St. Dominic, has been praising St. Francis.

34. S' induca, 'be mentioned.'

37-38. 'The Christian army,' made helpless by sin, had been 're-armed' by Christ's atonement. — Insegna: the cross.

43. Cf. XI, 38-46.

45. Si raccorse, 'rallied.'

In quella parte ove surge ad aprire
 Zeffiro dolce le novelle fronde,
 Di che si vede Europa rivestire, —
 Non molto lungi al percoter dell' onde
 Dietro alle quali, per la lunga foga, 50
 Lo sol talvolta ad ogni uom si nasconde, —
 Siede la fortunata Calaroga,
 Sotto la protezion del grande scudo,
 In che soggiace il leone e soggioga.
 Dentro vi nacque l' amoroso drudo 55

47. Spain is the country nearest the source of Zephyr, the west wind. Cf. Met., I, 63-64:

'Vesper et occiduo quæ litora sole tepescunt
 Proxima sunt zephyro.'

49-51. Compared with Italy, Calahorra (in Old Castile, near the Ebro) is 'not very far' from the Atlantic. Spain lying due west of the Italian peninsula, the sun sets behind its Atlantic shore at the time of the vernal equinox: cf. XI, 51. Note that the talvolta occurs in l. 51 in both XI and XII: the onde of this canto are evidently contrasted with the Gange of XI. When the sun sinks over the Atlantic, it 'hides itself from every man,' because there is no land beyond. — Foga, 'flight.' — Cf. Æn., XI, 913-914:

'Ni roseus fessos jam gurgite Phœbus Ibero
 Tingat equos, noctemque die labente reducat.'

54. The shield of Castile has two lions and two castles quartered, one lion above the castle and one below.

58-60. Before his birth, his mother dreamed that she brought forth a black and white dog with a burning torch in its mouth. Black and white are the Dominican colors; the torch signifies zeal; the word Dominicani suggests Domini canes, 'dogs of the Lord.'

61-63. His baptism is conceived as a wedding. He espoused Faith, as Francis (in ll. 61-63 of XI) espoused Poverty. Dominic and Faith 'dowered each other with mutual health.'

U' si dotar di mutüa salute,

 Ch' uscir dovea di lui e delle erede;
 E perchè fosse, quale era, in costrutto,
 Quindi si mosse spirito a nomarlo

64-66. His godmother dreamed that he bore on his forehead a star which illumined the world.

67. 'And that he might be in syntax what he was in reality.'

68. Quinci, 'hence': from Heaven.

69. 'With the possessive of him to whom he wholly belonged.' Dominicus, 'the Lord's,' is a possessive of Dominus. Cf. Summa Theologiae, Tertia, Qu. xvi, Art. 3.

71. Among the interpretations of the name Dominicus in the Legenda Aurea is 'keeper of the vineyard of the Lord.' — Agricola, 'husbandman.' — Note that in ll. 71, 73, 75 Cristo is in rhyme with itself. The same thing occurs in XIV, 104, XIX, 104, XXXII, 83. In the Commedia Dante will not allow Cristo to rhyme with any other word.

75. The 'counsels' of Christ are poverty, continence, and obedience, and the first of these is poverty: 'Sell that thou hast, and give to the poor' (Mat. xix, 21). Dante insists that St. Dominic, as well as St. Francis, was a lover of Poverty. Their love is declared in ll. 73-75 of XI and XII.

79-81. His father's name was Felix, which means 'happy.' His mother's name, Joan, signifies in Hebrew 'the grace of the Lord,' an interpretation cited by several of Dante's authorities.

Diretro ad Ostiense ed a Taddeo),
 Ma per amor della verace manna,

83. Enrico da Susa, professor in Bologna and Paris, bishop of Ostia and cardinal, was a great authority on canon law. Taddeo di Alderotto of Florence, also a professor in Bologna, was a famous medical authority. Both lived in the 13th century.

84. The 'true manna' is true knowledge, the 'bread of the angels' (II, 11).

85. Feo = fecit.

86. Circuïr, 'go about.'

88. Sedia: the Papal chair, 'which once was kinder' than it is now. — Alla sedia, 'of the chair,' depends on addomandò in l. 94.

89. Non per lei: the difference in its disposition is 'not because of itself' (the Papal office has not changed), but because of the degeneracy of its latterday occupants.

91-93. These phrases are the object of addomandò in l. 94: permission to dole out in charity only a third or a half of the money on hand, 'the income of the first vacancy,' 'the tithes which belong to God's poor' — he asked for none of these things.

95. Seme: the Faith, the seed from which sprang the bright souls which 'enfold' Dante.

98. Offizio, 'authorization.' St. Dominic went to Rome with Folquet of Marseilles (IX, 94), and asked permission to found a new order; official sanction was given in 1216.

99. Ch' alta vena preme, 'pushed forth by a high spring.'

L' impeto suo, più vivamente quivi

103. Rivi: religious orders.

106. Biga: the two-wheeled 'chariot' of the Church. Cf. Purg. XXIX, 107.

110. Di cui, 'concerning whom.'

112-113. 'But the rut which the outside of its circumference made is forsaken.' The wheel is St. Francis. His track is deserted by the Franciscans. — For orbita, cf. Purg. XXXII, 30.

114. 'So that there is mould where the crust was.' Good wine makes a crust, bad wine makes mould. — There is an abrupt change of metaphor from ll. 112-113 to l. 114.

117. This line is very puzzling. It may mean: 'That the one in front throws at the one behind'; those who set out to follow in St. Francis's footsteps are now facing in opposite directions. Cf. A. Boselli in Giorn. stor., L, 341. The order is split into two hostile factions.

120. The tare 'shall complain that the bin is taken from it.' Cf. Mat. xiii, 30: 'Gather ye together first the tares, and bind them in bundles to burn them: but gather the wheat into my barn.' — There may be here a reference to the condemnation of a group of the Spirituales by the Pope in 1318. Cf. Giorn. dant., VIII, 177.

129. 'Always sacrificed the left hand care,' i. e., temporal interests. Cf. Pr. iii, 16: 'in her (Wisdom's) left hand riches and honour' — 'in sinistra illius divitiæ et gloria.'

130. Illuminato and Augustino were two of the early followers of St. Francis.

133. Hugo (or Hugh) of St. Victor, a famous theologian who died in 1141, was the teacher of Richard (X, 131) and Peter Lombard (X, 107).

134. Petrus Comestor, or Peter the Devourer (of books), also of the abbey of St. Victor, was the author of an allegorical commentary on the Bible. He died in 1179. — Peter of Spain, a great logician, became Pope John XXI, and was killed soon after, in 1277, by the fall of a ceiling. He is the only contemporary Pope met by Dante in Paradise.

135. Giù: on earth. — 'Twelve books': his Summæ Logicales.

136. Nathan: see 2 Samuel vii and xii; 1 Kings i, 34.

137. St. John Chrysostom ('Golden-Mouth'), Metropolitan or Patriarch of Constantinople, a vigorous and eloquent defender of Christianity, died in 407. — St. Anselm of Piedmont, Archbishop of Canterbury, a keen theologian, the author of Cur Deus Homo, died in 1109. — Among the prophets and ecclesiastics is a grammarian, Donatus, who taught in Rome in the 4th century, and wrote a work which long remained the standard text-book of Latin grammar.

138. Grammar is the first of the seven liberal arts of the Trivium and Quadrivium. Cf. Conti., II, xiv, 55-89.

139. Rabānus Maurus, Archbishop of Mainz, an encyclopædic writer and Biblical commentator of the 8th and 9th centuries.

140. Joachim, Abbot of Flora in Calabria, founder of a new branch of the Cistercians, died in 1202. Freely interpreting the Apocalypse, he proclaimed the impending age of the Holy Ghost, to follow the dispensations of the Father and the Son, contained in the Old and the New Testament. His prophecies — and many others falsely ascribed to him — had a great vogue in the 13th century. P. Fournier, Études sur Joachim de Flore et ses doctrines, 1909.

142-145. 'Brother Thomas's ardent courtesy and respectful style moved me to envy that great paladin (St. Dominic), and moved this company with me': I was constrained to admire and covet the excellence of St. Dominic, which had produced such a disciple as St. Thomas, and therefore I was impelled to praise him. Palatini was a title given to counts of the royal palace; St. Dominic was magister sacri palatii in Rome. — The interpretation of these lines is still far from certain.

CANTO XIII

ARGUMENT

ONCE again Dante touches on the puzzling question of the imperfection of our earth. The real and complete universe exists only in the mind of God. What we call the world is only a shadow of the divine Idea. It is the product of the skies working upon matter. Now, as we have been told before, matter, for some unexplained reason, is faulty; and the skies are continually changing. If matter were perfect, and if the heavens were always in their most effective conjunction, the physical universe would exactly represent the Lord's conception. This divine plan is transmitted as a pattern and a creative force to the nine orders of angels, and by them is embodied in the numberless formative powers of sky and earth, from the highest to those whose work lasts but a moment; yet at all stages the result is inferior, in greater or less degree, to the ideal model.

If, however, the triune God creates directly, with his absolute Power, Wisdom, and Love, the product is without flaw. Thus Adam and Christ (in his human aspect) came into the world as perfect examples of mankind, endowed with all the wisdom that men may possess. For wisdom is inborn, a gift of Grace. Experience and knowledge grow with years, but not wisdom. When, therefore, it was said that Solomon never had an equal in understanding, it is evident that Adam and Christ must be excluded from the comparison. In fact, as it turns out, the only competitors are kings; for the gift which Solomon craved and obtained was not general intelligence, but 'kingly prudence.' The story is told in 1 Kings iii, 5-12: 'In Gibeon the Lord appeared to Solomon in a dream by night: and God said, Ask what I shall give thee. And Solomon said . . . , Give . . . thy servant an understanding heart to judge thy people: that I may discern between good and bad. . . . And the speech pleased the Lord, that Solomon had asked this thing. And God said unto him, Because thou hast asked this thing . . . Behold, I have done according to thy words: lo, I have given thee a wise and an understanding heart; so that there was none like thee before thee, neither after thee shall any arise like unto thee.'

All this is explained to Dante while he stands in the midst of the twenty-four doctors, who, like blazing orbs, surround him in two concentric rings. The better to visualize the scene, the reader is asked to pick out twenty-four of the brightest fixed stars and imagine them arranged in the shape of a double Ariadne's Crown. Fifteen miscellaneous ones are selected first, there being, according to Ptolemaic astronomy, fifteen stars of the first magnitude in the whole sky. Next are added the seven conspicuous members of the Wain (the Great Bear or Dipper), a constellation which in our climate never sinks below the horizon: cf. Canzone XV, 28-29. The remaining two of the twenty-four are from the horn-like Little Bear (or Little Dipper) whose peak is the North Star; the two chosen — those which, at the other extremity, form the mouth of the horn — are, according to Alfraganus, of the second magnitude.

Imagini chi bene intender cupe
 Quel ch' io or vidi (e ritenga l' image,
 Mentre ch' io dico, come ferma rupe)
 Quindici stelle che in diverse plage
 Lo cielo avvivan di tanto sereno 5
 Che superchia dell' aere ogni compage;
 Imagini quel Carro a cui il seno
 Basta del nostro cielo e notte e giorno,
 Sì ch' al volger del temo non vien meno;
 Imagini la bocca di quel corno 10
 Che si comincia in punta dello stelo
 A cui la prima rota va dintorno —
 Aver fatto di sè due segni in cielo

1. Cupe (Latin cupit), 'wishes.'

4. Plage (Latin plaga), 'quarters.'

5. Sereno, 'brightness.'

6. Compaga (Latin compages: Vulg. El., ix, 20, 39), 'composition.'

9. Temo = timone, 'cart-pole.' — Vien meno, 'disappears.'

11. Punta: the North Star. — Stelo, 'axis.'

12. Prima rota: the daily rotation of the heavens.

13. Aver fatto depends on imagini. — Sè, 'themselves.' — Segni, 'constellations.'

(Qual fece la figliuola di Minoi
 Allora che sentì di morte il gelo), 15
 E l' un nell' altro aver li raggi suoi,
 Ed ambedue girarsi per maniera
 Che l' uno andasse al 'prima' e l' altro al 'poi,' —
 Ed avrà quasi l' ombra della vera
 Costellazion e della doppia danza 20
 Che circolava il punto dov' io era;
 Poi ch' è tanto di là da nostra usanza
 Quanto di là dal mover della Chiana
 Si move il ciel che tutti gli altri avanza.
 Lì si cantò non Bacco, non Peana, 25
 Ma tre Persone in divina natura,
 Ed in una persona essa e l' umana.
 Compiè il cantare e il volger sua misura,
 Ed attenersi a noi quei santi lumi,
 Felicitando sè di cura in cura. 30
 Ruppe il silenzio nei concordì numi
 Poscia la luce in che mirabil vita

14. The daughter of King Minos (Inf. V, 4) was Ariadne. — The form Minoi was taken from the oblique cases of Minos (Minōis, etc.). — Ariadne was carried to heaven by Bacchus, and her crown was turned into a constellation: Met., VIII, 174-182.

16. Nell' altro, 'within the other.'

18. That one should start at the word 'First!' and the other at the word 'Next!'

22. Di là da, 'beyond.'

23. The Chiana is a sluggish stream in Tuscany.

24. Il ciel: the Primum Mobile, swiftest of the heavens.

25. Pæan (accusative Pæana) is a name given to Apollo, and also a hymn in his honor. As celebrants of old sang hymns to heathen deities, so the Heavenly chorus sings of the threefold God and the twofold Christ, perhaps in the words of the Anastasian Creed.

27. Essa: i. e., divina natura.

28. Cantare and volger are subjects of compiè. — Sua, 'their.'

30. 'Rejoicing in one occupation (converse with us) after another (their dance).'

31. Numi, 'divinities': the blessed spirits. Cf. V, 123.

32. Luce: the 'light' of St. Thomas. — In che, 'within which' the 'wondrous life' of St. Francis was related.

Del poverel di Dio narrata fumi,
 E disse: 'Quando l' una paglia è trita,
 Quando la sua semenza è già riposta, 35
 A batter l' altra dolce amor m' invita.
 Tu credi che nel petto onde la costa
 Si trasse per formar la bella guancia
 Il cui palato a tutto il mondo costa,
 Ed in quel che, forato dalla lancia, 40
 E poscia e prima tanto satisfece
 Che d' ogni colpa vince la bilancia,
 Quantunque alla natura umana lece
 Aver di lume, tutto fosse infuso
 Da quel Valor che l' uno e l' altro fece; 45
 E però ammiri ciò ch' io dissi suso,
 Quando narrai che non ebbe il secondo
 Lo ben che nella quinta luce è chiuso.
 Ora apri gli occhi a quel ch' io ti rispondo,
 E vedrai il tūo credere e il mio dire 50
 Nel vero farsi come centro in tondo.
 Ciò che non more, e ciò che può morire,
 Non è se non splendor di quella idea
 Che partorisce, amando, il nostro Sire;

33. Fumi = fummi = mi fu. For the rhyme see Inf. VIII, 17.

34. Quando, 'since.' — Una paglia: the question suggested by 'U' ben s' impingua.' Cf. XI, 25 and X, 96. — Trita, 'threshed.'

36. L' altra, sc. paglia: the question raised by 'Non surse il secondo.' Cf. XI, 26 and X, 114.

37. Petto: the 'breast' of Adam, whence was taken the 'rib' to form Eve.

40. Quel, sc. petto: the breast of Christ.

41. Christ's death 'atoned' for original sin in past and future generations.

45. Valor, 'Power.'

48. Ben, 'goodness.' — Quinta luce: the light that envelops the soul of Solomon.

51. A circle has but one point as its centre. The truth is as a mathematical point, in which the two opinions coincide.

52-54. 'In the beginning was the Word' (John i, 1). The Word, or idea, is the conception of the universe which the Lord brings forth by his love. The whole immortal and mortal world is only the manifestation of this idea, which in its reality exists in God.

Chè quella viva Luce che sì mea 55
 Dal suo Lucente che non si disuna
 Da lui, nè dall' Amor che a lor s' intrea,
 Per sua bontate il suo raggiare aduna,
 Quasi specchiato, in nove sussistenze,
 Eternalmente rimanendosi una. 60
 Quindi discende all' ultime potenze,
 Giù d' atto in atto tanto divenendo
 Che più non fa che brevi contingenze;
 E queste contingenze essere intendo
 Le cose generate, che produce 65
 (Con seme e senza seme) il ciel movendo.
 La cera di costoro, e chi la duce,
 Non sta d' un modo, e però sotto il segno
 Idëale poi più e men traluçe;
 Ond' egli avvien ch' un medesimo legno, 70
 Secondo specie, meglio e peggio frutta,
 E voi nascete con diverso ingegno.
 Se fosse a punto la cera dedutta,

55-57. 'For that living Light (the Son, Wisdom) which so streams from its Lamp (the Father, Power) that it is never divided therefrom, nor from the Love (the Holy Ghost) which is their third part.'

58. 'In its goodness, gathers its radiance together.'

59. The 'nine subsistences' are the nine orders of angels, reflecting the Divine Wisdom which contains the plan of the universe.

60. 'And the Word was with God, and the Word was God' (John i, 1).

61. 'Thence (from the angels) it descends to the ultimate potentialities,' i. e., to the elements, from which all other mortal things may be made.

62-63. 'Coming, step by step, so far down that it finally produces only brief contingencies,' i. e., perishable things of short and dependent existence.

66. Con seme e senza seme: animals and vegetables 'with seed,' minerals 'without seed.' — Il ciel movendo: Nature.

67. 'Their wax' is matter; 'that which directs it' is Nature, 'the revolving sky.' For duce, cf. Conv., Canzone II, 32.

68-69. 'Are not always the same; and therefore it (the light of the divine idea) afterwards shines through (sc. through Nature's work) more or less beneath the ideal pattern.' The material world is inferior to God's conception, and manifests it with more or less imperfection.

71. Secondo specie, 'in respect to species.'

73. A punto, 'exactly.' — Dedutta, 'worked,' prepared.

E fosse il cielo in sua virtù suprema,
 La luce del suggel parrebbe tutta; 75
 Ma la natura la dà sempre scema,
 Similmente operando all' artista
 Ch' ha l' abito dell' arte, e man che trema.
 Però se il caldo Amor la chiara Vista
 Della prima Virtù dispone e segna, 80
 Tutta la perfezion quivi s' acquista.
 Così fu fatta già la terra degna
 Di tutta l' animal perfezione;
 Così fu fatta la Vergine pregna.
 Sì ch' io commendo tua opinione: 85
 Che l' umana natura mai non fue,
 Nè fia, qual fu in quelle due persone.
 Or s' io non procedessi avanti piùè,
 "Dunque come costui fu senza pare?"
 Comincerebber le parole tue. 90
 Ma perchè paia ben ciò che non pare,
 Pensa chi era, e la cagion che il mosse —
 Quando fu detto, "Chiedi!" — a domandare.
 Non ho parlato sì che tu non posse
 Ben veder ch' ei fu re, che chiese senno 95
 Acciò che re sufficiente fosse;
 Non per saper lo numero in che enno
 Li motor di quassù, o se necesse

76. La: the light. — Scema, 'diminished.'

79-80. 'However, if the hot Love prepares and stamps the clear Sight of the primal Power' — if Divine Love directs Divine Wisdom in its creative Power: i. e., if the three Persons of the Trinity collaborate in direct creation. Cf. X, 1-3.

82-84. This happened when 'God formed man of the dust of the ground' (Gen. ii, 7), and when Christ was conceived.

88. Piùè = più: cf. I, 19.

94. Posse = possa.

97-98. Enno = sono. — The question of the number of the heavenly motors, or angels, had been treated by Plato and Aristotle, and is discussed by Dante in Conv. II, v and vi. The angels are almost countless.

Con contingente mai necesse fenno;
 Non si est dare primum motum esse, 100
 O se del mezzo cerchio far si puote
 Triangol sì ch' un retto non avesse.
 Onde, se ciò ch' io dissi e questo note,
 Regal prudenza è quel vedere impari
 In che lo stral di mia intenzion percote. 105
 E, se al "surse" drizzi gli occhi chiari,
 Vedrai aver solamente rispetto
 Ai regi (che son molti, e i buon son rari).
 Con questa distinzion prendi il mio detto,
 E così puote star con quel che credi 110
 Del primo padre e del nostro Diletto.
 E questo ti sia sempre piombo ai piedi,
 Per farti mover lento, com' uom lasso,
 Ed al "sì" ed al "no" che tu non vedi.
 Chè quegli è tra gli stolti bene abbasso 115
 Che senza distinzion afferma o nega,
 Nell' un così come nell' altro passo;
 Perch' egl' incontra che più volte piega
 L' opinion corrente in falsa parte,
 E poi l' affetto lo intelletto lega. 120

98-99. 'Or whether an absolute premise with a conditional premise have ever produced an absolute conclusion': a scholastic problem in logic, also touched upon by Plato and Aristotle. The answer is 'no.'

100. 'Not, whether a prime motion is to be admitted,' i. e., a motion independent of any cause: see Aristotle, Physics, VIII, i, ii. All motion is dependent on God: Mon., I, ix, 10-15.

102. Retto, 'right angle': Euclid, III, 31. Here again the answer is 'no.'

103-105. 'Wherefore, — if thou notest what I said, and this, — that peerless vision which the arrow of my intention hits is kingly prudence.'

106. Al "surse": to my phrase, 'Non surse il secondo.'

117. 'In the one case as well as in the other': whether he affirms or denies.

118. Egl' incontra, 'it happens.'

119. Corrente, 'hasty.' — Cf. Conv., IV, xv, 151-167.

120. Affetto, 'fondness' for one's own opinion.

Vie più che indarno da riva si parte
 (Perchè non torna tal qual ei si move)
 Chi pesca per lo vero e non ha l' arte.
 E di ciò sono al mondo aperte prove
 Parmenide, Melisso, Brisso e molti 125
 I quali andavano, e non sapean dove.
 Sì fe' Sabellio ed Arrio, e quegli stolti

121. Vie più, 'far worse.' — The subject of si parte is chi in l. 123.

125. Parmenides, Melissus, and Bryson are Greek philosophers criticized by Aristotle. Cf. Mon., III, iv, 30-33.

127. Sabellius and Arius are heretical theologians. The first denied the Trinity; the second, founder of the Arians, denied the Consubstantiality of Father and Son.

128-129. Instead of reflecting the Scriptures accurately, like a glass, they gave a distorted image of them, similar to faces mirrored in sword-blades.

130-131. 1 Cor. iv, 5: 'Therefore judge nothing before the time.' Cf. Cons., IV, Pr. vi.

134. Prun, 'briar.' — Feroce, 'wild.' — Cf. William of Poitiers, Ab la dolchor del temps novel, 13-18:

'La nostr' amor va enaissi
 Com la branca del albespi,
 Qu' esta sobre l' arbr' en treman

 Per la fueilla verz el ramel.'

136. Legno, 'boat.'

139. Berta and Martino were equivalent to our 'Tom, Dick, and Harry.' Cf. Conv., I, viii, 94; Vulg. El., II, vi, 34.

Per vedere un furare, altro offerere, 140
Vedergli dentro al consiglio divino;
Chè quel può surgere, e quel può cadere.'

140. Per vedere, 'seeing.' -- Furare, 'steal.' — Cf. James iv, 13-14.

CANTO XIV

ARGUMENT

THE nearer we are to God, the more beatitude we are capable of receiving. Now, inasmuch as man was made to consist of both spirit and matter, it follows that the blest will be more perfect after the resurrection than before, and therefore more like to God, who is absolute perfection. As St. Thomas says (Summa Theologiæ, Tertia, Suppl., Qu. xciii, Art. 1): 'Anima conjuncta corpori glorioso est magis Deo similis quam ab eo separata, inquantum conjuncta habet esse perfectius: quanto enim est aliquid perfectius, tanto est Deo similis.' The bodiless soul in Heaven has full spiritual happiness; but when clad again in the flesh it will possess bodily happiness as well: its joy will be increased 'extensively.' Therefore the blest, while feeling no sorrow, look forward with pleasure to the Judgment Day, when, as they know, they will be complete, more akin to their Maker, and endowed with an additional capacity for blessedness. 'Omne autem imperfectum,' says St. Thomas (loc. cit.), 'appetit suam perfectionem et ideo anima separata naturaliter appetit corporis conjunctionem.'

The effulgence that clothes the soul will remain after the restoration of the flesh, but it will not dazzle the bodily eyes; for the glorified body can suffer nothing except through the spirit. This 'claritas' is discussed by St. Thomas in the Summa Theologiæ, Tertia, Suppl., Qu. lxxxv, Art. 1-3. In Article 1 he says: 'Sicut corpus gloriosum non potest pati aliquid passione naturæ, sed solum passione animæ; ita ex proprietate gloriæ non agit nisi actione animæ. Claritas autem intensa non offendit visum, inquantum agit actione animæ, sed secundum hoc magis delectat; offendit autem, inquantum agit actione naturæ. . . . Et ideo claritas corporis gloriosi, quamvis excedat claritatem solis, tamen de sua natura non offendit visum, sed demulcet.'

This doctrine is appropriately imparted to Dante in the solar sphere. Thence he is uplifted to Mars, and is made aware of his rise by a difference in the light that surrounds him, the white sheen of the sun being changed suddenly to the glow of the ruddy planet. Here a grand spectacle confronts him, more startling than the rings of bright spirits he has just seen. The star is traversed by two immense shining bands, — each like a milky way, — which, intersecting, form a huge Cross, composed of the souls of warriors of the Faith. Through the glittering mass sparklike figures continually dart to and fro. We shall see presently that the two remaining planets are adorned by the poet's fancy with similar majestic images: in Jupiter we shall find the vast Imperial Eagle, also made up of gleaming spirits; in Saturn, Jacob's Ladder, the token of contemplation. In these three emblems — Cross, Eagle, Ladder — is summed up all that the Middle Ages held dearest. With such glorious symbols our author — using no materials but light, motion, and music — contrives to enrich and diversify his portrayal of the upper heavens.

Dal centro al cerchio, e sì dal cerchio al centro,
 Movesi l' acqua in un ritondo vaso,
 Secondo ch' è percossa fuori o dentro.
 Nella mia mente fe' subito caso
 Questo ch' io dico, sì come si tacque 5
 La gloriosa vita di Tommaso,
 Per la similitudine che nacque
 Del suo parlare e di quel di Beatrice,
 A cui sì cominciar, dopo lui, piacque:
 'A costui fa mestieri, — e nol vi dice 10
 Nè con la voce, nè pensando ancora, —
 D' un altro vero andare alla radice.
 Ditegli se la luce, onde s' infiora
 Vostra sustanzia, rimarrà con voi
 Eternalmente sì com' ella è ora; 15
 E se rimane, dite come, poi

1. Cerchio, 'rim.'

4. Fe' subito caso, 'suddenly occurred.' The subject of fe' is questo ch' io dico in l. 5.

7-9. The sound-waves proceeding from St. Thomas, in the ring of bright spirits, and from Beatrice, in the centre, remind Dante of the circular ripples in a round vessel, when the water is stirred at the edge or in the middle. A similar comparison is to be found in Boethius, Institutio Musicae, I, xiv: cf. R. Murari, Dante e Boezio, 1905, 228.

Che sarete visibili rifatti,
 Esser potrà ch' al veder non vi noi.'
 Come da più letizia pinti e tratti
 Alla fiata quei che vanno a rota 20
 Levan la voce, e rallegrano gli atti,
 Così all' orazion pronta e devota
 Li santi cerchi mostrar nuova gioia
 Nel tornëar e nella mira nota.
 Qual si lamenta perchè qui si moia, 25
 Per viver colassù, non vide quive
 Lo refrigerio dell' eterna ploia.
 Quell' Uno e Due e Tre che sempre vive,
 E regna sempre in Tre e Due ed Uno,
 Non circonsritto, e tutto circonscrive, 30
 Tre volte era cantato da ciascuno
 Di queglii spirti con tal melodia
 Ch' ad ogni merto saria giusto muno.
 Ed io udi' nella luce più dia
 Del minor cerchio una voce modesta, 35
 Forse qual fu dall' angelo a Maria,
 Risponder: 'Quanto fia lunga la festa
 Di Paradiso, tanto il nostro amore
 Si raggerà dintorno cotal vesta.

17. Visibili, 'seeing' with bodily eyes. Cf. risibile, 'laughing,' 'capable of laughter,' in V. N., XXV, 20.

18. 'It can be that it will not harm your sight.' — Noi is from noiare.

20. Alla fiata, 'from time to time.' Cf. Bull., X, 6. — Rota, 'round,' dance.

24. Mira nota, 'wondrous tune.'

25. Qual, 'whosoever.' — Qui: on earth.

26. Non vide quive, 'has never seen here' (on earth).

27. Refrigerio, 'refreshment.' Cf. Manzoni, Adelchi, chorus on the death of Ermengarda, 69. — Ploia: the 'rain' of Grace.

28-30. Once more the souls celebrate the mystery of the Trinity. Cf. XIII, 26.

33. Muno (Latin munus), 'reward.'

34. Dia = diva. — The 'light' is that of Solomon: X, 109.

36. Angelo: Gabriel. Cf. Luke i, 28.

La sua chiarezza seguirà l' ardore, 40
 L' ardor la visione, e quella è tanta
 Quanta ha di grazia sopra il suo valore.
 Come la carne gloriosa e santa
 Fia rivestita, la nostra persona
 Più grata fia per esser tutta quanta. 45
 Per che s' accrescerà ciò che ne dona
 Di gratuito lume il Sommo Bene —
 Lume ch' a lui veder ne condiziona;
 Onde la vision crescer conviene,
 Crescer l' ardor che di quella s' accende, 50
 Crescer lo raggio che da esso viene.
 Ma sì come carbon che fiamma rende,
 E per vivo candor quella soperchia
 Sì che la sua parvenza si difende,
 Così questo fulgor, che già ne cerchia, 55
 Fia vinto in apparenza dalla carne
 Che tutto dì la terra ricoperchia;
 Nè potrà tanta luce affaticarne,
 Chè gli organi del corpo saran forti
 A tutto ciò che potrà dilettarne.' 60
 Tanto mi parver subiti ed accorti
 E l' uno e l' altro coro a dicer 'Amme'

40-42. The brightness of the 'garment' of light shall be proportionate to the fervency of love in each soul, the love shall be proportionate to the distinctness of its vision of God, and that vision is a gift of Grace, or predestination, not dependent on merit. — Sopra suo valore, 'beyond its desert.'

43. Come, 'when': on the Judgment Day.

45. Per esser tutta quanta, 'through being entire.' Man is composed of both flesh and spirit, and is incomplete if either element is lacking.

48. Condiziona, 'fits.'

53. Quella soperchia, 'outshines it' (the flame). The coal glows through the flame that envelops it.

54. 'So that its visibility is maintained.'

56. Apparenza, 'distinctness.'

60. Dilettarne, 'delight us.'

57. Tutto dì, 'still,' 'as yet.'

62. Amme, 'amen.'

Che ben mostrar disio dei corpi morti;
 Forse non pur per lor, ma per le mamme,
 Per li padri, e per gli altri che fur cari 65
 Anzi che fosser sempiterne fiamme.
 Ed ecco intorno, di chiarezza pari,
 Nascere un lustro sopra quel che v' era,
 Per guisa d' orizzonte che rischiari.
 E sì come al salir di prima sera 70
 Comincian per lo ciel nuove parvenze,
 Sì che la vista pare e non par vera;
 Parvemi lì novelle sussistenze
 Cominciar a vedere, e fare un giro
 Di fuor dall' altre due circonferenze. 75
 O vero isfavillar del Santo Spiro!
 Come si fece subito e candente
 Agli occhi miei, che vinti non soffriro!
 Ma Bëatrice sì bella e ridente
 Mi si mostrò che tra quelle vedute 80
 Si vuol lasciar che non seguir la mente.
 Quindi ripreser gli occhi miei virtute
 A rilevarsi, e vidimi translato
 Sol con mia Donna in più alta salute.
 Ben m' accors' io ch' io era più levato, 85

64. Non pur per lor, 'not for themselves alone.'

67. Di chiarezza pari, 'of even brightness.'

68. Sopra, 'beyond.' Cf. Acts xxvi, 13: 'I saw in the way a light from heaven, above the brightness of the sun, shining round about me and those which journeyed with me.' — Just as Dante is about to leave this sphere, a new host of loving spirits begins to appear, like a gleaming horizon, around the two rings of shining souls. Why this army of the Holy Ghost — the throng of those who were wise in the things of the Spirit — thus momentarily and mysteriously reveals itself, we are not told.

71. Parvenze, 'appearances': stars, faint in the twilight.

78. Non soffriro, 'endured it not.'

81. Si vuol lasciar, 'must be left.' — Che non seguir la mente, 'which followed not my memory.'

Per l' affocato riso della stella,
 Che mi pareva più roggio che l' usato.
 Con tutto il core, e con quella favella
 Ch' è una in tutti, a Dio feci olocausto,
 Qual conveniasi alla grazia novella; 90
 E non er' anco del mio petto esausto
 L' ardor del sacrificio, ch' io conobbi
 Esso litare stato accetto e fausto;
 Chè con tanto lucore e tanto robbi
 M' apparvero splendor dentro a due raggi 95
 Ch' io dissi: 'O Elios che sì gli addobbi!'

Come, distinta da minori e maggi
 Lumi, biancheggia tra i poli del mondo
 Galassia sì che fa dubbiar ben saggi,
 Sì costellati facean nel profondo 100
 Marte quei rai il venerabil segno
 Che fan giunture di quadranti in tondo.
 Qui vince la memoria mia lo ingegno;
 Chè quella croce lampeggiava Cristo,
 Sì ch' io non so trovare esempio degno. 105
 Ma chi prende sua croce e segue Cristo,
 Ancor mi scuserà di quel ch' io lasso,

88. Quella favella: unspoken prayer.

89. Olocausto, 'holocaust,' offering.

93. Litare (a Latin infinitive, used here as a noun), 'offering.'

94. Tanto robbi, 'so rudely.'

96. Elios, 'Sun': God, the source of light. According to the Magna Derivationes of Ugucione da Pisa, ἥλιος, the Greek word for 'sun,' comes from the Hebrew Eli, 'Go!'. — Gli addobbi, 'adornest them.'

99. The Galaxy, or Milky Way, was differently explained by different authorities. Cf. Conv., II, xv, 46-56.

102. 'Which joinings of quadrants make in a circle.' Two diameters of a circle, intersecting at right angles, form a cross, and divide the circle into four quadrants.

103. Memoria is the subject of vince.

104. Croce is the subject of lampeggiava, 'flashed forth.' — Once more Cristo occurs in the rhyme: cf. XII, 71.

106. Cf. Mat. x, 38; xvi, 24.

Vedendo in quell' albor balenar Cristo.
 Di corno in corno, e tra la cima e il basso,
 Si movean lumi, scintillando forte 110
 Nel congiungersi insieme e nel trapasso.
 Così si veggion qui diritte e torte,
 Veloci e tarde, rinnovando vista,
 Le minuzie dei corpi lunghe e corte
 Moversi per lo raggio, onde si lista 115
 Tal volta l' ombra che per sua difesa
 La gente con ingegno ed arte acquista.
 E come giga ed arpa, in tempra tesa
 Di molte corde, fa dolce tintinno
 A tal da cui la nota non è intesa, 120
 Così dai lumi che lì m' apparinno
 S' accogliea per la croce una melode,
 Che mi rapiva senza intender l' inno.
 Ben m' accors' io ch' ell' era d' alte lode,
 Perocchè a me venia: 'Risurgi e vinci,' 125
 Com' a colui che non intende ed ode.
 Io m' innamorava tanto quinci
 Che infino a lì non fu alcuna cosa
 Che mi legasse con sì dolci vinci.

109. Corno, 'horn': arm of the cross.

112. The moving lights in the cross are compared to bits of dust dancing in a ray of sunshine in a dark room. Cf. Lucretius, II, 116-119. — Qui: on earth. — Torte, 'aslant.'

113. Rinnovando vista, 'changing aspect.'

114. Minuzie, 'particles.'

115. Onde si lista, 'with which is streaked.'

116. Per sua difesa, 'for self-protection' from the sun.

117. La gente . . . acquista, 'people obtain,' by building houses. In warm countries the house is regarded primarily as a shelter from the heat.

118. Giga, 'viol.' — Tesa, 'strung.'

125. The song which Dante cannot entirely catch is evidently a triumphal hymn to Christ, sung by the knights of the Cross. In the missal for Thursday of Easter week there is a sequence: 'Resumpta carne resurgit victor die in tertia.'

127. Io here has two syllables. — Quinci, 'with it.' 129. Vinci, 'ties.'

Forse la mia parola par tropp' osa, 130
 Posponendo il piacer degli occhi belli
 Ne' quai mirando mio disio ha posa.
 Ma chi s' avvede che i vivi suggelli
 D' ogni bellezza più fanno più suso,
 E ch' io non m' era lì rivolto a quelli, 135
 Escusar puommi di quel ch' io m' accuso
 Per escusarmi, e vedermi dir vero;
 Chè il piacer santo non è qui dischiuso,
 Perchè si fa, montando, più sincero.

130. Osa, 'bold': cf. Purg. XI, 126.

131. Posponendo, 'subordinating,' giving a secondary place to the eyes of Beatrice. Dante seems to be rating the song above those 'beauteous eyes'; but, as he presently explains, he is not really doing so, since he has not yet looked upon them in this sphere.

133. 'The living stamps of all beauty' are Beatrice's eyes, which become more potent from sphere to sphere, as she approaches God. In Conv., II, xv, 27-37, Dante calls the eyes of Philosophy her demonstrations, 'le quali dritte negli occhi dello intelletto innamorano l' anima.'

135. Quelli: the eyes.

136-137. 'May excuse me for that (i. e., l. 131) of which I accuse myself in order to excuse myself' — i. e., for the accusation which I bring against myself merely in order to have an opportunity to deny it — 'and may see that I am telling the truth.'

138. 'For that holy delight (the eyes) is not cast out (set aside, as of less account than the song) here.'

139. Più sincero, 'purer.'

CANTO XV

ARGUMENT

'ISQUE ubi tendentem adversum per gramina vidit
Ænean, alacris palmas utrasque tetendit,
Effusæ genis lacrimæ, et vox excidit ore:
"Venisti tandem, tuaque expectata parenti
Vicit iter durum pietas!"'

Thus Virgil, in the sixth book of the Æneid (ll. 684-688) describes the meeting of Æneas and the shade of his father, Anchises, in the Elysian Fields. Dante, too, in the realm of the blest, finds the spirit of an ancestor who has long been awaiting him — his great-great-grandfather, Cacciaguida, a crusader, knighted by the Emperor. A person of that name appears in a document of 1131. Aside from what is told us in the Paradiso, we know nothing of Cacciaguida, nor of his wife, Alagheria, who came from somewhere in the Po valley, nor of his two brothers, Moronto and Eliseo. There was in Florence an Elisei family from Rome, but there is no evidence of a connection between them and the Alighieri. Cacciaguida had a son Alighiero, father of Bellincione, who likewise had a son Alighiero, father of Dante.

In the first rapture of fatherly welcome, the old warrior forgets to adapt his speech to mortal comprehension, and pours forth his love in words 'so deep' that Dante cannot fathom his meaning. When the fire of his affection has subsided to a steady glow, and his language no longer passes earthly understanding, he proceeds to tell his descendant of the good old Florence of the first half of the 12th century. A strikingly similar picture is to be found in G. Villani's Croniche, VI, lxxi. Those were the days of plain living and domestic peace. Women were sure they would not have to end their days in exile, nor were they left alone while their husbands went to France on business. In one of those sweet scenes of home life which our poet sketches from time to time, we see a woman watching over the cradle, soothing her child with the baby talk 'which first amuses fathers and mothers'; another matron, while she 'draws the tresses from her distaff,' retails to her little ones the folk-lore of her day, the legends of the founding of Fiesole,

Troy, and Rome — stories happily preserved for us in the first book of Villani and in other chronicles.

Benigna volontade, — in cui si liqua
 Sempre l' amor che drittamente spira,
 Come cupidità fa nell' iniqua, —
 Silenzio pose a quella dolce lira,
 E fece quïetar le sante corde 5
 Che la destra del cielo allenta e tira.
 Come saranno ai giusti preghi sorde
 Quelle sustanzie, che, per darmi voglia
 Ch' io le pregassi, a tacer fur concorde?
 Ben è che senza termine si doglia 10
 Chi, per amor di cosa che non duri,
 Eternalmente quell' amor si spoglia.
 Quale per li seren tranquilli e puri
 Discorre ad ora ad or subito foco,
 Movendo gli occhi che stavan sicuri, 15
 E pare stella che tramuti loco,
 Se non che dalla parte ond' ei s' accende
 Nulla sen perde, ed esso dura poco;
 Tale, dal corno che in destro si stende,
 Al piè di quella croce corse un astro 20
 Della costellazion che lì risplende;

1. Liqua (Latin liquet), 'is manifest.'

3. Iniqua: sc., volontade.

4. Lira: the spirits in the Cross.

10. Ben è, 'it is right.'

13. Seren, 'clear skies.'

14. Subito foco: a meteor. Meteors were explained as dry vapors which had risen so high as to take fire, and then plunged back towards the earth.

15. Movendo, 'startling.' — Sicuri, 'calm.'

Nè si partì la gemma dal suo nastro,
 Ma per la lista radial trascorse,
 Che parve foco retro ad alabastro.
 Sì pïa l' ombra d' Anchise si porse 25
 (Se fede merta nostra maggior Musa),
 Quando in Elisio del figlio s' accorse.
'O sanguis mēus, o superinfusa
Gratïa Deï! sicut tibi, cui
Bis unquam cœli ianua reclusa ?' 30
 Così quel lume; ond' io m' attesi a lui.
 Poscia rivolsi alla mia Donna il viso,
 E quinci e quindi stupefatto fui;
 Chè dentro agli occhi suoi ardeva un riso
 Tal ch' io pensai co' miei toccar lo fondo 35
 Della mia grazia e del mio Paradiso.
 Indi, ad udire ed a veder giocondo,
 Giunse lo spirto al suo principio cose
 Ch' io non intesi, sì parlò profondo.
 Nè per elezïon mi si nascose, 40
 Ma per necessità, chè il suo concetto
 Al segno dei mortal si soprappose.

22. 'The gem did not leave its ribbon': the bright spirit did not go outside the Cross. Silk ribbons studded with pearls were common in Dante's time.

23. Radial lista, 'radiant strip.'

24. Che parve, 'resembling.' — Alabastro: a translucent screen.

26. Cf. the 'tu dici' of Inf. II, 13. Cf. also Conv., IV, xxvi, 60: 'Virgilio, lo maggior nostro Poeta.'

28-30. 'O blood of mine, O lavish grace of God! To whom was Heaven's gate ever twice opened, as to thee?' Heaven receives Dante now, and will receive him again after his death; such a thing has never happened since the days of St. Paul. — The use of Latin — the language of Church and school — adds dignity to this celestial greeting. It is made more appropriate by the reminiscence of Anchises, to whom, indeed, the phrase 'sanguis meus' (meaning 'my child') belongs: 'Proice tela manu, sanguis meus,' in Æn., VI, 835, where Anchises is addressing Julius Cæsar.

34-36. Until now, Dante has not looked into the eyes of Beatrice in this sphere.

37. 'Then, joyous to hear and see.'

42. Si soprappose, 'shot above.'

E quando l' arco dell' ardente affetto
 Fu sì sfocato che il parlar discese
 Inver lo segno del nostro intelletto, 45
 La prima cosa che per me s' intese,
 'Benedetto sie tu,' fu, 'Trino ed Uno,
 Che nel mio seme sei tanto cortese.'
 E seguitò: 'Grato e lontan digiuno,
 Tratto leggendo nel magno volume 50
 U' non si muta mai bianco nè bruno,
 Soluta hai, figlio, dentro a questo lume
 In ch' io ti parlo, mercè di colei
 Ch' all' alto volo ti vesti le piume.
 Tu credi che a me tuo pensier mei 55
 Da quel ch' è primo, così come raia
 Dall' un, se si conosce, il cinque e il sei.
 E però chi io mi sia, e perch' io paia
 Più gaudioso a te, non mi domandi,
 Che alcun altro in questa turba gaia. 60
 Tu credi il vero; chè minori e grandi
 Di questa vita miran nello specchio
 In che, prima che pensi, il pensier pandi.
 Ma perchè il sacro amore in che io veglio
 Con perpetua vista, e che m' asseta 65
 Di dolce disiar, s' adempia meglio,
 La voce tua sicura, balda e lieta

49. The 'welcome and long-felt hunger' is the object of 'thou hast relieved' in l. 52.

50. Tratto, 'derived' from reading of Dante's visit in the Book of Fate, 'where white and black are never altered.'

55. Mei, 'flows.'

56. Raia, 'radiates.' Unity is the beginning of number, as God is the beginning of thought; from the conception of unity is derived the conception of all numbers, and in the divine mind all thought is contained.

60. Che, 'than,' connecting with più gaudioso in l. 59.

63. Pandi, 'revealest.'

Suoni la volontà, suoni il disio,
 A che la mia risposta è già decreta.'
 Io mi volsi a Beatrice, e quella udìo 70
 Pria ch' io parlassi, ed arrosemi un cenno
 Che fece crescer l' ali al voler mio.
 Poi cominciai così: 'L' affetto e il senno,
 Come la prima Equalità v' apparse,
 D' un peso per ciascun di voi si fenno; 75
 Però che il Sol, che v' allumò ed arse
 Col caldo e con la luce, è sì iguali
 Che tutte simiglianze sono scarse.
 Ma voglia ed argomento nei mortali,
 Per la cagion ch' a voi è manifesta, 80
 Diversamente son pennuti in ali.
 Ond' io, che son mortal, mi sento in questa
 Disagguaglianza, e però non ringrazio,
 Se non col core, alla paterna festa.
 Ben supplico io a te, vivo topazio, 85
 Che questa gioia preziosa ingemmi,
 Perchè mi facci del tuo nome sazio.'
 'O fronda mia, in che io compiacemmi
 Pure aspettando, io fui la tua radice.'
 Cotal principio, rispondendo, femmi. 90
 Poscia mi disse: 'Quel da cui si dice

71. Arrose (from arrogere), 'added.' Other texts have arrise.

73-75. 'As soon as the primal Equality (God, in whom all powers are perfect and therefore equal) revealed himself to you, desire and faculty in each one of you became equal in weight': the blest have no wish which they have not intelligence to fulfil.

77. Caldo: desire. — Luce: intelligence. — Sì iguali, 'so perfectly balanced.' Iguali is singular.

78. Simiglianze, 'comparisons.'

79. Argomento, 'means': wit to execute the voglia.

86. Gioia, 'jewel': the Cross.

88. Cf. Mat. iii, 17: 'This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased.'

Tua cognazion, e che cent' anni e piùè

 Si stava in pace, sobria e pudica.
 Non avea catenella, non corona, 100
 Non donne contigiate, non cintura
 Che fosse a veder più che la persona.

 La figlia al padre, chè il tempo e la dote
 Non fuggian quinci e quindi la misura. 105
 Non avea case di famiglia vote;
 Non v' era giunto ancor Sardanapalo
 A mostrar ciò che in camera si puote.

92. Cognazion, 'surname': Alighieri. Alighiero (or Allagherius), son of Cacciaguida, was the first male member of the family to bear this name, which, as we learn presently, he derived from his mother. His name occurs in documents of 1189 (where it is joined with that of his brother Preitenitto) and 1201. The cent' anni e piùè would seem, therefore, to indicate ignorance of the exact date of his death.

93. Prima cornice: the circle of Pride, in Purgatory. Dante apparently regarded pride as a family failing.

96. Opere: prayers.

97. Cerchia antica: the old city walls.

98. Beside these walls stood the ancient Abbey, whose bell continued, in Dante's day, to mark the hours for the Florentines. 'Tierce' is the period from 6 to 9 A. M.; 'nones,' that from noon to 3 P. M.

100. Catenella, 'bracelet.'

101. Contigiate, 'fine shod.'

102. La persona: the wearer.

104-105. The marriageable age had not yet become absurdly low, nor the dowry ruinously high.

106. There were no houses built on too large a scale for their occupants.

107-108. Sardanapālus, king of Assyria, was notorious in antiquity for his luxury and effeminacy. He is mentioned by Paulus Orosius and Egidio Colonna. Cf. Juvenal, Satires, X, 362:

'Et Venere et cœnis et pluma Sardanapali.'

109-111. Rome was not yet surpassed in splendor by Florence, which has been swifter in its rise and will be swifter in its fall. Montemalo (or Montemallo), now Montemario, is a hill that affords the approaching traveler a view of Rome; similarly the height called Uccellatoio offers the stranger, as he draws near, an outlook on Florence. In Uccellatoio the -toio counts as one syllable: cf. Purg. XIII, 22; XIV, 66; XX, 52. — Che in l. 110 refers to Montemalo. — Calo, 'decline.'

112. Bellincion Berti, father of the 'good Gualdrada' of Inf. XVI, 37, was a worthy and distinguished Florentine citizen of the second half of the 12th century. Cf. G. Villani, Croniche, IV, ii.

115. Of the Nerli and del Vecchio families virtually nothing is known.

116. Pelle scoperta, 'bare leather.'

117. Cf. Pr. xxxi, 19: 'She layeth her hands to the spindle, and her hands hold the distaff.'

128. Cianghella, of the della Tosa family, a contemporary of Dante, seems to have been notorious for her immodesty. Boccaccio speaks of her in the Corbaccio, 228-230. — Lapo Salterello, also of Dante's time and one of his fellow-exiles, a jurist and versifier, was in general a man of good renown; but Dino

CANTO XVI

ARGUMENT

'JAM vero quam sit inane, quam futile nobilitatis nomen, quis non videat?' says Boethius, in De Consolatione Philosophiæ, III, Pr. vi. Other authors known to our poet, in Latin, Provençal, and Italian, disparage the glory of birth, and exalt the true nobility of character. Dante himself devotes the third Canzone of the Convivio to the development of this theme, and touches upon it in De Monarchia, II, iii, 15-20. Yet in the presence of his belted ancestor he cannot check a feeling of family pride, which betrays itself by the use of the respectful 'voi.' Amid the mortifications of exile, he must have taken real satisfaction in the thought of the knighthood won by old Cacciaguida; and in the Paradiso he makes the most of this distinguished forbear. To him he assigns a minute description of ancient Florence, and into his mouth he puts — in the next canto — a touching account of Dante's own banishment. In answer to the poet's questions concerning his people, the time of his boyhood, the size of Florence in his day, and the prominent men of the city, Cacciaguida furnishes us with a few precious biographical facts and an abundance of antiquarian information. In the long list of families illustrious two centuries before, but for the most part insignificant in 1300, we note a great many Germanic names, representing the old feudal aristocracy. Others, such as Caponsacco and Infangato, were evidently, at the start, humorous nicknames, handed down to descendants.

O poca nostra nobiltà di sangue!
Se gloriâr di te la gente fai
Quaggiù, dove l' affetto nostro langue,
Mirabil cosa non mi sarà mai;
Chè là, dove appetito non si torce, —
Dico nel cielo, — io me ne gloriâi.
Ben sei tu manto che tosto raccorce,

7. Raccorce = raccorci, 'shrinkest.'

Sì che, se non s' appon di diè in diè,
 Lo tempo va dintorno con le force.
 Dal 'voi,' che prima Roma sofferiè, — 10
 In che la sua famiglia men persevera, —
 Ricominciaron le parole mie.
 Onde Beatrice, ch' era un poco scevra,
 Ridendo, parve quella che tossiò
 Al primo fallo scritto di Ginevra. 15
 Io cominciai: 'Voi siete il padre mio,
 Voi mi date a parlar tutta baldezza,
 Voi mi levate sì ch' io son più ch' io.
 Per tanti rivi s' empie d' allegrezza
 La mente mia che di sè fa letizia, 20
 Perchè può sostener che non si spezza.
 Ditemi dunque, cara mia primizia,
 Quai fur li vostri antichi, e quai fur gli anni
 Che si segnaro in vostra puèrizia.

8. Se non s' appon, 'unless we patch thee out.'

10. According to tradition, the plural vos was first used, in addressing one person, when Julius Caesar made himself Emperor. Cf. Phars., V, 381-386. — Dal, 'with the.'

11. Rome, the seat of the Papacy, is now the place where the Emperor is least honored. And in the environs of Rome tu is employed much more freely than in the more northerly parts of Italy.

12. Cf. l. 16.

13-15. Beatrice, 'who stood a little apart,' smiled indulgently at Dante's weakness, just as, in the Old French romance of Lancelot du Lac (cf. Inf. V, 127-138), the Dame de Malehaut, watching the first clandestine interview of Guenever and Lancelot, coughed on hearing the impassioned speech of the Queen. — Fallo scritto, 'recorded fault.'

20. Che di sè fa letizia, 'that it congratulates itself.'

21. 'On being able to endure without bursting.'

25. John the Baptist is the patron saint of Florence.

28-29. Cf. Met., VII, 79-81.

Luce risplendere a' miei blandimenti; 30
 E come agli occhi miei si fe' più bella,
 Così con voce più dolce e soave,
 Ma non con questa moderna favella,
 Disse mi: 'Da quel dì che fu detto "Ave,"
 Al parto in che mia madre, — ch'è or santa, — 35
 S' alleviò di me ond' era grave,
 Al suo Lëon cinquecento cinquanta
 E trenta fiate venne questo foco
 A rinfiammarsi sotto la sua pianta.
 Gli antichi miei ed io nacqui nel loco 40
 Dove si trova pria l' ultimo sesto
 Da quel che corre il vostro annüal gioco.
 Basti de' miei maggiori udirne questo;
 Chi ei si furo, ed onde venner quivi,
 Più è tacer che ragionare onesto. 45
 Tutti color ch' a quel tempo eran ivi
 Da poter arme, tra Marte e il Batista,

33. Dante cannot reproduce the old-fashioned speech of Cacciaguida, but he suggests it with this line. He was aware that the vulgar tongue changes from generation to generation. Cf. Vulg. El., I, ix, 50-93; Conv., I, v, 55-66.

34. Da quel dì, etc.: from the Annunciation (Luke i, 28). The Florentine year began with the Conception, March 25.

37-39. 'This fire (Mars) came 580 times to its Lion, to be rekindled under its paw.' Between the Conception — the beginning of the year 1 — and the birth of Cacciaguida, Mars returned 580 times to the constellation of Leo, which, being of like disposition to Mars, reinforces the influence of that planet. As Mars completes its revolution in 687 days, we shall get the year of Cacciaguida's birth by multiplying 687 by 580 and dividing by 365: 1091. He was therefore 56 when he followed the crusade. Cf. Moore, III, 59-60.

41-42. 'Where the last ward (the part of the city called Porta S. Piero) is first reached by the runner in your annual sports.' The races were run on June 24 (St. John's day) along the Corso, which enters the 'last ward' near the Mercato Vecchio.

43-45. With this sentence, presumably, Dante veils his lack of further information. — Onesto, 'modest.'

47. 'Fit for arms, between Mars and the Baptist' — between the old statue of Mars, on the river, and the Baptistry, on the north side (cf. Inf. XIII, 146-147; Par. XV, 134): the ancient city lay between these two monuments.

Erano il quinto di quei che son vivi.
 Ma la cittadinanza, ch' è or mista
 Di Campi, di Certaldo e di Figghine, 50
 Pura vedeasi nell' ultimo artista.
 O quanto fora meglio esser vicine
 Quelle genti ch' io dico, ed al Galluzzo
 Ed a Trespiano aver vostro confine,
 Che averle dentro, e sostener lo puzzo 55
 Del villan d' Aguglion, di quel da Signa,
 Che già per barattar ha l' occhio aguzzo!
 Se la gente ch' al mondo più traligna
 Non fosse stata a Cesare noverca,
 Ma come madre a suo figliuol benigna, 60
 Tal fatto è Fiorentino, e cambia e merca,
 Che si sarebbe volto a Simifonti,
 Là dove andava l' avolo alla cerca.
 Sariansi Montemurlo ancor dei Conti;

48. According to G. Villani, Croniche, VIII, xxxviii, Florence had in 1300 'più di trenta mila cittadini da arme'; in 1100, then, the number was about 6000.

50. Towns near and belonging to Florence, which received many immigrants from them.

51. Nell' ultimo artista, 'even to the meanest artisan.'

53-54. Galluzzo and Trespiano are towns a few miles south and north of Florence.

56. Aguglione was in Val di Pesa; Signa is on the Arno, west of Florence. The 'farmers' from these country towns, who in Florence have become prominent lawyers and politicians, are probably Baldo d'Aguglione and Fazio Morubaldini.

58. Gente: the clergy. — Traligna, 'degenerates.'

61. The tal is perhaps Lippo Velluti, a man of importance in Florence in the second half of the 13th century. Cf. Giorn. dant., VIII, 569; Nuova Antologia, CXXXVI, 357 (Aug. 1, 1908).

62. Semifonte, a stronghold in Val d' Elsa, was reduced by Florence in 1202. The acquisition of this and other places was facilitated by the position of Florence as head of a Tuscan league organized, under the patronage of the Church, to resist the encroachments of the Emperors, after the death of Henry VI.

63. Andava . . . alla cerca, 'mounted guard': Lippo's father and grandfather were soldiers. If the reference in these lines is not to him, the phrase may have its commoner sense of 'went begging.'

64. Montemurlo, a fortified place beyond Prato, was ceded by the Counts Guidi to Florence.

Sariansi i Cerchi nel pivier d' Acone, 65
 E forse in Valdigreve i Buondelmonti.
 Sempre la confusion delle persone
 Principio fu del mal della cittade,
 Come del corpo il cibo che s' appone.
 E cieco toro più avaccio cade 70
 Che 'l cieco agnello, e molte volte taglia
 Più e meglio una che le cinque spade.
 Se tu riguardi Luni ed Urbisaglia
 Come son ite, e come se ne vanno
 Diretro ad esse Chiusi e Sinigaglia, 75
 Udir come le schiatte si disfanno
 Non ti parrà nuova cosa nè forte,
 Poscia che le cittadi termine hanno.
 Le vostre cose tutte hanno lor morte
 Sì come voi; ma celasi in alcuna 80
 Che dura molto, e le vite son corte.
 E come il volger del ciel della luna
 Copre e discopre i liti senza posa,
 Così fa di Fiorenza la fortuna;
 Per che non dee parer mirabil cosa 85

65. The Cerchi, from 'the parish of Acone' in Val di Sieve, became leaders of the White party in Florence.

66. Montebuono, a strong castle of the Buondelmonti in Val di Greve, was taken by Florence in 1135.

67-68. Cf. Aristotle, Politics, VIII, iii.

69. S' appone, 'is added.' The human body is born pure and wholesome, but begins to lose its purity as soon as food is taken.

73. Luni, in Tuscany, and Urbisaglia, in the March of Ancona, were fallen cities.

75. Chiusi, in Val di Chiana, and Sinigaglia, in the March of Ancona, were in decay, the first wasted by malaria, the second by bloodshed.

78. Termine, 'an end.'

80. Celasi in, 'it is not apparent in the case of.'

81. Le vite: human lives. — Cf. Vulg. El., I, ix, 73-85.

82-83. St. Thomas and Brunetto Latini, following the common opinion, attribute tides to the influence of the moon.

84. Fortuna is the subject of fa, 'does.'

Ciò ch' io dirò degli alti Fiorentini,
 Onde la fama nel tempo è nascosa.
 Io vidi gli Ughi, e vidi i Catellini,

88-93. Old families that have declined or disappeared. Cf. G. Villani, Croniche, IV, ix, x, xi, xii, xiii. — Quel, 'the.'

94. In 1280 the Cerchi bought the palace of the Counts Guidi, near the Porta S. Piero. Cf. Dino Compagni, Cronica, I, xx.

95. The Cerchi became leaders in party strife.

96. Jattura, 'jettison,' throwing overboard: the exile of the Whites, including many of the Cerchi, in 1302.

97. Ravignani: a great family of Porta S. Piero, from whom the Counts Guidi descended.

98-99. For Bellincione Berti, cf. XV, 112. A branch of his family took the name Bellincioni.

101. Regger si vuole, 'to rule.' It would seem that the della Pressa family held public offices.

102. The Galigai, a Ghibelline family, 'had hilt and pommel gilded,' a sign of nobility.

103. A 'stripe of vair' (a kind of fur) traversed the scutcheon of the Pigli family.

104. The Sacchetti were an old Guelf clan. The other three had sunk into poverty in the 14th century.

E Galli, e quei che arrossan per lo staio. 105
 Lo ceppo di che nacquero i Calfucci
 Era già grande, e già erano tratti

105. The Galli had lost everything. — 'Those who blush for the bushel' are the Chiarmontesi, disgraced by one of their kin, who, when salt commissioner, used a false measure. Cf. Purg. XII, 105.

106. The 'stock' is that of the Donati. The Calfucci died out.

108. Curule, 'supreme offices.' — These families had almost vanished in the 14th century.

109. Quali: in what glory! — Quei: the Uberti, who in the latter part of the 12th century rebelled against the Florentine government and for a while gained control of the city. For Farinata degli Uberti, see Inf. X.

110-111. The Lamberti had golden balls on their shield. Both they and the Uberti were of German origin.

112-114. The Visdomini and the Tosighi, 'keepers and defenders' of the Bishopric of Florence, administered the episcopal revenues, whenever the see was vacant, until a successor was chosen.

115. The 'arrogant race' is probably the Adimari family. For a different view, see Bull., XVII, 128. — S' indraca, 'is fierce as a dragon.' Filippo Argenti (Inf. VIII, 61) belonged to this clan.

119-120. Ubertino Donati, who had married one daughter of Bellincione Berti, was displeased when another daughter was given in marriage to one of the Adimari.

121-122. The Caponsacchi, a great family of Fiesole, settled in Florence near the Mercato Vecchio.

Buon cittadino Giuda ed Infangato.
 Io dirò cosa incredibile e vera:
 Nel picciol cerchio s' entrava per porta 125
 Che si nomava da quei della Pera.
 Ciascun che della bella insegna porta
 Del gran barone, il cui nome e il cui pregio
 La festa di Tommaso riconforta,
 Da esso ebbe milizia e privilegio; 130
 Avvenga che col popol si raduni
 Oggi colui che la fascia col fregio.
 Già eran Gualterotti ed Importuni;
 Ed ancor saria Borgo più quïeto,
 Se di nuovi vicin fosser digiuni. 135
 La casa di che nacque il vostro fletto,
 Per lo giusto disdegno che v' ha morti,

123. The Giudi and Infangati declined in wealth and numbers.

125. Picciol cerchio: the old city walls. — Porta: the Porta Peruzza, named after the Peruzzi family, who lived near by.

126. In Dante's time the Peruzzi, or della Pera, had apparently become insignificant.

127-130. Those who now wear any of the insignia of the Imperial Vicar, Hugh of Brandenburg, received their knighthood from him. Hugh the Great took up his abode in Florence, where he founded seven abbeys and created many knights. He died in 1001, on St. Thomas's day; and therefore the festival of the apostle renews every year the memory of the 'great baron.'

131-132. One, however, of the knights whose nobility goes back to Hugh, is now 'siding with the people.' This is Giano della Bella, who introduced, in 1293, severe reform measures directed against the nobles, and was banished in 1295. His family has somewhat changed the scutcheon of the 'great baron,' 'bordering' it with a 'fringe.'

133. These families also fell from their high estate.

134. Borgo: the quarter called Borgo Santo Apostolo, where the Gualterotti and Importuni lived.

135. 'If they had gone on fasting for new neighbors,' i. e., if they had never had any: for this use of digiuno, cf. Inf. XVIII, 42 and XXVIII, 87. The undesirable new neighbors are the Buondelmonti (cf. l. 66), who, after the destruction of their castle of Montebuono in 1135, returned to live in Florence.

136. Casa: the Amidei. — Fletto (Latin fletus), 'weeping.' — The bloody feud between the Amidei and the Buondelmonti divided all Florence for a long time. Cf. G. Villani, Croniche, V, xxxvii.

137. Disdegno, 'resentment': the indignation of the Amidei against Buondelmonte dei Buondelmonti, who, on his wedding day, in 1215, forsook his betrothed — one of the Amidei — for a daughter of the Donati. To avenge this

E pose fine al vostro viver lieto,
 Era onorata, ed essa e suoi consorti.
 O Buondelmonte, quanto mal fuggisti 140
 Le nozze sue per gli altrui conforti!
 Molti sarebbon lieti che son tristi,
 Se Dio t'avesse concesso ad Ema
 La prima volta che a città venisti.
 Ma conveniasi, a quella pietra scema 145
 Che guarda il ponte, che Fiorenza fesse
 Vittima nella sua pace postrema.
 Con queste genti, e con altre con esse,
 Vid' io Fiorenza in sì fatto riposo
 Che non avea cagion onde piangesse. 150
 Con queste genti vid' io glorioso
 E giusto il popol suo tanto che il giglio
 Non era ad asta mai posto a ritroso,
 Nè per division fatto vermiglio.'

insult, the Amidei murdered him; and this was the beginning of the feud. Cf. Inf. XXVIII, 103-111.

141. Conforti, 'instigation': cf. Inf. XXVIII, 135. The suggestion came from a certain Gualdrada Donati.

143. The Ema is a little stream that has to be crossed on the way from Montebuono to Florence.

145-147. 'But it was fitting that Florence, in her last peace, should offer a victim to that mutilated stone which guards the bridge' — the old, broken statue of Mars (the first patron of Florence) at the end of the Ponte Vecchio. Cf. Inf. XIII, 143-150. The victim was Buondelmonte, who was killed on Easter morning at the foot of the statue.

153. The Florentine banner was, in those days, never 'turned upside down,' in derision, by victorious enemies.

154. In 1251, after the expulsion of the Ghibellines, the Guefts altered the Florentine standard from a white lily in a red field to a red lily in a white field. The Ghibellines kept the old colors. Cf. G. Villani, Croniche, VI, xliii.

CANTO XVII

ARGUMENT

THE younger Scipio, in the sixth book of Cicero's De Republica, is lifted to the skies in a dream, and there meets his great ancestor, who predicts to him the future course of his life. So it fares with Dante, who learns what is in store for him, not from the lips of Beatrice, as Virgil had led him to expect (Inf. X, 130-132), but from Cacciaguida. The picture of Dante's exile, as drawn here and in the Convivio (I, iii, 15-48), is the more effective for its manly reticence, and for the author's habitual silence regarding the events of his external experience. The loss of reputation, of cherished family and friends, and of personal dignity is set forth in those brief passages of concentrated pathos,

'La colpa seguirà la parte offensa
In grido, come suol,'

'Tu lascerai ogni cosa diletta
Più caramente,'

'Tu proverai sì come sa di sale
Lo pane altrui, e com' è duro calle
Lo scendere e il salir per l' altrui scale,'

which no reader can forget, and which need no commentary.

Less clear is the reference to the poet's fellow-outcasts of the White party, whose companionship he describes as the worst affliction of all. In this large band of exiles, whose energies were bent on forcing their way back into the city and regaining the supremacy they had just lost, Dante was surely the man of most note and the natural leader. We have evidence of his activity in June, 1302, when they were in Pisa; in June, 1303, he was apparently not with them; but in March, 1304, when Cardinal Niccolò da Prato came to Florence as a peacemaker, Dante, appealing to him in a Latin letter (Epistola 1), made himself spokesman for the Whites. In the ill-fated military adventure of July, 1304, he had no part, nor did he share in the disastrous operations of 1306-07. It was doubtless early in 1303 or in the spring of 1304 that he turned his back on his 'wicked, foolish' comrades and 'made a party by himself.'

There was obviously a violent difference of opinion on some matter of policy; Dante's advice was not followed, he left the party in disgust, and his opponents came to grief. Torraca suggests that the quarrel may have occurred in May, 1304, when the Whites chose twelve delegates to represent them in a parley with the Cardinal, and Dante was not one of the number.

Involved in this problem is the question of the date of Dante's residence in Verona, his 'first refuge' after his banishment. Alberto della Scala, lord of Verona, died in 1301; his oldest son, Bartolommeo, on March 7, 1304; the next son, Alboino, in 1311; the third, Can Grande, outlived Dante. The 'great Lombard' who received our poet so hospitably must have been either Bartolommeo or Alboino. Of the latter Dante speaks slightly in the Convivio, IV, xvi, 50-74. If, however, Alighieri remained with the exiles until after the arrival of Niccolò da Prato, Alboino must have been his host, since Bartolommeo was dead. In the present state of our knowledge, the question reduces itself to a balance of the weight attached, on the one hand, to the epistle to the Cardinal, as an indication that Dante was still, in March, 1304, in active collaboration with the Whites, and, on the other, to the disrespectful allusion to Alboino in the latter part of the Convivio, as being inconsistent with the praise bestowed on the head of the house of the Scaligeri in our canto. Most commentators, following the poet's son Pietro, have identified the 'great Lombard' with Bartolommeo. Some, as Torraca and I. Del Lungo (Il Canto XVII del Paradiso, 1910), have favored Alboino.

At the court of Verona, destined to become a great general and ruler and friend of learning, appears Dante's future patron, Can Grande della Scala, the man upon whom the exile's political hopes were to centre after the untimely death of Henry VII. Cacciaguida's eulogy of this promising lad (a boy of nine in 1300) ends with one of those veiled prophecies which deal with the really unknown. With it we may compare the Hound of Inferno I, 100-111, and the Eagle of Purgatorio XXXIII, 37-51.

Qual venne a Climenè, per accertarsi
 Di ciò ch' avea incontro a sè udito,
 Quei ch' ancor fa li padri a' figli scarsi,

For the accentuation of Climenè, cf. Inf. V, 4, and XXX, 2. — The example of Phaëthon still makes fathers cautious in granting their sons' requests, because of the tragic results of Apollo's indulgence, when he allowed Phaëthon to drive the chariot of the sun: Met., II, 31-328.

5. Lampa: the light of Cacciaguida.

11. Perchè t' aüsi, 'to accustom thyself.'

12. L' uom ti mesca, 'one may give thee drink.'

13. Piota, 'sole': i. e., foundation.

14-16. The blest see even 'contingent,' or casual, things — whether they be past, present, or future — as clearly as 'earthly minds' can grasp an eternal, concrete, elementary fact, — such as the geometrical proposition that 'two obtuse angles cannot be contained in a triangle.'  Così diss' io a quella luce stessa
 Che pria m' avea parlato, e come volle
 Beatrice, fu la mia voglia confessa. 30
 Nè per ambage, in che la gente folle
 Già s' inviscava, pria che fosse anciso
 L' Agnel di Dio che le peccata tolle,
 Ma per chiare parole, e con preciso
 Latin, rispose quell' amor paterno, 35
 Chiuso e parvente del suo proprio riso:
 'La contingenza, che fuor del quaderno
 Della vostra materia non si stende,
 Tutta è dipinta nel cospetto eterno.
 Necessità però quindi non prende, 40
 Se non come dal viso in che si specchia
 Nave che per corrente giù discende.
 Da indi, sì come viene ad orecchia
 Dolce armonia da organo, mi viene
 A vista il tempo che ti s' apparechia. 45

37. 'Contingency' is the whole sequence of casual events, as distinguished from the eternal and inevitable. — Quaderno, 'volume.' Cf. XV, 50. — Contingency, or casualty, is confined to the world of matter.

40-42. 'But it (contingency) does not derive inevitability therefrom (from being foreseen by God), any more than a boat going downstream derives inevitability from the eye in which it is mirrored.' Casual things are no more necessary from being anticipated by omniscience than they would be if there were no power to see them coming. Cf. Summa Theologiæ, Prima, Qu. xxii, Art. 4.

 Questo si vuole, questo già si cerca,
 E tosto verrà fatto a chi ciò pensa 50
 Là dove Cristo tutto dì si merca.
 La colpa seguirà la parte offensa
 In grido, come suol; ma la vendetta
 Fia testimonio al ver che la dispensa.
 Tu lascerai ogni cosa diletta 55
 Più caramente, e questo è quello strale
 Che l' arco dello esilio pria saëtta.
 Tu proverai sì come sa di sale
 Lo pane altrui, e com' è duro calle
 Lo scendere e il salir per l' altrui scale. 60
 E quel che più ti graverà le spalle
 Sarà la compagnia malvagia e scempia
 Con la qual tu cadrai in questa valle;
 Che tutta ingrata, tutta matta ed empia
 Si farà contro a te; ma poco appresso 65
 Ella, non tu, n' avrà rossa la tempia.
 Di sua bestialitate il suo processo
 Farà la prova, sì che a te fia bello
 Averti fatta parte per te stesso.

50. Verrà fatto a chi, 'will be brought to pass by him who' — by Pope Boniface VIII. It would seem from these lines that the exile of Dante, and probably of other leading opponents of the Papal policy, was planned in Rome as early as April, 1300, a couple of months before Dante's priorate.

51. The place 'where Christ is bought and sold every day' is Rome.

 Che in te avrà sì benigno riguardo
 Che del fare e del chieder, tra voi due,
 Fia prima quel che tra gli altri è più tardo. 75
 Con lui vedrai colui che impresso fue
 Nascendo sì da questa stella forte
 Che notabili fien l' opere sue.
 Non se ne son le genti ancora accorte
 Per la novella età; chè pur nove anni 80
 Son queste rote intorno di lui torte.
 Ma pria che il Guasco l' alto Arrigo inganni,
 Parran faville della sua virtute
 In non curar d' argento nè d' affanni.
 Le sue magnificenze conosciute 85
 Saranno ancora sì che i suoi nimici
 Non ne potran tener le lingue mute.
 A lui t' aspetta ed ai suoi benefici;
 Per lui fia trasmutata molta gente,
 Cambiando condizion ricchi e mendici. 90
 E porteraine scritto nella mente
 Di lui, ma nol dirai, . . . ' e disse cose
 Incredibili a quei che fien presente.

71. Gran Lombardo: the head of the great house of the Scaligeri, or della Scala family, of Verona.

72. The Scaligeri had as their armorial bearings a ladder, to which was added, at the top, an Imperial eagle.

76. Colui: Can Grande.

77. Questa stella: Mars.

82. Before 1312, when the Gascon Pope, Clement V, after promising to support the Emperor, Henry VII, in his expedition to Italy, promoted opposition to it. Cf. Inf. XIX, 83; Par. XXX, 133-148.

 Poscia che s' infutura la tua vita
 Vie più là che il punir di lor perfidie.'
 Poi che tacendo si mostrò spedita 100
 L' anima santa di metter la trama
 In quella tela ch' io le porsi ordita,
 Io cominciai, come colui che brama,
 Dubitando, consiglio da persona
 Che vede e vuol dirittamente, ed ama: 105
 'Ben veggio, padre mio, sì come sprona
 Lo tempo verso me, per colpo darmi
 Tal ch' è più grave a chi più s' abbandona;
 Per che di provedenza è buon ch' io m' armi,
 Sì che se loco m' è tolto più caro, 110
 Io non perdessi gli altri per miei carmi.
 Giù per lo mondo senza fine amaro,
 E per lo monte del cui bel cacume
 Gli occhi della mia Donna mi levarò,
 E poscia per lo ciel di lume in lume, 115
 Ho io appreso quel che, s' io ridico,
 A molti fia sapor di forte agrume;

97-99. Dante's life extended long beyond the miserable end of Boniface and of Corso Donati (Purg. XXIV, 82-87). The latter was a 'neighbor' in the strictest sense of the word. It may be, however, that l. 98 refers to Dante's enduring fame, rather than to his bodily existence.

100-102. 'When, by its silence, the blessed soul showed that it had finished putting the woof upon the web which I had given it warped.' Cacciaguida had embroidered his answer upon the canvas of Dante's question.

108. Più s' abbandona, 'is most heedless.'

110. Loco: Florence.

111. Carmi, 'verses.'

117. Agrume, 'sourness.'

E s' io al vero son timido amico,
 Temo di perder viver tra coloro
 Che questo tempo chiameranno antico.' 120
 La luce in che rideva il mio tesoro,
 Ch' io trovai lì, si fe' prima corrusca,
 Quale a raggio di sole specchio d' oro;
 Indi rispose: 'Coscienza fusca
 O della propria o dell' altrui vergogna 125
 Pur sentirà la tua parola brusca.
 Ma nondimen, rimossa ogni menzogna,
 Tutta tua vision fa manifesta,
 E lascia pur grattar dov' è la rognà!
 Chè se la voce tua sarà molesta 130
 Nel primo gusto, vital nutrimento
 Lascerà poi quando sarà digesta.
 Questo tuo grido farà come vento,
 Che le più alte cime più percote;
 E ciò non fa d' onor poco argomento. 135
 Però ti son mostrate in queste rote,
 Nel monte, e nella valle dolorosa,
 Pur l' anime che son di fama note;
 Chè l' animo di quel ch' ode non posa
 Nè ferma fede per esempio ch' àia 140
 La sua radice incognita e nascosa,
 Nè per altro argomento che non paia.'

124. Fusca, 'darkened.'

126. 'Will indeed deem thy speech harsh.'

129. Rogna, 'itch.' — Dante chose to write his poem in the 'comic' rather than the 'tragic' style, that he might, when occasion required, sacrifice elegance to vigor.

130-132. Cf. Cons., III, Pr. i: ' . . . ut degustata quidem mordeant, interius autem recepta dulcescant.'

135. Argomento, 'proof': because it requires exceptional courage to 'strike the highest peaks.'

138. Pur, 'only.' The statement was perhaps approximately true for Dante's first readers.

139-142. The listener is never satisfied nor convinced by an unknown example or an obscure argument. — Aia = abbia.

CANTO XVIII

ARGUMENT

AFTER noting, in the Cross of Mars, various champions of the Faith (among whom are two Old Testament heroes), Dante finds himself transferred to the next planet, and once more is made aware of his uplifting by the increased beauty of his guide and by the changed color of the light that envelops him. Human justice, according to our poet, is a product of the heaven of Jupiter, and in this star appear the souls of the just. They reveal their nature by arranging themselves successively in the shapes of the letters that spell the first verse of the Book of Wisdom: 'Love righteousness, ye that be judges of the earth.' 'Diligite justitiam' are 'the first verb and noun' of the text, and 'qui judicatis terram' are 'the last' — in all, 'thirty-five vowels and consonants.' First the bright spirits flutter and sing; then, arraying themselves in the form of one of these letters, they are silent for a little while; after which they break ranks and resume their tuneful flight until the next letter is fashioned. Like the cranes which Lucan describes in Pharsalia, V, 711-716,

'Effingunt varias, casu monstrante, figuras,
'Et turbata perit dispersis litera pennis.'

Having reached the end of the sentence, they remain in the shape of the final M, symbol of Monarchy, the embodiment of justice. It is an M of the sort we met in Purgatorio XXIII, 32, resembling two O's placed side by side, in its general outline not unlike the Florentine lily. Presently a fresh swarm of lights descends upon the top of the figure, and more than a thousand rise like sparks from its lower parts, transforming it into the Imperial Eagle — the eagle of heraldry. Monarchy is the earthly representative of Justice, and the ultimate form of Monarchy is the Empire.

Già sì godeva solo del suo verbo

Quello specchio beato, ed io gustava

1. Verbo, 'word,' i. e., thought. Cf. Summa Theologiae, Prima, Qu. xxxiv, Art. 1: 'Id enim quod intellectus concipiendo format est verbum.'

2. Cacciaguida is called a 'mirror' because he reflects God's mind.

A ch' io mi volsi, conobbi la voglia
 In lui di ragionarmi ancora alquanto.
 Ei cominciò: 'In questa quinta soglia
 Dell' arbore che vive della cima,
 E frutta sempre, e mai non perde foglia, 30
 Spiriti son beati che giù, prima
 Che venissero al ciel, fur di gran voce
 Sì ch' ogni Musa ne sarebbe opima.
 Però mira nei corni della croce:
 Quel ch' io or numerò, lì farà l' atto 35
 Che fa in nube il suo foco veloce.'
 Io vidi per la croce un lume tratto
 Dal nomar Josuè, com' ei si feo,
 Nè mi fu noto il dir prima che il fatto.
 Ed al nome dell' alto Maccabeo 40
 Vidi moversi un altro rotèando,
 E letizia era ferza del paleo.
 Così per Carlo Magno e per Orlando
 Due ne seguì lo mio attento sguardo,
 Com' occhio segue suo falcon volando. 45

28. Soglia, 'tier': cf. III, 82, XXX, 113, XXXII, 13. The 'tree' of the heavens, which derives all its sustenance from above, is conceived as a fir, whose branches grow in rings or 'tiers' around the trunk. The fifth ring is the heaven of Mars.

33. Musa: cf. XV, 26. — Opima, 'rich.'

36. Il suo foco, 'its own fire': the lightning contained in the cloud. The soul, when named, will flash over the cross as lightning flashes across a cloud.

38. Dal nomar, 'by the mention of.' — Josuè: Joshua, successor of Moses and conqueror of the Promised Land. — Com' ei si feo (= fece), 'when it (the mention) was made.'

40. Maccabeo: Judas Maccabæus, the Hebrew champion who delivered his people from the tyranny of the Syrians. See 1 Macc. ii-ix.

42. 'And joy was the whip of the top,' i. e., it was joy that made it (the light) spin. Several times in the Paradiso Dante makes a swift rotary motion the symbol of keen delight.

43. Per: at the name of. — Charlemagne and Roland are the famous characters in the old French Chanson de Roland, which had become a favorite romance in all western Europe.

44. Due ne: i. e., due lumi. Due is the object of seguì.

Poscia trasse Guglielmo e Rinoardo
 E il duca Gottifredi la mia vista
 Per quella croce, e Roberto Guiscardo.
 Indi tra l' altre luci mota e mista,
 Mostrommi l' alma che m' avea parlato 50
 Qual era tra i cantor del cielo artista.
 Io mi rivolsi dal mio destro lato
 Per vedere in Beatrice il mio dovere,
 O per parlare o per atto segnato,
 E vidi le sue luci tanto mere, 55
 Tanto gioconde, che la sua sembianza
 Vinceva gli altri e l' ultimo solere.
 E come, per sentir più diletanza
 Bene operando, l' uom di giorno in giorno
 S' accorge che la sua virtute avanza, 60
 Sì m' accors' io che il mio girare intorno
 Col cielo insieme avea cresciuto l' arco,
 Veggendo quel miracol più adorno.

46. William, count of Orange, is the hero of a group of Old French epics, of which the best known is the Aliscans. He combatted the Saracens in southern France, as Charlemagne and Roland fought against them in Spain. Associated with him is the gigantic Renoart, of Saracen birth but baptized. — Guglielmo and Rinoardo are subjects of trasse.

47. Godfrey of Bouillon, leader of the first crusade (1096), battled with the Saracens in the Holy Land and became first Christian king of Jerusalem. — Vista is the object of trasse.

48. Robert Guiscard, a Norman conqueror of the second half of the 11th century, took a large part of southern Italy and Sicily from the Saracens.

49. Mota (= mossa) e mista, 'going and mingling.'

57. 'Surpassed her former habits, and her latest.'

58-60. Cf. Aristotle, Ethics, II, iii, 1. — Per sentir, 'through feeling.' — Bene operando, 'in doing good.'

61-63. Thus from an increase of Beatrice's loveliness I inferred that I had risen to a greater and swifter sphere. Since all the heavens revolve together from east to west, the outer must move faster than the inner, just as the tire of a wheel moves quicker than the hub; and as Dante proceeds from the centre to one heaven after another, each successive sphere he reaches must, in a given time, cover a greater arc than its predecessor. As long as Dante remains in a sphere, he of course revolves with it. — Miracolo: Beatrice. Cf. V. N., XXI, 22, XXIX, 24-41.

E quale è il trasmutare, in picciol varco
 Di tempo, in bianca donna, quando il volto 65
 Suo si discarchi di vergogna il carico,
 Tal fu negli occhi miei, quando fui volto,
 Per lo candor della temprata stella
 Sesta, che dentro a sè m' avea ricolto.
 Io vidi in quella giovial facella 70
 Lo sfavillar dell' amor che lì era
 Segnare agli occhi miei nostra favella.
 E come augelli surti di riviera,
 Quasi congratulando a lor pasture,
 Fanno di sè or tonda or altra schiera, 75
 Sì dentro ai lumi sante crëature
 Volitando cantavano, e faciensi
 Or D, or I, or L, in sue figure.
 Prima cantando a sua nota moviensi;
 Poi, diventando l' un di questi segni, 80
 Un poco s' arrestavano e taciensi.
 O diva Pegasëa, che gl' ingegni
 Fai glorïosi, e rendili longevi, —
 Ed essi teco le cittadi e i regni, —
 Illustrami di te, sì ch' io rilevi 85

64-66. The change from the red light of Mars to the whiteness of Jupiter is compared to the change in a pale lady's face when a blush suddenly passes from it.

68. The 'temperate sixth star,' Jupiter, is between hot Mars and cold Saturn: cf. Conv., II, xiv, 108-202.

70. Giovial facella, 'torch of Jove': the planet Jupiter.

74. Congratulando, 'rejoicing together.' — Pasture, 'food.'

77. Faciensi = si facevano.

79. A sua nota, 'to their own tune.'

82. Pegasea, 'Pegasëa,' i. e., Muse: the Muses are associated with the winged horse, Pegasus. It is not clear whether Dante had in mind any special Muse, nor, if so, whether the one invoked is Calliope (Purg. I, 9), Urania (Purg. XXIX, 41), or Euterpe (who presided over the sphere of Jupiter).

84. Ed essi teco: supply rendono longevi. Essi stands for gl' ingegni.

85. Rilevi, 'set forth.'

Le lor figure com' io l' ho concette:
 Paia tua possa in questi versi brevi!
 Mostrarsi dunque in cinque volte sette
 Vocali e consonanti; ed io notai
 Le parti sì come mi parver dette. 90
 'Diligite iustitiam,' primai
 Fur verbo e nome di tutto il dipinto;
 'Qui iudicatis terram,' fur sezzai.
 Poscia nell' M del vocabol quinto
 Rimasero ordinate, sì che Giove 95
 Pareva argento lì, d' oro distinto.
 E vidi scendere altre luci dove
 Era il colmo dell' M, e lì quetarsi
 Cantando, credo, il ben ch' a sè le move.
 Poi, come nel percoter dei ciocchi arsi 100
 Surgono innumerabili faville,
 Onde gli stolti sogliono augurarsi,
 Risurger parver quindi più di mille
 Luci, e salir quali assai e quai poco,
 Sì come il Sol, che l' accende, sortille; 105
 E quïetata ciascuna in suo loco,
 La testa e il collo d' un' aquila vidi
 Rappresentare a quel distinto foco.
 Quei che dipinge lì non ha chi il guidi,
 Ma esso guida; e da lui si rammenta 110

96. D' oro distinto, 'patterned with gold.' The planet looked like a silver background with a golden M embroidered on it. For the silvery hue of Jupiter, cf. Conv., II, xiv, 202-204.

100. Percoter, 'stirring.' — Ciocchi, 'logs.'

102. Augurarsi, 'draw omens.'

105. Sortille, 'distributed them.'

108. A, 'by.' — Distinto, 'patterned': cf. l. 96.

109-111. 'He (God) who paints there has no one to direct him, but he himself directs; and from him we recognize that power which is the essence of nest-building.' The instinct of the bird, which builds its nest without a pattern,

Quella virtù ch' è forma per li nidi.
 L' altra bēatitudo, che contenta
 Pareva prima d' ingigliarsi all' emme,

 O dolce stella, quali e quante gemme 115
 Mi dimostraro che nostra giustizia
 Effetto sia del ciel che tu ingemme!
 Per ch' io prego la Mente, in che s' inizia
 Tuo moto e tua virtute, che rimiri
 Ond' esce il fummo che il tuo raggio vizia; 120
 Sì ch' un' altra fiata omai s' adiri
 Del comperare e vender dentro al templo
 Che si murò di sangue e di martiri.
 O milizia del ciel, cu' io contemplo,
 Adora per color che sono in terra 125
 Tutti sviati dietro al malo esemplo!

 Ma or si fa togliendo, or qui or quivi,
 Lo pan che il pïo Padre a nessun serra.

comes directly from God, and, in its small way, is an image of the creative activity of God, who constructs solely from his inner conception. Cf. Summa Theologiæ, Prima, Qu. xix, Art. 4, end.

112. L' altra beatitudo: the rest of the blessed souls, those that had not yet left their places in the M.

113. Ingigliarsi, 'lily themselves,' remain as a lily. The Florentine lily is very similar in shape to a capital M of the type Dante has in mind. These lines may indicate that the Guelf souls, though seemingly reluctant at first to give up their own standard, readily conform to the Imperial design. — Emme is the name of the letter m.

114. Imprenta, 'design.'

122. Mat. xxi, 12.

123. Cf. Acts xx, 28: 'the church of God, which he hath purchased with his own blood.'

124. Cf. Luke ii, 13: 'militia cœlestis' — 'heavenly host.'

125. Adora, 'pray.'

126. Cf. Romans iii, 12: 'they are all gone out of the way.'

129. Lo pan: the sacraments. Cf. Summa Theologiæ, Tertia, Qu. lxxx, Art. 3-6. — Nowadays wars are waged by means of excommunications and interdicts.

Ma tu, che sol per cancellare scrivi, 130
 Pensa che Pietro e Paolo, che moriro
 Per la vigna che guasti, ancor son vivi.
 Ben puoi tu dire: 'I' ho fermo il disiro
 Sî a colui che volle viver solo,
 E che per salti fu tratto al martiro, 135
 Ch' io non conosco il Pescator nè Polo.'

130. John XXII, who was Pope when Dante was writing, issued and revoked many excommunications. He amassed a large fortune. In 1317 he excommunicated Can Grande della Scala, who remained under the ban until his death: cf. C. Cipolla, Lettere di Giovanni XXII riguardanti Verona e gli Scaligeri, 1909.

132. Cf. Isaiah iii, 14: 'for ye have eaten up the vineyard.'

133-136. My heart is so set on John the Baptist (i. e., on the gold florin bearing his image) that I have forgotten Peter and Paul. — Volle viver solo: Luke i, 80. — Salti: the dance of Herodias's daughter. See Mat. xiv, 1-12. — Polo is another form of Paolo. — Soon after Dante's death John XXII caused a scandal by having minted in Avignon a gold coin almost exactly like the florin of Florence. Cf. G. Villani, Croniche, IX, clxx.

CANTO XIX

ARGUMENT

THE doctrine emphasized in this canto is that Heaven can be won only through faith in Christ. 'Neither is there salvation in any other: for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved' (Acts iv, 12). 'Quod nemo, quantumcumque moralibus et intellectualibus virtutibus, et secundum habitum et secundum operationem perfectus, absque fide salvari potest, dato quod nunquam aliquid de Christo audiverit; nam hoc ratio humana per se justum intueri non potest, fide tamen adiuta potest. Scriptum est enim ad Hebræos: "Impossibile est sine fide placere Deo"' (Mon., II, viii, 28-37). That a pagan on the banks of the Indus, who has never heard of Christ, should be lost for lack of faith seems to mere human reason unjust. But to attribute injustice to God is a contradiction of terms; for we derive our notion of right and wrong from him, and what we call justice is simply his will. 'Ex his iam liquet quod ius quum sit bonum, per prius in mente Dei est: et quum omne quod in mente Dei est, sit Deus (iuxta illud: "Quod factum est, in ipso vita erat"); et Deus maxime seipsum velit, sequitur quod ius a Deo, prout in eo est, sit volitum. Et quum voluntas et volitum in Deo sit idem, sequitur ulterius quod divina voluntas sit ipsum ius. Et iterum ex hoc sequitur quod ius in rebus nihil est aliud quam similitudo divinæ voluntatis. Unde fit quod quidquid divinæ voluntati non consonat, ipsum ius esse non possit; et quidquid divinæ voluntati est consonum, ius ipsum sit. Quapropter quærere utrum de iure factum sit aliquid, licet alia verba sint, nihil tamen aliud quæritur quam utrum factum sit secundum quod Deus vult' (Mon., II, ii, 39-57). When Dante propounds to the Eagle, in the heaven of Jupiter, the problem of the justice of the fate of the virtuous heathen, he is rebuked with two solemn warnings, one before and one after the statement of the question. Man must not presume to fathom the unfathomable purpose of his Maker. 'What shall we say then? Is there unrighteousness with God? God forbid. For he saith to Moses, I will have mercy on whom I will have mercy, and I will have compassion on whom I will have compassion . . . Shall the thing formed say to him that formed it, Why hast thou made me thus? Hath not the potter power over the clay, of the same lump to make one vessel unto honour, and another unto dishonour?' (Romans ix, 14-21). Only in the following canto do we find the solution, which proves to be not inconsistent with the human idea of right.

On earth justice is possible only under a universal monarchy: this is shown by the strife among kings, when there is no Emperor to control them. Cf. Convivio, IV, iv, 1-44. It is fitting, then, that a fearful arraignment of the sovereigns ruling in 1300 should be uttered by the Imperial Eagle. 'Et vidi, et audivi vocem unius aquilæ volantis per medium cæli, dicentis voce magna: Væ, væ, væ habitantibus in terra' (Rev. viii, 13). The passage reminds one of Sordello's famous poem on the death of Blacatz, and also of the series of portraits in the Valley of the Princes, in Purgatorio VII. 'And another book was opened, which is the book of life: and the dead were judged out of those things which were written in the books, according to their works' (Rev. xx, 12). Thus the living kings are judged by the Eagle — those Christian kings whose record is such as to deserve rebuke even from the heathen. Contrasted with them is the Eagle itself, whose single voice — a compound of all the voices of all the just — symbolizes the unity of justice and the perfect harmony of the righteous. Such concord no pen ever described before.

2. Che is the object of facevan in l. 3. — Frui (a Latin infinitive used as a noun), 'fruition.'

7. Testeso, 'now.'

9. Compreso, 'grasped.' — Cf. 1 Cor. ii, 9: 'Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man . . .'

E sonar nella voce ed 'io' e 'mio,'
 Quand' era nel concetto 'noi' e 'nostro.'
 E cominciò: 'Per esser giusto e pio

CANTO XX

ARGUMENT

By way of answer to Dante's question in the preceding canto, we now find illustrated the possibility of salvation for a virtuous man living in pagan times. 'Invincible' (that is, insuperable, inevitable) ignorance is not an absolute bar: cf. Summa Theologiæ, Prima Secundæ, Qu. lxxvi, Art. 2. Often, says St. Thomas, has grace been extended to the worthy but otherwise unenlightened: 'Multis gentilium facta fuit revelatio de Christo. . . . Sibylla etiam prænuntiavit quædam de Christo. . . . Si qui tamen salvati fuerunt quibus revelatio non fuit facta, non fuerunt salvati absque fide Mediatoris. Quia etsi non habuerunt fidem explicitam, habuerunt tamen fidem implicitam in divina providentia, credentes Deum esse liberatorem hominum secundum modos sibi placitos et secundum quod aliquibus veritatem cognoscentibus ipse revelasset' (Summa Theologiæ, Secunda Secundæ, Qu. ii, Art. 7). The Commedia, however, affords only two examples: that of Cato in Purgatorio I, and, in the present canto, that of Ripheus (or, better, Rhipeus), an inconspicuous character in the Æneid. Nowhere, before Dante, do we find any suggestion that this Trojan prince attained Heaven, nor that he was of particular importance. Virgil mentions his name, with those of other Trojans, in Æn., II, 339 and 395. In Æn., II, 426-427, he adds a brief description:

'Cadit et Ripheus, justissimus unus
Qui fuit in Teucris, et servantissimus æqui.'

Nothing more. But these words evidently made a profound impression on Dante, and led him to conjecture that such devotion to justice must have been a result of grace — of that divine plan which no created mind can penetrate. The upright heathen, who has made the most of his natural endowments, is met by grace, which moves him to love good above everything else, and finally reveals to him the essential truth of salvation through Christ. The choice of such a minor personage as Ripheus emphasizes the mystery of God's predestination. On the other hand, Ripheus was a Trojan, a representative of that noble stock from which the

Romans sprang. And among the Trojans he was 'the most righteous of all, and the strictest observer of justice.'

Quite different is the case of the just Emperor Trajan, who, in Christian times, died a pagan, but, in response to the prayer of St. Gregory the Great, was allowed to emerge from the lower world (where conversion is impossible) and resume his body for a little while — long enough to embrace the true faith and secure a place in Heaven. A reference to this widely current legend occurs in Purgatorio X, 73-76. Trajan's redemption is an example of the efficacy of saintly intercession. The effect of petition in one's own behalf is illustrated by a Biblical character, King Hezekiah. We are to understand, however, that in all such instances God's will is not altered, the prayer itself being foreordained.

Grouped with the three princes already mentioned are David, chosen by God to be ruler over his people, William the Good, the just king of Sicily, and the Emperor Constantine, who exemplifies the doctrine that the evil consequences of a well meant act do not constitute guilt for the doer. Of these six foremost champions of justice, two are ancient Hebrews, three belong to classical antiquity, and one is a modern. These spirits form the Eagle's eye: David is the pupil, and the other five make up the eyebrow. The curve in which the latter are arranged is evidently a semicircle, although the poet calls it cerchio and tondo. In the description of this company we find a sort of formal symmetry that reminds us of the architectural structure of lines 25-63 in Purgatorio XII, where are pictured the carvings on the floor of the terrace of Pride: in our canto lines 37-72 fall into six sections of six verses each, and the second tercet of every section begins with 'Ora conosce.'

The Eagle, in this canto, is responsible for three very striking figures: the murmur of countless voices rising from the bird's body up through the neck, like the sound of many waters, until it takes the form of speech in the beak; the silence of the single voice of the bird, followed by a chorus of the individual souls that compose it, even as the disappearance of the sun introduces the great host of stars, which shine with its light; the satisfaction of the Eagle in the completion of its divine message — a satisfaction compared to that of the lark, which flies singing into the sky, and then suddenly stops, sated with the sweetness of its own note. This last simile goes back to the Provençal poet Bernart de Ventadorn:

'Quant vei la lauzeta mover
De ioi sas alas contra l rai

Que s'oblida e s laissa cazer
 Per la doussor qu' al cor li vai' . . .

Tor. cites a close imitation of these lines by an Italian who wrote shortly before Dante, a certain Bondie Diotaiuti. Izaak Walton, in the Complete Angler (Little, Brown & Co., 1898, p. 11), gives a different explanation of the lark's silence: 'As first the Lark, when she means to rejoice, to cheer herself and those that hear her, she then quits the earth and sings as she ascends higher into the air; and, having ended her heavenly employment, grows then mute and sad to think she must descend to the dull earth, which she would not touch but for necessity.' — For a few other examples of lost souls saved by prayer, see A. Graf, Miti, leggende e superstizioni del medio evo, 1892-93, I, 256.

Quando colui che tutto il mondo alluma
 Dell' emisperio nostro sì discende
 Che il giorno d' ogni parte si consuma,
 Lo ciel, che sol di lui prima s' accende,
 Subitamente si rifà parvente 5
 Per molte luci, in che una risplende.
 E quest' atto del ciel mi venne a mente,
 Come il segno del mondo e de' suoi duci
 Nel benedetto rostro fu tacente;
 Però che tutte quelle vive luci, 10

CANTO XXI

ARGUMENT

THE sphere of the cold planet, Saturn, symbolizes the spiritual state of contemplative minds. Here Dante encounters an atmosphere of monastic discipline. His eagerness to penetrate the secret of predestination is kindly but firmly checked. No song is heard. His beauteous guide refrains from smiling. According to the Pseudo-Dionysius, the highest contemplation ends in silence, without words or concepts (G. Busnelli, Il concetto e l'ordine del 'Paradiso' dantesco, II, 1912, 91). The Rule of St. Benedict admonishes us to rise to glory by the Jacob's Ladder of humility, two of whose twelve steps are silence and the mortification of laughter (Busnelli, II, 92-93). The silence of the souls and the seriousness of Beatrice are, it is true, artistically turned to double account by the author, who wishes to create a suggestion of loveliness beyond anything hitherto conceived. We have seen the brightness and swiftness of the lights increase from sphere to sphere; at this point the absence of description serves to convey the impression of a still higher degree of intensity.

Corresponding to the Cross in Mars and the Eagle in Jupiter, we find in Saturn a Ladder of golden light, the emblem of Contemplation, stretching upward farther than the eye can follow — such a ladder as Jacob once saw. 'And he dreamed, and behold a ladder set upon the earth, and the top of it reached to heaven: and behold the angels of God ascending and descending on it' (Gen. xxviii, 12). A similar ladder adorns the gown of Lady Philosophy in the De Consolatione Philosophiæ of Boethius (I, Pr. i). In the fragmentary Old Provençal Bocci — probably through an error in reading the Latin text — the figures climbing the rungs are called birds; and by an odd coincidence Dante likens to birds the bright spirits that come swarming down the steps to meet him. Foremost among them is the stern reformer and famous doctor of the Church, Peter Damian.

This Peter, born in Ravenna in 1007, came of a family so poor that he was abandoned by his mother. As a child he tended pigs until he was rescued and sent to school by his brother Damian, then Archdeacon of Ravenna. In gratitude he afterwards named himself 'Damiani,' or Damian's. Having made good use of his opportunities, he won fame and wealth as a teacher in his native city. But he soon sickened of the corruption of the world, especially of the clergy, and withdrew in 1037 to the Benedictine monastery of Santa Croce di Fonte Avellana on a mountainside in Umbria. There he preached and practised the strictest asceticism. Some twenty years later he reluctantly became Cardinal and Bishop of Ostia, and was sent on several important missions; as soon as possible, however, he returned to his cloister. He died in 1072. Among his writings, — the most important of which are concerned with the reform of Church discipline, — is one entitled De Quadragesima sive de Quadraginta duabus Hebræorum Mansionibus, an allegorical treatise which Dante may have known.

Another saintly Peter of Ravenna was Pietro degli Onesti, who called himself and was universally called 'Petrus Peccans,' or Peter the Sinner. He founded in 1096 the monastery of Santa Maria in Porto, where his grave is still to be seen. Apparently there was in Dante's time some confusion of these two Peters; so that the poet thought it worth while to correct the error by putting into the mouth of the earlier one an explicit statement of the distinction. 'I, Peter Damian,' he says, 'was in Holy Cross, and Peter the Sinner was at St. Mary's.' The verses in question (ll. 121-123) have, however, been understood in various other ways and are not yet entirely clear; in line 122 there is a well authenticated reading fui instead of fu, and editors punctuate the lines differently, according to their interpretation. The matter is made more complicated by the fact that Peter Damian also assumed, while a monk, the epithet 'sinner.'

See E. Anzalone, Dante e Pier Damiano, 1903; cf. Giorn. dant., XII, 24. — For Peter Damian's De Quadragesima, see P. Amaducci, La fonte della Divina Commedia, 2 vols., 1911; cf. Giorn. dant., XIX, 23. Amaducci unsuccessfully tries to show that Dante derived the whole general scheme of his journey from Peter Damian's work. — For discussions of the debated lines, see Tor., Scart., and Bull., X, 359-360.

CANTO XXII

ARGUMENT

THE deafening cry of reprobation and prophecy of punishment, with which the preceding canto ends, leaves us in startled and wondering suspense, much as we were left at the close of the twentieth canto of the Purgatorio, when the mountain shook and all the souls raised a shout of thanksgiving at the release of Statius. Dante and his readers are, however, soon reassured; and presently more shining spirits appear, brightest among them the great founder of the Benedictine order. St. Benedict's career is related by Gregory the Great in his Dialogi, II. He lived from 480 to 543. Born in Nursia, he was educated in Rome, but at the age of fourteen withdrew to the wilderness, where he dwelt for three years in a cave. His mature life was devoted to the conversion of pagans and the direction of his busy and scholarly order.

Between Saturn and the fixed stars is a distance greater than any hitherto traversed by Dante. The long, swift ascent symbolizes the uplifting of the soul by contemplation. In the eighth sphere, which contains countless heavenly bodies, the poet enters the constellation of Gemini, under whose influence he was born. Thus, in a spiritual sense, he returns, like Plato's departed, to his native star: cf. Par. IV, 52-57. At this point of his journey, he is told to look back,

'Chè suole a riguardar giovare altrui.' — Purg. IV, 54.

Beneath him are the sun, the moon, and all the planets, and, lowest, our little earth, so tiny that its pettiness makes him smile. Once St. Benedict, standing at a window, had a similar vision, suddenly beholding the whole world collected, as it were, under one sunbeam (Gregory the Great, Dialogi, II, xxxv).

A closer parallel to Dante's experience, however, is to be found in Cicero's De Republica, VI, where Scipio, in a dream, is lifted to the skies. 'Erant autem eæ stellæ, quas numquam ex hoc loco vidimus, et eæ magnitudines omnium, quas esse numquam suspicati sumus, ex quibus erat ea minima, quæ ultima a cælo, citima terris, luce lucebat aliena. Stellarum autem globi terræ magnitudinem facile vincebant. Jam ipsa terra ita mihi parva visa est, ut me imperii nostri . . . pæniteret' (De Rep., VI, xvi). He sees the starry sphere, the seven planets (including sun and moon), and the earth. 'Omnis enim terra, quæ colitur a vobis,' says the shade of his ancestor, 'angusta verticibus, lateribus latior, parva quædam insula est, circumfusa illo mari, quod Atlanticum, quod magnum, quem Oceanum appellatis in terris, qui tamen tanto nomine quam sit parvus vides. Ex his ipsis cultis notisque terris num aut tuum aut cuiusquam vestrum nomen vel Caucasum hunc, quem cernis, transcendere potuit vel illum Gangem tranatare?' (De Rep., VI, xx). So Dante sees the whole inhabited continent, — short from north to south, but broad from east to west, — exposed 'from hills to river mouths,' from Caucasus to Ganges and Ebro. This, then, is 'the little threshing-floor that makes us so ferocious'! Like a threshing-floor our earth appeared to Alexander the Great, when, according to an ancient legend, he had himself carried up to the sky by eagles or griffins. Equally insignificant it seemed to Boethius (Cons., II, Metr. vii, 1-6):

'Quicumque solam mente præcipiti petit,
Summumque credit gloriam,
Late patentes ætheris cernat plagas,
Arctumque terrarum situm:
Brevem replere non valentis ambitum
Pudebit aucti nominis.'

In Canto XXVII, ll. 76-87, Dante describes a second downward look from the same constellation, with which he has been revolving. It would appear from this passage that during his first observation he reached the meridian of Jerusalem, the centre of the inhabited earth. The phrase 'while I was circling with the eternal Twins' indicates that this first gaze lasts a considerable length of time. When it began, he was presumably in line with central Asia, and saw the whole of that region, as far east as the mouth of the Ganges; when it ended, he was on the meridian of the Holy City, and could see the entire westerly stretch of land to the Atlantic. If the sun, too, had been in Gemini, he could have taken in the whole continent (which is 180° broad) at one sweep, from a position on the line of Jerusalem; but inasmuch as the sun was in Aries, some 40° west of the observer, the part of the earth illumined by its light did not coincide with Dante's field of vision.

An early Italian version of the story of Alexander's ascent to the skies, in a cage carried by four griffins, is to be found on p. 159 of I nobili fatti di Alessandro Magno, edited by G. Grion, 1872. This and other fabulous tales of Alexander — widely current in the Middle Ages — hark back, in the main, to the Greek romance which goes under the name of Callisthenes.

78. Sacca is a fem. plural of sacco.

79. Ma, 'why!' — Si tolle, 'rebels.'

80. Frutto, 'income' derived from misuse of Church moneys.

82. Guarda, 'has in keeping.'

83. 'Belongs to the people who ask in God's name' — to the worthy poor.

85. Blanda, 'soft,' weak.

86. Giù: on earth.

88. Acts iii, 6: 'Then Peter said, Silver and gold have I none.'

90. Francesco: St. Francis of Assisi (XI).

93. Del bianco etc., 'the white turned dark,' like a withered flower. Cf. Peire d' Alvernhe, Rosshinol, el seu repaire, 55-57:

'Que tost chài

95. Più is to be connected with mirabile in l. 96. — 'And the sea fleeing': Exod. xiv, 21-29.

Mirabile a veder, che qui il soccorso.
 Così mi disse, ed indi si ricolse
 Al suo collegio, e il collegio si strinse;
 Poi come turbo tutto in su s' accolse.
 La dolce Donna dietro a lor mi pinse 100
 Con un sol cenno su per quella scala,
 Sì sua virtù la mia natura vinse;
 Nè mai quaggiù, dove si monta e cala
 Naturalmente, fu sì ratto moto
 Ch' agguagliar si potesse alla mia ala. 105
 S' io torni mai, lettore, a quel devoto
 Trionfo, per lo quale io piango spesso
 Le mie peccata, e il petto mi percoto,
 Tu non avresti in tanto tratto e messo
 Nel foco il dito, in quanto io vidi il segno 110
 Che segue il Tauro, e fui dentro da esso.
 O gloriose stelle, o lume pregno
 Di gran virtù, dal quale io riconosco
 Tutto, qual che si sia, lo mio ingegno!
 Con voi nasceva e s' ascondeva vosco 115

96. The turning back of the Jordan and the parting of the Red Sea were examples of divine intervention 'more wonderful to behold than succor here.' Therefore we must not despair. Cf. Ps. cxiv (Vulg. cxiii), 3 and 5: 'The sea saw it, and fled: Jordan was driven back.' . . . 'What ailed thee, O thou sea, that thou fleddest? thou Jordan, that thou wast driven back?'

98. Si strinse, 'closed together.'

99. Turbo, 'whirlwind,' cyclone.

106. S' io torni mai, 'as I hope ever to return.' — Lettore: Scart. notes that this is the last of Dante's sixteen apostrophes to the 'reader.'

108. Cf. Luke xviii, 13: 'the publican . . . smote upon his breast (percutiebat pectus suum).'

109-110. 'Thou wouldst not have drawn out and put thy finger in the fire so quickly as I saw the sign.' The order of the two acts is inverted (as in II, 23-24) to give the impression of simultaneousness. — Segno: Gemini (the Twins), the sign that follows Taurus (the Bull) in the zodiac. Dante has risen to the heaven of the fixed stars.

113. Dal quale io riconosco, 'to which I owe': cf. XXIX, 59, XXXI, 84. — Gemini, the house of Mercury, bestows a taste for learning.

115-117. The sun was rising and setting with Gemini when Dante first

Quegli ch' è padre d' ogni mortal vita,

 Sì che il tuo cor, quantunque può, giocondo 130
 S' appresenti alla turba trionfante,
 Che lieta vien per questo etera tondo.'

breathed 'the Tuscan air': he was born, then, between May 21 and June 21. — Vosco, 'with you.'

121-123. Entering upon the third stage of his celestial journey, Dante invokes the aid of his native constellation for the 'difficult pass' that is drawing him on — namely, the description of the higher heavens. This appeal, one of Dante's most charming inventions, stands in line with the preludes in I, 1-36, and X, 1-27. Here, however, he calls, not on Apollo, but on his own stars.

125. Dei = devi.

126. Luci, 'eyes.'

127. T' inlei, 'enter into it' (the salute). The verb is made by Dante from the pronoun lei: cf. inluia in IX, 73; intuassi and immii in IX, 81.

129. Fei = feci.

132. Etera, 'ether.'

137. L' ha per meno, 'holds it cheapest.' — Altro: 'other things' than 'this globe.'

Chiamar si puote veramente probò.
 Vidi la figlia di Latona incensa
 Senza quell' ombra che mi fu cagione 140
 Per che già la credetti rara e densa.
 L' aspetto del tuo nato, Iperione,
 Quivi sostenni, e vidi com' si move
 Circa e vicino a lui, Maia e Dione!
 Quindi m' apparve il temperar di Giove 145
 Tra il padre e il figlio; e quindi mi fu chiaro
 Il variar che fanno di lor dove.
 E tutti e sette mi si dimostraro
 Quanto son grandi, e quanto son veloci,
 E come sono in distante riparo. 150
 L' aiuola che ci fa tanto feroci,
 Volgendom' io con gli eterni Gemelli,
 Tutta m' apparve dai colli alle foci.
 Poscia rivolsi gli occhi agli occhi belli.

138. Probo, 'righteous.'

139. 'Latona's daughter' is Diana, the moon.

140. The upper side of the moon (Dante says) has no dark spots.

141. See II, 49-60.

142. Hyperion is often called by ancient poets the father of the sun. See Met., IV, 192: 'Hyperione nate' (cf. 241).

143. Com' si move, 'what motion there is,' how the planets move.

144. Lui: the sun. — Maia and Dione are probably to be taken as vocatives like Iperione in l. 142. These persons are invoked, because, like Hyperion, they are parents of gods whose names are borne by heavenly bodies: Maia is the mother of Mercury; Dione, the mother of Venus. Cf. Theb., II, 1 ('Maia satus') and Æn., I, 297 ('Maia genitum'); Par. VIII, 7.

145. Temperar: see XVIII, 68.

146. Padre: Saturn. — Figlio: Mars.

150. Riparo, 'abode.'

151. Aiuola, 'little threshing-floor': the inhabited part of the earth.

CANTO XXIII

ARGUMENT

As the ecstatic dreamer approaches the confines of the material universe, he begins to catch glimpses of reality — of the true life of the world of spirit. In the eighth heaven Dante has a beautiful vision of the triumph of Christ and Mary, in the midst of the whole army of the blest, 'all the fruit harvested from the revolution of these spheres.' Their appearance is eagerly awaited by Beatrice, and greeted by her with a cry of rapture. The starry sphere is a traditional symbol of the Church; here all the elect are gathered, in company with the Apostles and the Evangelists, to whom, perhaps, this heaven especially belongs. In this borderland between the visible and the invisible universe, Jesus, the Man-God, comes to meet the upward faring soul. The rising of Christ and Mary to the Empyrean, before the waiting host, symbolizes the Ascension and the Assumption. The triumph here depicted is a counterpart of the pageant of the Church Militant in the Terrestrial Paradise. In this scene the angels, who were not redeemed by the Saviour of man, have no share. The canto ends with the triumph of St. Peter, who does not as yet rise to the Empyrean, but remains with his flock, in the place of Christ.

For the traditional identification of the eighth heaven with the Church, see G. Busnelli, Il concetto e l'ordine del 'Paradiso' dantesco, I, 1911, 118-119. The same author cites (pp. 114-116) from a commentary on the Transfiguration, by Innocent III, a passage in which Christ is described as possessing the four characteristics of the sun: brightness, impassibility, subtlety, agility. The same passage throws some light on the appropriateness of Dante's ensuing examination, by the Apostles, in the three Christian virtues. The inability of the unaided human eye to see Christ is discussed by Rabanus Maurus, St. Gregory, and others: Busnelli, I, 110-113. Christ is compared to sun, moon, and star in Rev. xxi, 23, xxii, 16. — The superiority of the Apostles to other men is declared by St. Thomas in his Commentary on Romans viii, 5, and Ephesians i, 3. While others may have done greater things, the Apostles did what they did with greater love, and so achieved greater merit. In Mat. xix, 28, Jesus promises his followers that they 'shall sit on twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel'; and St. Thomas, in his Commentary, points out that judges must be elevated above the rest of the world. It is therefore not unlikely that Dante meant to assign to the Apostles a sphere higher than those allotted to other men. This eighth heaven, with its ecclesiastical traditions, would be a fit place for them. Here St. Peter triumphs, and here Dante is judged by Peter, James, and John. With the Apostles are probably associated the Evangelists, and also, it would seem, Adam, the man shaped by God's own hand.

Come l' augello intra l' amate fronde,
 Posato al nido dei suoi dolci nati
 La notte, che le cose ci nasconde,
 Che per veder gli aspetti disïati,
 E per trovar lo cibo onde li pasca, 5
 In che i gravi labor gli sono aggrati,
 Previene il tempo in su l' aperta frasca,
 E con ardente affetto il sole aspetta,
 Fiso guardando pur che l' alba nasca, —
 Così la Donna mia si stava eretta 10
 Ed attenta, rivolta inver la plaga
 Sotto la quale il sol mostra men fretta;
 Sî che veggendola io sospesa e vaga,
 Fecimi quale è quei che disïando
 Altro vorria, e sperando s' appaga. 15
 Ma poco fu tra uno ed altro quando,
 Del mio attender, dico, e del vedere
 Lo ciel venir più e più rischiarando.
 E Bëatrice disse: 'Ecco le schiere
 Del trionfo di Cristo, e tutto il frutto 20
 Ricolto del girar di queste spere.'
 Pareami che il suo viso ardesse tutto;
 E gli occhi avea di letizia sî pieni

 Che sotto i raggi di Cristo s' infiora?
 Quivi è la rosa in che il Verbo Divino
 Carne si fece; quivi son li gigli,
 Al cui odor'si prese il buon cammino.' 75
 Così Beatrice. Ed io, ch' a' suoi consigli
 Tutto era pronto, ancora mi rendei
 Alla battaglia dei debili cigli.
 Come a raggio di sol, che puro mei
 Per fratta nube, già prato di fiori 80
 Vider, coperti d' ombra, gli occhi miei,
 Vid' io così più turbe di splendori
 Folgorati di su di raggi ardenti,
 Senza veder principio dei fulgori.

69. Parca, 'would spare.'

70. Cf. XVIII, 21.

73. Rosa: Mary, the 'Mystic Rose,' as she is called in many sermons and hymns. Series of prayers to the Virgin were named rosaria. — Verbo: Christ. — Cf. John i, 14: 'And the Word was made flesh.'

74. Gigli: the Apostles. In his unfinished commentary on Isaiah, St. Thomas discusses the resemblance of saints to lilies: see G. Busnelli, Il concetto e l'ordine del 'Paradiso' dantesco, I, 1911, 128-129.

75. A, 'by.' — See 2 Cor. ii, 14: 'Now thanks be unto God, which always causeth us to triumph in Christ, and maketh manifest the savour of his knowledge by us in every place' — 'odorem notitiæ suæ manifestat per nos.'

78. Cigli: 'brows,' for 'eyes.'

79-81. 'As ere now my eyes, covered by a shadow, have seen a flowery meadow under a sunbeam that streams clear through a rifted cloud': a beautiful simile to describe the throngs of flowerlike souls illumined from above by the light of Christ, who has risen again to the Empyrean, that Dante's eyes may not be blinded by his brightness.

84. Principio, 'source': Christ.

O benigna Virtù che sì gl' imprenti, 85

 Che lassù vince, come quaggiù vinse,
 Per entro il cielo scese una facella
 Formata in cerchio a guisa di corona, 95
 E cinsela, e girossi intorno ad ella.
 Qualunque melodia più dolce suona
 Quaggiù, e più a sè l' anima tira,
 Parrebbe nube che squarciata tuona,
 Comparata al sonar di quella lira 100
 Onde si coronava il bel zaffiro,
 Del quale il ciel più chiaro s' inzaffira.

85. Gl' imprenti, 'dost mark them.'

88. Nome: the mention of Mary in l. 73. Among the bright lights, hers is now the greatest (l. 90).

91. Come, 'when.' — Luci, 'eyes.' — The subject of dipinse is the phrase in l. 92.

92. Il quale e il quanto, 'the quality and bigness.'

94. The 'torch' is the Archangel Gabriel, the messenger of the Annunciation. He now forms a circling halo around the head of the Virgin.

99. Cf. Met., XII, 51-52:

'qualemve sonum, cum Iuppiter atras
 Increpuit nubes, extrema tonitrua reddunt.'

101. The 'sapphire' is Mary. This gem, besides being precious and beautiful, possesses a beneficent power.

103. Giro, 'encircle.'

104. Ventre, 'womb.'

106. Mentre, 'until': until Mary shall rise to the Empyrean, following Christ.

Che seguirai tuo figlio e farai dia
 Più la spera suprema, perchè gli entre.'
 Così la circolata melodia
 Si sigillava, e tutti gli altri lumi 110
 Facean sonar lo nome di Maria.
 Lo réal manto di tutti i volumi
 Del mondo, che più ferve e più s' avviva
 Nell' alito di Dio e nei costumi,
 Avea sopra di noi l' interna riva 115
 Tanto distante che la sua parvenza
 Là dov' io era ancor non m' appariva.
 Però non ebber gli occhi miei potenza
 Di seguitar la coronata fiamma,
 Che si levò appresso sua Semenza. 120
 E come il fantolin, che in ver la mamma
 Tende le braccia poi che il latte prese, —
 Per l' animo che in fin di fuor s' infiamma, —
 Ciascun di quei candori in su si stese
 Con la sua fiamma sì che l' alto affetto 125
 Ch' egli aveano a Maria mi fu palese.
 Indi rimaser lì nel mio cospetto,

108. Perchè gli entre (= vi entri), 'by entering it.'

110. Si sigillava, 'sealed itself,' i. e., ended.

112. 'The royal cloak of all the revolutions of the world' is the Empyrean, which surrounds all the revolving spheres. For volumi, cf. XXVI, 119, XXVIII, 14; also Met., II, 71.

114. Costumi (sc., di Dio), 'ways.'

115. Interna riva, 'inner bank.' Even the lowest edge of the Empyrean is far beyond the reach of Dante's eye.

120. Semenza: Christ, the 'seed' or child of Mary.

123. 'Because of the spirit (of grateful love) which breaks even into external flame' — which, in default of words, finds expression in a gesture. — This figure reveals the same tender recollection of family life that we find in Dante's other references to children.

124. All the bright souls — the 'whitenesses' — extend their flames upward after Mary.

' Regina cæli ' cantando sì dolce
 Che mai da me non si partì il diletto.
 Oh quanta è l' ubertà che si soffolce 130
 In quell' arche ricchissime, che foro
 A seminar quaggiù buone bobolce!
 Quivi si vive e gode del tesoro
 Che s' acquistò piangendo nell' esilio
 Di Babilon, dove si lasciò l' oro. 135
 Quivi trionfa, sotto l' alto Filio
 Di Dio e di Maria, di sua vittoria,
 E con l' antico e col nuovo concilio,
 Colui che tien le chiavi di tal gloria.

128. Regina cæli: an antiphon sung in the office of the Virgin after Easter. 'O Queen of Heaven, rejoice, for he whom thou wert worthy to bear rose as he promised; pray to God for us. Hallelujah!'

130. Ubertà, 'plenty.' — Si soffolce, 'is stored.'

131. Arche, 'bins': the blessed souls.

132. Bobolce, 'husbandmen.' They are now filled with the good which they sowed on earth. Cf. Galatians vi, 7: 'whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap.'

134-135. The 'exile of Babylon' is the earthly life. Cf. Ps. cxxxvii (Vulg. cxxxvi), 1: 'By the rivers of Babylon, there we sat down, yea, we wept, when we remembered Zion.' — On earth 'they forsook gold,' following the precept of Jesus in Mat. xix, 21: 'If thou wilt be perfect, go and sell that thou hast, and give to the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven.' — Some editors, in l. 135, read egli lasciò and make St. Peter the subject of ll. 133-135, as well as 136-139.

137. Di sua vittoria, 'by his victory.'

138. In company with the souls of the Old and the New Covenant. Prophets and Apostles preached the same faith.

139. Colui (St. Peter) is the subject of trionfa in l. 136. — Cf. Mat. xvi, 19: 'And I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven.'

CANTO XXIV

ARGUMENT

IN the course of the celestial journey, God is revealed through his works, through Christian doctrine, and finally through immediate contemplation of himself. 'For now we see through a glass, darkly; but then face to face: now I know in part; but then I shall know even as also I am known. And now abideth faith, hope, charity, these three' (1 Cor. xiii, 12-13). The full comprehension of these fundamental Christian virtues precedes the direct vision of God; and therefore the poet represents himself as passing an examination in them, in the eighth sphere, before seeing, in the ninth, the Lord in his relation to the angels, and, in the Empyrean, the triune Divinity in his essence. It is fitting that the glorification of these virtues should proceed from a living man, inasmuch as they are essentially human qualities: the blest retain Love, intensified and purified; but with them Faith has become knowledge, and Hope has been exchanged for fulfilment.

Dante's examiners are St. Peter, St. James, and St. John, the disciples most closely associated with Jesus, and the traditional representatives of the virtues he preached. The fitness of Peter and John to stand for Faith and Love is obvious; less clear is the special appropriateness of the assignment of Hope to James, which will be discussed in connection with Canto XXV. After his colloquy, in this sphere, with the Apostles and Adam, Dante converses only with his guides, Beatrice and St. Bernard.

Throughout the exposition of Faith, in this canto, question and answer follow one another as in a catechism, and Dante compares himself to a candidate undergoing the test required for a doctor's degree. He offers as a description of Faith the statement of St. Paul in Hebrews xi, 1: 'Now faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen.' This formula, says St. Thomas, although some say that it is not a definition, contains all the elements of one: 'licet quidam dicant prædicta Apostoli verba non esse fidei definitionem, tamen, si quis recte consideret, omnia ex quibus fides potest definiri in prædicta descriptione tanguntur' (Summa Theologiæ, Secunda Secundæ, Qu. iv, Art. 1).

And he adds: 'Si quis ergo in formam definitionis huiusmodi verba reducere velit, potest dicere quod fides est habitus mentis, qua inchoatur vita aeterna in nobis, faciens intellectum assentire non apparentibus.'

But why, demands St. Peter, did St. Paul call Faith first a 'substance' (sustanzia) and then an 'evidence' (argomento)? The eternal Heavenly life, replies Dante, is beyond the perception of mortals, and, for them, exists only in their belief; hence Faith, from the human point of view, is the material, or substance, of which the hoped-for joys consist. Moreover, while in ordinary matters we argue from proved facts, in religion we use as our basis for further reasoning a belief; and so Faith, in theological questions, takes the place which in worldly syllogisms is taken by evidence.

For the association, by Biblical commentators, of the three theological virtues with Peter, James, and John, see G. Busnelli, Il concetto e l'ordine del 'Paradiso' dantesco, I, 1911, 153-156.

'O sodalizio eletto alla gran cena
 Del benedetto Agnello, il qual vi ciba
 Sì che la vostra voglia è sempre piena,
 Se per grazia di Dio questi preliba
 Di quel che cade della vostra mensa, 5
 Prima che morte tempo gli prescriba,
 Ponete mente all' affezione immensa,
 E roratelo alquanto! voi bevete
 Sempre del fonte onde vien quel ch' ei pensa.'
 Così Beatrice; e quelle anime liete 10
 Si fero spere sopra fissi poli,

1. Sodalizio, 'company.' — Cf. Luke xiv, 16, and Mat. xxii, 14: 'A certain man made a great supper, and bade many' — 'many are called, but few are chosen.'

2. Cf. Rev. xix, 9: 'Blessed are they which are called unto the marriage supper of the Lamb.' The Paschal Lamb of the Hebrews, slain and eaten at Easter time, became a symbol of Christ.

4. Questi preliba, 'this man (Dante) foretastes.'

8. Roratelo, 'bedew him'; give him a few drops from the fount of Truth, upon which his thought is bent.

11. It is evident from l. 30 and from XXV, 14, that spere means 'circles,' rings of spirits dancing in a round, or carol.

Fiammando forte a guisa di comete.
 E come cerchi in tempra d' orïuoli

 Mente danzando, della sua ricchezza
 Mi si facean stimar veloci e lente.
 Di quella ch' io notai di più bellezza
 Vid' io uscire un foco sì felice 20
 Che nullo vi lasciò di più chiarezza.
 E tre fiata intorno di Beatrice
 Si volse con un canto tanto divo
 Che la mia fantasia noi mi ridice;
 Però salta la penna, e non lo scrivo, 25
 Chè l' imagine nostra a cotai pieghe —
 Non che il parlare — è troppo color vivo.
 'O santa suora mia, che sì ne preghe
 Devota, per lo tuo ardente affetto
 Da quella bella spera mi disleghe.' 30
 Poscia, fermato il foco benedetto,

13. Cerchi, 'wheels.' — Tempra, 'escapement.'

15. Che voli, '(seems) to fly.'

16-18. The pace of the circling rings of dancers is a measure of their 'wealth' of gladness. — An adverb like differentemente was originally a phrase made up of an adjective and the ablative mente; its composite nature long continued to be felt.

19. Quella: sc., carola.

26-27. 'For our imagination — not to say our speech — is too bright a color for such folds.' Human speech and even human memory are not profound enough to describe or retain an impression of such depth of holiness. The metaphor is taken from the technique of painting (in V. N., XXXV, Dante appears as an artist): pictures, in our poet's day, consisted mainly of faces and garments, the latter falling in folds, and these folds presented the deepest shades; skill was required to find a color dark enough to portray them, while preserving the purity of tone the Tuscans loved.

28. Ne preghe = ci preghi.

30. Mi disleghe, 'thou unloosest me' from the round.

31. Poscia: first (ll. 22-23) the shining spirit circles about Beatrice and sings, 'then' it stops and speaks the words just cited.

Alla mia Donna dirizzò lo spiro,
 Che favellò così com' io ho detto.
 Ed ella: 'O luce eterna del gran viro
 A cui nostro Signor lasciò le chiavi, 35
 Ch' ei portò giù, di questo gaudio miro,
 Tenta costui dei punti lievi e gravi,
 Come ti piace, intorno della fede,
 Per la qual tu su per lo mare andavi.
 S' egli ama bene, e bene spera, e crede, 40
 Non t' è occulto, perchè il viso hai quivi
 Dov' ogni cosa dipinta si vede.
 Ma perchè questo regno ha fatto civi
 Per la verace fede, a gloriarla
 Di lei parlare è buon ch' a lui arrivi.' 45
 Sì come il baccellier s' arma, — e non parla
 Fin che il maëstro la question propone, —
 Per approvarla, e non per terminarla, —
 Così m' armava io d' ogni ragione,
 Mentre ch' ella dicea, per esser presto 50
 A tal querente ed a tal professione.
 'Di', buon Cristiano, fatti manifesto:

35. Cf. XXIII, 139.

36. 'Of this wondrous delight' depends on 'the keys' in l. 35.

37. Tenta, 'test,' examine.

39. Through faith Peter 'walked on the water, to go to Jesus': Mat. xiv, 25-

29.

41. Viso, 'sight.' — Quivi, 'there': in God.

43. Civi, 'citizens.'

44. A gloriarla, 'in order to glorify it' (faith).

45. 'It is well that he (Dante) be called upon to speak of it.' Arrivi is equivalent to tocchi, 'be fall.'

46. To receive the degree of Doctor in Theology, a bachelor had to discuss a thesis propounded by a Master. — Cf. 1 Peter, iii, 15.

48. The candidate 'arms himself to argue' the question, 'not to decide it': that belongs to the Master.

51. Querente, 'questioner.'

Fede che è?' Ond' io levai la fronte
 In quella luce onde spirava questo;
 Poi mi volsi a Beatrice, ed essa pronte 55
 Sembianze femmi, perchè io spandessi
 L' acqua di fuor del mio interno fonte.
 'La grazia che mi dà ch' io mi confessi,'
 Comincia' io, 'dall' alto primipilo,
 Faccia li miei concetti bene espressi!' 60
 E seguitai: 'Come il verace stilo
 Ne scrisse, patre, del tuo caro frate,
 Che mise Roma teco nel buon filo,
 Fede è sustanzia di cose sperate,
 Ed argomento delle non parventi; 65
 E questa pare a me sua quiditate.'
 Allora udii: 'Dirittamente senti,
 Se bene intendi perchè la ripose
 Tra le sustanzie, e poi tra gli argomenti.'
 Ed io appresso: 'Le profonde cose 70
 Che mi largiscon qui la lor parvenza
 Agli occhi di laggiù son sì ascose
 Che l' esser loro v' è in sola credenza,

71. 'Which here (in Heaven) allow themselves to be seen by me.'

73. 'That their existence is there to be found only in belief.'

E però di sustanzia prende intenza; 75
 E da questa credenza ci conviene
 Sillogizzar senza avere altra vista;
 Però intenza di argomento tiene.'
 Allora udii: 'Se quantunque s' acquista
 Giù per dottrina fosse così inteso, 80
 Non gli avria loco ingegno di sofista.'
 Così spirò da quell' amore acceso;
 Indi soggiunse: 'Assai bene è trascorsa
 D' esta moneta già la lega e il peso;
 Ma dimmi se tu l' hai nella tua borsa.' 85
 Ond' io: 'Sì ho, sì lucida e sì tonda
 Che nel suo conio nulla mi s' inforsa.'
 Appresso uscì della luce profonda
 Che lì splendeva: 'Questa cara gioia,
 Sopra la quale ogni virtù si fonda, 90
 Onde ti venne?' Ed io: 'La larga ploia
 Dello Spirito Santo, ch' è diffusa
 In su le vecchie e in su le nuove cuoia,
 È sillogismo che la m' ha conchiusa
 Acutamente sì che in verso d' ella 95
 Ogni dimostrazion mi pare ottusa.'

75. Prende intenza, 'it assumes the concept': it falls into the category. Intenza is the scholastic Latin intentio, 'notion' or 'concept'; English intention has often been used in this sense.

77. Sillogizzar, 'argue.' — l'ista, 'proof.'

78. 'Therefore it contains the idea of evidence.'

81. 'The sophist's wit would have no place there.' — Gli = vi.

83. Trascorsa, 'inspected.'

Io udii poi: 'L' antica e la novella
 Proposizion che così ti conchiude,
 Perchè l' hai tu per divina favella?'
 Ed io: 'La prova che il ver mi dischiude 100
 Son l' opere seguite, a che natura
 Non scaldò ferro mai, nè battè incude.'
 Risposto fummi: 'Di', chi t' assicura
 Che quell' opere fosser? Quel medesimo
 Che vuol provarsi, non altri, il ti giura.' 105
 'Se il mondo si rivolse al Cristianesimo,'
 Diss' io, 'senza miracoli, quest' uno
 È tal che gli altri non sono il centesimo;
 Chè tu entrasti povero e digiuno
 In campo a seminar la buona pianta, 110
 Che fu già vite, ed ora è fatta pruno.'
 Finito questo, l' alta Corte santa
 Risonò per le spere un: 'Dio laudamo,'
 Nella melode che lassù si canta.
 E quel baron, che sì di ramo in ramo 115
 Esaminando già tratto m' avea
 Che all' ultime fronde appressavamo,

98. Proposizion, 'premise': the two Testaments are the premises from which the conclusion is deduced.

101. Opere seguite, 'works that followed': the miracles, which cannot be explained as products of nature.

104-105. Quel medesimo etc., 'the very thing that is to be proved (the revealed Truth), and naught else, is thy voucher for it.' St. Peter, wishing, as examiner, to draw out Dante more fully, tells him that he is arguing in a circle.

106-108. If the world was converted to Christianity without the miracles related in the Bible, this conversion was itself a far greater miracle, and quite sufficient proof of divine intervention. The argument is taken from St. Augustine, De Civitate Dei, XXII, v: 'hoc nobis unum grande miraculum sufficit, quod . . . terrarum orbis sine ullis miraculis credidit.' St. Thomas also, De Veritate Catholicæ Fidei, I, vi, discourses on the miracle of the conversion of the world to Christianity.

113. Spere, 'rings.' — Dio laudamo: cf. Purg. IX, 140.

115. Baron, 'lord': St. Peter.

Ricominciò: 'La grazia che donnea
 Con la tua mente, la bocca t' aperse
 Infino a qui, com' aprir si dovea, 120
 Sì ch' io approvo ciò che fuori emerse;
 Ma or conviene esprimer quel che credi,
 Ed onde alla credenza tua s' offerse.'
 'O santo padre, spirito che vedi
 Ciò che credesti sì che tu vincesti 125
 Ver lo sepolcro i più giovani piedi,'
 Comincia' io, 'tu vuoi ch' io manifesti
 La forma qui del pronto creder mio,
 Ed anco la cagion di lui chiedesti.
 Ed io rispondo: Io credo in uno Iddio 130
 Solo ed eterno, che tutto il ciel move,
 Non moto, con amore e con disio.
 Ed a tal creder non ho io pur prove
 Fisice e metafisice, ma dalmi
 Anco la verità che quinci piove 135
 Per Moïse, per profeti, e per salmi,
 Per l' Evangelio, e per voi che scriveste
 Poi che l' ardente Spirto vi fece almi.

118. Donnea, 'holds amorous converse.'

121. Emerse, 'has issued.'

124-126. St. Peter now sees in God that which on earth he accepted through faith. This faith was so strong that it impelled him to enter the Sepulchre before John, although the younger disciple reached it first: John xx, 3-8. Cf. Mon., III, ix, 111-114.

128. Forma, 'essence.'

129. La cagion di lui, 'its cause.'

134. St. Thomas, Summa Theologia, Prima, Qu. ii, Art. 3, gives five physical and metaphysical proofs of the existence of God: the impossibility of explaining the world without the assumption of a first motor, of a first efficient cause, of a first necessity, of a first goodness, of a first governing intelligence. In Prima, Qu. i, Art. 5, he tells us that theology makes use of philosophy. — Dalmi = me lo dà: the subject is verità in l. 135.

136. Luke xxiv, 44: 'all things must be fulfilled, which were written in the law of Moses, and in the prophets, and in the psalms, concerning me.'

137. Voi: the Apostles.

138. Almi, 'reverend.'

E credo in tre persone eterne, e queste
 Credo una essenza sì una e sì trina 140
 Che soffera congiunto sono ed este.
 Della profonda condizion divina
 Ch' io tocco mo, la mente mi sigilla
 Più volte l' evangelica dottrina.
 Quest' è il principio; quest' è la favilla 145
 Che si dilata in fiamma poi vivace,
 E come stella in cielo in me scintilla.'
 Come il signor ch' ascolta quel che i piace,
 Da indi abbraccia il servo, gratulando
 Per la novella, tosto ch' ei si tace, 150
 Così, benedicendomi cantando,
 Tre volte cinse me, sì com' io tacqui,
 L' apostolico lume, al cui comando
 Io avea detto; sì nel dir gli piacqui!

141. Soffera, 'it admits.' We may use with 'Trinity' the verb 'are' or the verb 'is.' — Este for è is not uncommon in early Italian.

143. Mente is the object of sigilla, 'stamps.'

144. Various passages in the Bible are cited in support of the doctrine of the Trinity: Mat. xxviii, 19; 2 Cor. xiii, 14; 1 Peter i, 2; 1 John v, 7 ('For there are three that bear record in heaven, the Father, the Word, and the Holy Ghost: and these three are one').

148. I=gli: cf. Inf. XXII, 73.

152. Cinse, 'encircled.' The subject is lume in l. 153.

154. Cf. Jeremiah ix, 24: 'But let him that glorieth glory in this, that he understandeth and knoweth me, that I am the Lord.'

CANTO XXV

ARGUMENT

UNTIL the very end of his life Dante cherished, at the bottom of his heart, a hope that he might be called back to his city, to that Florence which he so loved and so reviled. Pathetic indeed is the yearning expressed in the opening lines of this canto. Some day, he thinks, his great poem may win such fame as to 'overcome the cruelty that locks him out' — 'la crudeltà che fuor mi serra.' In earlier years, addressing one of his lyrics as he sent it forth, he had said (Canzone XI, 77-79):

'Forse vedrai Fiorenza, la mia terra,
Che fuor di sè mi serra,
Vota d'amore e nuda di pietate.'

The longing to return is voiced in the Convivio, I, iii, 25-28; and the same sentiment is treated half playfully, half sadly, in the first Eclogue, 39-50.

It is fitting that a disclosure of the poet's one earthly hope should serve as prelude to a canto in which Hope is the principal theme. In this virtue he is tested by St. James, as he was tried in Faith by St. Peter; but the examination is less searching. The definition of Hope recited by Dante is that of Peter Lombard in the Sententia, III, xxvi: 'Est enim spes certa expectatio futuræ beatitudinis veniens ex Dei gratia et ex meritis præcedentibus.' 'Sine meritis,' he adds, 'aliquid sperare non spes sed præsumptio dici potest.' Almost the same words are to be found in Albertus Magnus, Paradisus Animæ sive Libellus de Virtutibus, xxi: 'Spes vera et perfecta expectatio certa futuræ beatitudinis, proveniens ex gratia Dei et meritis præcedentibus. Hæc duo necessaria sunt ad fidem. Gratia enim Dei non nisi meritis conservatur: meritis autem sine gratia nemo salvatur. Spes ergo sine meritis non est spes, sed præsumptio.' When we say that Hope comes from Grace and from antecedent merits, we must remember that these two sources are not of the same kind: the impulse to hope springs from Grace alone, while our merits are, as we know, a necessary condition of the fulfilment of our assurance of salvation. This is explained by St. Thomas in the Summa Theologiæ, Secunda Secundæ, Qu. xvii, Art. 1.

St. James is the only Apostle whose death is recorded in the Bible. The 'certain expectation' of Heaven led him to martyrdom, and made him a suitable exponent of Hope. So says Chrysostom, quoted in the Summa Theologiae, Tertia, Qu. xlv, Art. 3. It should be noted also that James the Apostle, son of Zebedee and brother of John, and James, 'the Lord's brother,' author of the Epistle, were in Dante's time regarded as the same person. In the Epistle of James i, 12, we read: 'Blessed is the man that endureth temptation: for when he is tried, he shall receive the crown of life, which the Lord hath promised to them that love him' — words of hopeful message. And in v, 8: 'Be ye also patient; stablish your hearts: for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh.'

The end of the canto once more leaves us startled and curious; for the poet, as he gazes into the effulgence of St. John, — who now appears on the scene, — is stricken with sudden blindness. Love is blind; and it is during his brief period of sightlessness that Dante undergoes, in the next canto, his examination in that virtue. Furthermore, the celestial pilgrim cannot see God until his earthly sight is quenched and replaced by a spiritual sense. In Canto XXIII, 33 — and again in l. 87, after his eyes were fortified (ll. 47-48) by the vision of enlightenment — Dante was unable to bear the light of Christ. Even when his new sight comes, it must be trained and purified and strengthened by degrees. A similar blindness came upon St. Paul at the time of his conversion. Acts ix, 3-9: 'And as he journeyed, he came near Damascus: and suddenly there shined round about him a light from heaven: and he fell to the earth, and heard a voice. . . . And Saul arose from the earth; and when his eyes were opened, he saw no man: but they led him by the hand, and brought him to Damascus. And he was there three days without sight, and neither did eat nor drink.' To these three days is generally assigned the rapture of St. Paul (2 Cor. xii), when 'he was caught up into paradise, and heard unspeakable words, which it is not lawful for a man to utter.'

Se mai continga che il poema sacro, —
 Al quale ha posto mano e cielo e terra,
 Sì che m' ha fatto per più anni macro, —
 Vinca la crudeltà che fuor mi serra

1. Continga, 'it happen.'

3. Macro, 'lean.'

Del bello ovile ov' io dormii agnello 5
 Nimico ai lupi che gli danno guerra,
 Con altra voce omai, con altro vello
 Ritornerò poeta, ed in sul fonte
 Del mio battesimo prenderò il cappello;
 Però che nella Fede, che fa conte 10
 L' anime a Dio, quivi entra' io, e poi
 Pietro per lei sì mi girò la fronte.
 Indi sì mosse un lume verso noi
 Di quella spera ond' uscì la primizia
 Che lasciò Cristo dei vicari suoi. 15
 E la mia Donna piena di letizia
 Mi disse: 'Mira, mira, ecco il barone
 Per cui laggiù si visita Galizia!'
 Sì come quando il colombo si pone
 Presso al compagno, e l' uno all' altro pande, 20
 Girando e mormorando, l' affezione,
 Così vid' io l' un dall' altro grande

5. Ovile: cf. 'l' ovil di San Giovanni' in XVI, 25. — Agnello: cf. Jeremiah xi, 19: 'But I was like a lamb . . . that is brought to the slaughter; and I knew not that they had devised devices against me.' Tor. cites from Villari the opening passage of a law proposed in Florence in 1291, in which the metaphor of lambs, wolves, and fold occurs.

7. Vello, 'fleece,' carrying out the figure of the agnello: I shall then be a full-grown poet, no longer a bleating lamb.

8. Fonte: in the church of S. Giovanni, where he was baptized. Cf. Inf. XIX, 17.

9. Cappello, 'wreath': cf. Old French and Provençal chapel.

10-12. In St. John's I was admitted to the Faith, and for my proficiency in that Faith I was applauded in Heaven by St. Peter; it is therefore appropriate that I receive the laurel crown, the earthly reward for my Faith, in the place where I first embraced it. — Conte, 'known.' — Girò: see XXIV, 151-152.

13. Lume: St. James, who comes from the same ring as St. Peter.

14-15. 'The first-fruit which Christ left of his vicars' is Peter.

17. Barone: cf. XXIV, 115.

18. The grave of St. James at Campostella in Galicia (the northwestern corner of Spain) was for several centuries a favorite place of pilgrimage. Cf. V. N., XLI, 39-50. See J. Bédier, La chronique de Turpin et le pèlerinage de Campostelle in Annales du Midi, XXIII (1911), 1.

20. Pande, 'lavishes.'

Principe glorioso essere accolto,
 Laudando il cibo che lassù li prande.
 Ma poi che il gratular si fu assolto, 25
 Tacito coram me ciascun s' affisse,
 Ignito sì che vinceva il mio volto.
 Ridendo allora Bëatrice disse:
 'Inclita vita, per cui la larghezza
 Della nostra basilica si scrisse, 30
 Fa risonar la speme in questa altezza!
 Tu sai che tante fiate la figure
 Quante Jesù ai tre fe' più chiarezza.'
 'Leva la testa, e fa che t' assicuri;
 Chè ciò che vien quassù dal mortal mondo, 35
 Convien ch' ai nostri raggi si maturi.'
 Questo conforto dal foco secondo
 Mi venne; ond' io levai gli occhi ai monti,
 Che gl' incurvaron pria col troppo pondo.
 'Poichè per grazia vuol che tu t' affronti 40

24. Prande, 'feeds.'

25. Assolto, 'ended.'

26. Coram me (Latin), 'before me': cf. XI, 62. — S' affisse, 'stopped': cf. Inf. XVIII, 43.

27. Ignito, 'fiery.' — Volto: 'face,' for 'eyes.'

29. Vita, 'soul.' — Larghezza, 'bounty.'

30. Basilica: the 'court' of Heaven. — Si scrisse: in the Epistle of James there are some references to divine liberality. See i, 5 ('God, that giveth to all men liberally') and 17 ('Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the Father of lights'); ii, 5 ('Hath not God chosen the poor of this world rich in faith, and heirs of the kingdom which he hath promised to them that love him?').

32-33. 'Thou knowest that thou dost personify it (Hope) as many times as Jesus bestowed most light on the three.' Three of the disciples (Peter, James, John) were chosen by Jesus to be present, and to receive the clearest revelation of his character, on three different occasions: at the Transfiguration (Mat. xvii, 1-8), in the Garden of Gethsemane (Mat. xxvi, 36-38), and at the raising of the daughter of Jairus (Luke viii, 50-56). On these three occasions Peter, James, and John stand respectively for Faith, Hope, and Love.

38. Ps. cxxi (Vulg. cxx), 1: 'I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills, from whence cometh my help.' The 'hills' are the two Apostles, who have bent Dante's eyes beneath the weight of their light.

40. The subject of vuol is Imperadore in l. 41. — T' affronti is to be connected

Lo nostro Imperadore, anzi la morte,
 Nell' aula più segreta co' suoi conti, —
 Sì che, veduto il ver di questa corte,
 La speme che laggiù bene innamora
 In te ed in altrui di ciò conforte, — 45
 Di' quel che ell' è, e come se ne infiora
 La mente tua, e di' onde a te venne!
 Così seguì 'l secondo lume ancora.
 E quella pïa, che guidò le penne
 Delle mie ali a così alto volo, 50
 Alla risposta così mi prevenne:
 'La Chiesa militante alcun figliuolo
 Non ha con più speranza, com' è scritto
 Nel Sol che raggia tutto nostro stuolo;
 Però gli è conceduto che d' Egitto 55
 Venga in Jerusalemme per vedere,
 Anzi che il militar gli sia prescritto.
 Gli altri due punti (che non per sapere
 Son domandati, ma perch' e' rapporti

with co' suoi conti in l. 42. — The counts in the Imperial court of Heaven are the Saints.

44. Speme is the object of conforte in l. 45. — Laggiù bene innamora, 'begets righteous love on earth.'

45. Di ciò conforte, 'thou mayest strengthen therewith' — with the recital of what thou hast seen.

46-47. Three questions are asked: what is Hope, to what degree dost thou possess it ('how does thy mind blossom with it'), and from what source dost thou derive it? Beatrice (l. 51) forestalls Dante's response to the second question, since an affirmative answer to it from him would imply that he considered himself worthy of salvation, and hence might smack of vainglory; to the other two he replies.

55. By 'Egypt' is meant life on earth. See Ps. cxiv (Vulg. cxiii), 1; cf. Epistola X, vii, 142-143 and 152-155.

56. Cf. Hebrews xii, 22: 'ye are come . . . unto the city of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem, and to an innumerable company of angels.'

57. Militar, 'service.' Cf. Job vii, 1: 'militia est vita hominis super terram' (the English version is quite different). — Prescritto, 'closed.'

59. Perch' e' rapporti, 'that he may relate' on earth.

Quanto questa virtù t'è in piacere) 60
 A lui lasc' io, chè non gli saran forti
 Nè di jattanza; ed egli a ciò risponda,
 E la grazia di Dio ciò gli comporti!'
 Come discente ch' a dottor seconda,
 Pronto e libente, in quel ch' egli è esperto, 65
 Perchè la sua bontà si disasconda,
 'Speme,' diss' io, 'è uno attender certo
 Della gloria futura, il qual produce
 Grazia divina e precedente merto.
 Da molte stelle mi vien questa luce; 70
 Ma quei la distillò nel mio cor pria,
 Che fu sommo cantor del Sommo Duce.
 "Sperino in te" nella sua teodia
 Dice, "color che sanno il nome tuo!"
 E chi nol sa, s' egli ha la fede mia ? 75
 Tu mi stillasti con lo stillar suo
 Nell' epistola poi, sì ch' io son pieno,
 Ed in altrui vostra pioggia repluo.'
 Mentr' io diceva, dentro al vivo seno

60. Souls in Heaven have no further use for Hope, but St. James loves it still.

61. Forti, 'hard.'

62. Jattanza, 'vainglory.'

63. Ciò gli comporti, 'help him therein.'

64. Discente, 'pupil.' — Seconda, 'replies.'

65. Libente, 'willing.' — Che = in cui.

66. Si disasconda, 'may be disclosed.'

67. Uno attender certo, 'a sure expectation.'

68. Il qual is the object of produce, of which grazia and merto (l. 69) are subjects.

70. Cf. Daniel xii, 3: 'And they that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament; and they that turn many to righteousness as the stars for ever and ever.'

71. Quei: David. — Distillò, 'instilled.'

73-74. Ps. ix, 10: 'And they that know thy name will put their trust in thee' — 'speret in te.' — Teodia, 'theody,' sacred song.

76. 'Thou didst instil it into me with his instilling.'

78. Repluo, 'I shower in turn': I communicate to others the hope I have derived from David and thee.

Di quello incendio tremolava un lampo 80
 Subito e spesso, a guisa di baleno.
 Indi spirò: 'L' amore ond' io avvampo
 Ancor ver la virtù che mi seguette
 Infìn la palma, ed all' uscir del campo,
 Vuol ch' io respiri a te, che ti dilette 85
 Di lei; ed emmi a grato che tu diche
 Quello che la speranza ti promette.'
 Ed io: 'Le nuove e le scritture antiche
 Pongono il segno (ed esso lo mi addita)
 Dell' anime che Dio s' ha fatte amiche: 90
 Dice Isaia che ciascuna vestita
 Nella sua terra fia di doppia vesta —
 E la sua terra è questa dolce vita;
 E il tuo fratello, assai vie più digesta, —
 Là dove tratta delle bianche stole, — 95
 Questa rivelazion ci manifesta.'
 E prima, appresso al fin d' este parole,
 'Sperent in te' di sopra noi s' udì,

81. James and John, the sons of Zebedee, were surnamed by Jesus 'Boanerges, which is, The sons of thunder': Mark iii, 17.

83. Virtù: Hope. — Seguette = seguì.

84. Palma: the victory of martyrdom. He was put to death by Herod Agrippa. — Campo: the 'battlefield' of life. James was a strenuous and rigid ascetic.

85. Respiri, 'breathe (i. e., speak) once more.' — Ti dilette, 'art gladdened.'

86. Diche = dica.

89. 'The token' set up by the Old and the New Testament is indicated in ll. 91-96. — Ed esso etc., 'and it (the token) points it out to me,' i. e., points out what blessedness in Heaven means — perfect joy of the body and the spirit.

91-93. Isaiah lxi, 7 and 10: 'therefore in their land shall they possess the double: everlasting joy shall be unto them'; 'he hath clothed me with the garments of salvation.' The 'double garment' is the effulgence of the soul and the clarified body. — The -saia seems to count as one syllable. Cf. XV, 110.

94. Fratello: John. — Assai vie più digesta, 'far more explicitly.'

95. St. John 'treats of the white robes' of the elect in Rev. iii, 5, and vii, 9-17. The 'white robes' symbolize the brightness or glory of 'the souls that God has made his friends.' The body, after the Resurrection, will become bright and pure like the spirit, and will share in its happiness. According to St. Bonaventure, Breviloquium, VII, vii, the body is called the 'second robe.'

98. Cf. l. 73.

A che risposer tutte le carole;
 Poscia tra esse un lume si schiarì 100
 Sì che, se il Cancro avesse un tal cristallo,
 L' inverno avrebbe un mese d' un sol dì.
 E come surge e va ed entra in ballo
 Vergine lieta (sol per fare onore
 Alla novizia, e non per alcun fallo), 105
 Così vid' io lo schiarato splendore
 Venire ai due, che si volgeano a rota
 Qual conveniasi al loro ardente amore.
 Misesi lì nel canto e nella nota;
 E la mia Donna in lor tenne l' aspetto, 110
 Pur come sposa tacita ed immota.
 'Questi è colui che giacque sopra il petto
 Del nostro Pellicano, e questi fue
 D' in su la croce al grande ufficio eletto.'
 La Donna mia così; nè però piùè 115

 Poscia che prima le parole sue.
 Quale è colui ch' adocchia e s' argomenta

100. Lume: the 'light' of St. John. — Si schiarì, 'brightened.'

101-102. In mid-winter the constellation of Cancer, for a month, shines all night long. If it contained a star as bright as this newly appeared 'crystal,' night, during that month, would be as light as day. In other words, the effulgence of St. John is as bright as the sun.

103-111. The three representatives of the Christian virtues dance before Beatrice, as the Virtues themselves did (in allegorical form) in Purg. XXIX, 121-129.

105. Novizia, 'bride.' — Fallo, 'failing': vanity.

112. John xxiii, 23: 'Now there was leaning on Jesus' bosom one of his disciples, whom Jesus loved.'

113. Ps. cii (Vulg. ci), 6: 'I am like a pelican of the wilderness.' It was generally believed that the pelican brings its young back to life with its own blood; hence this bird was taken as a symbol of Christ.

114. John was entrusted with the care of Mary. John xix, 27: 'Then saith he to the disciple, Behold thy mother! and from that hour that disciple took her unto his own home.'

116. La vista sua, 'her eyes,' is the object of mosser, of which the subject is le parole sue, 'her words,' in l. 117.

118. S' argomenta, 'strives.'

Di vedere eclissar lo sole un poco,
 Che per veder non vedente diventa, 120
 Tal mi fec' io a quell' ultimo foco,
 Mentre che detto fu: 'Perchè t' abbagli
 Per veder cosa che qui non ha loco?
 In terra è terra il mio corpo, e saragli
 Tanto (con gli altri) che il numero nostro 125
 Con l' eterno proposito s' agguagli.
 Con le due stole nel bēato chiostro
 Son le due luci sole che saliro;
 E questo apporterai nel mondo vostro.'
 A questa voce l' infiammato giro 130
 Si quietò con esso il dolce mischio
 Che si facea del suon del trino spiro,
 Sì come, — per cessar fatica o rischio, —
 Li remi, pria nell' acqua ripercossi,

119. Dante had an opportunity to see seven eclipses of the sun, two of them total in Italy.

123. Dante is trying to see, through the effulgence, the body of St. John, believing, according to an old legend, that John was taken up to Heaven in the flesh. John xxi, 22-23: 'Jesus saith unto him (Peter), If I will that he (John) tarry till I come, what is that to thee? follow thou me. Then went this saying abroad among the brethren, that that disciple should not die: yet Jesus said not unto him, He shall not die; but, If I will that he tarry till I come, what is that to thee?'

124. Saragli = vi sarà.

125. Tanto . . . che, 'until.'

126. Con . . . s' agguagli, 'shall be equal to.' Ephesians i, 4: 'According as he hath chosen us in him before the foundation of the world.' In Conv., II, vi, 95-99, Dante tells us that the elect are to fill the places of the fallen angels, who were 'perhaps a tenth part' of all the angelic orders.

127. The 'two robes' are the effulgence of the spirit and the clarified body.

128. 'The two lights that have ascended' are Christ and Mary, who have returned to the Empyrean: XXIII, 86, 120. Theirs are the only human bodies now in Heaven. This is the opinion expressed by St. Thomas in Summa Theologiae, Tertia, Qu. liii, Art. 3; previously he had been inclined to a different one.

131. Con esso, 'together with.' — Mischio, 'concert.'

132. The 'threefold breath' of Peter, James, and John.

133. Cessar, 'avoid.'

134. Ripercossi, 'driven.' — The vigorous simile is taken from Statius, Theb., VI, 779-781.

Tutti si posan al sonar d' un fischio.
Ahi, quanto nella mente mi commossi,
Quando mi volsi per veder Beatrice,
Per non poter vedere, bench' io fossi
Presso di lei, e nel mondo felice!

135

138. Per non poter, 'at being unable.'

CANTO XXVI

ARGUMENT

IN the course of the examination in Love, conducted by St. John, no definition of that virtue is given, perhaps because Dante could find none to his liking. The candidate for admission to the mysteries of Paradise is asked merely what he loves, and why. God is naturally the first and greatest object of his affection; then the rest of the universe in so far as it is in the likeness of its Creator.

After a somewhat brief colloquy — brief, no doubt, because Dante's whole life has shown him to be an adept in Love — the traveler's sight is restored, and he finds that Adam has joined the group. To him the poet mentally addresses four questions, which are all answered, though not in the order in which they are put. First comes the reply to number three: what was the real nature of Adam's sin? Number one follows: how long ago was he created? Question four, which is next taken up, is concerned with the language which the first man invented and spoke. And last we have the answer to number two: how long did Adam stay in the Garden of Eden? The author of original sin, which led to Redemption by Christ, is a figure necessary to the completeness of a scene devoted to the triumph of the Saviour.

Mentr' io dubbiava per lo viso spento,
Della fulgida fiamma che lo spense
Uscì un spiro che mi fece attento,
Dicendo: 'Intanto che tu ti risense
Della vista che hai in me consunta,
Ben è che ragionando la compense.
Comincia dunque, e di' ove s' appunta

4. Ti riscense, 'regainest the sense.'

6. La compense, 'thou make up for it.'

7. S' appunta, 'aims.'

L' anima tua. E fa ragion che sia
 La vista in te smarrita e non defunta;
 Perchè la Donna che per questa dia 10
 Region ti conduce, ha nello sguardo
 La virtù ch' ebbe la man d' Anania.'
 Io dissi: 'Al suo piacere e tosto e tardo
 Vegna rimedio agli occhi che fur porte,
 Quand' ella entrò col foco ond' io sempr' ardo. 15
 Lo Ben che fa contenta questa corte
 Alfa ed Omega è di quanta scrittura
 Mi legge amore, o lievemente o forte.'
 Quella medesima voce, che paura
 Tolta m' avea del subito abbarbaglio, 20
 Di ragionare ancor mi mise in cura;
 E disse: 'Certo a più angusto vaglio
 Ti conviene schiarar; dicer convienti
 Chi drizzò l' arco tuo a tal bersaglio.'
 Ed io: 'Per filosofici argomenti, 25
 E per autorità che quinci scende,
 Cotale amor convien che in me s' imprenti;
 Chè il bene, in quanto ben, come s' intende
 Così accende amore, e tanto maggio
 Quanto più di bontate in sè comprende. 30

10. Dia, 'divine.' Cf. XIV, 34; XXIII, 107.

12. Ananias cured St. Paul of his blindness by 'putting his hands on him.' Acts ix, 17-18.

16. Dante now proceeds to answer St. John's question (ll. 7-8): what is the object of thy love?

17. Rev. i, 8: 'I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the ending, saith the Lord.'

21. 'Made me solicitous to speak again.'

22. A più angusto vaglio, 'with a finer sieve.'

26. By revealed Truth.

28-30. 'For good, as such, kindles love in proportion as it is understood, and kindles the greater love, the more goodness it contains within it.'

Dunque all' Essenza ov' è tanto avvantaggio
 Che ciascun ben che fuor di lei si trova
 Altro non è ch' un lume di suo raggio,
 Più che in altra convien che si mova
 La mente, amando, di ciascun che cerne 35
 Lo vero in che si fonda questa prova.
 Tal vero allo intelletto mïo sterne
 Colui che mi dimostra il primo amore
 Di tutte le sustanzie sempiterne.
 Sternal la voce del verace Autore, 40
 Che dice a Moïse, di sè parlando:
 "Io ti farò vedere ogni valore."
 Sternilmi tu ancora, cominciando
 L' alto preconio, che grida l' arcano
 Di qui laggiù sopra ogni altro bando.' 45
 Ed io udi': 'Per intelletto umano,
 E per autoritadi a lui concorde,
 De' tuoi amori a Dio guarda il soprano.

31. All' Essenza is to be connected with si mova in l. 34. — Avvantaggio, 'super-macry.' — Since love is attracted by goodness, and all goodness is in God, he must be the primal object of love.

34. 'Must turn more than to any other (essence).' The subject of si mova is la mente di ciascun etc.

35. Cerne, 'discerns.'

36. In che, 'upon which.' — Prova, 'argument.'

37. Sterne, 'unfolds.'

38. Colui: Aristotle, who in his Metaphysics, XI, vii, discusses the existence, the unity, and the perfection of the First Mover, and in viii the nature of the First Substance.

40. Sternal = lo sterne. — Autore: God.

42. Exod. xxxiii, 19: 'I will make all my goodness pass before thee.'

44. Preconio, 'proclamation': probably the Gospel of John, which opens solemnly and mysteriously with the announcement of the Incarnation ('In the beginning was the Word,' etc.), God's great sacrifice to man; cf. John iii, 16. Some critics, however, think that the reference is to the Revelation, and particularly to the verse cited in the note to l. 17.

45. Bando, 'heralding.'

46. Per: in conformity with.

48. 'The highest of thy loves looks to God.'

Ma di' ancor, se tu senti altre corde
 Tirarti verso lui, sì che tu suone 50
 Con quanti denti questo amor ti morde.'
 Non fu latente la santa intenzione
 Dell' aquila di Cristo, anzi m' accorsi
 Dove volca menar mia professione.
 Però ricominciai: 'Tutti quei morsi 55
 Che posson far lo cor volger a Dio,
 Alla mia caritate son concorsi;
 Chè l' essere del mondo, e l' esser mio,
 La morte ch' ei sostenne perch' io viva,
 E quel che spera ogni fedel, com' io, 60
 Con la predetta conoscenza viva,
 Tratto m' hanno del mar dell' amor torto,
 E del diritto m' han posto alla riva.
 Le fronde onde s' infronda tutto l' orto
 Dell' Ortolano eterno, am' io cotanto 65
 Quanto da lui a lor di bene è porto.'
 Sì com' io tacqui, un dolcissimo canto
 Risonò per lo cielo, e la mia Donna
 Dicea con gli altri: 'Santo, Santo, Santo!'
 E come a lume acuto si dissonna 70
 Per lo spirto visivo che ricorre

49-51. An odd combination of metaphors. Such mixing is not uncommon in Dante: cf. Conv., II, i, 1-13. — Tu suone, 'thou mayest announce.'

53. 'Christ's Eagle' is John. The 'four beasts' of Rev. iv, 7, are traditionally identified with the four Evangelists; St. John is the 'flying eagle.'

58. Essere, 'existence.'

Allo splendor che va di gonna in gonna,
 E lo svegliato ciò che vede abborre
 (Sì nescia è la sua subita vigilia!)
 Fin che l' estimativa nol soccorre, — 75
 Così degli occhi miei ogni quisquilia
 Fugò Beatrice col raggio de' suoi,
 Che rifulgean da più di mille milia;
 Onde me' che dinanzi vidi poi,
 E quasi stupefatto domandai 80
 D' un quarto lume, ch' io vidi con noi.
 E la mia Donna: 'Dentro da que' rai
 Vagheggia il suo Fattor l' anima prima
 Che la prima Virtù creasse mai.'
 Come la fronda, che flette la cima 85
 Nel transito del vento, e poi si leva
 Per la propria virtù che la sublima,
 Fec' io in tanto in quanto ella diceva,
 Stupendo; e poi mi rifece sicuro
 Un disio di parlare, ond' io ardeva; 90
 E cominciai: 'O pomo, che maturo
 Solo prodotto fosti, o padre antico,
 A cui ciascuna sposa è figlia e nuro, —
 Devoto quanto posso a te supplico

72. Gonna, 'coat': membrane of the eye.

73. Abborre, 'shrinks from.'

74. Nescia, 'senseless.' — Vigilia, 'waking.'

75. Estimativa, 'judgment.'

76. Quisquilia, 'mote.'

79. Me' = meglio.

83. Vagheggia, 'worships': the subject is l' anima prima, Adam.

85. Fronda, 'bough.' — Flette, 'bends.' — Cf. Theb., VI, 854-857.

87. Sublima, 'uplifts.'

88. In tanto in quanto, 'while.'

89. Stupendo, 'amazed.'

93. Nuro (Latin nurus), 'daughter-in-law.'

Perchè mi parli. Tu vedi mia voglia, 95
 E per udirti tosto non la dico.
 Talvolta un animal coperto broglia
 Sì che l' affetto convien che si paia
 Per lo seguir che face a lui l' invoglia;
 E similmente l' anima primaia 100
 Mi facea trasparer per la coperta
 Quant' ella a compiacermi venia gaia.
 Indi spirò: 'Senz' essermi profferta
 Da te, la voglia tua discerno meglio
 Che tu qualunque cosa t' è più certa, 105
 Perch' io la veggio nel verace Specchio
 Che fa di sè pareggio all' altre cose;
 E nulla face lui di sè pareggio.
 Tu vuoi udir quant' è che Dio mi pose
 Nell' eccelso giardino, ove costei 110
 A così lunga scala ti dispose,
 E quanto fu diletto agli occhi miei,
 E la propria cagion del gran disdegno,
 E l' idioma ch' usai e ch' io fei.
 Or, figliuol mio, non il gustar del legno 115

97. Broglia, 'stirs.' — It is not evident what kind of a creature Dante had in mind: possibly a falcon.

98-99. 'So that its feeling must be revealed by the response that its wrapper makes to it.'

102. 'How joyously it came to do me pleasure.'

103. Profferta, 'uttered.'

107-108. 'Which makes itself an image of other things, while nothing makes of itself an image of it (the mirror).' God reflects everything, but nothing can reflect God. Cf. Summa Theologiae, Prima, Qu. lvii, Art. 2: 'Deus per essentiam suam, per quam omnia causat, est similitudo omnium.' — There are, however, other readings of the text, and other interpretations: see Giorn. dant., XIII, 97; Modern Language Review, I, 116.

109. Quant' è che, 'how long it is since.'

110. Costei: Beatrice, who in the Garden of Eden prepared Dante for the ascent to Heaven.

112. Quanto fu diletto, 'how long it (the garden) was a delight.'

113. Disdegno: the 'wrath' of God.

Fu per sè la cagion di tanto esilio,
 Ma solamente il trapassar del segno.
 Quindi, onde mosse tua Donna Virgilio,
 Quattromila trecento e due volumi
 Di sol desiderai questo concilio; 120
 E vidi lui tornare a tutti i lumi
 Della sua strada novecento trenta
 Fiate, mentre ch' io in terra fu' mi.
 La lingua ch' io parlai fu tutta spenta
 Innanzi assai ch' all' opra inconsumabile 125
 Fosse la gente di Nembrot attenta;
 Chè nullo effetto mai razionabile
 (Per lo piacere uman, che rinnovella
 Seguendo il cielo) sempre fu durabile.
 Opera naturale è ch' uom favella; 130
 Ma così o così, natura lascia

117. Il trapassar del segno, 'transgressing the bound.' Adam's sin was not gluttony, but disobedience, caused by pride. Cf. St. Augustine, De Civitate Dei, XIV, xii-xiv.

118. 'Therefore, in the place whence thy lady drew Virgil': in the Limbus. Cf. Inf. II, 52 ff.

119. Volumi, 'revolutions': cf. XXIII, 112; XXVIII, 11.

120. Concilio: the 'assembly' of the blest, for which Adam yearned before his release from Limbus by Christ.

121. Lui: the sun. — Lumi: the signs of the zodiac.

122. Gen. v, 5: 'And all the days that Adam lived were nine hundred and thirty years.'

123. Fu' mi' = mi fui, 'I was': cf. Purg. XXII, 90. — The two numbers added make 5232 years between the creation of Adam and the Crucifixion. Cf. Purg. XXXIII, 62. — Eusebius of Cæsarea, cited by Scart., puts the birth of Christ in the year 5200 of the world.

125. The 'unaccomplishable task' which Nimrod's people attempted was the building of the Tower of Babel: Gen. xi, 4-9. Cf. Inf. XXXI, 77-78; Purg. XII, 34. — Dante evidently changed his opinion on this subject, for in Vulg. El., I, vi, 49-61, he had said that Adam's language was spoken by all men until the confusion of tongues, and by the Hebrews after that event. His study of human speech doubtless led him to the conclusion that an unwritten language could not last without change through many generations.

127-129. 'For no product of reason was ever permanent for all time, because of human inclination, which varies with the sky.'

130. 'It is a natural operation for man to speak': hence he always does speak, in some fashion.

Poi fare a voi secondo che v' abbella.
 Pria ch' io scendessi all' infernale ambascia,
 I s' appellava in terra il Sommo Bene,
 Onde vien la letizia che mi fascia; 135
 El si chiamò da poi, e ciò conviene,
 Chè l' uso de' mortali è come fronda
 In ramo, che sen va ed altra viene.
 Nel monte che si leva più dall' onda
 Fu' io, con vita pura e disonesta, 140
 Dalla prim' ora a quella che seconda
 (Come il sol muta quadra) l' ora sesta.'

132. Abbella, 'suits.'

134. We do not know where Dante got the idea that the first name of God was I. This letter is the initial of Jehovah, and also of Jah: cf. Ps. lxxviii (Vulg. lxxvii), 5 ('extol him . . . by his name Jah'). Moreover, standing for the number 1, it is the symbol of unity. See D. Guerri, Il nome adamitico di Dio in Di alcuni versi dotti della 'Divina Commedia,' 1908. — There are several other readings.

136. El is the Hebrew name. St. Isidore, Etymologia, VII, i: 'Primum apud Hebraeos Dei nomen El dicitur.' Cf. Vulg. El., I, iv, 26-31.

137-138. Cf. Horace, Ars Poetica, 60-61.

139-142. Adam lived in the Garden of Eden, on the mountaintop, before and after his sin, only about six hours — 'from the first hour to the one that follows the sixth, when the sun changes quadrant' (passes from the first quadrant, or 90°, to the second), i. e., from sunrise until the hour that follows noon. Among the various estimates of theologians, Dante chose one of the shortest, that of Petrus Comestor (cf. XII, 134).

CANTO XXVII

ARGUMENT

WHEN Dante once more gazes down at the earth, he finds that during the interval since the end of his previous observation (XXII, 133-153) he has traversed 90° , or a quarter of the whole circumference. Six hours, then, have elapsed. At the close of the first look, he was on the meridian of Jerusalem; he is now in line with the Strait of Gibraltar, having covered the whole length of the Mediterranean, whose extent was curiously exaggerated by the ancients (cf. IX, 82-87). Had the sun been under Gemini (but so placed as not to obstruct his sight), he could have beheld, from his present view-point, the whole western hemisphere, from Jerusalem to the Island of Purgatory; but, as he tells us (ll. 86-87), 'the sun was ahead of me, distant a sign and more beneath my feet.' The signs of the zodiac are, of course, all in the eighth heaven. Dante is in Gemini; and the sun is 'in,' or under, Aries. Between Gemini and Aries is Taurus. We may suppose that the poet is at or near the western extremity of Gemini, and we know that the sun is in line with a point something less than a third of the way from the eastern end of Aries. Each of the twelve signs is 30° long. A line drawn from Dante to the centre of the earth, and a line drawn from the sun to the same point, would then be separated by an arc of not more than 40° . It follows that some 40° of Dante's field of vision, on the eastern side, is in the dark, or at least in the twilight. Instead, therefore, of seeing clearly to the Phœnician coast, at the eastern end of the Mediterranean, he sees 'almost the shore' (l. 83) — perhaps as far as Greece. It should be remembered that all this Mediterranean region was observed by him at the time of his first inspection.

See Moore, III, 62-71; for a different explanation, Torraca. The matter has given rise to much controversy.

'Al Padre, al Figlio, allo Spirito Santo'
Cominciò 'Gloria' tutto il Paradiso,
Sì che m' inebbriava il dolce canto.

1-6. The splendor of the host, as it sings the hymn Gloria Patri, seems to the enraptured spectator 'a smile of the universe'!

Ciò ch' io vedeva mi sembrava un riso
 Dell' universo; per che mia ebbrezza 5
 Entrava per l' udire e per lo viso.
 O gioia! o ineffabile allegrezza!
 O vita intera d' amore e di pace!
 O senza brama sicura ricchezza!
 Dinanzi agli occhi miei le quattro face 10
 Stavano accese, e quella che pria venne
 Incominciò a farsi più vivace;
 E tal nella sembianza sua divenne
 Qual diverrebbe Giove, s' egli e Marte
 Fossero augelli, e cambiassersi penne. 15
 La Provvidenza, che quivi comparte
 Vice ed officio, nel bēato coro
 Silenzio posto avea da ogni parte,
 Quand' io udi': 'Se io mi trascoloro,
 Non ti maravigliar; chè, dicend' io, 20
 Vedrai trascolorar tutti costoro.
 Quegli ch' usurpa in terra il loco mio,
 Il loco mio, il loco mio, che vaca
 Nella presenza del Figliuol di Dio,
 Fatto ha del cimitero mio clōaca 25

11. Quella: the flame of St. Peter.

13-15. If the planets Jupiter and Mars were birds, and each should moult and exchange feathers with the other, Jupiter would turn red and Mars white: thus St. Peter's effulgence reddens. A whimsical figure.

16. Comparte, 'distributes.'

17. Vice, 'turn.'

22. In 1300 Boniface VIII was Pope; but his election, corruptly procured during the lifetime of his predecessor (Celestine V), is condemned as invalid by St. Peter, first of the Popes. The discordant wrath of Peter and the whole heavenly host is rendered the more terrific by its incongruity with the peaceful joy of Paradise.

 E come donna onesta, che permene
 Di sè sicura, e per l' altrui fallanza,
 Pure ascoltando, timida si fane,
 Così Beatrice trasmutò sembianza;
 E tal eclissi credo che in ciel fue, 35
 Quando patì la Suprema Possanza.
 Poi procedetter le parole sue
 Con voce tanto da sè trasmutata
 Che la sembianza non si mutò piùè:

 Ma l' alta Provvidenza, che con Scipio
 Difese a Roma la gloria del mondo,

50. 'Should become an emblem on a standard.' The Papal troops sent against Frederick II in 1229 wore this token on their shoulders, and were called chiavisegnati. In Dante's own time the Pope was again warring against Christians: see Inf. XXVII, 85-90. For a Papal banner with the figure of St. Peter, cf. Rom., II, 28, ll. 817-818.

52. The Papal seal bears the image of St. Peter.

58. Cahors, the old capital of Quercy in southwestern France, was a nest of usury: see Inf. XI, 50. John XXII, Pope from 1316 to 1334, came from that town: cf. XVIII, 130-136. His predecessor, Clement V, was a Gascon; he is mentioned in Inf. XIX, 82-87. Purg. XXXII, 148-160, Par. XVII, 82.

61. Con Scipio, 'together with Scipio': Scipio the younger, who conquered Hannibal and thus saved Rome. Cf. Conv., IV, v, 164-171.

 Lo viso mio seguiva i suoi sembianti,
 E seguì in fin che il mezzo, per lo molto,
 Gli tolse il trapassar del più avanti. 75

 Dell' attendere in su, mi disse: 'Adima
 Il viso, e guarda come tu sei volto!'
 Dall' ora ch' io avea guardato prima,
 Io vidi mosso me per tutto l' arco 80

67-72. These lines present the strange and lovely picture of an inverted snowstorm. Dante sees 'the æther grow beautiful, flaked with triumphant vapors' (the swarm of bright spirits returning to the Empyrean), 'just as our air flakes downward with frozen vapors' in midwinter, when the sun is in Capricorn — 'when the horn of the Sky-Goat and the Sun touch each other.' It must be remembered that 'wet vapors' produce rain, snow, and hail, while wind, lightning, and meteors are caused by 'dry vapors.'

73. I suoi sembianti, 'their forms.'

74. Il mezzo, 'the intervening space.' — Lo molto, 'its muchness,' or extent.

80-81. The ancients divided the habitable part of the earth into seven strips, or 'climates,' stretching east and west. In the middle of the first, or most southerly, of these zones is the meridian of Jerusalem; the westerly end is at the meridian of Gibraltar. The distance between the middle and the end, according to Dante's geography, is 90°, or six hours' revolution. See Moore, III, 101 and 132.

82-84. Gade, 'Cadiz.' Beyond Cadiz the poet sees the 'mad track' of Ulysses out in the unknown Ocean; cf. Inf. XXVI, 90-142, where the voyage is described as a folle volo (l. 125). On the hither side of Cadiz he sees 'nearly' (presso)

112-114. 'Light and love envelop it round about, as it envelops the other heavens; and that belt (the Empyrean, or Heaven of light and love) is governed only by him (God) who girds it.' Every sphere except the ninth is surrounded by another sphere; but the ninth, the outermost sphere of the material universe, is surrounded only by the world of spirit, the Heaven of light and love, the Empyrean, which is the Mind of God. Moreover, every material heaven is directed by an order of angelic Intelligences; but in the Empyrean the only governing Intelligence is the Lord, in whom it exists. — For intende, cf. Conv., II, Canzone I, l. 1.

115. Distinto, 'marked.' The unit of time is the day, which is determined by the revolution of the Primum Mobile: cf. Conv., II, xv, 132-157; Summa Theologiæ, Prima, Qu. x, Art. 1 and 4.

116. Misurati, 'regulated.' Cf. Summa Theologiæ, Prima Secundæ, Qu. xc, Art. 4.

124. Cf. Romans vii, 18: 'to will is present with me; but how to perform that which is good I find not.'

126. Bozzacchioni, 'abortions.' The word is used to designate plums that are spoiled on the tree.

136-138. In Mon., I, ix, 4-10, Dante (referring to Aristotle's Physics, II, ii) declares that humanity is the child of the sky, or the sun, and therefore should imitate Heaven: 'Humanum genus filius est cœli . . . generat enim homo hominem et sol . . .' — 'He who brings morning and leaves evening' (l. 138) is obviously the sun, and his 'fair daughter' would seem to be the human race. 'In the primal sight' (l. 137) probably signifies 'in the sight of God.' The obscure lines may, then, be interpreted: 'Thus is blackened, in the sight of God, the white skin of human nature, the sun's fair child.'

month. Through an inaccuracy in the Julian calendar, which made the year of 365 days and 6 hours, the solar year gained over the standard year about one day in a century; in the course of something less than 90 centuries, then, January would have been pushed into the spring, if the error had not been corrected (as it was in 1582 under Gregory XIII, when the present calendar was adopted). The line means: 'But before 9000 years have gone by,' i. e., 'within a little while.'

143. The Julian year was really about $\frac{1}{146}$ of a day too long; but the error was sometimes estimated at a figure not far from $\frac{1}{145}$. See Moore, III, 96-97.

145. Fortuna, 'storm.'

147. Classe (Latin classis), 'fleet.' — Once more we have a vague prophecy of violent reformation.

CANTO XXVIII

ARGUMENT

IN the Crystalline Heaven, on the confines of the world of matter, the poet beholds a symbolic picture of God, not in his divine essence, but in his relation to the nine orders of angels that govern the spheres. First Dante catches sight of the image reflected in the eyes of Beatrice; then he turns to gaze on the splendid spectacle itself. His initial perception of the truth comes, then, from Revelation. Once before, the lady's eyes have served a like purpose: in Purg. XXXI, 118-126. In Dante's new vision God appears as a microscopic point of exceeding brightness. The centre of a circle is like the Almighty in its immobility and its lack of extension. Minuteness is a token of indivisible unity; and the one Indivisible Unit is the centre and source of all light. See Summa Theologiæ, Prima, Qu. xi, Art. 2-4. Encircling the point, about as far away as a halo is from the star it surrounds, a bright ring revolves; and, one after another, eight more concentric girdles of fire are turning, the outermost being of inconceivable magnitude. Their light and speed are proportionate to their proximity to the Point; thus the tiniest circle — the one closest to the centre — is the swiftest and brightest, whereas in the material universe the smallest and nearest sphere is the slowest in its revolution. In the world of spirit, space signifies nothing, and vicinity to God is everything; in the physical universe, moreover, the centre is the earth, while the centre of the spiritual world is God.

The nine rings represent the heavenly Intelligences, which fall into three hierarchies, each composed of three orders: Seraphim, Cherubim, Thrones; Dominations, Virtues, Powers; Principalities, Archangels, Angels. They preside respectively over: the Primum Mobile, the Starry Heaven, the sphere of Saturn; the spheres of Jupiter, Mars, the sun; the spheres of Venus, Mercury, the moon. All these names of angels occur in one place or another in the Bible, but with no suggestion of system; five of them are mentioned by St. Paul (Ephesians i, 21, and Colossians i, 16), who had visited Paradise. St. Ambrose, Apologia Prophetæ David, V, 21, enumerates nine angelic choirs; but for an exact designation and classification of the orders — with a lengthy but confused account of their functions — we must look to a fifth or sixth century Neo-Platonic Greek treatise, De Cælesti Hierarchia, sometimes called the Pseudo-Dionysius. The matter is discussed by St. Thomas in the Summa Theologiae, Prima, Qu. cviii, and by Dante in the Convivio, II, vi. The present canto corrects an error of arrangement made by the author (and others) in his previous description — a shifting of Thrones, Dominations, Powers, and Principalities. In this chapter of the Convivio, 56-94, Dante informs us that the three hierarchies contemplate respectively the three persons of the Trinity — Power, Wisdom, and Love, embodied in the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost. And inasmuch as each person can be regarded in three ways, — in itself, and in its relation to each of the other two, — every hierarchy is divided into three orders. St. Thomas ascribes to the nine orders the following functions: Seraphim, love; Cherubim, sight; Thrones, taking and holding; Dominations, command; Virtues, execution; Powers, judgment; Principalities, direction of nations; Archangels, direction of leaders; Angels, direction of individuals.

See Flam., I, 107; II, 252; G. Busnelli in Giorn. dant., XIX, 97; C. Zanini, Gli Angeli nella Divina Commedia in relazione ad alcune fonti sacre, 1908 (cf. Bull., XVII, 89). Between the angelic orders and their heavens, and between the orders and the classes of the blest, there is no manifest relation; nor is there in the Paradiso any trace of the connection between the heavens and the seven liberal arts, discussed in Conv., II, xiv, 48-253. For Dionysius, see H. Koch, Pseudo-Dionysius Areopagitica in seinen Beziehungen zum Neuplatonismus und Mysterienwesen, 1900. — For rotation as a figure of the angelic intuition of God, in Dionysius and his commentators, see G. Busnelli, Il concetto e l'ordine del 'Paradiso' dantesco, I, 1911, 186-190, 196. Dionysius and St. Thomas discuss three symbolic movements of the angels, the circular, straight, and oblique (Busnelli, I, 195-203); but of these only the first appears with any clearness in Dante, although the influence of each higher order on the one below may be regarded as exemplifying the 'straight' motion. — Boethius, in Cons., IV, Pr. vi, has a figure of a point surrounded by rings, representing Providence and Fate (this word being used to indicate secondary necessity). In De Veritate Catholica Fidei contra Gentiles, I lxvi, 6, centre and circle typify eternity and time, the centre being always opposite every point in the circumference; angels, though eternal, participate in temporal existence (Summa Theologiae, Prima, Qu. x, Art. 5), while God does not.

Poscia che contro alla vita presente
 Dei miseri mortali aperse il vero
 Quella che imparadisa la mia mente, —

2. Miseri mortali: cf. Virgil, Georgics, III, 66, 'miseris mortalibus.' — The subject of aperse is quella (Beatrice) in l. 3.

Come in lo specchio fiamma di doppiero
 Vede colui che se n' alluma retro, 5
 Prima che l' abbia in vista o in pensiero,
 E sè rivolge per veder se il vetro
 Gli dice il vero, e vede ch' el s' accorda
 Con esso, come nota con suo metro, —
 Così la mia memoria si ricorda 10
 Ch' io feci, riguardando nei begli occhi
 Onde a pigliarmi fece Amor la corda.
 E com' io mi rivolsi, e furon tocchi
 Li miei da ciò che pare in quel volume,
 Quandunque nel suo giro ben s' adocchi, 15
 Un punto vidi che raggiava lume
 Acuto sì che il viso ch' egli affoca
 Chiuder conviensi per lo forte acume.
 E quale stella par quinci più poca
 Parrebbe luna locata con esso, 20
 Come stella con stella si colloca.
 Forse cotanto quanto pare appresso
 Alo cinger la luce che il dipigne,
 Quando il vapor che il porta più è spesso,
 Distante intorno al punto un cerchio d' igne 25
 Si girava sì ratto ch' avria vinto

4. Doppiero, 'wax torch.'

8. El, 'it': the truth.

9. Esso: the glass. — Metro, 'measure.'

13. Tocchi = toccati.

14. Volume, 'revolution,' i. e., heaven: cf. XXIII, 112, XXVI, 119.

15. S' adocchi, 'one gazes.' Contemplation of the Primum Mobile suggests the image of the angels and the universe in their relation to God.

17. Viso, 'eye.'

19. Quinci, 'from here below': from the earth. — Poca = piccola.

22. Cotanto is to be connected with distante in l. 25, and cotanto distante is correlative with quanto appresso: 'as near as' . . . 'so far away' . . .

23. Luce (object of cinger): the moon or a star. Cf. X, 67-69.

25. Ignis (Latin ignis), 'fire.'

Quel moto che più tosto il mondo cigne;
 E questo era d' un altro circuncinto,
 E quel dal terzo, e il terzo poi dal quarto,
 Dal quinto il quarto, e poi dal sesto il quinto. 30
 Sopra seguiva il settimo sì sparto
 Già di larghezza che il messo di Juno
 Intero a contenerlo sarebbe arto.
 Così l' ottavo e il nono. E ciascheduno
 Più tardo si movea, secondo ch' era 35
 In numero distante più dall' uno.
 E quello avea la fiamma più sincera,
 Cui men distava la favilla pura —
 Credo, però che più di lei s' invera.
 La Donna mia, che mi vedeva in cura 40
 Forte sospeso, disse: 'Da quel punto
 Dipende il cielo e tutta la natura.
 Mira quel cercluo che più gli è congiunto,
 E sappi che il suo movere è sì tosto
 Per l' affocato amore ond' egli è punto.' 45
 Ed io a lei: 'Se il mondo fosse posto
 Con l' ordine ch' io veggio in quelle rote,
 Sazio m' avrebbe ciò che m' è proposto.
 Ma nel mondo sensibile si puote
 Veder le volte tanto più divine 50
 Quant' elle son dal centro più remote.
 Onde, se il mio disio dee aver fine

27. The motion of the Primum Mobile itself.

28. Circuncinto, 'girt around.'

31. Sparto, 'widespread.'

32. 'Juno's messenger' is Iris, the rainbow: cf. Met., I, 270-271.

33. Arto, 'narrow'; cf. Inf. XIX, 42; Purg. XXVII, 132.

37. Sincera, 'clear.'

39. Di lei s' invera, 'partakes of its truth.'

48. Sazio, 'satisfied.' — Proposto, 'set before.'

50. Volte, 'revolutions.'

In questo miro ed angelico templo
 Che solo amore e luce ha per confine,
 Udir convienmi ancor come l' esempio 55
 E l' esemplare non vanno d' un modo;
 Chè io per me indarno ciò contemplo.
 'Se li tuoi diti non sono a tal nodo
 Sufficienti, non è maraviglia,
 Tanto per non tentare è fatto sodo.' 60
 Così la Donna mia; poi disse: 'Piglia
 Quel ch' io ti dicerò, se vuoi saziarti,
 Ed intorno da esso t' assottiglia.
 Li cerchi corporai sono ampi ed arti
 Secondo il più e il men della virtute 65
 Che si distende per tutte lor parti.
 Maggior bontà vuol far maggior salute;
 Maggior salute maggior corpo cape,
 S' egli ha le parti egualmente compiute.
 Dunque costui, che tutto quanto rape 70
 L' altro universo seco, corrisponde
 Al cerchio che più ama e che più sape.
 Per che, se tu alla virtù circonde
 La tua misura, non alla parvenza
 Delle sustanzie che t' appaion tonde, 75
 Tu vederai mirabil conseguenza —

53. Templo: this sphere.

54. Cf. XXVII, 112.

55. Convienmi = mi conviene. — Esempla: the angelic circles are an 'example,' or pattern, of the material spheres.

60. Per non tentare, 'from not being tried': few philosophers attempt to solve the problem of the relation of the spiritual to the physical world. — Sodo, 'hard.'

63. 'And whet thy wits upon it.'

67. 'Greater goodness must work greater weal.'

68. 'Greater weal is contained by a greater body.'

70. Costui, 'this body,' the Primum Mobile. — Rape (Latin rapit), 'drags.'

73. Circonde, 'puttest . . . about.'

76. Consequenza, 'correspondence' of each heaven to its governing Intelligence, or order of angels.

Di maggio a più, e di minore a meno —
 In ciascun cielo a sua Intelligenza.⁷
 Come rimane splendido e sereno
 L' emisferio dell' aere, quando soffia 80
 Borea da quella guancia ond' è più leno,
 Per che si purga e risolve la roffia
 Che pria turbava, sì che il ciel ne ride
 Con le bellezze d' ogni sua parroffia, —
 Così fec' io, poi che mi provvide 85
 La Donna mia del suo risponder chiaro,
 E come stella in cielo il ver si vide.
 E poi che le parole sue restaro,
 Non altrimenti ferro disfavilla
 Che bolle, come i cerchi sfavillaro. 90
 Lo incendio lor seguiva ogni scintilla;
 Ed eran tante che il numero loro
 Più che il doppiar degli scacchi s' immilla.

77. 'Of greater (size) to more (intelligence) and of smaller (size) to less (intelligence).'

81. The wind-gods were sometimes represented as heads blowing a threefold blast from the middle and the two corners of their mouths. See Ristoro d' Arezzo, Composizione del mondo, VII. iii. Thus Boreas blows not only the north wind, but also the northwest and northeast. The last is, for Italy, the 'mildest' and clearest. — For the whole image, cf. Æn., XII. 365-367.

82. Roffia, 'rubbish.' The word apparently meant the refuse of tanned hides: see Bull., III. 154.

84. Parroffia, 'parish,' quarter. See Bull., III. 153.

88. Restaro, 'had ceased.'

90. The sparks into which the fiery rings resolve themselves represent the individual angels that compose the orders. Every angel constitutes a species by itself, but nevertheless it belongs to one of the nine orders, and never leaves it (cf. l. 91).

91. Incendio (the fiery ring) is the object of seguiva.

92. In Conv., II. vi. 38-39, Dante declares that the angels are 'quasi innumerabili'; St. Thomas says as much in Summa Theologiae, Prima, Qu. cxii, Art. 4.

4. Cf. Daniel vii. 10.

93. S' immilla, 'stretches into the thousands.' According to an old story, the inventor of the game of chess asked of the King of Persia, as a reward, one grain of corn for the first square, two for the second, four for the third, eight for the fourth, and so on, with successive 'doubling,' through the 64 squares of the chess-board. The result is a number of 20 figures. The Provençal poets Peire Vidal and Folquet de Marselha (cf. IX, 94) refer to this tale.

Io sentiva osannar di coro in coro
 Al punto fisso che li tiene all' ubi, 95
 E terrà sempre, nel qual sempre foro.
 E quella, che vedeva i pensier dubi
 Nella mia mente, disse: 'I cerchi primi
 T' hanno mostrati i Serafi e i Cherubi.
 Così veloci seguono i suoi vimi, 100
 Per simigliarsi al punto quanto ponno,
 E posson quanto a veder son sublimi.
 Quegli altri amor, che d' intorno gli vonno,
 Si chiaman Troni del divino aspetto,
 Perchè il primo ternaro terminonno. 105
 E dei saper che tutti hanno diletto
 Quanto la sua veduta si profonda
 Nel vero in che si queta ogn' intelletto.
 Quinci si può veder come si fonda
 L' esser bēato nell' atto che vede, 110
 Non in quel ch' ama, che poscia seconda;
 E del vedere è misura mercede,

94. Osannar, 'Hosannah sung.'

95. Ubi (Latin), 'where,' i. e., spot.

97. Dubi = dubbi.

100. I suoi vimi, 'their bonds': the respective rings to which they are bound.

101. Ponno = possono. Cf. 1 John iii, 2: 'we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is.'

102. Sublimi, 'exalted.'

103. Vonno = vanno: the form is still extant in Umbria.

105. 'Because' (when God created the world) 'the first triad ended with them.' Terminonno = terminarono. — The line is very obscure; but the idea seems to be that the designation 'Thrones' is appropriate because these angels form the bottom of the highest set, the sovereign angels being (so to speak) seated upon them. According to Dionysius (De Celesti Hierarchia, VII, 1, end), the Thrones are so called because they are remote from everything earthly, are close to the highest, receive the divine advent without matter and without motion, carry God, and are fit for divine offices. — Cf. Par. IX, 61-63; Summa Theologiae, Prima, Qu. cviii, Art. 5.

107. Sua, 'their.'

110. Atto che vede, 'act of sight.'

111. Poscia seconda, 'follows after.'

Che grazia partorisce e buona voglia;
 Così di grado in grado si procede.
 L' altro ternaro, — che così germoglia 115
 In questa primavera sempiterna,
 Che notturno Ariete non dispoglia, —
 Perpetüalmente 'Osanna' sverna
 Con tre melode, che suonano in tree
 Ordini di letizia onde s' interna. 120
 In essa gerarchia son le tre Dee:
 Prima Dominazioni, e poi Virtudi;
 L' ordine terzo di Podestadi ee.
 Poscia nei due penultimi tripudi
 Principati ed Arcangeli si girano; 125
 L' ultimo è tutto d' Angelici ludi.
 Questi ordini di su tutti rimirano,
 E di giù vincon sì che verso Dio
 Tutti tirati sono e tutti tirano.
 E Dionisio con tanto disio 130
 A contemplar questi ordini si mise
 Che li nomò e distinse com' io.

113. Che (= mercede, 'desert') is the object of partorisce, of which grazia and buona voglia are subjects.

114. These are the 'steps': Grace begets good will, Grace and good will constitute desert, desert determines the degree of sight, and sight is the source of love. Cf. Par. XXIX, 61-66; Summa Theologiae, Prima, Qu. lxii, Art. 4.

115. Altro, 'second.'

117. 'Which no autumn ever strips.' 'Nocturnal Aries' means 'autumn,' because in that season Aries is the constellation opposite the sun.

118. Sverna, 'sings' (as a spring song).

120. Onde s' interna, 'which make it threefold.'

121. Dee, 'divinities': orders of angels.

124. Tripudi, 'dances': orders.

128. Vincon, 'prevail.'

130. The great authority for the names, orders, and functions of the angels is a Neo-Platonic work, not earlier than the 5th century, De Celesti Hierarchia, attributed to Dionysius the Areopagite, St. Paul's convert in Athens (mentioned in Acts xvii, 34). He was thought to have derived his information from St. Paul, who had visited Paradise.

Ma Gregorio da lui poi si divise;
 Onde sì tosto come l' occhio aperse
 In questo ciel, di sè medesmo rise. 135
 E se tanto segreto ver proferse
 Mortale in terra, non voglio ch' ammiri;
 Chè chi il vide quassù gliel discoperse
 Con altro assai del ver di questi giri.'

133. St. Gregory, in his Moralia in Librum Beati Job, arranges the angelic orders thus: Seraphim, Cherubim, Powers; Principalities, Virtues, Dominations; Thrones, Archangels, Angels. This sequence is followed by Brunetto Latini in the Trésor, and by Dante in Conv., II, vi. Elsewhere Gregory has a still different arrangement. See Bull., XVIII, 127 and 205.

137. Mortale: Dionysius.

138. Chi: St. Paul. — Vide: 2 Cor. xii, 2-4.

CANTO XXIX

ARGUMENT

A MEDÆVAL poet could scarcely close a discussion of angels without giving his opinion on certain moot questions concerning them. In this canto, then, we are enlightened as to the date of their creation, the nature of the meritorious act which saved the good ones, the time and character of the sin which damned the bad ones, and the faculties which heavenly Intelligences may possess. To the modern reader such speculations seem otiose; and we are perhaps justified in believing that they did not appear very important to Dante. At any rate, he bitterly denounces those preachers who entertain their congregations with idle guesses, instead of feeding them on the Word of God. It is noteworthy that Dante holds no converse with the angels. He evidently thought of them as exalted, divine, nearer to God than to man. Even those which appear in Hell and Purgatory, although their duties bring them close to the traveler, preserve a certain air of austerity and remoteness.

See St. Augustine, De Civitate Dei, XII, ix.

Quando ambedue i figli di Latona,
Coperti del Montone e della Libra,
Fanno dell' orizzonte insieme zona,
Quant' è dal punto che il zenit inlibra,

1. Quando : at the vernal equinox, when, at dawn and at sunset, the sun and the moon are opposite each other on the horizon, one rising and the other setting. — 'Latona's children' are Apollo and Diana, the sun and the moon.

2. The sun is in Aries (the Ram, Montone), the moon is in Libra (the Scales).

3. The two luminaries 'belt themselves with the horizon': the horizon line bisects them both.

4. 'As long as it is from the moment when the zenith puts them into the scales.' The sun and moon, exactly balanced for an instant on opposite sides of the horizon, suggest to the poet the figure of a gigantic pair of scales, suspended from the zenith. And just as, in a balance, one scale immediately goes down, and the other up, so one of the two luminaries rises above the horizon and the other sinks below it.

Infin che l' uno e l' altro da quel cinto, 5
 Cambiando l' emisferio, si dilibra,
 Tanto, col volto di riso dipinto,
 Si tacque Bëatrice, riguardando
 Fisso nel punto che m' aveva vinto:
 Poi cominciò: 'Io dico, non domando 10
 Quel che tu vuoi udir, perch' io l' ho visto
 Dove s' appunta ogni ubi ed ogni quando.
 Non per avere a sè di bene acquisto
 (Ch' esser non può), ma perchè suo splendore
 Potesse risplendendo dir: "Subsisto," 15
 In sua eternità di tempo fuore,
 Fuor d' ogni altro comprender, come i piacque,
 S' aperse in nuovi amor l' Eterno Amore.
 Nè prima quasi torpente si giacque;
 Chè nè prima nè poscia procedette 20
 Lo discorrer di Dio sopra quest' acque.

5. Infin che, 'until.' — Cinto, 'girdle': the horizon.

6. Si dilibra, 'is unbalanced.'

7. Tanto, 'so long': correlative with the quanto of l. 4. The simile of the sun and moon in balance is used to convey the idea of one instant of intermediate stillness and suspense — the silence that intervenes between Beatrice's speech at the end of the last canto and her discourse that begins in l. 10.

10. Dico, 'speak.'

12. S' appunta, 'are centred.' God is the centre of all our conceptions of space and time. — Ubi . . . quando (Latin), 'where' . . . 'when.'

13. Per, 'in order to.' God was impelled to create the angels, not by a desire to increase his own weal, but by a wish to share his goodness with other beings. This is the doctrine of St. Thomas in De Veritate Catholicae Fidei, II, xlvi, and St. Augustine in De Civitate Dei, XI, xxiv. Cf. Par. VII, 64-66, XIII, 52-55

15. Subsisto (Latin), 'I am.'

16. Di tempo fuore, 'outside of time.'

17. Comprender, 'containing,' limitation. — I=gli.

19. Time has reference only to created things; for God all time is present and 'before' and 'after' have no significance. Therefore we may not say that God was inactive 'before' the creation.

21. 'The moving of God' etc. means the creation. Gen. i, 2: 'And the spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters.' The figure has a particular appropriateness here, because the 9th sphere was often called the 'aqueous heaven.'

Forma e materia congiunte e purette
 Usciro ad esser che non avea fallo,
 Come d' arco tricolore tre saette;
 E come in vetro, in ambra od in cristallo 25
 Raggio risplende sì che dal venire
 All' esser tutto non è intervallo,
 Così il triforme effetto del suo Sire
 Nell' esser suo raggiò insieme tutto,
 Senza distinziōn nell' esordire. 30
 Concrëato fu ordine e costruito
 Alle sustanzie, e quelle furon cima
 Nel mondo, in che puro atto fu prodotto.
 Pura potenza tenne la parte ima.
 Nel mezzo strinse potenza con atto 35
 Tal vime che giammai non si divima.
 Jeronimo vi scrisse lungo tratto

22. Purette, 'unmixed.' The line means 'pure form (i. e., character without matter: the angels), pure matter (i. e., matter without spirit: the stuff of which the earth was made), and form and matter conjoined (i. e., the heavens).'

23. 'Came into an existence that had no lack,' i. e., came into independent being (substantia). God created the heavens, the angels, and brute matter all together on the first day. Cf. Ecclus. xviii, 1: 'Qui vivit in æternum creavit omnia simul.' So Gen. i, 1: 'In principio creavit Deus cælum et terram.' Dante follows the opinion of Peter Lombard (cf. X, 107), Sententiæ, II, i-ii, and St. Thomas, Summa Theologiæ, Prima, Qu. lxi, Art. 2-3.

28. Effetto, 'work' (ll. 22-24). — Del suo, 'from its.'

29. Raggiò, 'shot forth.'

30. Esordire, 'beginning.'

31. Costrutto, 'established.'

32-33. Alle, 'for the.' The three kinds of beings above named were arranged in due order. At the top (cima) were 'those in which pure activity was produced,' i. e., the angels, which, having no body, are pure intelligence, or 'form'; and form, or character, begins to operate as soon as it exists, and continues to operate completely and incessantly. The angels have no powers that are not in constant and full activity. Cf. Summa Theologiæ, Prima, Qu. l, Art. 2.

34. 'Pure potentiality' is characteristic of brute matter, which is capable of no independent activity. — Ima, 'lowest.'

35. Mezzo: the material heavens. — Strinse, 'bound': the subject is vime in l. 36.

36. l'ime, 'tie': cf. XXVIII, 100. — Divima, 'it is untied.' — Spirit and matter are always united in the spheres.

37-38. A curious Latinizing construction: 'Jerome (in his commentary on

 Ma questo vero è scritto in molti lati 40
 Dagli scrittor dello Spirito Santo;
 E tu ten' avvedrai, se bene agguati.
 Ed anche la ragione il vede alquanto,
 Che non concederebbe che i motori
 Senza sua perfezion fosser cotanto. 45
 Or sai tu dove e quando questi amori
 Furon crëati, e come; sì che spenti

the Epistle of Paul to Titus) wrote you down a long lapse of ages from the creation of the angels.' St. Jerome's opinion — that the angels existed countless ages before the creation of the world — is recorded and refuted by St. Thomas in Summa Theologiae, Prima, Qu. lxi, Art. 3.

40. Questo vero, 'this truth': ll. 22-24 and 28-30. — Molti lati, 'many pages': cf. note to l. 23.

41. Cf. Mon., III, iv, 87-91: 'Nam quamquam scribæ divini eloquii multi sint, unicus tamen dictator est Deus, qui beneplacitum suum nobis per multorum calamos explicare dignatus est.'

42. Agguati, 'watchest.'

44. Motori: the angels, who move the heavens.

45. Sua perfezion, 'their perfection,' i. e., the opportunity for their proper work: 'movers' whose essence is pure activity (cf. note to ll. 32-33) must have something to move. — Cotanto, 'so long.'

49. Giugneriesi = si giungerebbe, 'one would reach' the number 20, in counting. The rebellious angels fell before one could count 20. The beatitude or damnation of the angels depended on the first act of their will after creation — assuming that they were created in grace and in the exercise of their free will: so St. Thomas in Summa Theologiae, Prima, Qu. lxii, Art. 5. Satan and his companions, moved by pride, immediately rejected grace, and fell; the others accepted grace, and thereby enjoyed complete vision of God, which made sin impossible (loc. cit., Art. 8).

50. Cf. Conv., II, vi, 95-98: 'di tutti questi Ordini si perderono alquanti tosto che furono creati, forse in numero della decima parte.'

51. The lost angels in their fall disturbed the earth, the 'undermost' of the physical elements. Of the four elements — fire, air, water, earth — earth is the lowest, being at the centre of the material universe. — Cf. Inf. XXXIV, 121-126

52. Altra: sc. parte.

Che tu discerni, con tanto diletto

59. 'In recognizing that they owed their being to that Goodness.' For the use of riconoscere, cf. XXII. 113, XXXI. 84.

60. A tanto etc., 'ready for so great understanding.'

61. Viste, 'eyes.'

62. Grace revealed the right course to them, and their merit consisted in choosing it.

66. 'According as the heart is open to it' (i. e., to grace). The degree of openness depends on love (caritas), which is a result of foreordained disposition.

71. Si legge, 'it is taught' in the lectures of doctors of theology.

73. Dirò, 'I shall speak.' — V'eggi = vegga or veda.

76. Queste sustanzie: the angels.

 L' amor dell' apparenza e il suo pensiero!
 Ed ancor questo quassù si comporta
 Con men disdegno che quando è posposta
 La divina scrittura, o quando è torta. 90
 Non vi si pensa quanto sangue costa
 Seminarla nel mondo, e quanto piace
 Chi umilmente con essa s' accosta.
 Per apparer ciascun s' ingegna, e face
 Sue invenzioni, e quelle son trascorse 95

79. Interciso, 'intercepted.' Nothing ever intervenes between their mind and the image of all things in God.

80-81. Non bisogna etc., 'they have no need of remembering by reason of interrupted concept.' Forgetfulness is the intervention of a new concept between the former one and the consciousness. With the angels, no concept, or perception, is ever interrupted by another. — St. Thomas inclines to the opinion that angels do not need — and therefore do not possess — memory, but he admits the possibility of their possessing it in a certain sense, if memory be considered as a faculty of the mind: Summa Theologiae, Prima, Qu. liv, Art. 5. Cf. St. Augustine, De Trinitate, IX, ii, and X, xi. Dante is more positive than his masters.

82. 'So that on earth men dream waking dreams.'

83. Credendo. 'whether they believe.'

84. Nell' uno, 'in the one': i. e., the latter (non credendo).

85. Voi, 'you mortals.' — Un, 'a single.'

87. 'The love and thought of show.'

88. Si comporta, 'is suffered.'

93. Con=ad.

94. Per apparer, 'for show.'

95. Trascorse, 'treated.'

97-102. Mat. xxvii, 45: 'Now from the sixth hour there was darkness over all the land until the ninth hour.' To explain this darkness at the Crucifixion, some said that the moon left its course to make an eclipse, others that the sun hid its own rays. Dionysius (XXVIII, 130) favored the first explanation, St. Jerome the second. Both are recorded by St. Thomas in Summa Theologiae, Tertia, Qu. xliiv, Art. 2. The second theory has the advantage of accounting for an obscuration 'over all the land,' whereas an ordinary eclipse would darken only a part of it. The miraculous eclipse recorded in the Bible 'answered for the Spaniards and the Indians' — at the two extremes of the habitable world — 'as well as for the Hebrews.'

103. Lapo and Bindo would seem to have been very common names in Florence. They were originally nicknames respectively for Jacopo and Ildebrando.

109. Convento, 'congregation.'

111. Cf. I Cor. iii, 10-11: 'I have laid the foundation' . . . 'For other foundation can no man lay.'

112. Quel tanto, 'that alone': i. e., the 'true foundation.' For the use of tanto, cf. II, 67, XVIII, 13. — Sue, 'their.'

117. 'The cowl puffs up' with self-satisfaction.

118. The devil is nestling 'in the tail of the hood,' waiting for the preacher's soul. This odd conceit seems to have been suggested by some carving or miniature. Conspicuous on the pulbit of the old church of S. Miniato is the figure of a monk, and just above his hood is an eagle, which supports the lectern. Although the intention is, of course, quite different, this group may have suggested such an interpretation to the mind of a disapproving listener.

120. 'What kind of indulgence it trusts.'

123. 'They would flock to any promise.'

124. 'On this (credulity) St. Antony fattens his pig.' St. Antony, the founder of monasticism, is generally represented with a hog under his feet, the symbol of his subjugation of the flesh. The monks of his order kept herds of swine, which were regarded as sacred and allowed to roam anywhere, even into private houses: cf. F. Sacchetti, Novelle, CX. The degenerate Antonians were the most shameless and importunate of the mendicant preachers and pardoners, and Dante compares them to their own pigs.

129. La via: our discourse.

130. Questa natura: angel kind. — S' ingrada, 'climbs.'

134. Daniel vii, 10: 'thousand thousands ministered unto him, and ten thousand times ten thousand stood before him.' Cf. note to XXVIII, 92.

 Diversamente in essa ferve e tepe.
 Vedi l' eccelso omai, e la larghezza
 Dell' Eterno Valor, poscia che tanti
 Speculi fatti s' ha in che si spezza,
 Uno manendo in sè come davanti.' 145

135. This ambiguous line must mean: 'No definite number is apparent.' For the use of si cела, cf. XVI, 80.

137. Per tanti modi, 'in as many ways.' — Rcepe = riceve. — Every angel constituting a species by itself, no two perceive God alike.

138. S' appaia, 'it (the Light) unites.'

139. 'The act of conception' is the vision of God, which depends on Grace.

140. Affetto is the subject of segue. — Cf. XXVIII, 109-111.

141. Tepe (Latin tepid), 'is tepid' — of course only by comparison with the glowing love of the most favored.

142. Eccelso, 'height.' — Larghezza, 'breadth.'

144. Si spezza, 'it is refracted.'

CANTO XXX

ARGUMENT

WE now cross the boundary of the world of matter and enter the realm of pure spirit. As the stars, at dawn, gradually fade away before the sunshine, so the bright angelic rings disappear, leaving only the light that emanates from the Point. This light — when the traveler passes from Primum Mobile to Empyrean — becomes so overpowering that he once more, for an instant, loses his sight, to have it restored more fit for the experiences to come. So it fares with all the souls that reach Paradise: they are blinded 'to make the candle ready for its flame.' Again and again Dante's vision, accustomed to physical cognition, must be purified, strengthened, and adapted to a new kind of perception. Thus, in these closing cantos, one glorious symbol succeeds another. The first impression he receives is an overwhelming consciousness of Grace, which appears as a vast, inexhaustible river of light. Next he becomes aware of the souls that Grace sustains — beautiful flowers covering the banks of the stream, visited by ministering angels which flit like sparks between the current and the shores. Thus far his view of Heaven has been wholly abstract and symbolic. To behold it in a semblance of concrete reality, his eyes must be touched by Grace, so that they may see the World of the Blest as it shall be after the Resurrection, when the souls shall be re clothed in the flesh. He stoops over the bank until his lashes dip in the flood. Suddenly all is transformed. The river gathers into a round sea of light, and all about it the banks rise up 'in more than a thousand tiers,' whereon, in their glorified bodies, are seated the Elect. The whole cup-shaped amphitheatre presents the figure of a rose, the emblem of love.

1 Cor. xiii, 12, 'For now we see through a glass, darkly; but then face to face,' reads in the Vulgate: 'Videmus nunc per speculum, in enigmate, tunc facie ad faciem'; and St. Thomas, in his Commentary on the passage, is led by the Latin phraseology to distinguish three different kinds of sight. The highest grade of sight, he tells us elsewhere, is the direct intuition of essence; this kind of sight is enjoyed by angels contemplating themselves and by angels and blest contemplating God: Summa Theologiae, Prima, Qu. xii, Art. 4; Qu. lvi, Art. 3. By a special grace, this intuition was accorded, for one instant, to St. Paul (Secunda Secundæ, Qu. clxxv, Art. 3); his contemplation was of the highest type ever granted to man in the first life (Secunda Secundæ, Qu. clxxx, Art. 5).

Forse sei milia miglia di lontano
 Ci ferve l' ora sesta, e questo mondo
 China già l' ombra quasi al letto piano,
 Quando il mezzo del cielo, a noi profondo,
 Comincia a farsi tal che alcuna stella 5
 Perde il parere infino a questo fondo;
 E come vien la chiarissima ancella
 Del sol più oltre, così il ciel si chiude
 Di vista in vista infino alla più bella.
 Non altrimenti il trionfo che lude 10
 Sempre dintorno al Punto che mi vinse,
 Parendo inchiuso da quel ch' egl' inchiede,
 A poco a poco al mio veder si estinse;
 Per che tornar con gli occhi a Beatrice
 Nulla vedere ed amor mi costrinse. 15
 Se quanto infino a qui di lei si dice
 Fosse conchiuso tutto in una loda,

1-3. Dante is about to describe the aspect of the sky, with the stars gradually fading, a little before dawn. 'The sixth hour (i. e., noon) is glowing' some '6000 miles away from us.' Noon is separated from sunrise by a quarter of the earth's circumference — that is, according to our author's geography (Conv., III, v, 103), by 5,100, a quarter of 20,400. If noon, then, is 6000 miles off, sunrise must still be 900 miles (or about an hour) away. The sun is below our horizon on one side, and the earth's conical shadow, projected into space, is correspondingly above our horizon on the other. As the sun rises, the shadow sinks; and when the middle of the sun shall be on the horizon line, the apex of the shadow will be on the same plane in the opposite quarter. An hour before dawn, therefore, 'this earth is already bowing its shadow down almost to the level bed' of the horizon. Cf. Moore, III, 58-59.

4. A noi profondo, 'deep above us.'

6. Parere, 'visibility.' — Questo fondo, 'this bottom': the earth's surface, where we are.

7. Ancella: Aurora, the dawn.

9. Di vista in vista, 'from sight to sight': i. e., star by star. Cf. II, 115.

10. Lude (Lat. ludit), 'sports.'

11. Vinse: see XXVIII, 16-18.

12. In the allegorical vision which Dante has beheld, the Point seems to be encompassed by the rings of light, whereas in reality God encompasses everything.

14. Per che, 'wherefore.' — Tornar depends on costrinse in l. 15.

15. Nulla vedere ('seeing nothing') and amor are subjects of costrinse.

Poco sarebbe a fornir questa vice.
 La bellezza ch' io vidi sì trasmoda
 Non pur di là da noi, ma certo io credo 20
 Che solo il suo Fattor tutta la goda.
 Da questo passo vinto mi concedo,
 Più che giammai da punto di suo tema
 Suprato fosse comico o tragedo.
 Chè, come sole in viso che più trema, 25
 Così lo rimembrar del dolce riso
 La mente mia di sè medesma scema.
 Dal primo giorno ch' io vidi il suo viso
 In questa vita, infino a questa vista,
 Non m' è il seguire al mio cantar preciso; 30
 Ma or convien che mio seguir desista
 Più dietro a sua bellezza poëtando,
 Come all' ultimo suo ciascuno artista.
 Cotal, qual io la lascio a maggior bando
 Che quel della mia tuba (che deduce 35
 L' ardüa sua materia terminando),
 Con atto e voce d' espedito duce
 Ricominciò: 'Noi semo usciti fuore
 Del maggior corpo al ciel ch' è pura luce —

18. Vice, 'turn,' moment.

19. Si trasmoda, 'transcends measure.'

23. Punto, 'incident.'

24. A 'comic poet' is one who writes in familiar, a 'tragic poet' one who writes in exalted style. Cf. Epistola X, x, 209-212. The Dante of the Canzoni is a 'tragedo,' the author of the Commedia a 'comico.'

25. Viso, 'eye.' — Cf. Conv., III, Canzone II, 60: 'Come raggio di sole un fragil viso.'

27. Scema, 'deprives.'

30. Preciso, 'cut off,' prevented.

33. 'As every artist (must stop) at his utmost.' — Now that Beatrice has reached her own home, the Empyrean, she is seen in her full beauty, which defies description.

34. Bando, 'heralding.' Cf. Purg. XXX, 13; Par. XXVI, 45.

37. Espedito (or spedito), 'ready.'

39. 'The biggest body' is the Primum Mobile, which surrounds all the rest of the material world.

Luce intellettüal piena d' amore, 40
 Amor di vero ben pien di letizia,
 Letizia che trascende ogni dolzore.
 Qui vederai l' una e l' altra milizia
 Di Paradiso, e l' una in quegli aspetti
 Che tu vedrai all' ultima giustizia.' 45
 Come subito lampo che discetti
 Gli spiriti visivi, sì che priva
 Dell' atto l' occhio di più forti obbietti,
 Così mi circonfulse luce viva,
 E lasciommi fasciato di tal velo 50
 Del suo fulgor che nulla m' appariva.
 'Sempre l' amor che queta questo cielo
 Accoglie in sè con sì fatta salute,
 Per far disposto a sua fiamma il candelo.'
 Non fur più tosto dentro a me venute 55
 Queste parole brevi, ch' io compresi
 Me sormontar di sopra a mia virtute;
 E di novella vista mi raccesi
 Tale che nulla luce è tanto mera
 Che gli occhi miei non si fosser difesi. 60
 E vidi lume in forma di riviera

43. In the Empyrean are two victorious armies, the 'soldiery' of blessed souls that resisted temptation, and the host of good angels that triumphed over the bad.

44-45. The spirits of the elect will be seen by Dante 'in that aspect' in which they are to appear at the Last Judgment: i. e., in their bodily form.

46. Discetti, 'scatters.'

47-48. Gli spiriti visivi, 'the spirits (or sense) of sight.' — Sì che etc., 'so that it (the flash) deprives the eye of the effect of even more impressive objects.'

49. Cf. Acts xxii, 6: 'suddenly there shone from heaven a great light round about me' — 'circumfulsit me lux copiosa.'

In the hole of the simoniacal Popes, each new arrival pushes his predecessors further down: Inf. XIX, 73-75.

147. Clement's predecessor in simony is Boniface VIII: Inf. XIX, 52-57. He is called 'the man of Anagni' because he was born in that town, and in 1303 was assaulted and taken prisoner there: Purg. XX, 85-90. Anagni was known also as Alagna and Anagna. — These fearful words are the last spoken by Beatrice.

CANTO XXXI

ARGUMENT

THROUGH all Dante's Paradiso there has been little thought of matter. Sound and light have been the main ingredients of his marvelous effects, even in the physical heavens. And now, in the last four cantos, he achieves what no other poet, before or since, has attempted with so much as a shadow of success: the presentation of a world beyond the perceptions of sense. Discreet omission and subtle suggestion, insistence on a progressive sharpening of spiritual insight, repeated warning that the increasingly exalted vision can be expressed only in ever more inadequate symbols — these are the elements from which the master creates an atmosphere of supersensual grandeur, love, and joy. A well contrived gradation leads from the first comprehension of Grace to the immediate view of God, the climax of the poem. No incongruous didactic theme is allowed to disturb our tenuous but distinct impression of actual presence. Questions physical and metaphysical have been disposed of ere we reach the Empyrean. The only doctrines formulated here are the appropriate ones of predestination and the salvation of infants; these are set forth in Canto XXXII.

To afford some support for the imagination, to lend to the ethereal conception some of the solid substance of personal identity, the poet fancies himself permitted by a special grace to gaze on the assembly of the Blest as they shall appear after the Judgment Day. 'For our conversation is in heaven, from whence also we look for the Saviour . . . : who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body' (I Philippians iii, 20-21). The vast amphitheatre (whose floor is a sea of glory) is thronged with faces, all of them clearly visible, in spite of incalculable distance. Between them and their Maker, who shines from above, hovers a thick swarm of angels, messengers between God and man; and even these purely spiritual beings now show themselves to Dante in a bodily form. Their presence, however, in no wise obstructs the direct vision of the Lord; in other words, the Just receive grace not only through angelic transmission, but straight from the Creator himself.

While Dante is wondering at this scene, Beatrice slips away, just as Virgil, his mission ended, silently took his departure from the Garden of Eden (Purg. XXX, 46-54). This time, however, there is no sadness in the parting, for the 'Gentilissima' has simply returned to her high seat in Heaven; whereas the earlier companion went back to eternal captivity below. Now that the pilgrim is in the actual presence of God, he has no further need of Revelation for a guide; and Beatrice, who was chosen from all the souls in Paradise to perform this office for him, now resumes her own personality and her own place. In her stead, at Dante's side, is St. Bernard, the type of Contemplation. Reason, Revelation, Contemplation represent the three stages of approach to God.

The verses of the present canto offer an unusual abundance of examples of hiatus and diæresis, which would seem to indicate a slow, thoughtful, impressive delivery. In such cases as cominciò | egli and farà | ogni (where a final vowel is stressed) hiatus is the rule in our poet. Also, in words like ardüa, fiata, gaudioso (contrasted with gaudio), glorïose, oriental, regïon, riaccesa, sitadi — mostly Latinisms — diæresis is rather to be expected in the Commedia; although the number of such forms is uncommonly large in this canto. Very rare indeed, on the other hand, are lines comparable to 37, 47, and 53:

'I|o che | al divino dall' umano,'
'Menava | i|o gli occhi per li gradi,'
'Già tutta mi|o sguardo avea compresa.'

Curiously enough, the name Beatrice, which in the Paradiso very frequently shows separation of the e and the a (as is always the case with bēato), here in every instance combines the two vowels into one syllable. Is this because the Bestower of Blessings has now become once more Beatrice Portinari? It is to be noted that in ll. 79-80 Dante addresses her as tu; up to this time he has always used the respectful voi.

The power of angels to assume ærial bodies is admitted by St. Gregory, Moralia, XXVIII, i (commentary on Job xxxviii, 7).

1. The figure of the rose seems to be Dante's own, although Paradise is sometimes represented in rose-like form in early Italian art. The rose, too, was sometimes used as a symbol of the Passion. On the fourth Sunday of Lent, the Pope blesses a gold rose, with a ceremonial that indicates an association of this flower with Christ and Heaven: see G. Busnelli, Il concetto e l'ordine del 'Paradiso' dantesco, I, 1911, 233-238. The Old French Roman de la Rose, the great literary success of the 13th century, made all western Europe familiar with the rose as a symbol of earthly love; Dante's white flower is the rose of Heavenly love. It may be that a sight of the Roman Coliseum influenced his conception of the great amphitheatre of Paradise (cf. Busnelli, I, 239-242).

4. L' altra (sc., milizia): the angels.

7. S' infiora, 'enfloresces itself': dips into flowers.

'His head is as the most fine gold.' The angels embody love, purity, and faith. Cf. the figure of the Griffin in Purg. xxix, 113-114.

18. Ventilando il fianco, 'by fanning their sides': i. e., by flapping their wings as they flew upward.

24. Ostante, 'an obstacle.'

26. Frequente, 'abounding.' — Gente etc.: members of the Old (Hebrew) and the New (Christian) Church.

27. Ad un segno, 'directed at one mark.'

29. Appaga = appaghi, 'dost satisfy.' It is not certain whether we have in appaga a third person used for the second or a relic of the original form of the second person singular.

31-33. The 'zone' that is always 'covered by Helice' is the North. The nymph Helice or Callisto was transformed into the constellation of the Great Bear, and her son Arcas or Boötes into the Little Bear: Met., II, 496-507; cf. Purg. XXV, 131. The Bears, or Dippers, are close to the North Star: cf. Canzone XV, 28-29. — Ond' ell' è vaga, 'whom she loves.'

34. L' ardua sua opra, 'her lofty architecture.'

35. Stupefaciensi = si stupefacevano. — The 'Lateran' is the old Papal palace in Rome: cf. Inf. XXVII, 86. According to tradition, it was given to St. Sylvester by Emperor Constantine (cf. Inf. XXVII, 94-95), and became the seat of Christian dominion. Less than a century later, the barbarians invaded Rome.

36. Andò di sopra, 'surpassed.'

39. This phrase, the climax of the tiercet, is Dante's last and bitterest fling at Florence.

41. Tra esso e il gaudio, 'it (my amazement) and my joy together.'

Libito non udire, e starmi muto.

42. Libito, 'a pleasure.'

43. Ricrea, 'refreshes.'

44. Voto, 'vow': the shrine which he has vowed to visit.

45. Ridir: to tell the people at home. — Stea = stia.

49. 'I saw faces conducive to love.'

50. Del suo, 'with their own.'

58. Uno intendeà, 'I meant one thing. — Altro, 'something else.'

59. Sene (Latin senex), 'Elder.' For the characteristics of senio, or old age, see Conv., IV, xxviii. This elder is St. Bernard, founder of the Abbey of Clairvaux in Champagne, a great preacher and mystic of the first half of the 12th century, famous for his ardent devotion to the Blessed Virgin. It was he who preached the second crusade. One of his works is cited in Epistola X, xxviii, 555.

60. Vestito con, 'clad like': cf. Purg. XXIX, 145-146.

Ond' egli: 'A terminar lo tuo disiro 65
 Mosse Beatrice me del loco mio.
 E se riguardi su nel terzo giro
 Del sommo grado, tu la rivedrai
 Nel trono che i suoi merti le sortiro.'
 Senza risponder gli occhi su levai 70
 E vidi lei, che si facea corona
 Riflettendo da sè gli eterni rai.
 Da quella regïon che più su tuona
 Occhio mortale alcun tanto non dista,
 Qualunque in mare più giù s' abbandona, 75
 Quanto lì da Beatrice la mia vista;
 Ma nulla mi facea, chè sua effige
 Non discendeva a me per mezzo mista.
 'O Donna, in cui la mia speranza vige, —
 E che soffristi per la mia salute 80

67-68. Beatrice's own seat is 'in the third row from the top tier.' The 1st row is that of Mary, the 2d that of Eve, the 3d that of Rachel, beside whom Beatrice sits: see Inf. II, 102; Par. XXXII, 8-9. Contemplation and Revelation sit side by side. The number 3 (as well as the number 9) has always been mysteriously associated with Beatrice: see V. N., XXX. Cf. Summa Theologiæ, Secunda Secundæ, Qu. lxxx, Art. 4: 'in tertio vero gradu ponitur absoluta consideratio intelligibilium in quæ per sensibilia pervenitur.'

73-75. An 'eye' at the very bottom of the sea 'is not so far away' from the top of the earth's atmosphere — the 'region that thunders highest up' (cf. Purg. XXI, 43-57, and XXXII, 111).

77. Effige, 'image.'

78. Per mezzo mista, 'blurred by anything between.'

79. Vige, 'is strong.'

81. See Inf. II, 52-93; Purg. XXX, 139-141.

82. This phrase depends on grazia and virtute in l. 84.

104. The Veronica is the true image of the Saviour, left on a kerchief which a holy woman had handed him, on his way to Calvary, to wipe the sweat from his face. It was shown at St. Peter's in Rome on certain days. Hosts of pilgrims went from afar to see it, as Dante tells us in V. N., XLI, 1-11.

CANTO XXXII

ON one side of the rim of the great cup of Paradise sits Mary; on her right is St. Peter, and beyond him St. John; on her left is Adam, then Moses. Opposite Mary, on the other side of the rim, sits John the Baptist, with St. Anna on his right and St. Lucia on his left. The Virgin is in the midst of four men, the Baptist is between two women. From Mary to the bottom of the cup extends a straight row of Old Testament women, the first of whom (after Mary) are Eve, Rachel, Sarah, Rebecca, Judith, and Ruth; on the right of Rachel is Beatrice. Across the cup from this row, a line of holy men stretches from John the Baptist to the bottom, — the second, third, and fourth being St. Francis, St. Benedict, and St. Augustine. The half of the amphitheatre which lies at the right of the line of men and at the left of the row of women is filled with the souls of virtuous Hebrews who died before the Redemption. The other half — at the right of Mary's line and at the left of John's — belongs to the souls of Christians; here some of the seats are still empty. The lower part of both halves, from the middle down, is occupied by the spirits of children who died before the age of moral responsibility. They are here because their parents had faith in Christ, either before or after his coming; on the Christian side, baptism is an indispensable prerequisite.

The children are mentioned here for the first time; no sphere offers an appropriate place for them, unless we are to understand that they are included in the army of the blest which assembles in the eighth heaven. Like the adults, they enjoy various degrees of beatitude, in proportion to the grace accorded them at birth. Our poet here departs from St. Thomas (Summa Theologiæ, Tertia, Qu. lxi, Art. 8), who declares that all children admitted to baptism receive the same amount of grace; St. Bonaventure, however, admits the possibility of difference for them (G. Busnelli, Il concetto e l'ordine del 'Paradiso' dantesco, II, 1012, 166). Their presence serves to emphasize the mystery of predestination, in accordance with which all the seats in the rose are allotted. Dante's insistence on this doctrine renders futile any attempt at general classification of the souls in the Empyrean. In Hell and Purgatory the topography is systematically described for us. No such exposition is given us in Paradise. In the journey through the spheres, we are introduced to certain types of merit and reward, which may or may not correspond in a way to the gradations of the amphitheatre. In the rose itself we are informed of the great vertical and horizontal divisions, and the position of a few of the souls; and we may infer that proximity to Mary or to John the Baptist is a sign of honor. Beyond that, all is mystery.

Gazing upon this vast assembly, Dante finds satisfaction of the desire expressed in Canto XXII, ll. 58-60, to behold the Elect uncovered.

Affetto al suo piacer, quel contemplante
 Libero officio di dottore assunse,
 E cominciò queste parole sante:

1. Affetto, 'intent.' — Piacer, 'delight': Mary. — Contemplante: Bernard.

4-6. The 'wound' of original sin (inflicted by Eve and healed by Mary) is discussed in Summa Theologiae, Prima Secundae, Qu. lxxxv, Art. 3. Mary is often represented as the counterpart of Eve. The word AVE, with which she is greeted, is the reverse of EVA; so says, among others, Dante's son Pietro. St. Bernard, Sermo de Beata Maria Virgine, compares Mary to a rose, Eve to a thorn: G. Busnelli, Il concetto e l'ordine del 'Paradiso' dantesco, I, 1911, 227-228. — Du' suoi piedi, 'at her (Mary's) feet.'

7-9. Cf. Inf. II, 102; Par. XXXI, 67-69.

11. Bisava, 'great-grandmother': Ruth. — Cantor: David.

12. Fallo, 'sin': 2 Samuel xi-xii. — Miserere mei, 'have mercy upon me.' Ps. li (Vulg. I), 1.

14. Giù digradar, 'in graded descent.' — A proprio nome, 'with the name of each.'

Vo per la rosa giù di foglia in foglia. 15
 E dal settimo grado in giù, sì come
 Infino ad esso, succedono Ebrei,
 Dirimendo del fior tutte le chiome;
 Perchè, secondo lo sguardo che fee
 La fede in Cristo, queste sono il muro 20
 A che si parton le sacre scalee.
 Da questa parte onde il fior è maturo
 Di tutte le sue foglie, sono assisi
 Quei che credettero in Cristo venturo.
 Dall' altra parte, onde sono intercisi 25
 Di voti i semicircoli, si stanno
 Quei ch' a Cristo venuto ebber li visi.
 E come quinci il glorioso scanno
 Della Donna del cielo e gli altri scanni
 Di sotto lui cotanta cerna fanno, 30
 Così di contra quel del gran Giovanni,
 Che sempre santo il deserto e il martiro
 Sofferse, e poi l' Inferno da due anni,

18. Dirimendo, 'parting.' — The 'locks of the flower' are its petals, and the petals of the rose are presumably the sections of seats in the amphitheatre. — The line of Hebrew women cuts through all the rows from top to bottom. The first seven have been named; the rest are not.

19-20. Secondo etc., 'according to the look which Faith turned on Christ': i. e., according as the Faith of the Hebrews looked forward to Christ to come, or the Faith of the Christians looked back to Christ crucified. On one side of the partition (made by the line of Jewesses) are the Hebrews, on the other the Christians.

25-26. Onde etc., 'where the semicircles are broken by empty space': where some seats, here and there, are still vacant.

28. Quinci, 'on this side.'

30. Cerna, 'division.'

31. Mat. xi, 11: 'Among them that are born of women there hath not risen a greater than John the Baptist.' Cf. Purg. XXII, 153.

32. Sempre santo: 'he shall be filled with the Holy Ghost, even from his mother's womb' (Luke i, 15). — Diserto: cf. Purg. XXII, 151-152; Par. XVIII, 134. — Martiro: cf. Par. XVIII, 135.

33. Inferno: the Limbus, where John, after his death, had to wait some two years for the descent of Christ to rescue the souls of the just.

E sotto lui così cerner sortiro
 Francesco, Benedetto ed Augustino, 35
 Ed altri sin quaggiù di giro in giro.
 Or mira l' alto provveder divino!
 Chè l' uno e l' altro aspetto della fede
 Egualmente empierà questo giardino.
 E sappi che, dal grado in giù che fiede 40
 A mezzo il tratto le due discrezioni,
 Per nullo proprio merito si siede,
 Ma per l' altrui, con certe condizioni;
 Chè tutti questi son spiriti assolti
 Prima ch' avesser vere elezioni. 45
 Ben te ne puoi accorger per li volti,
 Ed anco per le voci puerili,
 Se tu li guardi bene e se gli ascolti.
 Or dubbi tu, e dubitando sili;

34. Cerner sortiro seems to mean 'have assigned division,' i. e., have constructed the dividing line. Cf. XXXI, 69.

35. St. Augustine, the founder of Theology, and St. Benedict (XXII, 28) and St. Francis (XI, 43), the great founders of orders, may be regarded as successors of John the Baptist. Cf. Luke i, 17.

38-39. After the Last Judgment, the souls from the Old Church will be exactly equal in number to those from the New.

40. Dal grado in giù, 'below that tier'. — Fiede, 'cuts.'

41. A mezzo il tratto, 'half way down.' — Discrezioni, 'divisions': the two sides of the rose.

43. L' altrui, 'the merit of others' (one's parents). — Condizioni: cf. II. 79-84.

44. Assolti, 'released' from the flesh.

45. Elezioni, 'choice': exercise of the free will.

46-48. According to the usual opinion, the bodies of all the elect will rise, at the Resurrection, in the aspect of the prime of life. Cf. Summa Theologiæ, Tertia, Suppl., Qu. lxxi, Art. 1-2. So they are commonly pictured in mediæval art. In his striking departure from current belief, Dante was influenced certainly by a desire for significant visible contrast, and also, we may conjecture, by that love of little children which he has more than once revealed. The sweet conception of an encircling sea of baby faces, all twittering with baby voices, must have charmed him as it charms us.

49. Sili (Latin siles) = taci. — Dante is silently wondering why, if these children never won merit by the exercise of their free will, some have higher seats than others. He learns presently that the degree of beatitude (symbolized

54. Se non come, 'any more than.'

56-57. Giustamente etc., 'there is exact correspondence.'

58-59. 'And therefore this company, hurried to the true life, is not sine causa' (Latin: 'without cause').

61. Pausa, 'rests.'

63. È di più ausa, 'ventures upon more.' Cf. oso in Purg. XI, 126, XX, 149; Par. XIV, 130.

64-66. Cf. Peter Lombard, Sententiæ, III, xxxii: 'Electorum alios magis alios minus dilexit.' — Effetto, 'fact.' Do not seek the wherefore of God's grace. — See Summa Theologiae, Prima Secundæ, Qu. cxii.

67-69. Jacob and Esau 'struggled together' in their mother's womb: Gen. xxv, 22-25. Cf. Malachi, i, 2-3: 'I have loved you, saith the Lord. Yet ye say, wherein hast thou loved us? Was not Esau Jacob's brother? saith the Lord: yet I loved Jacob. And I hated Esau.' according to election might stand, not of works, but of him that calleth;) It was said unto her, The elder shall serve the younger. As it is written, Jacob have I loved, but Esau have I hated. What shall we say then? Is there unrighteousness with God? God forbid. For he saith to Moses, I will have mercy on whom I will have mercy.' See Summa Theologiæ, Prima, Qu. xxiii, Art. 3.

70-72. 'Therefore the heavenly light must crown us fitly, according to the complexion of that grace.' Our halo, or reward, in Heaven is proportionate to the grace bestowed on us at birth. For s' incappelli, cf. XXV, 9. The odd expression, 'the color of the hair of that grace,' was evidently suggested by Esau's red hair: Gen. xxv, 25. Esau, without apparent reason, differed in looks from Jacob, just as he differed from him in character and in divine favor.

73. Mercè, 'merit.' — Costume, 'conduct.'

75. Primiero acume, 'primal keenness' of spiritual sight, bestowed by Grace.

76. Sì, 'indeed.' — Recenti, 'new,' fresh from creation: the ages before Abraham. — Cf. Summa Theologiæ, Tertia, Qu. lxx, Art. 2.

80-81. 'It was requisite for the males to win strength for the wings of innocence by circumcision.' Cf. Summa Theologiæ, Tertia, Qu. lxx, Art. 2: 'Circumcisio instituta est ut signum fidei Abrahæ, qui credidit se patrem futurum Christi sibi repromissi; et ideo convenienter solis maribus competeat. Peccatum etiam originale, contra quod specialiter circumcisio ordinabatur, a patre trahitur, non a matre.' See also Prima Secundæ, Qu. lxxxi, Art. 5. Cf. Inf. IV, 37-38.

82-84. After the Crucifixion, the unbaptized innocent children were 'confined below' in the Limbus: cf. Inf. IV, 30, 34-36. Since the Redemption, there has been no salvation without baptism in Christ. See Summa Theologiæ, Tertia, Qu. lxx, Art. 2: 'Baptismus in se continet perfectionem salutis, ad quam Deus omnes homines vocat . . . Circumcisio autem non continebat perfectionem

 Orando grazia convien che s' impetri —
 Grazia da quella che può aiutarti.
 E tu mi segui con l' affezone,
 Sì che dal dicer mio lo cor non parti.' 150
 E cominciò questa santa orazione.

135. Per cantare, 'while singing.'

137. Lucia: St. Lucia, the type of Illumining Grace, who has twice come to Dante's aid: Inf. II, 97-108; Purg. IX, 55-63.

138. 'When thou wast bending thy brows to fall': Inf. I, 61. Lucia sent Beatrice to save Dante at the time when the wolf was driving him back into the wooded valley.

139. If, as seems likely, t' assonna means 'holds thee in sleep,' this passage affords the only evidence that Dante's experience is a dream. Nearly all the mediæval accounts of the other world are cast in the form of dreams or visions.

145. Veramente, 'but.' — Nè, 'lest': a Latinism.

146. Oltrarti, 'to advance.'

147. 'Grace must be obtained by prayer.'

148. Quella: the Blessed Virgin.

150. Dicer, 'speech.' — Parti = (tu) parta, 'thou divide.'

CANTO XXXIII

ARGUMENT

THE Commedia differs from most narratives in the abruptness of its beginning and end. No prelude is suffered to retard the entrance of the theme, and no epilogue dispels the stupendous exaltation of the climax. Isolated, complete in itself, the story of repentance, reform, and regeneration pursues its steady march from the opening line of the poem to its grand culmination — admission to the actual presence of God. Such an experience as this final one far transcends the powers both of speech and of recollection. Cautiously, laboriously, the poet feels his way through the dim chambers of memory, evoking evanescent glimpses of unspeakable vanished impressions, which, in the cruel lack of every means of direct conveyance, he can express only in the form of unsubstantial images. No tinsel royalty belittles Dante's Paradise, no pitiful attempt to describe the indescribable. First of all, we are made conscious of the unity and the universality of the Almighty: indivisible and undiversified, he contains the entire multiform world, whose true existence is in him alone. Next his threefold oneness is disclosed to us by the symbol of three mysterious rings — three distinct circles of three different colors, but occupying exactly the same place. One of these rings, depicting in itself, with its own color, the figure of mankind, reveals the human nature in Christ and its absolute fusion with the divine. At this point a sudden flash of Grace for one instant illumines the beholder with full understanding, and his individual will is merged in the World-Will of the Creator.

A purely intuitive, intellectual vision is devoid of physical images; but after the experience is over, the memory may retain impressions capable of expression in concrete form. Thus St. Paul's memory, at the close of his vision of Paradise, kept certain 'likenesses of visible things': St. Thomas, Questiones de Veritate, Qu. xiii, Art. 3; Summa Theologiæ, Secunda Secundæ, Qu. clxxv, Art. 4.

Although the persons of the Trinity are very often described by Church writers as of exceeding brightness (cf. G. Busnelli, Il concetto e l'ordine del 'Paradiso' dantesco, I, 1911, 256-7), the conception of the three rings of light seems, in the main, to be of Dante's invention. In Rev. iv, 3, we read: 'And he that sat was to look upon like a jasper and a sardine stone; and there was a rainbow round about the throne, in sight like unto an emerald.' Commentators indulged in much speculation on this verse, attempting to determine the colors of the three precious stones. St. Thomas makes them white, green, and red, the colors chosen by Dante to designate the three virtues (Busnelli, I, 259-266). Furthermore, the image of the rainbow was used to symbolize the Trinity (particularly by St. Basil in Epistola, Classis I, Ep. xxxviii); the figure was not inappropriate, because, according to Aristotle and others, the rainbow consists of three colors, which blend into one another (Busnelli, I, 257-259).

1. The beautiful prayer to the Blessed Virgin, with which this canto opens, is quite in the style of St. Bernard. A great part of it was copied by Chaucer in the Second Nun's Tale, 29-84. Such an intercession is wholly in accordance with Catholic practice.

 Che ciò ch' io dico è un semplice lume. 90
 La forma universal di questo nodo

76-78. When we turn from gazing on a light, our eyes are blurred for everything else: cf. XXV, 118-120. So the sight of God makes all other vision seem confused and meaningless. — Aversi, 'averted.'

80. Per questo, 'on that account': because I felt sure that I could see nothing else.

81. Aspetto, 'gaze.'

82. Presunsi, 'presumed.' — To behold the divine essence, our human sight must be fortified by divine enlightenment: St. Thomas, De Veritate Catholica Fidei contra Gentiles, III, liv.

84. Consunsi, 'spent': cf. XXVI, 5. I looked with such intentness that I became blind to all else.

85. S' interna, 'is contained.'

86. God is the Book of the Universe. Cf. Purg. III, 126.

87. Si squaderna, 'is spread.'

88. Nothing being accidental in God, the distinction between substance and accident does not exist in him: Summa Theologiæ, Prima, Qu. iii, Art. 6. — Costume, 'habit.'

89-90. 'Fused together, as it were, in such wise that that whereof I speak is one simple light' (cf. l. 109). God, containing all things, is a perfect unit: see Summa Theologiæ, Prima, Qu. iv, Art. 2. Cf. Par. XXVIII, 16-21.

91-93. Painfully groping in his memory, the poet is encouraged by a sense of satisfaction with his statement — a reminiscence of the glow of contentment (the 'passione impressa') which came over him when he first comprehended the

Credo ch' io vidi, perchè più di largo,
 Dicendo questo, mi sento ch' io godo.
 Un punto solo m' è maggior letargo
 Che venticinque secoli alla impresa 95
 Che fe' Nettuno ammirar l' ombra d' Argo.
 Così la mente mia, tutta sospesa,
 Mirava fissa, immobile ed attenta,
 E sempre di mirar faceasi accesa.
 A quella Luce cotal si diventa 100
 Che volgersi da lei per altro aspetto
 È impossibil che mai si consenta;
 Però che il ben, ch' è del volere obbietto,
 Tutto s' accoglie in lei, e fuor di quella
 È difettivo ciò che lì è perfetto. 105
 Omai sarà più corta mia favella —
 Pure a quel ch' io ricordo — che di un fante
 Che bagni ancor la lingua alla mammella.
 Non perchè più ch' un semplice sembiante

union of everything in God. This feeling leads him to believe that his report thus far has been correct. — By 'the universal form of this knot' is meant the absolute principle of this union — the fusion of all things temporal and eternal in the Creator. — Di largo, 'amply.'

94-96. 'One single moment, for me, means more forgetfulness than 25 centuries have been for that adventure which made Neptune marvel at the shadow of Argo.' The expedition of the Argonauts, under Jason, in search of the golden fleece (Inf. XVIII, 86-87; Par. II, 16-18) was thought to have occurred in the 13th century B. C. The Argo was the first ship ever built: hence Neptune's surprise. The general sense, then, is this: in the first moment after my awakening (XXXII, 139) I forgot more of my vision than mankind has forgotten, in 2500 years, of the story of the Argonauts.

100-102. 'In that Light one becomes such that it is impossible ever to consent to turn from it to see aught else.' Cf. Summa Theologiæ, Prima Secundæ, Qu. v, Art. 4: 'Perfecta beatitudo hominis in visione divinæ essentiae consistit. Est autem impossibile quod aliquis videns divinam essentiam velit eam non videre. . . . Visio autem divinæ essentiae replet animam omnibus bonis, cum conjungat fonti totius bonitatis. . . . Sic ergo patet quod propria voluntate beatus non potest beatitudinem deserere.'

103. 'Because good, which is the object of volition.'

106-107. 'Henceforth, even in the things I remember, my speech will fall shorter than that of a babe.'

Fosse nel vivo Lume ch' io mirava 110
 (Che tal è sempre qual era davante),
 Ma per la vista che s' avvalorava
 In me guardando, una sola parvenza
 (Mutandom' io) a me si travagliava.
 Nella profonda e chiara sussistenza 115
 Dell' alto Lume parvemi tre giri
 Di tre colori e d' una continenza;
 E l' un dall' altro — come Iri da Iri —
 Parea riflesso, e il terzo parea foco
 Che quinci e quindi egualmente si spira. 120
 O quanto è corto il dire, e come fioco
 Al mio concetto! e questo, a quel ch' io vidi,
 È tanto che non basta a dicer 'poco.'
 O Luce Eterna, che sola in te sidi,
 Sola t' intendi, e da te intelletta 125
 Ed intendente te, ami ed arridi!
 Quella circolazion, che sì concetta
 Pareva in te come lume riflesso,
 Dagli occhi miei alquanto circonspecta,
 Dentro da sè del suo colore stesso 130
 Mi parve pinta della nostra effige,

114. Si travagliava, 'was transformed.'

117. Continenza, 'dimension.'

118. The circle representing the Son seemed reflected from the circle symbolizing the Father, just as one arch of a double rainbow is reflected by the other (cf. XII, 10-13) — 'Iris by Iris.' Cf. XIII, 55-57.

119. Terzo: the Holy Ghost emanates equally from Father and Son. Cf. X, 1-2.

122. Questo: sc., concetto. — A, 'compared to.'

123. Tanto, 'such.'

124. Sidi, 'abidest.'

125-126. Mat. xi, 27: 'no man knoweth the Son, but the Father; neither knoweth any man the Father, save the Son.' Cf. Summa Theologiae, Prima, Qu. xxxiv, Art. 1: 'Pater enim intelligendo se et Filium et Spiritum Sanctum . . . concipit Verbum.'

127. Concetta, 'conceived,' generated.

129. Circonspecta, 'surveyed.'

131. Effige, 'image.' Cf. Philippians, ii, 7.

Per che il mio viso in lei tutto era messo.
 Qual è 'l geometra che tutto s' affige
 Per misurar lo cerchio, e non ritrova
 Pensando quel principio ond' egli indige, 135
 Tale era io a quella vista nuova:
 Veder voleva come si convenne
 L' imago al cerchio, e come vi s' indova;
 Ma non eran da ciò le proprie penne —
 Se non che la mia mente fu percossa 140
 Da un fulgore, in che sua voglia venne.
 All' alta fantasia qui mancò possa;
 Ma già volgeva il mio disiro e il velle,
 Sì come ruota ch' egualmente è mossa,
 L' Amor che move il sole e l' altre stelle. 145

133-135. Cf. Mon., III, iii, 9-10: 'geometra circuli quadraturam ignorat.' Also Conv., II, xiv, 217-219: 'il cerchio per lo suo arco è impossibile a quadrare perfettamente.' — Geometra, 'geometer.' — S' affige, 'applies himself.' — Misurar: the problem is the squaring of the circle. — Indige, 'is in need.'

137. Si convenne, 'conformed.'

138. S' indova, 'it finds a place.'

139. Penne, 'wings.'

142. Cf. Conv., III, iv, 87-95: 'il nostro intelletto, per difetto della virtù della quale trae quello ch' el vede (che è virtù organica), cioè la fantasia, non puote a certe cose salire, perocchè la fantasia nol puote aiutare, chè non ha il di che; siccome sono le Sustanze partite da materia; delle quali se alcuna considerazione di quelle avere potemo, intendere non le poteïmo, nè comprendere perfettamente.' Cf. also Par. XXIV, 24.

143. Velle (Latin), 'will.' — Disiro and velle are objects of volgeva, the subject of which is Amor in l. 145. — St. Thomas, in De Veritate Catholicæ Fidei contra Gentiles, III, xxv, tells us that, inasmuch as the knowledge of God is the natural goal of man's desire, no other knowledge can suffice for human happiness.

144. The circle, being the perfect figure, is an emblem of perfection; and circular motion symbolizes full and faultless activity. St. Thomas, in Librum B. Dionysii De Divinis Nominibus, Caput iv, Lectio 7: 'Et ideo circularitas motus animæ completur in hoc quod ad Deum manuducit.' In V. N., XII, 26-34, we read that while Love in the abstract is comparable to a circle, Dante, the earthly lover, is not; but at the end of his journey, in the presence of his Maker, Dante's love is made perfect, 'like a wheel in even revolution.' See J. B. Fletcher in The Nation (New York), Dec. 29, 1910.

145. The stars, at which the poet has gazed wistfully from below, are now beneath him. Their conformity to God's plan is not more complete than his, nor is their rotation more perfect than the movement of his desire and will.
